The Best of Texas

GINGER LEE

Volunteering as a blood donor at a hospital the other day, a young woman was asked by the nurse, "Do you know your type?"
"Oh, yes," came the reply. "I'm the sultry type."

Drunks, bleas 'em, are the butts of many jokes. And there've been several of that lush variety in this corner on past visits with you.

But the other evening while curiously perusing one of our tattered scrapbooks which are crammed with ink such as this which has appeared in several unsuspecting newspapers, we were reminded — and chucklingly — of a little affair concerning an inebriate which had been the subject of some special paragraphing by the walking meat shortage.

It all happened while we were holding down the police run on an a.m. daily in one of America's large and very notorious underworld capitals, the exact monicker of which we prefer to skip.

Anyway, down at gendarme headquarters early in the wee hours one morning we were present with a Chesterfield dangling limply from our lips, but our tired eyes were still very wide open when we spotted the guy.

He was a fat little man who was very intoxicated, but he managed to remain erect as he clung desperately to the thick marble counter before the desk sergeant.

The sergeant, preparing an arrest report, sent word to the jailer to come out and frisk the drunk. "Where am I?" asked the wobbly inebriate as his glassy eyes swept the office.

"Why this is a hotel," soothingly replied the officer, busy with his report. "We're going to put you to bed in a nice room."

"Don't wanna room," protested the man, and as he spoke his pudgy little fingers roamed over the cool, smooth surface of the marble counter. It had a familiar feel, and the drunk's half-closed eyes lighted up.

"Bring me a beer!" he cried. "Bring us all a beer!"

"You don't want a beer," said the officer. "You want a nice soft bed in a nice room."

But angrily the fat little man slapped a flabby palm on the counter. "Don't needs bed. Needs beer. Bartender!" he belted.

"Bring us all a beer! Come on, bartender, it's all on me."

Whew! Sizzling Heat Wave Is Here To Stay

There'll be no let-up in the current heat wave which is cooking the Eastland County vicinity. That was the sad word from the U. S. Weather Bureau today.

The stretch of torrid temperatures — hovering at the sweltering 100-degree level — are due to continue at least today and Saturday, according to weather men.

The maximum thermometer readings for both days will be as usual — hugging the scorching upper 90s.

And the lowest mercury reading — scheduled for tonight — will be down to only about 75 degrees.

Clear to partly cloudy and continued hot weather was forecast for Eastland County and vicinity with partly cloudy skies and not much change in temperatures due for the North Central Texas region.

For West Texas: Partly cloudy Friday and Saturday. Widely scattered thundershowers afternoon and evening. Not much change in temperatures.

Officers Are To Consider Attacks, Great Disasters

Plans for disaster control in Texas, either from storms or enemy attack, will be major topics at the Texas Police Association convention here June 15-17.

Recent severe tornadoes at Waco and San Angelo together with the ever-present chance of enemy atomic attack are heightening interest in such plans, TPA President Roy Lay, police chief at Corpus Christi, said today.

Policy-setting police officers from throughout Texas are expected to attend the convention. They are showing particular interest in a panel discussion June 15 on the Waco tornado, Lay said.

Capt. Sam J. Gardner, commanding the Texas Highway Patrol at Waco, will moderate the panel. He will tell how police officers—city, county, military and state—cooperated to ease the burden from the disastrous Waco storm of May 11 which claimed 114 lives.

Two speeches also will be given on related subjects. "Police Cooperation" will be the subject of Col. Homer Garrison, Jr., director of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Fort Worth's coordinator of civilian defense, Capt. R. E. Dysart, will speak on "Planning for Disaster" in the event of enemy attack.

Guide Book for Vet Home Buyers With G. I. Loans

"To the Home Buying Veteran," a 32 page guide for veterans planning to buy or build homes with GI loans, is now available at all Veterans Administration offices.

VA said the pamphlet is designed to help World War II and post-Korea veterans get started on the right foot under the GI home loan program.

The pamphlet discusses what a veteran should look for in selecting the neighborhood, the lot and the house itself.

It also covers the costs of home ownership, the contract of purchase, final settlement or closing the loan, and what to expect before and after moving into a new home.

The responsibilities of the veteran home owner and what the VA can and cannot do to assist the veteran are also discussed.

Short Course On Beef Production

A short course in beef cattle production problems will be held at Texas A&M College during the week of August 17.

The course is designed for both commercial cattlemen and purebred breeders and will cover the various phases of breeding, feeding, management and disease and parasite control, with emphasis on some of the newer developments in the field of beef cattle husbandry. Work with various breeds of beef cattle will be included and practicing sessions will be provided.

Nationally known persons in the beef cattle field will be brought in on the program as well as staff members of the Animal Husbandry Department.

EGG AND PORK PRICES HIGHER OVER NATION

Oh the harried housewives' food front—

Higher prices for eggs and pork confronted many homemakers this week. But there were bargains on fruit and vegetable counters.

