

SCHOOL EXHIBIT GOES TO DALLAS

EXCELLENT EXHIBIT FROM GRADES OF PUBLIC SCHOOL.

Mrs. Wray and Miss Baird Take Exhibit to State Teachers Association This Week.

The Canyon public schools will have an excellent school exhibit at Dallas this week under the care of Mrs. Wray and Miss Baird who left yesterday with a large variety of work being done by the pupils of the grades. The high school sent no exhibit owing to the large amount of work the students have on hand.

The exhibit starts with the little folks of the first and second grades where they do principally such things as cut out paper, take the first step into weaving and basket making, frame pictures, make little baskets and rugs and start free hand drawing. The exhibit will also contain numerous samples of writing and figures done by the pupils of the first grade. It is marvelous what excellent steps the little people take in this line of work when their energy is directed correctly. Miss Garretson has charge of this room and the exhibit speaks highly for her ability.

The exhibit from the third and fourth grades contains a larger variety of articles and of more complex nature. There is found basket work, mats, picture frames, various kinds of drawings and water colors, paper cuttings, hand bags, napkins, dust caps, aprons, laundry bags, bonnets, pin cushions and rugs. There were many articles of fancy work from this grade that would puzzle the capabilities of experienced ladies. All of the work was done in the room under the direction of the teacher, Miss Avis Baird, who has had a great deal of experience in this line of work.

The fifth, sixth and seventh grade work is under the direction of Miss Minnie Conner. Corresponding to the advance in age of the pupils, the work of these grades advance in complexities. Life studies are of the most interesting in these grades. These studies range all the way from drawings of an apple to that of the First National Bank building, and in complexity from the simple shading of objects to the natural colorings of the organs of the human body which were taken from models furnished by the physiology department. Sepia work is very prominent and very fine. There were a number of interesting cartoons, kodak picture books, match cases, kitchen reminding cards, capet slippers accessories for the baby, calanders, drawings of all kinds and descriptions, mechanical drawings, toilet articles, towels, neatly hemmed and figured, and basket work.

Up to this time all of the work has been done by hand, but two new sewing machines are now at the disposal of the pupils.

This kind of work has been more largely confined to the girls than Supt. King desires and he is working toward the installation of a modern and up-to-date manual training department so that the boys may get the benefit of this sort of work. The school that does not have a manual training and domestic science department is almost a back number and the people of Canyon will no doubt soon see to it that these departments are given the best equipment that can be obtained.

In speaking of the work accomplished along these lines, Supt. E. F. King said: "With this sort of training conducted in the grades of the school, study does not become so monotonous and tiresome. The work we are doing in the lower grades has no intrinsic value, but it keeps the pupils interested in school and helps to keep them busy all the time. The day doesn't become dull with this diversion. The practical result of the whole thing is, however, the increased amount of work we are able to get from the children in the long run. They will do twice as much in an hour after they have been working along these lines than they would without work. I am very hopeful of getting a complete manual training department started next year and want to introduce more domestic science."

First Bogus Check Sentence.

Fort Worth—The first trial on a charge of swindling in Tarrant county under the "bogus check" law was held before Judge Jesse M. Brown in the county criminal court Saturday and resulted in a conviction and a sentence of two years in the penitentiary. This trial was that of Fred S. Parks, who passed a check when he had no money in the bank to cover same.

This law was considered for some time before it was finally passed, and R. E. Kerr, secretary of the Credit Men's Association, was largely instrumental in its drafting and final passage. While the law is not as "tight" as its promoters desired, it is believed to be much better than anything that formerly existed and is expected to have a decided effect when its penalty becomes generally known. The case was prosecuted for the state by Assistant County Attorneys Wesley B. Ammerman and W. Cullen Bailey, and each was well pleased with the result of the first case.

Football Team Disbands.

The Normal football team disbanded Saturday what it was learned that the Lowery-Phillips team would be unable to play here Monday and then the team was unable to get a game for Thanksgiving. The team has been very successful this year losing only two games. They stand high among the colleges of the Panhandle, being defeated by only the Lowery-Phillips team in a game where the locals were not nearly up to their standard of efficiency. However, as a whole the season has been very successful and the boys are well pleased with their winnings.

Reports Great Meeting.

Rev. T. G. Netherton returned Tuesday from Dallas where he attended the state convention of the Baptist church. He reports a very fine inspirational meeting. Mrs. B. T. Johnson and W. H. Younger also attended from the local church.

Basketball Thanksgiving.

The town basketball team and the Normal boys will play tonight at the Normal gymnasium the first game of the season. Both teams have been working hard and are in excellent condition. Cavet, the captain of the "wrecking crew", will not be in the game but will arrive in the city from Ft. Worth next week.

THANKSGIVING.

"Righteousness exalteth a nation," and "peace on earth, good will toward men" furnish the only foundations upon which can be built the lasting achievements of the human spirit. The year has brought us the satisfaction of work well done and fresh visions of our duty, which will make the work of the future better still.—Extract from President Wilson's Thanksgiving Proclamation.

Farmers Meet Saturday.

Saturday afternoon at the court house will be held a meeting for farmers of Randall county for the purpose of discussing questions of farm interest. The new government agricultural demonstrator, Harmon Benton, will be present at that time to address the farmers and there will be with him Wm. Ganzer, district agent for the U. S. department of agriculture who will make his first visit to the city. The meeting will be of great importance to the citizens of Randall county and a very large attendance is desired.

Working on Oil Well.

After a long delay work will be started again on the prospecting oil well very soon. A new large machine is being brought over from Adrian where a test hole was put down and which proved unsuccessful. Six horse teams are being used and two of these loads were of bits and bars alone. Monday noon there had been brought to the ground 26 loads of material and it is reported that there is at least that much more at Adrian to be hauled out.

Play Clovis Thanksgiving.

The girls basketball team of the Normal will play the Clovis team at the gymnasium Thanksgiving night. This will be a very interesting game as Clovis has a strong team. These two teams played the closest and most interesting game of the season last year, Clovis winning by a very close margin. This game will precede the game between the town team and the Normal.

