UAW BITTERLY REJECTS 10 PER CENT HIKE

DETROIT (UP)—A wage quarrel between the GM automobile workers union and the General Motors Corporation was intensified today when representatives of 175,000 striking workers bitterly rejected a company offer to boost rates 10 per cent.

In unanimous balloting, delegates representing 2 local units of the powerful United Automobile Workers union spurned the company proposal and called for continuation of the 18-day-old strike until their demands for a 30 per cent pay boost "are fully satisfied."

Action also was taken on President Truman's appeal for an immediate end of the production-stopping strike. The action was not announced but was reliably reported to be a rejection of the White House request.

Announcement of the reply to Mr. Truman was scheduled for a later date. One unidentified delegate to the conference told United Press "you can be sure we're not going to let President Truman break this strike, and as for me, I'd like to see a national labor holiday to protest White House interference."

At the same time, the delegates took up a proposal which would commit the UAW to leadership of a new labor party.

Says Army Pay Higher Than That Of Industries

WASHINGTON, 27 Nov.—The average GI will suffer a pay cut of more than 28 per cent in transferring from the Army to industry, Representative Frank E. Hook (Dem.) of Michigan told the House Tuesday.

The average GI pictured by Hook is an enlisted man with a wife and two children who has been serving overseas. His earnings while in service, as computed by the Congressman, amounted to $2,841 a year, or $47.71 a week.

Hook said that in April, 1945, the gross weekly pay of the average worker in manufacturing industries was $47.12, or slightly less than that of the serviceman.

With the return to the prewar work week—with overtime and premium pay cut out—the average earnings in manufacture will drop to $33.96, Hook said, adding this would represent a cut of more than 28 per cent of the war time earnings of the veteran.

In figuring the income of the serviceman, Hook counted his family allotment and the food, clothing and medical supplies furnished him by the Army, in addition to his pay.

Ranger Woman's Nephew Home on Emergency Leave

Mrs. Denise Harper has received word that her son, Joe, is back in the States from the Pacific and is enroute to receive his discharge. Joe has been serving in the U. S. Navy for the past 23 months. He expects to arrive in Odessa, Texas on the 15th to join his wife and son there. He will visit here later.

THOUGHT OF PANAMA, SAN DIEGO, SEATTLE AS TARGETS

WASHINGTON (UP)—Gen. George C. Marshall said today he thought late in 1941 that a Japanese assault on Panama or airplane plants in Seattle and San Diego was more likely than the attack on Pearl Harbor.

The former army chief of staff told Congress, Pearl Harbor investigating committee, he thought the most probable line of Japanese action would be a drive southward to capture our island outposts at Wake and Guam.

"We had in mind the possibility of a blow at Panama, at our air plants in Seattle and San Diego. And we had in mind the possibility of a blow in the Central Pacific in the Hawaiian district," he said.

"We thought the latter was the most improbable," Marshall said he considered the Hawaiian fortress "improbable against a landing attack" at the time. He previously testified the Hawaiian command could have broken up the Japanese attack December 7, 1941 if it had been properly alerted.

Marshall added today he believed the Hawaiian defense could have been adequately alerted on the basis of a warning he sent the post November 27, 1941 and today said the fact that conversations between the late President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill had been intercepted by the Germans "may have been a factor" in his failure to telephone a war warning to Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941.

Rep. Bertrand W. Gearhart, R., California, 7, questioned him whether it could have been done without alarming the civilian population, as cautioned in Marshall's telegram to Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short in Hawaii.

Marshall said it could have been accomplished. He added that long-range naval reconnaissance should not have alarmed the civilian population in any way.

Marshall conceded that he had an opportunity to correct Short's misinterpretation of his war warning but did not intervene.

Marshall said he believed in the fall of 1941 that a concentration of 100 four-engine bombers in the Philippines would have dissuaded Japan from her Pacific conquest, Marshall said that whereas we now think in terms of thousands a concentration of 100 bombers at that time would have been something never achieved before.

