UN Urged To Intervene In Palestine

LIE MAKES PLEA AS MORE FIGHTING ON IN HOLY LAND

retary-General Trygve Lie urged the United Nations security council today to invoke all its powers if necessary including use of military forces—to keep peace during the impending partition of Palestine.

The UN chief implied strongly that council action would be needed unless Arabs refrained from their resistance to the UN's Holy Land partition program.

Reports from the northeastern tip of Palestine said some 800 Arabs swarmed across from Syria at 8 A. M. today and laid siege to the settlements of Dan and Ke-far Soid.

British soldiers from border posts and Hagahah groups converged on the area and engaged the Arabs in fighting on a scale not made clear immediately.

Responsible sources in Beirut reported that about 1,000 Arab volunteers struck across the frontier from Lebanon during the night.

Advices from Beirut said the invaders were intent on wiping out the 12,000 or so Jewish settlers in the Safad and Tiberias districts, the northeasternmost in Palestine.

The Arabs planned to sweep across the Palestinian thumb jutting to the northeast, and cut off the inhabitants before aid could reach them from other Jewish centers, Beirut dispatches said.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Bains were in Stamford this afternoon to attend funeral services for Phillipa Cotton, nine year old great niece of Mrs. Bains and of Claudia Faye Perdue of Ranger.

Well... I Dunno, But...

Brother, we're gonna throw a way that rabbit's foot. Here we've been carrying it for a little better than 24 hours and you never heard the like of people we've made unhappy in that space of time.

And the horoscope this morning warned us about it this morning.

It's poll tax time again and again the C. E. Maddocks Company is collecting the taxes in Ranger to accommodate the public.

There are more possibilities for improvements in this line in the 1948 than most towns this size and it is possible to carry out such a program if interest and cooperation are forthcoming.

There are strips along our highways that could be turned into beauty spots that, if improved, would make a better impression than they now do on the passerby.

We've been observing the results of the recently enacted changes in the traffic code in Texas and while some phases of it seem to be improvements, there's one that we're doubtful about and that is the regulations concerning intersections.

We used to be forced to stop at intersections, now it's the one that gets there first that's got the right of way.

When we get into the intersection before somebody else does, we're supposed to have the right of way, but when they just keep bearing down on you from the other direction, you've got to give way and let 'em have or take in the side.

From what we've been able to observe, it has also increased speed at intersections and increased the hazard of them.

WASHINGTON COLUMN

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA).—Opposition to the Marshall Plan in the United States comes principally from two sources—some of the Republicans in Congress, and some businessmen. Public opinion polls show a majority in favor of the plan. Most newspapers have given it support. Labor unions are for it, save for the extreme left-wingers, who are merely parroting the Communist line on Russian foreign policy. Republican opposition is a little difficult to figure. In final analysis, it seems to boil down to one thing. Spending money on the Marshall Plan may deprive the Republicans of the honor of cutting income tax rates. Oh yes, 1948 is an election year. When the showdown comes, therefore, many Washington observers believe that the fate of the Marshall Plan will be determined not on its merits but the amount that taxes can be cut—over the President's veto, if necessary—and the budget total that will make the Republican record for economy look good. It's as simple as that. Opposition of American businessmen, which naturally influences much congressional thinking, seems based on several conceptions, but they all add up to one thing. This is the fear that aid to Europe will hurt business in the U. S.

Edson

BUSINESS may also feel that the European Recovery Program will make it necessary to reimpose government controls over priority, allocation, rationing and prices. Practically everyone wants taxes cut. Businessmen, who feel that the European aid program will deprive them of tax cuts, will oppose the Marshall Plan on that ground.

All these short-range objections, if valid, could have an effect over the next four years at most. They do not take into consideration what might happen if Europe were to come under Communist domination: How much worse U. S. business might become if trade with Europe were shut off. How much greater the shortages of scarce materials might become if imports were cut off. How much tighter controls would have to be. How much higher taxes would have to be to support all-out national defense against Communist attack. Many people believe much of the postwar relief to Europe went down the drain, and that more will do the same place. The answer given here is that postwar relief has kept Europe going.