Reid Home Completed.

The new home of Prof. J. W. Reid was completed this week and the family will move the latter part of the week. Mr. Reid bought the house of Rev. Groves and moved it to lots on East Evelyn where he has made numerous improvements and built a large addition.

WINTER QUARTER OPENS ON MONDAY

NUMBER OF NEW STUDENTS WILL ENROLL AT THAT TIME.

Very Successful Quarter Will Close This Week With Record Breaking Attendance.

The fall quarter of the Normal will close Saturday and beginning Monday the students will register for the winter quarter. Secretary Shaw reports that the request for catalogues has been very large during the past few months and that he has received many letters from prospective students stating that they would enroll at the beginning of the winter quarter. Of course there will be some withdrawals as several of the students have schools for the winter term but the number of new students is expected to far surpass the withdrawals.

The state teachers association convenes in Dallas today and several of the professors are on the program. The Normal will continue in session in spite of the absence of these professors.

The contract has been let for the new fence around the campus. This will be a very ornamental and useful fence and will greatly improve the looks of the campus. It will be so arranged that water will run through the lower pipe of the fence in order to distribute water over the entire campus for irrigation purposes.

Services at the Baptist Church.

There will be preaching at the Baptist church next Sunday morning at 11 and 7:30 in the evening. The Young People will hold their meeting, beginning at 6:30 immediately preceding the evening preaching service. You are cordially invited to all of these services. A welcome awaits you.

T. G. Netherton, Pastor.

Chickens to Sweetwater.

J. C. Black shipped his prize winning White Leghorns to Sweetwater where they will be entered in the poultry show. They will undoubtedly continue in their winnings.

FINE RAIN FALLS ALL DAY MONDAY

WHEAT SOWING CONTINUES IN ALL PARTS OF COUNTY.

Farmers Feeling Fine and Have Great Confidence for a Big Crop Next Year.

A gentle rain fell all day Monday and far into the night. It makes another reason why the people of the Panhandle will pass a most thankful Thanksgiving. The moisture this fall has been the best of any fall for a number of years and the prospects could not be better. The ground is thoroughly moistened to a great depth and these gentle rains as fell all day Monday will keep the top of the ground in perfect condition.

The wheat of the country is certainly a beautiful sight. Many of the old timers say that they have never seen such splendid looking wheat in the Panhandle. It is growing rapidly and almost completely covers the ground.

Sowing of wheat still continues. This week another car of seed arrived and will be quickly planted. It is estimated that the acreage will be double that of any other year in the history of the county. Some have placed the total acreage as 25,000 while others estimate even more. At any rate, if the weather continues as favorable next spring as it is now, Randall county farmers will have plenty of wheat to sell next summer and plenty of wheat means plenty of money.

Cattle are reported to be in excellent condition. The mild fall has been very fine for cattle and the prospects are favorable for a mild winter.

ECHOES FROM AMARILLO.

Amarillo Happenings Always Interest Our Readers.

After reading of so many people in our own town who have been cured by Doan's Kidney Pills, the question naturally arises: "Is this medicine equally successful in our neighboring towns?" The generous statement of this Amarillo resident leaves no room for doubt on this point.

Mrs. O. S. Winn, 605 Jefferson St., Amarillo, Texas, says: "I used Doan's Kidney Pills when I lived in Clayton and they gave me relief from backache after other remedies had failed to help me. I was also rid of a feeling of languor and nervousness and my strength and energy was restored. I found Doan's Kidney Pills to be a very effective kidney tonic."

BABY BEEF A FEATURE.

Boys and Girls Will Show Results of Full-Feeding to Calves with Silage.

Baby beefs and silos are now going hand-in-hand, arousing the stock producers of Texas to the splendid possibilities of profit when latter-day scientific methods are adopted. Baby beefs and silos will play a most prominent part in the National Feeders and Breeders' Show, which will be held at Fort Worth November 22 to 29.

Baby beef as a source of wealth for the Texas producer is little more than a year old. Conceived by a Texas livestock expert, it was heartily indosed by the Texas Department of Agriculture, but at last spring's National Feeders and Breeders' Show there were only twelve entries. Today, however, there are more than fifty Boys' and Girls' Baby Beef Clubs, with a total membership of more than 1,200 youngsters between the ages of eight and eighteen, in Texas, and one county alone—Coleman—will send sixty entries to the show this year. Other counties will contribute in proportion and the entries in this class alone are expected to number far more than one hundred. Through the children, the Department of Agriculture is achieving considerable success in arousing the elders, inasmuch as a number of prominent ranchmen are taking up with the movement.

Through the introduction of the silo this has been made practicable as, indeed, this same storage tank of livestock prosperity is transforming Texas into a greater feeding ground for cattle than it has ever been before.

People who are interested in the silo will have an opportunity of seeing all of the recognized styles that are being introduced in the Southwest. "Silo Row" will be a feature of the show and men skilled in the filling of the great tanks and the principles of feeding will be on hand to explain every little detail.

The small producer of livestock, who could not afford to keep the fine individual animals he displays at the country fair for spring exhibit at Fort Worth, will be much benefited by the change of date to fall. In this manner, Fort Worth's big show will get a more representative showing of cattle and the small exhibitor will get his just dues. From early indications, every department of the Feeders and Breeders' Show will be more comprehensive and complete than ever before.

Local Advertising.

By W. Holt Harris, Fort Worth, Chairman, Mercantile Committee, Commercial Secretaries Assn.

Millions of dollars are spent yearly in advertising, and the bulk of it goes to the newspapers. Billboards, signs and circular letters demand a heavy toll but the merchant realizes that the press delivers the goods and he seldom dabbles into any other form of advertising. The local paper is the best vehicle of exploitation, for it reaches a great number of people. Every intelligent person reads the paper, but a lot of people do not see the billboard, nor does a busy person have time to wade through a circular letter. A firm that does a national business may afford to patronize the billboard and the circular letter, but the merchant who depends upon local trade must do his advertising at home where he can reach his customers and keep them informed about prices and styles.

The merchants whose ads appear in this paper realize the value of a good publicity medium and our readers will profit by taking the suggestions they offer.

