For Salt Lake City, the trip properly began at Pueblo, and we feel confident in saying that this journey over the D. & R. G. comprises more noted and magnificent scenery than any other trip of similar length in the known world. Piercing the heart of the Rocky Mts., penetrating canons, each of which is a world's wonder, and gorges whose walls soar half a mile in perpendicular cliffs above the track, traversing fertile and picturesque valleys, watered by historic rivers; pausing in the midst of mining camps, thus making the traveler familiar with peaks, plains, rivers, canons and passes; with strange scenes in nature, wonders of science, and novel forms of art.

Just beyond Canon City, the Denver & Grande Ry. enters the Grand Canon of the Arkansas, the narrowest portion of which is known as the Royal Gorge. After beholding the Royal Gorge the traveler has a superlative comparison for all that is wonderful and grand in nature. He has seen something which he can never forget, and of the many marvels along this route, the greatest of them all, the crowning glory, is the Royal Gorge.

The next stop over night was at Leadville. It is the fourth city in size in Colorado, and the greatest and most unique carbonate mining camp in the world. It is walled in on all sides by towering mountains whose summits are capped with eternal snow. The elevation at Leadville is nearly 11,000 feet. The visitor here is irresistibly reminded of the words of Joaquin Miller: "Colorado, rare Colorado! Yonder she rests, her head of gold pillowed on the Rocky Mountains; her feet in the brown grass; the boundless plains for a playground; she is set on a hill before the world, and the air is very clear, so that all may see her well." We beheld frost in August! at this place.

Leaving Leadville the line is none the less interesting and beautiful—Mount of the Holy Cross, Tennessee Pass, the Canon of the Grand, one of creation's greatest miracles, and other scenes—the wonder of one who sees, the despair of one who wishes to tell others what he saw.

Our next stop was at Salt Lake City. The great object of interest to the tourist and stranger here, is Temple Square; here are situated the great ecclesiastical buildings of the Mormon church. Prominent among them is the Temple, Tabernacle and Assembly Hall; near by are the Lion and Bee Hive houses, the Tithing Office, Amelia Palace, Eagle Gate and the grave of Brigham Young. Trains run hourly to Saltair Beach, 14 miles away, that magnificent bathing resort that has within the past few years been built in the lake, 2,000 feet from shore, possesses the largest pavilion or pagoda in the world. The buildings have been erected in the form of a monster crescent with 1,000 bath houses, each provided with all modern conveniences. Here you can bathe a mile above sea-level in salt water in which the human body cannot sink. A number of our party availed themselves of this pleasure, while others with equal enjoyment went boat riding.

On the return trip the southern route of the D. & R. G. was followed from Grand Junction to Salida in Colo., thus enabling the party to view new scenery, notable among which was the justly famous Black Canon of the Gunnison. Surely in all the world there is no place so beautiful, imposing, sublime and awful that may be so easily and comfortably visited as the Black Canon. Once in awhile the railroad changes sides with the noisy stream, the waters of which, in the semi-twilight that prevails between the rising and going down of the sun, seem to be of exquisite emerald green. Unlike many of the Colorado canons, the scenery in this one is kaleidoscopic, ever changing. If never tires, never becomes commonplace. In this canon we pass Curecanti Needle and lovely Chipeta Falls.

But to mention all the points of interest would require a great deal more space than is at our disposal.

As before stated, the party was composed of Northwest Texas newspaper editors and representatives, and ranked among the first people of this grand State, not only as "literary lights" but as high-principled, energetic, moral, law-abiding citizens—fully capable of enjoying all the good things that may come—once a year—to the average country newspaper man.

The "Salt Lake party" remained compact from start to return to Amarillo, with the exception of our "bachelor friend" who quitted us on return at Canon City,—ostensibly to visit—a friend.

OUR JUDICIAL SYSTEM.

Judge Wm. Poindexter of Cleburne, has an article in the August Lantern dealing in no uncertain way with what he justly terms our "patched judiciary system." The view he takes of it, as it now stands, and the remedies he proposes, in the main, are not new by any means, but they are well along in the line of betterment and therefore worthy of thoughtful consideration by the citizens of Texas. That our readers may judge of this matter, The News gives Judge Poindexter's methods of treatment as follows:

1. "Change the system of pleading in the trial courts. Require the plaintiff to state each ground upon which he relies for a recovery in a separate paragraph of his petition, and under the pains and penalties of perjury, require him to make oath to the truth of each paragraph. Require the defendant in his answer to reply to each paragraph contained in the petition and to admit or deny each under oath, and if he seeks to avoid any part of it, require same to be made under oath. Let this rule apply to pleadings in every kind and character of suit in the county and district courts.