Cherries from the Pacific Northwest, plums and new white potatoes from California, peaches from Georgia and strawberries from New York state were among the many produce specials headlined by chain stores and supermarkets across the country.

Cantaloupe and watermelon, although slightly higher in price than last week, were listed as good buys in many areas. Also priced attractively were rhubarb, cabbage, spinach, beets and onions—all currently in plentiful supply in many areas.

Egg prices were definitely up. Prices of center cut pork chops—at or near $1 a pound last week—held firm or moved higher. In some instances they climbed six cents.

Beef prices showed little change. Chain stores featured rib roast, chuck roast, ground beef and all-beef frankfurters as specials for the coming week end. Frying chickens were cheap and plentiful.

Eastlanders Place In Breck Rodeo Thursday

C. C. Brown of Ranger was second in the first go-around calf roping ending Thursday night at the 10th annual Stephens County Rodeo in Breckenridge.

Brown's time was 13.3 seconds. Top in the popular event was Pete Reid of Breckenridge.

Lester Forrest of Aspermont was third with 13.4 seconds, and Johnny Parrott of Throckmorton was fourth with 13.6 seconds.

Jane Ann Bradford, of Ranger, placed third in a field of 25 other entrants in the children's pony contest Thursday night. Steve Good of Breckenridge was first, and Sammy Fambro also of Breckenridge, was second.

About 2,000 persons were on hand for the second of the four scheduled performances Thursday night.

A first go-around in the girls barrel race ended Thursday night with Sherry Price of Addington, Okla., turning a time of 10.9 seconds for first. She was followed in the race by another Addington cowgirl, Florence Youree with 11 seconds; Marie Gist of Colorado City with 11.1; and Manilla Mitchell of Brady was fourth with 11.2.

B. R. Wright of Breckenridge tied his calf in 41.5 seconds in the first go-around of the old-timers calf roping contest to win first money. Wright was trailed by Jess Daugherty, Spur, with 73.8, and Virgil Chick of Mineral Wells, with 76.5.

About 16 bareback and 10 saddle bronc riders managed to maintain a seat on their mounts until the whistle blew, as they were finishing up the first go-around Thursday night.

Next performance of the rodeo is Saturday night.

Meet Goldthwaite Tonight—Eagles Hop To Notch Victory

Banking heavily on the talented tossing arm of left-handed Jerry Wharton, J. A. Estes and his Ranger Eagles, American Legion diamond nine, will journey over to Mills County tonight for an AL conference clash with the potent Goldthwaite crew.

The Eagles opened their 1953 pennant drive somewhat dimly Tuesday afternoon when costly fielding miscues cost them a disheartening 6 to 4 defeat at the hands of Breckenridge in their initial AL fray of the newly-opened baseball campaign.

Goldthwaite, however, opened their league pennant drive with plenty of punch Tuesday afternoon when they pounded a Mineral Wells AL nine to the overwhelming tune of 17 to 3.

Also adding gloom to the Rangers' hope for win No. 1 in tonight's 7-inning duel is the reminder that one week ago tonight—on the same Mills County diamond which is the site of tonight's contest—the Goldthwaiters downed the Eagles, 8 to 4.

Backing up hurler Wharton in the Oil City's bid for win No. 1 tonight will be Bill Calvert, first Larry Pruitt, second, Bill Herrington, short, and Howard Neeley, third. Jim Littlefield will work behind the plate, and outfielders will be Scott Forrester, David Wharton and Jerry Simmons.

Here's the league line-up for next week and for the remainder of the season in the six-team American Legion boy's diamond loop:

Tuesday, June 16th—Cisco at Mineral Wells, 8 p. m., Goldthwaite at Breckenridge, a 9 p. m. Stephenville at Ranger.

Friday, June 19th—Goldthwaite at Cisco, 8 p. m., Mineral Wells at Ranger and Breckenridge at Stephenville.

Tuesday, June 23rd—Ranger at Cisco, 8 p. m., Stephenville at Goldthwaite and Mineral Wells at Breckenridge.

Friday, June 26th—Stephenville at Cisco, 2:30 p. m., Ranger at Breckenridge, and Goldthwaite at Mineral Wells.

Tuesday, June 30th—Cisco at Breckenridge, 4:30 p. m., Mineral Wells at Stephenville and Goldthwaite at Ranger.

Friday, July 3rd—Mineral Wells at Cisco, 8 p. m., Breckenridge at Goldthwaite, and Ranger at Stephenville.

Tuesday, July 7th—Cisco at Goldthwaite, 8 p. m., Ranger at Mineral Wells, and Stephenville at Breckenridge.

Friday, July 10th—Cisco at Ranger, 8 p. m., Goldthwaite at Stephenville, and Breckenridge at Mineral Wells.