A crusade of education which aims "that common colds may become uncommon within the next generation" has been begun by prominent New York physicians. Here is a list of the "don'ts" which the doctors say will prevent the annual visitation of the cold:

- "Don't sit in a kraughty car."
- "Don't sleep in hot rooms."
- "Don't avoid the fresh air."

The Santa Fe railroad is doing a great work of education for the people along its lines. Few people appreciate the benefits they derive from the educational trains and from the expert agriculturists sent out by the road to serve the farmers of the country. There is a mistaken idea that every man should try and skin the railroads at every turn and in many counties it is impossible for railroads to get justice in courts. This should not be. A railroad is the instrument for the greatest value any community possesses. No town was ever known to grow or long survive which did not obtain a good railroad. The Santa Fe is one of the best systems in our country and the people generally are proud of it. The people of Randall county are truly grateful for the educational trains the railroad has run through our city and for the agricultural experts furnished the farmers.

Randall county is in the best condition financially of any county in the Panhandle. The commissioners report a large balance on hand and were this year able to make a large cut in valuations and on the tax rate. Had there not been such a large increase in the state tax, the people of the county would have had much less taxes than usual to pay, but as it is very few will pay more than last year and taken as a whole the county will pay $2,000 less than last year.

"The wrecking crew" is the new name given the Canyon basketball team which has held the Panhandle championship ever since its organization three years ago. The "wreckers" have been able to wreck the false hopes of all comers who thought themselves of championship caliber. Here's hoping the "wreckers" may continue there wrecking for another season.

It is well for people to do their Christmas shopping early, but in order to make this possible, the merchant should get his holiday goods early and advertise them early.

DON'T DOPE A PUNY CHILD

Parents—don't give that puny, ailing underweight child any of those so-called "tonics" containing alcohol or dangerous drugs; such stuff won't give relief and health to grown people, let alone children. Its purpose is to stimulate for a short time after each dose, just as whiskey or morphine does thus making you believe it is doing real good. Give that child something that will really build it up—replenish the wasted tissues—feed the stunted, dwarfed, puny muscles—make it lively, strong, well—full of the animal spirits children are meant by nature to have. Give it REXALL OLIVE OIL EMULSION. Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion is wholesome, nourishing, free from alcohol and dangerous drugs. It's the ideal nerve, blood and body builder. It does the work it is placed to do better than any other medicine we know of, and our faith in it is so great that we not only urge you to use it and give it to your children—but we guarantee that it will do all we say it will, or cost you nothing. Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion should be given to children who catch cold easily. Begin right now, and use it to build up the child's system to such strong health that it can resist colds, croup, grippe, bronchitis, catarrh, pneumonia, and other cold weather diseases. You who are weak and run-down, and you whose well now but are liable to suffer from various cold weather ailments, use Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion to get and keep well and strong. For the tired-out, run-down, nervous, emaciated or debilitated—the convalescing—growing children—aged people—it is a sensible aid to renewed strength, better spirits, glowing health.

Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion—is king of the celebrated Rexall Remedies—is for freedom from sickness of you and your family. You'll be as enthusiastic about it as we are when you have noted its pleasant taste, its strengthening, invigorating, building-up, disease-preventing effects. If it does not help you, your money will be given back to you without argument. Sold in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store—one of more than 7,000 leading drug stores in the United States, Canada and Great Britain.

The Personal Element In Advertising

By HOLLAND.
ADVERTISERS make a mistake in treating their advertising as something extraneous to themselves and to the people they want to reach. They omit the personal element, which is the essence of successful advertising.
 Be personal in your advertising as you would be in conversation. Try to impress the individual buyer by direct and personal appeal. Write your advertisement with the knowledge that it is to be read by individuals each of whom thinks and acts individually. Put into your advertisement something of yourself, something of your sincerity and enthusiasm.
 Make your advertising as much a part of yourself as your business is. Have it distinctive and characteristic, as dignified as you are, as unconventional as you are. In writing your advertising be yourself. Don't try to write above or below your level. Write as you would talk—simply, sincerely. So doing your advertisement will "pull."
 The editor's advice and suggestions are always yours for the asking. You are entitled to ask him any questions you please, and he will not feel offended if you decide not to follow his suggestions.

tise them early. Some merchants think it necessary to only advertise their goods the week before Christmas and then have the people make one grand rush into their stores the last minute to make tardy purchases. Do your Christmas shopping early. Also your Christmas advertising early.

The Home and State, published at Dallas has sent blanks to all weekly newspapers to ascertain their choice for governor and whether they favor an eliminating campaign. The Dallas slate makers will probably get some information that will be wholly foreign to their liking.

In last week's issue of the News was a report of the accountant who audited the books of the county. He reported only two errors which were of very small consequence indeed when it is taken to consideration that something over $100,000 had been handled.

The Canadian Record was "of age" last week. Editor Jameson publishes one of the best weeklies in the Panhandle.

Secretary of War Daniels says that there is going to be no war with Mexico. Here's hoping his prophesy is correct.

The income tax is now due, but there are few newspaper men of our acquaintance who will have to pay this tax.

Every farmer in Randall county is wanted to be at the court house Saturday afternoon to hear the talks on agriculture.

Candidates for governor now number a dozen with prospects good for a half a dozen more.

Sudan Grass Profitable.

Lubbock—Seven farmers of this County last spring planted an aggregate of twenty-five acres of Sudan grass. This has been threshed and has yielded 9,284 pounds, or about 350 pounds per acre.

Some farmers received as high as 600 pounds per acre, others slightly less than 300. The price has reached as high as $1.50 per pound, the average being about $1.00. The reason for this high price is the small acreage planted throughout the country and the great demand. Lubbock County probably has more seed than all the rest of the country.

Hundreds of acres will be planted next year, not only because it is expected that there will be a big demand for the seed, but because the hay has been proven to be one of the best hays for semi-arid countries. It needs little rain, and ordinarily can be cut three times a season, producing about a ton and a half per cutting per acre.