PLASTIC SURGEON KEPT BUSY RENOVATING MILADY'S FACE

CHICAGO (UP) — Dr. Alexander G. Ward spends most of his time keeping women's chins up and their eyes down.

Ward, a plastic surgeon, has lifted 5,000 faces in the past 35 years, some of them two or three times. He said he's getting busier every day.

"All women want to stay young and more and more of them are finding out about face lifting," he said, in an interview. "Eventually, the wrinkle business will be as popular as dental work."

Ward said most of his patients are about 50 years old, but he's had them as young as 30 and as old as 87.

"When I finished with the 87-year-old woman, she didn't have to be sent back to the nursing home, but she looked better, he said.

The surgeon has taken tucks in about 50 men's faces, too. Most of them were theatrical performers, he said, but a few were "dragged in by their young wives."

Face-lifting operations are performed under a local anesthetic in the surgeon's office. It requires approximately four hours to take the necessary tucks and stitches.

"I only cut the throats of the older ones," Ward said. "They often have wrinkled necks, and it's the only way to iron them out."

"It's just a tailoring process, it's taking in a coat that's too big. Only with faces you have to be especially careful to avoid ruffles."

When face-lifting was introduced early in the century, only theatrical and society people were interested, Ward said. Now even scrubwomen ask him to restore their look of youth.

Some of his patients have a "mania" for operations, he said, and "take it out" on him.

"One woman comes in every year to see if I can take a tuck some place."

NAZI BEHIND DUTCH 'LIDICE' TO BE TRIED

PUTTAM, Belgium (UPI)—Gen. F. Osterka, Christian, who commanded German forces in Holland from May, 1940, until the war's end, has been turned over to the Dutch Government for trial as a war criminal.

The Dutch charge that Christian was the man directly responsible for turning this small village into a "Lidice" in which more than 600 of Puttam's residents were killed and 100 houses were set on fire on Oct. 1, 1944 by U.S. troops. The village also was looted.

Here is the story of what happened as told by Oswald. Members of the Dutch underground attacked a German car on Sept. 30, 1944, when Allied troops were rushing through Belgium and fighting on the Dutch frontiers. Although the Dutch attack was only partly successful, Heinrich Himmler decided that Puttam should be exterminated. He sent orders to that effect to Gen. Christian, who formerly headed the Nazi party's evolution unit.

CRIME WAVE IN ITALY ABETTED BY PRIVATION

ROME (UP)—A wave of lawlessness and juvenile delinquency is sweeping Italy.

The crimes include everything from arm'd train robberies by gangs using hand-grenades to the black market operations by 16-year-olds.

Nothing is safe in Italy unless a guard is posted over it, and sometimes the guard himself gets ideas.

Recently, an American who was driving from Paris to Rome was initiated to the crime wave during his first night in Italy, when all his baggage was stolen from his

In Naples, boys as young as 12 years are spending time in jail awaiting trial. If convicted, those under 14 will be sent to the already overcrowded St. Eramo reformatory and the older youths sent to Poggioreale prison, much-famed in Fascist days.

F. blue gazarine, corduroy suit with a sheer, frilled white blouse and accessories of fushia and winter navy. ## CAR ACCIDENTS INCREASE LAID TO POOR DRIVING

AUSTIN, Tex. (UP)—The real reason for a nation-wide increase in traffic accidents which has followed the end of the war is that you and all the other people who nursed the old family bus through the war years have forgotten how to drive.

Take it from Col. Homer Garrison, director of the Texas Department of Highway Safety. He says you've lost a lot of traffic judgement and that your driving has deteriorated—just like your pre-war car.

Garrison and his staff, studying a 54 per cent increase in highway deaths, injuries and accident damage which followed the end of gasoline rationing, say that bad tires, bad brakes and wornout, war-weary cars aren't the major cause.