THERE is a belief that America does not have the resources to aid Europe on the scale now planned. This is answered in part by the Krug, Nourse and Harriman reports, which have served to cut down Europe's demand for $23 billion aid to an available $17 billion. But the whole point of the Marshall Plan is to get Europe "off the milk" of U. S. production, so that Europe can pay its own way.

There are charges that "Europeans are not working" and that they have vast concealed resources buried in the ground and in U. S. investments. This introduces a vicious cycle. Money is buried because there is nothing to buy with it; there is nothing to buy because production is low; production is low because there is not enough food; farmers will not raise food because when they sell it there is nothing to buy. The Marshall Plan hopes to set this cycle in motion. There is fear that aid furnished Europe will only be used to nationalize her industries—promoting socialism instead of the free-enterprise capitalism which has brought the U. S. its prosperity. That is a valid fear, and a risk that must be taken. But the U. S. has never believed in dictating to other nations what form of government they should have. And, though the Marshall Plan has not yet been adopted, its mere existence as an idea has been influential in checking communism in France and Italy.

Wade Freeman, evangelism superintendent, said the state-wide evangelistic conference which will launch the 1948 program was designed to kindle revival fires in the hearts of all who attend. He said the result is hoped to be an unparalleled wave of evangelism sweeping Texas. The state-wide meeting will bring 2500 pastors, singers, and evangelists to Dallas January 12-24 for a program of conferences, music and inspirational messages beginning Monday night in the First Baptist Church. February 1st has been designated Baptist World Alliance Sunday, state Baptist headquarters in Dallas was notified this week. An effort will be made on this Sunday to raise $30,000, one half for the relief program of the World Alliance and one half for general operating expenses. When Henry Wallace Ducked

With Henry Wallace now a Third Party Presidential candidate and posing willingly for cameramen, Bert Brandt, NEA-Acme Newspaper photographer, today recalled a time in 1943 when Mr. Wallace ducked to the floor of his automobile to avoid being photographed. Wallace was leaving the White House after a meeting with Jesse Jones and James Byrnes during the famous Jones-Wallace row, when he became camera-shy. Seeing Brandt in the street, waiting to photograph him in his car, Wallace ducked. Brandt raised his camera above his head and "shot blind" with above result.

Sincerely Yours

So many people ask me how I am able to write a daily newspaper column. Some of them seem to be consumed with a feeling of awe that that many words could flow from one person's pen. If my words flowed from my pen, there isn't an editor in the world who could read the column. So a typewriter is essentially a part of my equipment.

But to answer some of your questions, I want to tell you this: It isn't as easy as it looks.

There are times when it is utterly impossible for me to write a word. There are days when my typewriter is a mocking dead, mute thing that leers at me each time I pass it.

Emotions have a great deal to do with the ability to write anything. I often write better when I am furiously angry with someone. I don't write very well when I'm hungry. I write better at times when I am terribly worried. Some of the best things in this column, if any of them are "best", have been written from the depths of my own sadness.

any different to you; if anything, I may be a lot more human than you are, because I'm no angel nor do I ever wish to be. I write what I feel . . . what I think . . . and sometimes offend. There are more times when I do not.

Writing should be a full time job and someday most of my time will be spent in that manner. But until then, on the days when the words won't come . . . I am sometimes cheered by a friendly word from you.

Because, after all, you are the real reason behind this column.

It would be rather foolish to write just to myself, wouldn't it? But to you who believe a daily column is written with the greatest of ease . . .

I assure you it isn't. But I wouldn't trade places with someone who didn't write a column . . . for the world!

RUBBER HOSE connections for gas heaters are passing out of the picture in the modern home because:

- 1. Children or other persons may trip over them and disconnect them.
2. They dry and crack with age, allowing gas to leak.
3. They are inflammable.

For safety's sake, all rubber gas hose should be replaced with metal tubing connectors. They are available in varying lengths, are inexpensive and easy to install and are designed to provide maximum protection against fire and leak hazards.