The feeding value is equal to Johnson grass, which is second only to Alfalfa. But unlike Johnson grass, Sudan grass must be planted each year, and never becomes a pest.

The farmers are expecting to get several hundred thousand dollars from this crop alone next year, and it looks as though their expectations will be realized, because the country at large is just beginning to realize the value of this grass.

Wayland Wireless Station.

Plans are maturing for a wireless station at Wayland College, according to President I. E. Yates. Arthur Wright, a student in Wayland College, will operate the plant. He was on the battleship Connecticut for three years, and is versed in the use of the wireless. Wright has written for his "operator's license."

It is planned to have a six-inch spark. This will send a message, Mr. Wright says, to any point within 1,500 miles. Of course, the station will be able to catch messages from any point.

A 12 inch spark would enable Mr. Wright to send messages 3,000 miles.

The plan at present is to make New Orleans "headquarters" for the local station.—Hale County Herald.

OH! YOU HAVE SUCH BEAUTIFUL HAIR!

What a pleasant thing to have said to you! And why shouldn't it be? You who envy others their lovely hair, and are ashamed of the dull, lichen, stringy appearance of your own—use Harmony Hair Beautifier, and let others envy you.

This delightful liquid seems to polish and brighten the hair, giving it that burnished, lustrous look you have so often wished it might have, adding to its softness, making it easier to put up and "stay put"—making it more attractive and beautiful in every way. It overcomes the unpleasant, oily smell of your hair, leaving a dainty, rich rose perfume that will delight you and those around you. Very easy to apply—simply sprinkle a little on your hair each time before brushing. Contains no oil; will not change the color of hair, nor darken gray hair.

To keep hair and scalp dandruff-free and clean, use Harmony Shampoo. This pure liquid shampoo gives an instantaneous rich lather that immediately penetrates to every part of hair and scalp, insuring a quick, thorough cleansing. Washed off just as quickly, the entire operation takes only a few moments. Can't harm the hair—leaves no hardness or stickiness—just a sweet cleanliness.

Both preparations come in odd-shaped, very ornamental bottles, with sprinkler tops. Harmony Hair Beautifier, $1.00. Harmony Shampoo, 50c. Ladies Make Inspection

The Ladies of the Pure Food Campaign made an inspection of the business houses Tuesday afternoon. This was the first inspection since Dr. Carrick visited Canyon several weeks ago and some of the stores were not looking for an inspection. Requests came to the ladies that they continue their work until at least the contest is finally decided and many desire that this work shall continue at frequent intervals throughout the winter. At any rate there will be inspections for the next month or so and some of the stores, hotels and cafes will have to do some great cleaning up or their grades will be mighty low. The following is the report of the committee:

"As requested by many, we made an inspection of the business houses Tuesday afternoon, and are indeed sorry to find that many of the business houses have become so lax in their methods and are not up to the standard as they were when we were making our regular visits during the summer. We feel that if Dr. Carrick were to come again Canyon would receive a very low score should he find conditions as we found them Tuesday. We will make another inspection soon and trust that we will find many of the stores in better condition. We are not making grades of this inspection but will do so next time."

The ladies do not state when they will come again, but they must be looked for every week until the contest closes. The News trusts that vigilance will be renewed in Canyon and that when Dr. Carrick comes again he will find conditions better than on his last visit.

Stricken With Tuberculosis.

A young man from Michigan is very near death's door at the J. F. Caldwell home west of the city. He arrived at the Caldwell home two weeks ago without funds and so feeble he was unable to walk further. The Caldwell family kindly took him in and have been caring for him until death relieves his suffering, which will certainly not be long.

With all respect to the poor young fellow and others who are so greatly unfortunate to be afflicted with the Great White Plague, there ought to be a stringent law passed against allowing tuberculars to run at will over the country scattering that deadly germ. Small pox is a tame affair compared with the ravages of tuberculosis, yet we shut the former up and allow the latter to go where it will. A person who is afflicted with either is certainly very, very unfortunate but in the small pox case we do not take into consideration the patient's feelings in the matter. We simply shut him up and keep him there, while his brother with tubercular disease spreads the germs over the land upon innocent people.

Our great land must provide hospitals at once and cause all afflicted with this terrible disease to go there and receive the best medical treatment that can be obtained. It is a great fight and the only way to conquer the disease is through segregation of the unfortunates who are afflicted with it.

REALLY NO MYSTERY AT ALL

Hostess Hits on Right Dishes for Dyspeptic and Woman Who Was Reducing Weight.

When the Lawtons had lived in Willow Park about a month, they were invited to a succession of little dinners at the houses of their new neighbors. Mr. Lawton was on a dyspeptic diet, and Mrs. Lawton was endeavoring to reduce her weight.

"I suppose we shall have to eat all sorts of things we don't wish, or else seem rude," said Mrs. Lawton, mournfully, as they set out for the first dinner.

To their growing surprise, the bills of fare placed before them at each dinner, although not remarkably varied, were all composed of such dishes as they could both enjoy.

"I don't see how you all hit on just the right thing, when Mr. Lawton and I really are such difficult guests," said Mrs. Lawton in a burst of confidence one afternoon when the neighbors were taking tea with her.

The ladies looked at each other, and then one of them spoke.

"You know Mary Sloan, who comes to wash for you Tuesday mornings?" she said. "Well, I have her Mondays, and Mrs. Green has her Wednesdays, and she irons for Mrs. Porter Thursdays, and scrubs for Miss Homer Fridays, so you see—"

Her voice trailed off into silence, but Mrs. Lawton no longer wondered; she saw.

TO HIDE CHEAP WOODWORK

Proper Treatment With Paint Will Turn the Hideous into the Dainty and Beautiful.

When the woodwork in the rented or bought house seems so cheap and hideous as to be absolutely hopeless, which often appears to be the case, stain it black. This will hide the defects and give a great deal of style to the rooms if used with red or green or orange or blue paper, but will not look so well with delicate shades. White enamel paint always gives a dainty effect, but it is quite expensive to put on, and cannot be done by an amateur, while a sort of stain can be made with black paint, diluted one-third with turpentine, that is easily applied by the inexperienced and will give a very much more stylish tone to the room than a poor imitation oak or mahogany. The same treatment may be used to rejuvenate an old Morris chair, that is comfortable but whose yellow varnished arms have become too hideous to be endured. Old wood picture frames will be improved by the same treatment. But if these are really mahogany or real walnut do not paint them, merely sandpaper them and stain with a stain that can be purchased at the paint store.