"The effect of this would be far reaching. It would materially reduce the number of suits brought, it would force the parties and their attorneys by their pleadings to define and single out in advance the issues to be tried; it would lessen the evidence to be introduced and limit the trial to the real issues thus made. This would simplify and shorten litigation, and enable trial courts to dispose of twice the amount of civil business they are able to under present conditions, and make it possible to reduce instead of increase the number of district judges.

2. "Limit reversals on questions of law to those raised at the time by bills of exceptions, and prohibit the Supreme Court from reversing any case on any such question not thus represented. This would decrease the number of appeals and materially lessen the number of reversals.

3. "Abolish the present expensive and bunglesome method of appealing cases and require all appeals to be prosecuted by petition to the Supreme Court for writs of error, allowing so much of the record to be sent up as is necessary to make plain the question on which the writ is sought.

4. "Abolish the Courts of Civil Appeals and increase the number of Supreme Judges, making the Supreme Court large enough to hear and determine promptly all cases brought before it, and thus have one line of decisions published instead of six.

To the above remedial legislation, Judge Poindexter might have provided for the majority verdict in jury trials, say ten out of twelve in felony cases and eight or nine out of the twelve in civil cases.
The proposition submitted by Judge Poindexter as well as that providing for the majority verdict are not untried by any means as in a large sense the law is so formed in some of our sister states and the practice of it has proved its wisdom.
The News fully indorses the saying of the learned Cleburne Judge, that something ought to be done and done as early as possible in the way of remodeling our whole judicial system.
Under our present system, delays and uncertainty have become almost intolerable and the expense not only a burden to the litigants but to the general public, who in the end have the biggest portion of the bills to foot. Yes, all this should be

The Devil Renders Verdict.

One night as the devil sat musing alone, in the middle of his cosy warm fire, trying to figure the difference in guilt between a thief and an all around liar, his memory turned to the scenes of his youth, and his eyes filled with hot boiling tears; so he took down his ledger and turned to a page dated back about six thousand years. "I suppose," he exclaimed as he glanced through the book, "I'm doing the best I can, for my business denotes a continual increase ever since the creation of Man. I've cribbed a good harvest for many a year, and should be content with the yield, and give my opponent permission to have the gleanings I leave in the field. I've gathered a very diversified crop of merchants and lawyers galore; I've bound politicians in bundles until my fingers are sore. I've fiddlers, gamblers, and insurance men; I've murderers, forgers and liars; and filled my furnace with green populists, till they actually put out the fires. I've railroad conductors and doctors to spare, horse-traders and preachers to spend; Republicans, Democrats, Tories and Whigs, and only three newspaper men. But there is one class I am happy to say can never gain entrance here; their souls are so dirty I'm sure that they would demoralize hell in a year; I refer to a thing neither human nor beast—the carrion crow of the world—who never is happy unless he can feast on the wreck of an innocent girl. A million of years in my warmest rooms, his evil would never atone; I give him a match and advise him to start a select little hell of his own."

Then satan lit up an asbestos cigar, and placing his book on the shelf, he muttered: "I may be a very bad man, but I've got some respect for myself."—K. Lamity Banner.

Mares and Their Foals

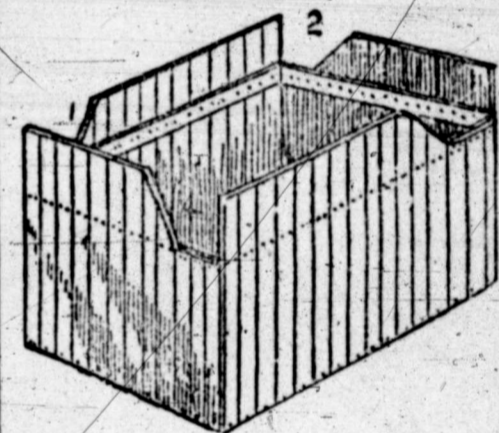

Dampness and foals do not go well together. Indeed, if a foal of tender age is forced to live in a damp and musty stall there is little likelihood of his doing well, says Breeder's Gazette. By all means give the mares and their offspring good dry boxes, well bedded, and plenty to eat of the very best. Dampness underfoot, overhead, in the general location of the stall or stable and in the hay is about as bad for foals as it can be. The sunniest quarters should be provided for the baby horses, and, while it is far better to give a mare with a foal a box stall, many and many a good colt has been reared running loose in the stable after its dam, free to go where it pleased among the other animals.