U. S. Refining Due To Hit 8.1 Million Barrels

Crude oil refining capacity in the U. S. is expected to reach about 8,100,000 barrels daily by the end of 1953 and about 100,000 a day by the end of 1954, the Petroleum Administration for Defense (PAD) said today.

Deputy Administrator J. Ed Warren noted that the two figures when compared with estimates issued last December, represent a drop of 50,000 barrels a day in expected capacity by the end of this year and an increase of 100,000 barrels a day in expected capacity by Dec. 31, 1954.

He said an additional 62,000 barrels a day of the refining capacity is scheduled to be completed after Jan. 1, 1955.

The PAD estimated refining capacity Jan. 1, 1953, at more than 7,700,000 barrels a day.

BETTY hadn't dreamed that...

BETTY hadn't dreamed that there was a man within a mile of her until she finished milking the cow and got up with the three-legged stool in one hand, the three-legged stool in the other. She turned, and there stood a strange man watching her from a distance of 10 feet. She gasped and involuntarily raised the stool to defend herself. An Indian might have slipped up on her this way, but she hadn't thought a white man could.

"Take it easy, miss," the man said with a smile. "I didn't speak because I was afraid I might startle your cow."

Betty allowed her arm to fall, but retained a firm grip on one leg of the stool. It was rather a formidable weapon to keep a man at bay, but when she looked at the man's face she decided that she didn't have to worry anyway. He looked well over six feet, and was graciously rather than massively built. She wouldn't have called him handsome for the prominent nose and cheekbones, gave his face a craggy look, but she didn't think of him as ugly. Likewise, while he wasn't young, he certainly wasn't old.

She said, "I'd rather be kicked by a cow than scared out of my skin."

"The stranger laughed. 'Don't be upset. I'm only a wayfarer looking for a place to spend the night. Betty wasn't afraid, but she was still suspicious—and with cause. She had met wayfarers before and there were all kinds. This man was better dressed than most, cleaner—and he shaved. She said, 'You'll have to ride on 20 miles. My father sometimes puts up travelers at his trading post at Two Rivers.'"

"You," he said incredulously, "are Zad Barnes' daughter?" "Well, what about it?" she demanded. "Do you know Zad?"

"No, can't say that I do. I've heard of him, of course. But men don't usually bring up daughters in the kind of place I've heard he lives in. What I mean to say is, this is a sort of womanless country."

Betty didn't like this man's talk. "Who are you? What're you doing away here where nobody ever comes?" she demanded suspiciously.

"My name is Pete Morrison, miss, late of the Union Army. Right now I'm what you might call an explorer."

HE didn't feel it necessary to tell her that during the recently concluded War between the States, in which he had risen to the rank of captain, he had served exclusively in the West.

He was sizing up this girl, too. She was pretty, in spite of the coarse linsey-woolsey dress which came to the tops of her heavy-soled shoes. She was rather a small girl with black hair, and warm, expressive brown eyes.

"Exploring for what?" she asked tartly.

"Let's say land." "Well, say it—but you're probably lying anyway," she retorted. His bronzed cheeks flushed slightly, but he said, "Twenty miles is a long ride for a tired horse, and it'll soon be dark. All I ask for is pasture for my horse. I have my own blankets and I can sleep in the hay."

"You got your own foot?" "No."

She pondered, with a visible

crinkling of her brow. "I guess it'll be all right," she said. "I'll charge you a dollar for supper and breakfast, same as Zad charges at the post. There's grain in the box and you can feed your horse hay if you'd rather."

"Thanks." He watched her carry the heavy pail of milk to the house in an easy, effortless way. Apparently she had just finished the milking of four cows. An observant man he had noticed her hesitation when she had spoken of her father, and later she had called him Zad. Daughter in those days didn't refer to their parents by their given names.

Pete hadn't lied when he told her he was exploring, but he hadn't told her the whole truth. His chief mission was to rout out, if possible, a gang of despicable and bloodthirsty desperados, and he had every reason to think that the man known as Zad Barnes was his head. It had bowled him over to find that the man had a daughter as pretty and attractive as his own.

The Civil War had given Zedek Barnes every opportunity to prey upon the emigrants, and he had availed himself of his opportunities. Yet there had never been any real evidence to convict him of any crime. If he couldn't be convicted then the only way to deal with him was to submerge or drive him out with settlers, and that was Pete Morrison's mission.

PETE tended his horse, then went into the dirt-roofed log cabin where the girl was cooking supper. He was as anxious to learn more about her as he was to find out about the man she claimed was her father.

He said, "This is an odd place. Here is what looks like a fine ranch, yet it seems to be the only one in the valley. Why is that?"

Betty turned and looked at him, a piece of smoking meat suspended above the frying pan on a fork. "Everybody else is scared of Indians. Zad isn't."