More Treasures Leave England.
One of the best preserved masterpieces of Elizabethan interior decoration in England is doomed to be dismantled in order to adorn the mansion of some American magnate. A West End firm has acquired, lock, stock and barrel, the Elizabethan building, with its Queen Anne additions, known as Rotherwas, the seat of the Bodenham family, situated about two and a half miles from Hereford. The mansion had descended in unbroken line from George Bodenham, who lived in the reign of Henry I. to Count Lubinski Bodenham, who died last year. The superb panelling—Elizabethan, Jacobean and Queen Anne—of thirteen of the apartments is now to be taken to New York. Rotherwas is mentioned in Domesday Book.—London Globe.

To Cure a Stiff Shoulder.
If you have had a stiff shoulder and want to regain the full range of movement, the following simple plan has been recommended: Stand close to the wall and put your fingers on it; then creep up the wall with your fingers as high as you can. At first the stiffness will prevent you going very high. Make a pencil mark to show the level you reach. Each day you ought to get a little higher, but on no account must you ever fall short of the mark of the previous day, or the spell is broken. When you have reached as high with the injured arm as you can with the sound one you are cured.—From the Family Doctor.

Mist Labels.
"Economizing sometimes produces ludicrous results," a woman said. "When we moved last October we used travelers' tags to label the kitchen supplies, and when we went traveling in May we tried to save money by using those same tags which, as luck would have it, happened to get fastened on wrong side up, and when we got down to the pier all our luggage was labeled 'Sugar,' 'Flour,' 'Prunes,' 'Bread' and 'Roast Pork,' instead of Laura, Margaret and Pauline Smith, and although we finally got straightened out, you really cannot blame the crew for slyly poking fun at us all the way over."

Overworked.
Mrs. Knagg—"If we women had the time to read the papers as you men have we'd know just as much about politics and other things as you."
Mr. Knagg—"But, my dear, you have just as much time as I."
Mrs. Knagg—"Nonsense! I never have time enough even to get through with the household department, the women's page, the beauty expert, the fashion notes, the marriages, the divorce news and the society column and often have to skip the death records and the bargain advertisements."

The girl needed no second bidding. With the money still clutched in her hand she went forth swiftly, stumbling a little in her haste, fearful lest at the last moment the woman she had so wronged should change in mood and take back the money.

Freed from the mislaid of that presence, Mary remained motionless for a long minute, then sighed from her tortured heart.

"A girl I didn't know," she said bewilderedly, "perhaps had never spoken to—who smashed my life like that! Oh, if it wasn't so awful it would be funny! It would be funny!"

CHAPTER IX.
A Bridegroom Spurned.

YOU know—Aggie told you—that Cassidy was up here from headquarters. He didn't put a name to it, but I'm on."

It was Garson speaking. Mary regarded him inquiringly, and he continued, putting the fact with a certain brutal bluntness after the habit of his class. "I guess you'll have to quit seeing young Gilder. The bulls are wise. His father has made a holler."

"Don't let that worry you, Joe," she said tranquilly. She allowed a few seconds go by, then added as if quite indifferent. "I was married to Dick Gilder this morning." There came a squeal of amazement from Aggie, a start of incredulity from Garson.

"Yes," Mary repeated evenly. "I was married to him this morning. That was my important engagement," she added with a smile toward Aggie.

Aggie sat erect, her baby face alive with worldly glee.

"Oh, gee, what luck!" she exclaimed noisily. "Why, he's a king fish, he is. Gee, but I'm glad you landed him!"

"Thank you," Mary said with a smile that was the result of her sense of humor rather than from any tenderness.

It was then that Garson spoke. He put a question of vital significance.

"Do you love him?"

The question caught Mary all unprepared, but she retained her self control sufficiently to make her answer in a voice that to the ordinary ear would have revealed no least tremor.

"No," she said. She offered no explanation, no excuse; merely stated the fact in all its finality.

"Then you won't leave us?" Garson asked. "We're going on as we were before?" The hint of dejection in his manner had vanished. "And you won't live with him?"

"Live with him?" Mary exclaimed emphatically. "Certainly not!"

Garson was still patient in his determination to apprehend just what had come to pass.

"Does he understand the arrangement?" was his question.

"No, not yet," Mary admitted, without sign of embarrassment.

Garson was intently considering another phase of the situation, one suggested perhaps out of his own deeper sentiments.

"He must think a lot of you," he said gravely. "Don't he?"

"I—I suppose so."

Garson spoke very softly, but with an intensity that left no doubt as to the honesty of his purpose.

"I'd say throw up the whole game and go to him, if you really care."

There fell a tense silence. It was broken by Mary.

"I married him to get even with his father," she said. "That's all there is to it. By the way, I expect Dick will be here in a minute or two. When he comes just remember not to enlighten him."

"Mr. Gilder," Fannie announced.

"Any one with him?"

"No, Miss Turner," the maid answered.

"Have him come in," Mary ordered.

Garson made hasty excuses and went out on the heels of the maid. Aggie, however, consulting only her own wishes in the matter, had no thought of flight, and, if the truth be told, Mary was glad of the sustaining presence of another woman. She got up slowly and stood silent, while Aggie regarded her curiously. A moment later the bridegroom entered. He was still clean cut and wholesome. Some sons of wealthy fathers are not after four years' experience of the white lights of town. And the lines of his face were firmer, better in every way. It seemed, indeed, that there was some use of a resolute character, not to be wasted on the trivial and gross things. He caught Mary in his arms with "Hello, dear!" smothered in the kiss he implanted on her lips.

Mary strove vainly to free herself.

"Don't, oh, don't!" she gasped.

Dick released his wife and smiled the beatific smile of the newly wed.