The writer once was employed on a farm where there were three foals reared thus in a stable in which two pairs of mules and three pairs of geldings besides the three mares were stabled regularly, and not one of the foals ever got a kick or a scratch. It is not a good way to rear foals as compared to giving them and their mothers nice, airy, sunny, loose boxes, but it is far better to let them have the run of a nice, clean, dry barn than it is to condemn them to incarceration in damp, moldy old sheds.

Cleanliness, moreover, cuts much of a figure in keeping the stalls, wherever they are, good and dry. It is impossible to let manure and filth accumulate for a few days and have the stalls as clean and sweet as the health of the young horse demands. Thousands, perhaps millions, of foals have been killed or at least rendered worthless by confinement in damp, ill cleaned stalls by the absorption of poisonous germs at the navel. Sunlight and cleanliness are the great enemies of germ life and consequent disease. Let the colts live in dry, sunny quarters.

places at the corners, 1, 2, 3, 4, four head can feed from one box without interfering with each other, as when the notches are in the middle.

Alfalfa as Swine Food.

Alfalfa is the natural food for swine. The pregnant sow on alfalfa pasture generally needs no grain at all, at most but a trifle of corn should she be in a thin condition when turned to pasture. Pigs born from sows pasturing on alfalfa are unusually fine and strong. After they come the sows need a little more grain than before and suckle profusely. The little pigs enjoy the sweet, tender herbage and thrive on it, but they, too, should have a daily allowance of grain. This is not absolutely necessary, as in Colorado, western Kansas and Nebraska many hog ranches are found where no grain is produced or fed winter or summer, but only alfalfa hay dry in winter and alfalfa pasture in summer, but the pigs are often sold to farmers in the corn belt to be fattened. It is economy to feed corn on alfalfa pasture. Alfalfa alone is too one sided a ration. It is too rich in protein and too poor in starch and fat.—Joseph E. Wing in Pennsylvania Bulletin.

To Make a Bran Mash.

To make a bran mash first wash out a bucket with boiling water, then pour in the quantity required—say three pints—and stir in three pounds of bran. Cover up and leave it for a couple of hours or more if not required for immediate use, says American Cultivator. A mash takes hours to get cold and is often offered to a sick horse too hot and refused when it would have been taken if properly prepared and given warm instead of scalding. The addition of a tablespoonful of salt in the ordinary mash of a Saturday night can be recommended to keep down parasites and promote digestion, but should not be a part of the invalid diet unless specially ordered.

According to the very latest news, peace between Russia and Japan has been agreed upon.

In addition to what Japan has by her victorious arms already acquired, she was clearly entitled by all the rules of all the Christian nations to an indemnity sufficient in amount to reimburse her for the expense of this war, wickedly forced upon her by perfidious Russia, but in the interest of humanity, and to the astonishment of all civilization, she has consented to waive this indemnity.

POINTS ON FEEDING

It seems to be pretty generally understood that stock will not eat tomatoes, but in discussion it was given as the experience of many growers for the canning that the pulp from the factory, consisting of peelings, cores, etc., is a very good feed for both hogs and cattle, writes an Indiana farmer in Rural New Yorker. In many instances farmers have hauled this pulp some distance and fed to hogs with very good results, claiming that they grew and fattened with a very small amount of grain added. Sometimes the hogs would not eat it when first offered to them, but if a little salt was scattered over it they soon learned to eat it greedily. Cattle seem to have a better liking for the tomatoes than hogs.

Best Ration For Sheep.

Grass is the best ration for sheep. No scientist or skilled shepherd can beat it as a balanced ration. Shepherd's Criterion.

Silage For Beef Making.

We verily believe that the silo is still in its early stage of development in this country. Dairyman have almost monopolized it thus far, but the future beef maker will find it as useful in his business as the dairyman has proved it to be in cheapening dairy products. The most, the best and the cheapest feed can be made from the corn crop by the use of the silo. National Stockman.

Mangel Wurzel as a Stock Feed.