"The real blame should be placed on the postwar driver," said Col. Garrison. "Most drivers spent the war driving around in circles in their home town. They drove slow, because they had to, and they've forgotten how to judge speeds, how to tell how soon an approaching car will reach you, and how to handle a car at high speed on the highway."

Two new menaces have been added to postwar highways and they're partly responsible for the booming American traffic death rate, according to the Texas experts.

These are returning servicemen who haven't been behind the wheel of a passenger car for years and youngsters who grew up during the war and didn't learn to drive like their big brothers and sisters did because Daddy couldn't spare the gasoline or the tires during rationing.

"These youngsters learned what little they know about driving on city streets," said Garrison. "They don't know a thing about open highway driving. Couple them with wornout cars, poor tires and bad brakes and you've got trouble."

Garrison says next summer will see the postwar traffic toll at its peak. There will be full tanks of gas to go with these flapping rearwheels and the safest place will be home until people get new cars and learn how to handle them.

JAPS CONVERT TANKS INTO BULLDOZERS

TOKYO (UP) - Allied Headquarters has granted the Japanese government authority to convert 115 old Japanese army medium tanks and 50 old-model armored cars into bulldozers and trash-haulers, but ordered the vehicles stripped of their guns and turrets so as to make them completely useless for combat purposes. The Japanese M-37 tanks of 15 tons, will be used by the Japanese to clear up debris in areas where clean-up of air-raid damage is necessary before reconstruction can begin. The Japanese said they plan to use most of them around Tokyo.

An Allied spokesman, noting that the purpose of this Allied permission was to encourage the Japanese reconstruction efforts, said the Japanese were "very short" of bulldozers. He said that Allied forces which first landed at Atsugi in September requested two bulldozers, which the Japanese could not provide.

The 8th Army will supervise the demounting of the tanks and armored cars. All guns and fire-control equipment must be removed and destroyed. The turrets must be taken off and the hulls will be so cut with acetylene torches that the turrets can not be put back on.

All of the vehicles will be checked and cleared by the 8th Army before they are turned loose for Japanese use, the Allied spokesman said, adding: "We are making absolutely certain that these tanks and armored cars never again will be used for combat purposes."

The request for permission to convert the vehicles was initiated by the Japanese government in a letter to the 8th Army.

Ithaca, N. Y. (UP) - Mrs. Clyde Chilton and her daughter, Carley, 19, are Ithaca's two, and only, "icewomen."

They volunteered for the job when Mr. Chilton suffered a back injury at the ice plant and was unable to get a husky enough helper.

Mrs. Chilton is only a part-time worker, but Carley is on the job six days a week, flinging around 50-pound ice cakes as if they were powder puffs. During the hot days of the summer, she handled as much as three tons of a 7,500-pound load in order to help her father who operates the ice routes.

Rio Grande Valley Now King Of Grapefruit

HARLINGEN, Tex. (UP) - Add to the long list of Texas brags; The Lower Rio Grande Valley of Texas is the world's largest producer of seedless grapefruit and has been for years. Residents of Florida may want to argue that fact, but a glance at the records will prove it. Over a 10 year period, from 1933 to 1942, Florida produced only 6,295,000 boxes of seedless grapefruit compared to an average of 8,833,000 for the Valley area.

And just to brag a little more, the present situation is even more in favor of the Valley. Last season for instance the Valley produced almost twice as much seedless grapefruit as Florida. Figures were 16,120,000 boxes for the Valley and 8,400,000 for Florida.

Valley growers and shippers, however, had to admit that Florida grows more fruit than Texas. The majority of the Florida fruit is seeded. Growers said the production of so much seeded grapefruit also partially accounted for the fact that Florida had such a big processing industry. The seedless fruit trades does not care so much for seeded fruit, so a great deal of it goes into cans.

University Gets Grant For Work In Food Research

AUSTIN, Texas — The University of Texas has been awarded an $8,500 grant by the U. S. Quartermaster Corps for research on chemical food preservatives. The research will be supervised by Dr. Orville Wyss, associate professor of bacteriology at the University, as part of the project being conducted for the Subsistence Research and Development Laboratory of the Quartermaster Corps.