"Why not?" he demanded, with a smile.

"Agnes!" It was the sole pretext to which Mary could turn for a momentary relief.

The bridegroom faced about and perceived Agnes. He made a formal bow and spoke quietly.

"I beg your pardon, Miss Lynch, but—a smile of perfect happiness shone on his face—"you could hardly expect me to see any one but Mary under the circumstances. We were married this morning."

"Just one," Dick pleaded.

Aggie accepted the news with fitting excitement.

"Goodness gracious! How perfectly lovely!"

"You bet it's lovely!" Dick declared. He turned to Mary, his face glowing with satisfaction.

"Mary," he said, "I have the honeymoon trip all fixed. The Mauretania sails at 5 in the morning, so we will—"

"Where is your father?" the bride asked, without any trace of emotion.

"O Lord! I had forgotten all about dad. I'll tell you what we'll do. We'll send dad a wireless from the ship, then write him from Paris."

"What was your promise? I told you that I wouldn't go with you until you had brought your father to me and he had wished us happiness."

"Mary," Dick said reproachfully, "you are not going to hold me to that promise?"

"I am going to hold you to that promise, Dick."

"All right. You pack up what things you need, girls—just a few, because they'll run down to dad's office and have him back here in half an hour. You will be all ready, won't you?"

"Yes, yes, I'll be ready. Go and bring your father."

"You bet I will!" Dick cried heartily. He would have taken her in his arms again, but she evaded the caress.

"Just one!" Dick pleaded.

"No," the bride replied with determination.

There was silence in the drawing room until the two women heard the closing of the outer door of the apartment. Then, at last, Aggie relieved her pent-up emotions in a sigh that was near a groan.

"Oh, gosh!" she gasped. "The poor sinner!"

Garson, learning from the maid that Dick Gilder had left, returned just as Mary was glancing over the release with which General Hastings was to be compensated, along with the return of his letters, for his payment of $10,000 to Miss Agnes Lynch.

Mary spoke crisply to Agnes. "And now you must get ready. You are to be at Harris' office with this document at 4 o'clock, and remember that you are to let the lawyer manage everything."

"I don't see the use of all this monkey business," she protested. "All I want is the coin."

"Listen, Agnes. The last time you tried to make a man give up part of his money it resulted in your going to prison for two years."

"But that was so exciting!"

"And this way is so safe," Mary rejoined sharply. "Besides, my dear, you would not get the money. My way will. Your way was blackmail. Mine is not. Understand?"

"Oh, sure!" Aggie replied grimly, on her way to the door.

"Mr. Griggs," Fannie announced. There was a smile on the face of the maid, which was explained a minute later, when the visitor was shown into the drawing room, for his presence was of an elegance so extraordinary as to attract attention anywhere—and mirth as well from ribald observers.

Meantime Garson had explained to Mary.

"It's English Eddie. You met him once. I wonder what he wants? Probably got a trick for me. We often used to work together."

"Nothing without my consent," Mary warned.

"Oh, no, no, sure not!" Garson agreed.

Further discussion was cut short by the appearance of English Eddie himself, a tall, handsome man in the early thirties, who paused just within the doorway and delivered to Mary a bow that was the perfection of elegance. Mary made no effort to restrain the smile caused by the costume of Mr. Griggs. Yet there was no violation of the canons of good taste, except in the aggregate. From spats to hat, from walking coat to gloves, everything was perfect of its kind. Only there was an overelaboration, so that the ensemble was flamboyant. And the man's manners precisely harmonized with his clothes, whereby the whole effect was emphasized and rendered bizarre. Garson took one amazed look and then rocked with laughter.

Griggs regarded his former associate reproachfully for a moment and then grinned in frank sympathy.

"From your costume," Mary suggested, "one might judge that this is purely a social call. Is it?"

"Well, not exactly," Griggs answered with a smile.

"So I fancied," his hostess replied. "So, sit down, please, and tell us all about it."

English Eddie wasted no time.

"Now, look here," he said rapidly. "I've got the greatest game in the world. Two years ago a set of Gothic tapestries worth $300,000 and a set of Fragonard panels worth nearly as much more were plucked from a chateau in France and smuggled into this country."

"Are them things really worth that much?" Garson exclaimed.

"Sometimes more," Mary answered. "Morgan has a set of Gothic tapestries worth half a million dollars."

Griggs went on with his account.

"About a month ago the things I was telling you of were hung in the library of a millionaire in this city. He hitched his chair a little closer to the desk and leaned forward, lowering his voice almost to a whisper as he stated his plan.

"Let's go after them. They were smuggled, mind you, and no matter what happens he can't squeal. What do you say?"

Garson shot a piercing glance at Mary.

"It's up to her," he said. Griggs regarded Mary eagerly as she sat with eyes downcast.

Mary shook her head decisively. "It's out of our line," she declared.

"I don't see any easier way to get half a million," Griggs said aggressively.

"If it were fifty millions it would make no difference. It's against the law."

"Oh, I know all that, of course," Griggs returned impatiently. "But if you can—"

"My friends and I never do anything that's illegal. Thank you for coming to us, Mr. Griggs, but we can't go in, and there's an end of the matter."

"But wait a minute," English Eddie expostulated. "You see, this chap Gilder is—"

"Gilder?" Mary exclaimed questioningly.

"Yes. You know who he is—the dev-goods man."

Mary, however, had regained her self control, and her voice was tranquil again as she replied:

"I know; but, just the same, it's illegal, and I won't touch it. That's all there is to it."

"But half a million!" Griggs exclaimed disconsolately. "There's a stake worth playing for. Think of it!" He turned pleadingly to Garson. "Half a million, Joe!"

"English Eddie" Griggs.

The telephone rang, and Mary excused herself. The instant she was out of the room Griggs turned to Garson anxiously.

"It's a cinch, Joe," he pleaded. "I've got a plan of the house." He drew a paper from his breast pocket and handed it to the forger, who studied it with intent, avaricious eyes.

"It looks easy," Garson agreed.

"It is easy. What do you say?"