"And you?" "Why should I be? Indians have never bothered me—which is more than I can say for a lot of white men."

"You live up here all the time?" "In the summer. We move down to Two Rivers in the winter." She didn't tell him that she came up here mostly to escape the attentions of the rough men who hung out around Zad Barnes' trading post, or that this spring she had violently opposed her coming.

"I need you right here," Zad had said heavily.

She had replied, "I'm going to High Valley. Jess and a Walter need me more than you do."

BETTY served a good supper, and breakfast. At the morning meal there was present an old fellow of 60 with a gray beard whom Betty introduced as Jess Williams. These three operated Zad Barnes' ranch in High Valley. Did they, Pete wondered, have any hand in the systematic looting of the emigrant carriages who had to stop at Two Rivers for their last supplies before taking the jump-off across the desert to southern California? He would have been amazed if he had heard old Jess Williams remark to Betty as they watched her ride away: "If that pilgrim goes to Two Rivers he isn't likely to leave there alive."

It's the man I think he is. Zad has got word that there's some spy riding down the trail about snoopy questions about him and this great answers the description." (To Be Continued)

TV'S FOR THE BIRDS—Or so these Jacksonville, Fla., starlings believe. For some reason the chattering flock finds the antennae tower and guy wires of the city's only television station an ideal place to roost. Jacksonville residents now have something new to reply when asked, "What's on television tonight?"

Pan Howards of Ranger, were callers in the John Tucker home Sunday.

Berry pickin' time just brings to mind this little jingle: There was a little bigger and he wasn't any bigger. Than the end of a very small pin. But the bump that he raises itches like blazes. And that's where the rub comes in!

So long 'til next week.

Salaries of the nursing positions to be filled range from $3,740 to $5,940, and include established VA benefits of annual leave, sick leave and forty-hour work week. Housing accommodations are available on the station in some instances.

Interested parties are requested to write Chief of Nursing Service, Veterans Administration Hospital, Houston, Texas.

Keep Old Egg Short! Seen by Ex

This fall it will pay a box of your old hens' pullets are housed, prepared by Farmer. It looks like there will be a shortage of birds from late summer to November and prices are likely to strong.

Here's why the hens ought pay out: Egg prices held strong even during flush production in spring and early summer. That means there was no surplus of layers. And pullet buyers didn't stock up early this year as they have done at other times. So there is no surplus of early pullets, either. That should mean good prices for hen-size eggs.

The greatest demand for the big ones will be white pullets are coming into production and egg size is small, the farm magazine notes. Later in the winter, however, prices may slump. There was a late rush for baby chicks when egg prices held strong in April and May. So profits this fall could bulk larger than those for all the rest of the laying year.

'CATASTROPHE KITS' BEING DISTRIBUTED OVER STATE; TEAMS TRAINED FOR WORK

Come hail or high water—or a tornado like the one which shattered Waco recently—and Texas will be ready to act.

A special 'catastrophe kit,' containing a blueprint of exactly what should be done when a disaster strikes, was distributed only this month to virtually every Texas Community. The kits arrived in both San Angelo and Waco only hours before tragedy struck these communities but civic leaders in both cities who put the ideas to work have praised the effectiveness of the 'catastrophe plan.'

Chief architects of the Catastrophe Plan are more than 10,000 Texas representatives of the capital stock insurance industry who know from experience what must be done to restore a stricken community to normalcy as quickly as possible. Their plan of action, reduced to simple terms in the Catastrophe Kit, now is available to more than 200 Texas communities.

In addition, special 'disaster teams' of trained trouble-shooters have set up headquarters in Dallas, Houston, San Antonio, Amarillo, Lubbock, Abilene and Corpus Christi, according to Frank Welch of Dallas, Chairman of the Joint Loss Committee of the stock property insurance industry. Members of the Dallas 'disaster team' went to Waco a few hours after the tornado struck.

Chinese Prof. Shows Art

Dr. Chong-rwen Kao is a full-time painter and part-time salesman at Kent State University. The 39-year-old professor paints as a hobby, but his works are good enough for exhibitions. They were shown in China before the Communists took over and since then in Iowa City, Chicago, and Peoria, Ill.

The works are for sale—but the doctor never tries to sell them. "If anyone wants to buy my paintings, I will sell them," he said, "but I don't ask people to buy."

He came to the United States in 1946 to finish his education and has remained because his homeland is closed to him. He has a 10-year-old brother still in Red China.

The American Veterinary Medical Association says the "dental timetable" generally accepted for determining a cow's age is misleading.

The incorrect schedule shows the incisor teeth coming in a two, three, four and five years of age. Recent studies, however, indicate the teeth coming in at less than nine months.

Thus a cow with a full set of incisors would be more likely to be just over three years old, rather than five years of age.

The AVMA says the teeth come in faster now because farmers have acquired faster-developing breeds.