"The outstanding spoilage problem encountered by the U. S. Army during the war was in meats," Dr. Wyss explained, "with vegetables and fruits next on the list."

"In order to preserve many of these items under adverse storage conditions, excessive cooking was necessary, which ruined the flavor of the food for the men. Our study will deal with chemical agents which will keep food in first class shape in different climates—from the tropics to the Arctic regions," he pointed out.

The study of the mechanisms of the action of certain anti-bacterial substances which might be used as food preservatives will be made by Dr. Wyss, J. Richard Stogdon, assistant professor of pharmacy, and a group of graduate students and student assistants. Dr. O. B. Williams, head of the bacteriology department, is coordinator of the microbiology program which is sponsoring similar projects over the nation.

—Victory Bonds Aid Vets—

SEATTLE, Wash. (UP) — American soldiers in the Arctic will have good cause to remember the people of Seattle this Christmas. "This is our way of saying 'thank you' to the men who have won the war for us," said Mrs. William S. Lindberg, chairman of Seattle's Victory Canteen Committee, in describing how 2,000 gift boxes will be sent by air to GIs in Alaska and the Aleutians. The American Airways will transport the five-pound boxes free of charge, from Seattle to Annette Island, Ketchikan, Juneau, Whitehorse, Fairbanks, Galena and Nome.

PARAPUPS AID IN RESCUE OF ARCTIC FLIERS

PITTSBURGH (UP) — "Maggie and Jiggs" were more than comestrip characters to U. S. fliers in the Arctic. Often they were lifesavers.

Maggie and Jiggs were two magnificent huskies the first dogs to parachute to the aid of plane crash victims in the often inaccessible territory off the A-1 Transport Command's Alaskan division. Although Maggie and Jiggs were pioneer "parapups," other huskies have since joined the canine paratroop corps. Specially constructed equipment and regularly assigned medical punning squads also have been added to the rescue service. The parapups were trained by Lt. David Orwin of Milford, Pa., who was, for nearly 20 years, a traveler and explorer of the northern reaches of Canada and Alaska.

Lt. Irwin got his Arctic know-how chiefly on a 2,000 mile solo trek across the top of Canada in 1924, a journey which he almost didn't complete. Native hunters found him sick, weak from hunger and half-mad with pain in a miserable hut of a primitive Eskimo family.

Lt. Irwin and a colleague, Maj. Joseph P. Westover, commanding office of the Canadian sector of the ATC Search and Rescue unit, were spurred to train the dogs as pack animals after only one of five Army fliers survived a bitter 84-mile battle on foot when their plane crashed.

Although Lt. Irwin knew all there was to know about dogs, he knew very little about parachutes and jumping, and there were a few casualties at first. But after some experimentation the training was perfected.

The dogs were jumped two at a time, lashed together in the same harness. A man, or a flight surgeon and rescue medical squad, jumped with them to remove their harness and strap their 50 to 75 pound packs on their backs.

Lt. Irwin said it was possible to drop enough dogs to make up a team, together with a sled, if the crash victims were unable to walk.

Centenarian Recalls Indian Gifts To Folks

HOUSTON, Tex. (UP) — Still vividly recalling when the Indians camped near Huntsville used to give her family gifts of wild turkey, 100-year-old Mrs. Lewis Francis Burrows was recently honored on her centennial birthday by her 80-year-old son, Frank Burrows.

A native Texan, Mrs. Burrows was born in Huntsville and lived her childhood days near the home of Gen. Sam Houston, famed leader in Texas' fight for independence from Mexico.

Hundreds Of Jokes No Joke To Digest Editor

NEW YORK (UP) — A joke is a joke, but you can get too much of even a good thing, says Myra Keen, editor of Magazine Digest's potpourri department.

Two years ago the Digest offered cash awards for old, new stale or fresh jokes, and since then Miss Keen has waded through an average of 500 entries weekly—about a tenth of which are some version of a ha'neyed joke.