"I promised Mary never to—"

"But a chance like this! Anyhow come around to the back room at Blinkey's tonight and we'll have a talk. Will you?"

"What time?"

"Make it early, say 9."

"I'll come," Garson replied half guiltily. And in the same moment Mary re-entered.

Griggs rose and spoke with an air of regret.

"It's 'follow the leader,'" he said, "and since you are against it that settles it."

CHAPTER X.
Garson's Noiseless Gun.

SOMETHING of what was in his mind was revealed in Garson's first speech after Griggs' going.

"That's a mighty big stake he's playing for."

"And a big chance he's taking!" Mary retorted. "No, Joe, we don't want any of that. We'll play a game that's safe and sure."

The words recalled to the forger weird forebodings that had been troubling him throughout the day.

"It's sure enough," he stated, "but is it safe?"

"What do you mean?"

Garson walked to and fro nervously as he answered.

"S'pose the bulls get tired of you

Inspector Burke.

putting it over on 'em and try some rough work?"

"Don't worry, Joe. I know a way to stop it."

"Well, so far as that goes, so do I," the forger said, with significant emphasis.

"Just what do you mean by that?" Mary demanded suspiciously.

"For rough work," he said. "I have this." He took a magazine pistol from his pocket. It was of an odd shape, with a barrel longer than usual and

A VALUABLE SUGGESTION

IMPORTANT TO EVERYONE

It is now conceded by physicians that the kidneys should have more attention as they control the other organs to a remarkable degree and do a tremendous amount of work in removing the poisons and waste matter from the system by filtering the blood.

During the winter months especially, when we live an indoor life, the kidneys should receive some assistance when needed, as we take less exercise, drink less water and often, eat more rich heavy food, thereby forcing the kidneys to do more work than nature intended. Evidence of kidney trouble, such as lame back, annoying bladder troubles, smarting or burning, brick-dust or sediment, sallow complexion, rheumatism, may be weak or irregular heat action, warns you that your kidneys require help immediately to avoid more serious trouble.

Many physicians claim that an herbal medicine containing no minerals or opiates has the most healing influence. An ideal herbal compound that has had most remarkable success as a kidney and bladder remedy is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention the Canyon Weekly Randall County News.

a bell-shaped contrivance attached to the muzzle.

"No, no, Joe," Mary cried. "None of that—ever!"

"Pooh!" The forger exclaimed. "Even if I used it, they would never get on to me. See this?" He pointed at the strange contrivance on the muzzle.

"What is it? I have never seen anything like that before."

"Of course you haven't. I'm the first man in the business to get one, and I'll bet on it. I keep up with the times." He was revealing that fundamental egotism which is the characteristic of all his kind. "That's one of the new Maxim silencers. With smokeless powder in the cartridges, and the silencer on, I can make a shot from my coat pocket, and you wouldn't even know it had been done. And I'm some shot, believe me."

"Impossible!" Mary ejaculated.

"No, it ain't here, wait. I'll show you."

"God gracious, not here!" Mary exclaimed in alarm. "We would have the whole place down on us."

Garson chuckled.

"You just watch that dinky little vase at the table across the room there. That's very valuable, is it?"

"No," Mary answered.

In the same instant, while still her eyes were on the vase, it fell in a cascade of shattered glass to the table and floor. She had heard no sound, she saw no smoke. Perhaps, there had been a faintest clicking noise. She stared dumfounded for a few seconds, then turned her bewildered face toward Garson, who was grinning in high enjoyment.

"Neat little thing, ain't it?" the man asked, exultantly.

"Where did you get it?" Mary asked.

"In Boston, last week. And between you and me, Mary, it's the only model, and it sure is a corker."

That night in the back room of Blinkey's English Eddie and Garson sat with their heads close together over a table.

"A chance like this," Griggs was saying, "a chance that will make a fortune for all of us."

"It sounds good," Garson admitted, wistfully.

SEVERE PUNISHMENT

Of Mrs. Chappell, of Five Years' Standing, Relieved by Cardui.

Mt. Airy, N. C.—Mrs. Sarah M. Chappell of this town, says: "I suffered for five years with womanly troubles, also stomach troubles, and my punishment was more than any one could tell."

I tried most every kind of medicine, but none did me any good.

I read one day about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I decided to try it. I had not taken but about six bottles until I was almost cured. It did me more good than all the other medicines I had tried, put together.

My friends began asking me why I looked so well, and I told them about Cardui. Several are now taking it.

Do you, lady reader, suffer from any of the ailments due to womanly trouble, such as headache, backache, sideache, sleeplessness, and that everlasting tired feeling?

If so, let us urge you to give Cardui a trial. We feel confident it will help you, just as it has a million other women in the past half century.

Begin taking Cardui to-day. You won't regret it. All druggists.

"Well," urged Griggs, "what do you say?"

"How would we split it?"

"Three ways would be right," Griggs answered. "One to me, one to you and one to be divided up among the others."

Garson brought his fist down on the table with a force that made the glasses jingle.

"You're on," he said, strongly.

"Fine!" Griggs declared, and the two men shook hands. "Now, I'll get—"

"Get nothing!" Garson interrupted. "I'll get my own men. Chicago Red is in town. So is Dacey, with perhaps a couple of others of the right sort. I'll get them and we'll turn the trick to-morrow night."

"That's the stuff," Griggs agreed, greatly pleased.

But a sudden shadow fell on the face of Garson. He bent closer to his companion and spoke with a fierce intensity that brooked no denial.

"She must never know."

Griggs nodded understandingly.

Mary had gone to her bedroom for a nap. She was not in the least surprised that Dick had not yet returned, though he had mentioned half an hour.

At the best there were many things that might detain him—his father's absence from the office, difficulties in making arrangements for his projected honeymoon trip abroad—which would never occur—or the like. At the worst there was a chance of finding his father promptly, and of that father as promptly taking steps to prevent the son from ever again seeing the woman who had so indiscreetly married him.

Yet somehow Mary could not believe that her husband would yield to such paternal coercion. Rather, she was sure that he would prove loyal to her whom he loved through every trouble.