Mr. David Ippie in an address before a Wisconsin institute gave excellent advice from a long experience in swine breeding, making a few good points. He said: "I am satisfied we must raise more mangels for our swine. They are peculiarly adapted for furnishing cheap nutrition, easily digested and health giving." I am sure we must look more carefully to this question of dry matter in roots. We have certainly overlooked the value of food nutrients in this form not only for feeding pigs, but all kinds of live stock. In my judgment no other root growth will take their place. Potatoes surely will not. I hope farmers will earnestly take hold of this question and raise, so far as their farm arrangements may permit, mangel-wurzels. National Stockman.

Bran For Pigs.

Middlings and other carbonaceous mill byproducts are said to have a tendency to produce soft pork and should be fed in connection with corn meal, barley or other grains. Bran furnishes much protein and mineral matter, but is fibrous and chaffy in character and unfit for the stomach of a young pig, although when more mature some bran can be fed with advantage. The great majority of the people down South have little faith in the proposed railroad from this place.

That other wedding promised by The News has also materialized—a good prophet you will observe.

A. M. Smith is adding some more improvements to his already nice residence.

If it's candy you want see Wilson for the best kind.

Married—Friday evening at the residence of the bride's parents near Tullia, B. F. Hodges and Miss Belle Parker. Only relatives and the minister, Rev. A. B. Haynes, were present. Both bride and groom are well and favorably known to all our people and the event has been foreshadowed for sometime. Opposites to that extent in temperament recommended by the great phenologist, Dr. Gall, sound morally and physically, and having arrived at the proper age for setting a correct estimate upon and assuming the responsibilities of married life, success all the way along its course should fall to their lot—this their host of friends sincerely wish for them. They will be at home to their friends in one of the Heyser residences in the West End after this week.

Married—Sunday evening by Rev. Jesse B. Haston at the residence of R. G. Oldham, Luther Brown and Miss Erma Cochell. The bride and groom came from Umbarger, where the parents of the bride reside, with a party of friends in buggies, and all, including the principals, remained in the buggies during the ceremony and at its conclusion turned westward again. The News representative sending after them best wishes, a handful of rice and an old shoe.

Monday morning early a 40 pound Ice Rind water melon and a big pumpkin greeted The News force. They were kindly left for us to take care of by John Knight, and we did not betray the trust. When chance offers we will get even with John, see if we don't.

Hicks Waller returned Tuesday from his trip to Ben Franklin. He says that section is in a bad fix generally. That much of the grain crop rotted in the shock and has been burned as it stood to get rid of it; that the corn crop is light and that cotton will make but little on account of weevils and worms.

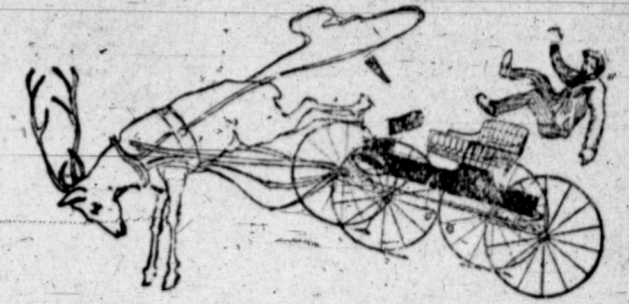

L. M. Faulkner has purchased an improved section three miles up the draw from Plainview. He bought from J. E. Bird at $6,500 and gets crops, stock and everything else about the place except the family and household goods.

For Sale by Walter G. Cobb, Canyon City, Texas.

High Class Herefords.

To reduce my herd I offer at private sale

- 10 Beau Donalds heifers 1 year old
- 10 Beau Donalds heifers 2 year old
- 10 Bright Boys' heifers 3 year old

The 3s have calves at foot by Climax 5th, a 2600 pound bull, and will weigh a ton each easily. The 2s are in calf by Senator Wilton Grove.

I do not mean to say that I will sell the horns and tail of a Hereford or even its marking—but I will sell the Hereford in its broadest sense—those with individuality and quality—no better anywhere. This I guarantee. My Herefords are not pampered for show purposes but bred and raised for quality and for service as breeders on the range and will compare favorably with anybody's herd at any place—Northern breeders have no edge over me. I will make the prices right. Come and see the cattle—they speak for themselves—or write

Among some other products of his fields John A. Wilson brought in last week some Indian corn that looked like it might have come out of the Brazos bottoms. It is good for any country. Mr. Wilson is the kind of a man that could make a good living on less than one hundred acres of Plains land.

Nabor Lusby presented this office with a fine large musk melon one day last week on condition that we would not make mention of it in the paper, and we won't.

John Orr has moved into the Long house recently vacated by J. B. Thomas.