Miss Keen gets a little slumped nowadays when her readers try their favorite anecdotes on her.

What does every woman want most for Christmas? Delightfully feminine, wonderfully glamorous lingerie.

JAPS CONVERT TANKS INTO BULLDOZERS

TOKYO (UP) - Allied Headquarters has granted the Japanese government authority to convert 115 old Japanese army medium tanks and 50 old-model armored cars into bulldozers and trash-haulers, but ordered the vehicles stripped of their guns and turrets so as to make them completely useless for combat purposes.

HARLINGEN, Tex. (UP) - Add to the long list of Texas brags, The Lower Rio Grande Valley of Texas is the world's largest producer of seedless grapefruit and has been for years.

Residents of Florida may want to argue that fact, but a glance at the records will prove it. Over a 10 year period, from 1933 to 1942, Florida produced only 6,295,000 boxes of seedless grapefruit compared to an average of 8,833,000 for the Valley area.

University Gets Grant For Work In Food Research

AUSTIN, Texas — The University of Texas has been awarded an $8,500 grant by the U. S. Quartermaster Corps for research on chemical food preservatives.

The research will be supervised by Dr. Orville Wyss, associate professor of bacteriology at the University, as part of the project being conducted for the Subsistence Research and Development Laboratory of the Quartermaster Corps.

The outstanding spoilage problem encountered by the U. S.

armed forces during the war was in meats," Dr. Wyss explained, "with vegetables and fruits next on the list."

"In order to preserve many of these items under adverse storage conditions, excessive cooking was necessary, which ruined the flavor of the food for the men. Our study will deal with chemical agents which will keep food in its first class shape in different climates—from the tropics to the Arctic regions," he pointed out.

The study of the mechanisms of the action of certain anti-bacterial substances which might be used as food preservatives will be made by Dr. Wyss, J. Richard Stockton, assistant professor of pharmacy, and a group of graduate students and student assistants.

Dr. O. B. Williams, head of the bacteriology department, is coordinator of the microbiology program which is sponsoring similar projects over the nation.

Before and After the Nazis

Three months of proper care under UNRRA supervision resulted in the almost incredible transformation in the infant shown in the photos above. Top picture was made when the 8-month-old baby was liberated last July from a Nazi concentration camp. UNRRA took charge and removed the infant to Sweden, where the bottom photo was made in October.

Lt. David Owen of Milford, Pa., who was, for nearly 20 years, a trapper and explorer of the northern reaches of Canada and Alaska.

Lt. Irwin got his Arctic know-how chiefly on a 2,000 mile solo trek across the top of Canada in 1933, a journey which he almost didn't complete. Native hunters found him starved from hunger and half-mad with pain in a miserable hut of a primitive Eskimo family.

Lt. Irwin and a colleague, Maj. Joseph F. Westover, commanding office of the Canadian sector of the ATC Search and Rescue unit, were spurred to train the dogs as pack animals after only one of five Army fliers survived a bitter 84-mile battle on foot when their plane crashed.

Although Lt. Irwin knew all there was to know about dogs, he knew very little about parachuting and jumping, and the result was casualties at first. But after some experimentation the training was perfected.

The dogs were jumped two at a time, lashed together in the same harness. A man, or a flight surgeon and rescue medical squad, jumped with them to remove their harness and strap their 50 to 75 pound packs on their backs.

Lt. Irwin said it was possible to drop enough dogs to make up a team, together with a sled, if the crash victims were unable to walk.

SEATTLE, Wash. (UP) — American soldiers in the Arctic will have good cause to remember the people of Seattle this Christmas.

"This is our way of saying 'thank you' to the men who have won the war for us," said Mrs. William S. Van American Airways will transport the five-pound boxes free of charge, from Seattle to Annette Island, Kotzebue, Juneau, Whitehorse, Fairbanks, Galena and Nome.

