EARTH ABIDES by GEORGE R. STEWART

THE STORY, which nearly all humans believe from a deadly virus disease, Ish Williams and Em, who have taken as his wife, face a new world and new conditions. Scarcely had they settled down when they discover that rats of the city, unheeded by the exterminators, are overrunning everything.

Individual rats carefully to see if they seemed sickly. On the contrary, they seemed more active than ever. Then Em called to him one morning from the window. "Look, they're fighting!" He went to look. He saw a large rat definitely attacking a smaller one. The small one fought back, and dodged desperately, and seemed just about to make its escape through a hole which might be too small for the larger one. Then suddenly a third and still larger rat appeared, and sprang also upon the small one. In high boots, well gloved, carrying a stout stick in his hand, Ish made an expedition to the nearest business-center and foraged for food. He found few rats in the stores, and when he investigated, he found that everything which a rat could get and eat had been completely wiped out. The stores were a great disgusting litter of torn papers, and chewed cartons.

TO top the whole affair, in spite of a certain horror that he still held of it, came to be a most interesting study in ecology, almost a laboratory problem. The rats had first lived upon the stores of food which men had laid up for them, and these had gradually been transformed into a great reservoir of rat-flesh. Then, when the cereals and dried fruits and packaged beans were depleted, there was left—for certain individual rats at least—in this other supply of food. Under such circumstances, it seemed a question whether any single rat would die of starvation, even though the rats as a species might be dying of starvation. "The old and sickly and weak and immature will go first," he said, "and then those that are not quite so old or sickly or weak or immature—and so on."

Rev. Ralph Perkins To Teach Night Bible Course At R. J. C.

The Bible course being offered at Ranger Junior College will meet each Tuesday evening at 7:30. This is a 3-hour credit course for college students. The Ranger Ministerial Alliance is cooperating with the President and the Board of Regents in furnishing teachers for the course. Classes in this course are fortunate to be able to have a prescribed course in Bible study. This course is open for anyone who desires to improve their knowledge of the Scriptures. The course is non-sectarian. Any one who comes and studies their Bible and parallel reading, will become a better Bible student and teacher. Churches of this area ought to avoid themselves of this opportunity to send their teachers in this evening class of Bible study. Never before in this area has the Bible been offered, outside of the local churches for prescribed study. Pastors and churches in this area should contact Dr. Price Ashton in regard to the course. The class beginning at 7:30 will have intermissions and breaks that will enable those attending to have a few moments for relaxation. The class will meet once each week. Three semester hours will be given upon satisfactory completion of the course. This may be used as a refresher course for teachers, and for those who have completed their Bible courses in college. Both the New and Old Testament will be offered during the two semesters. The study will be based upon the origin, literature, history, and contents of the books studied. The Life of Christ is offered as a course of study and is based upon the four Gospels.

Mrs. Perkins To Teach Book On Tuesday Evening

"The Pull of the People", a book for church leaders, is being taught at the First Baptist Church Tuesday evening at 7:00 by Mrs. Ralph E. Perkins. The nursery is open.

The book by Dr. J. N. Barnett, of the Sunday School Board, is designed to lead local churches and Southside Sunday school leaders to see the power of the local churches really at work for the Master. Supt. Wilson Guest has led the church in cooperating in the campaign for a "Million More in '54." One new department and several classes have been organized to take care of the increase expected in the local Sunday school.

Officers and teachers of the Sunday school, Deacons, and other church leaders are expected to complete the study course being offered this week. The pastor incorporated the general idea of two chapters of the book into the sermons on Sunday. The ninth chapter of Matthew and the sixth chapter of Mark were used for the morning sermon and the second and third chapters of Revelation for the evening sermon.

The class periods begin at 7 and at 7:30. Entrance may be gained at any time. Those who attended Sunday services and complete the next two nights will be eligible for awards in the course.

EARTH ABIDES
by GEORGE R. STEWART

THE STORY: With nearly all human beings on earth dead from a deadly virus disease, Ish Williams and Kim, the woman he has taken as his wife, watch the earth readjust itself to the loss of mankind. So far only a few survivors have been seen besides themselves.

XIV

HE had been in the library hundreds of times before, during his years at the university. But now under the changed conditions, he felt a strange new sense of awe. Here rested in storage the wisdom by which civilization had been built, and could be rebuilt. Now that he knew himself soon to be a father, he had suddenly a new attitude, a feeling for the future. The child should not grow up to be a parasite, scavenging forever. And it would not need to. Everything was here. All the knowledge!

Suddenly he felt that all civilization depended not only upon men but also upon these other things which had marched with him like kinsmen and friends and companions.

Take the seven-day week, for instance. Even though you were not religious, you had to admit that the seven-day week with its one day of rest was a fine old tradition of mankind. It had been going on for at least 5000 years, clear from Babylonian times, and no one knew how much further. Would he ever be able to figure out again just which day was Sunday?

As for getting the proper day of the year, that should not be too difficult. He knew enough about the fundamentals of astronomy to do that, and if he got the time of the solstice correct, he could figure back on last year's calendar and perhaps re-establish the day of the week.

This was the time of the year to get busy on the problem. Although he did not know exactly, he could tell from the progress of the weather and from his general

Julian do it, and weren't there riots and things? But still, they did change it."

"Yes, you're right—and I suppose we can change it now if we want to. It certainly gives a person a sense of power!"

NOT far from the house on San Lupo Drive there was that area which had once been a public park. Tall rocks rose picturesquely and at one place the tops of two of them leaned together, forming a high narrow cave. Near by, a smooth rock surface, as large as the floor of a small room, sloped with the hillsides, but was not too steep to sit on comfortably. In those older times which had been before even those that were now called the Old Times, some tribe of people had lived hereabouts, and on the smooth rock surface you still saw the holes where those people had pounded with stones to make their acorn-mash.

One day, after the round of the seasons had passed and the sun for the second time sank well to the south of the Golden Gate, Ish and Em climbed the hillside toward the rocks. The afternoon was calm and sunny, warm for mid-winter. Em carried the baby, wrapped in a soft blanket. Ish worked with hammer and chisel, cutting into the smooth surface the single numeral. The rock was hard, but with the heavy hammer and the sharp chisel, he soon finished an upright line. But it was fun to adorn the work a little. So Ish cut a clean serif at the base of the line, and a little hook at the top, so that the finished figure resembled the next 1 which he remembered in the times of printing.

When he was done, he sat close beside Em in the sun. The baby had finished feeding, and was happy. They played with him.

"Well," said Ish, "that was the Year One!"

"Yes," said Em, "but I think I shall always remember it as the Year of the Baby. Names are easier to remember than numbers."

Range Rally Spares Deer

Comeback of green stuff after the recent rains is benefitting wild deer in more ways than one, reports the Executive Secretary of the Game and Fish Commission.

He said growth of natural food, stimulated by the wet weather, is helping keep the herds from grass along the highways and thus reducing the toll from deer being struck by cars.

Game wardens had noted an unusually high accident rate during the late summer when pastures become short and the animals fed along the grassy shoulders.

"We lose many deer from being struck by cars regardless of the range conditions," said the Executive Secretary. "The crash rate is high at night when the animals are blinded by lights. But they are drifting away from the green