Maggie and Jiggs were two magnificent huskies, the first dogs to parachute to the aid of plane crash victims in the often inaccessible territory off the Air Transport Command's Alaskan division.

Although Maggie and Jiggs were pioneer "parapups," other huskies have since joined the canine paratroop corps. Specially constructed equipment and regularly assigned medical pumping squads also have been added to the rescue service. The parapups were trained by

Navy Clothing Stores Getting Bluejacket Play

NEW ORLEANS (UP)—Nobody has figured out just what they do with them, but it's definite that sailors expend a lot on clothing.

The bluejackets spend about $100,000 at their government-operated small stores for extra clothing.

In a month, men at the base purchase 30,000 handkerchiefs, 22,000 sets of shorts, 12,000 pairs of socks, 9,000 hats, 2,500 rating badges, 1,200 neckerchiefs, 8,000 towels, and—2,500 jack knives.

WAC AIDES FOUND GENERAL IKE EXACTING BUT FUN TO WORK FOR

NEW YORK (UP)—The women around Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower during the days before and after D-Day had a lot to do with smoothing the path of one of history's most burdened men.

They varied in type from the highly efficient state of Maine girl, Capt. Mattie Pinette, of the Wacs, to the dark haired convent-nursed Irish girl, Kay Summersby, who was his No. 1 chauffeur. Kenneth S. Davis tells about them in his biography of Eisenhower, "Soldiers of Democracy," which has just been published. He intimates that these women had a better insight into the Eisenhower personality than some of his high ranking staff officers who were his immediate subordinates.

Capt. Pinette, for instance, is friendly with those who hold that General Ike was "easy" to work for. She arrived in Algeria with the first contingent of Wacs to reach North Africa in January, 1943. Davis says she understood her boss "rather more profoundly than did many of his high ranking subordinates" and in Capt. Pinette's opinion the general was exacting rather than easy, a man who hated inefficiency even though he never lost his temper.

with a subordinate. But even Capt. Pinette says he was "fun" to work for.

She was most impressed by Eisenhower's phenomenal memory. Once he dictated to her a 500 word statement of a powered appearance, then delivered it verbatim to the cameras without once referring to his copy. Another time, during a "leisure hour" discussion of poetry, she heard him recite the greater part of Gray's Elegy in support of his contention that it was "the most perfect poem ever written."

The informality of the Eisenhower entourage may have given the impression that he was "easy." Sgt. Margaret Chick of Toledo, O., remembers her first meeting. She was called into the anteroom and, when she hesitated at the threshold of the general's office, was told by an aide:

"Come on in. He won't bite you."

Eisenhower laughed and Sgt. Chick remained as one of his two stenographers.

Kay Summersby, who had driven an ambulance through the worst of the London blitz as a member of the Motor Transport Corps, was assigned Eisenhower when he was only a major general. She took with a smile the bragging of chauffeurs who drove lieutenant generals.

"But he's such a nice major general," Kay said. Events were to prove how right she was. Kay went with him to North Africa. An American officer with whom she was deeply in love was killed and, to keep her from brooding, Kay was assigned between driving chores to the task of answering Eisenhower's voluminous correspondence. Probably with no other general would it have been possible to give such a task, usually the assignment of a

Mrs. Carbone Bids Capt. Goodbye

Mrs. Jean Carbone, English war bride, who flew the Atlantic to join Capt. Darrell Beschen, instead of her husband Lt. Harold Carbone, bids the Capt. goodbye at Dubuque, Iowa, as he leaves for Santa Anna, California to be reassigned. She states she loves Capt. Beschen and not her husband and will wait until Beschen returns, at the Beschen home in Dubuque. (NEA Telephoto.)

Woos Lady Luck With 500 Four Leaf Clovers

LONG BEACH, Cal. (UP)—Mrs. Anna Connor, 77, thinks she has her luck pretty well insured with a collection of 500 four leaf clovers and numerous five and six leaf ones.

She has found four-leaf clovers in Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Mississippi, and California—in fields, sidewalks and her own back yard.