At the thought a certain wistfulness pervaded her and a poignant regret that this particular man should have been the one chosen of fate to be entangled within her mesh of revenge.

There throbbled in her a heart-tormenting realization that there were in life possibilities infinitely more splendid than the joy of vengeance. She would not confess the truth even to her inmost soul, but the truth was there and set her tremble with vague fears.

She had slept, perhaps, a half hour when Fannie awakened her.

"It's a man named Burke," she explained as her mistress lay blinking.

"And there's another man with him. They said they must see you."

By this time Mary was wide awake for the name of Burke, the police inspector, was enough to startle her out of drowsiness.

She got up, slipped into a teagown, bathed her eyes in cologne, dressed her hair a little and went into the drawing room, where the two men had been waiting for something more than a quarter of an hour—to the violent indignation of both.

"Oh, here you are, at last!" the big burly man cried as she entered.

"Yes, inspector," Mary replied pleasantly, as she advanced into the room. She gave a glance toward the other visitor, who was of a slenderer form, with a thin, keen face, and recognized him instantly as Demarest, who had taken part against her as the lawyer for the store at the time of her trial, and who was now district attorney. She went to the chair at the desk and seated herself in a leisurely fashion that increased the indignation of the fuming inspector. She did not ask her self invited guests to sit.

"To whom do I owe the pleasure of this visit, inspector?" she remarked coolly. It was noticeable that she said whom and not what, as if she understood perfectly that the influence of some person brought him.

"I have come to have a few quiet words with you," the inspector declared. Mary disregarded him, and turned to the other man.

"How do you do, Mr. Demarest?" she said evenly. "It's four years since we met, and they've made you district attorney since then. Allow me to congratulate you."

Demarest's keen face took on an expression of perplexity.

"I'm puzzled," he confessed. "There is something familiar, somehow, about you, and yet—"

"Can't you guess?" Mary questioned. "Search your memory, Mr. Demarest."

The face of the district attorney lightened.

"Why?" he exclaimed, "you are—it can't be—yes—you are the girl, you're the Mary Turner whom I—oh, I know you now."

"I'm the girl you mean, Mr. Demarest, but, for the rest, you don't know me—not at all!"

"Young woman," Burke said, perceptibly, "the Twentieth Century limited leaves Grand Central station at 4 o'clock. It arrives in Chicago at 8:25 tomorrow morning." He pulled a massive gold watch from his waistcoat pocket, glanced at it, thrust it back, and concluded ponderously: "You will just about have time to catch that train."

"Working for the New York Central now?" Mary asked blandly.

"You'd better be packing your trunk," the inspector rumbled.

"But why? I'm not going away."

"On the Twentieth Century limited this afternoon," the inspector declared in a voice of growing wrath.

"Oh, dear, no!"

"I say yes!" The answer was a bellow. "I'm giving you your orders. You will either go to Chicago or you'll go up the river."

"If you can convict me. Pray, notice that little word 'if.'"

The district attorney interposed very suavely:

"I did once, I remember."

"But you can't do it again," Mary declared with an assurance that excited the astonishment of the police official.

"How do you know he can't?" he blustered.

"Because if he could he would have had me in prison some time ago."

"Huh!" Burke exclaimed gruffly. "I've seen them go up pretty easy."

"The poor ones; not those that have money. I have money, plenty of money—now."

"Money you stole!" the inspector returned brutally.

"Oh, dear, no!" Mary cried with a fine show of virtuous indignation.

"What about the $30,000 you got on that partnership swindle? I s'pose you didn't steal that?"

"Certainly not," was the ready reply. "The man advertised for a partner in a business sure to bring big and safe returns. We formed a partnership with a capital of $90,000. We paid the money into the bank, and then at once I drew it out. It was legal for me to draw that money—wasn't it, Mr. Demarest?"

The district attorney admitted the truth of her contention.

"Well, anyhow," Burke shouted, "you may stay inside the law, but you've got to get outside the city. On the level, now, do you think you could get away with that young Gilder scheme you've been planning?"

"What young Gilder scheme?"

"Oh, I'm wise—I'm wise!" the inspector cried roughly. "The answer is, once for all, leave town this afternoon or you'll be in the Tombs in the morning."

"It can't be done, inspector."

Mary opened a drawer of the desk and took out the document obtained that morning from Harris and held it forth.

"What's this?" Burke stormed, but he took the paper.

Demarest looked over the inspector's shoulder, and his eyes grew larger as he read. When he was at an end of the reading he regarded the passive woman at the desk with a new respect.

"What's this?" Burke repeated helplessly. Mary was kind enough to make the document clear to him.

"It's a temporary restraining order from the supreme court instructing you to let me alone until you have legal proof that I have broken the law."

"But it can't be done," shouted Burke.

"You might ask Mr. Demarest," Mary suggested pleasantly, "as to whether or not it can be done. The gambling houses can do it and so keep on breaking the law. The race track men can do it and laugh at the law. The rail road can do it to restrain its employees from striking. So why shouldn't I get one too? You see, I have money, I can buy all the law I want. And there's nothing you can do with the law if you have money enough. Ask Mr. Demarest. He knows."

"Can you beat that?" Burke rumbled. He regarded Mary with a stare of almost reverential wonder. "A crook appealing to the law!"

"Well, gentlemen, what are you going to do about it?"

"Miss Turner," the district attorney said, with an appearance of sincerity, "I'm going to appeal to your sense of fair play."

"That was killed four years ago."

But Demarest persisted. Influence had been brought to bear on him. It was for her own sake now that he urged her.

"Let young Gilder alone."

Mary laughed again.

"His father sent me away for three years—three years for something I didn't do. Well, he's got to pay for it."

By this time, Burke, a man of superior intelligence, as one must be to reach such a position of authority, had come to realize that here was a case not to be carried through by blustering, by intimidation, by the rough ruses familiar to the force.

"Don't fool yourself, my girl," he said in his huge voice, which was now modulated to a degree that made it almost unfamiliar to himself. "You can't go through with this. There's always a weak link in the chain somewhere. It's up to me to find it, and I will."

"Now," she said, and these were respect in the glance she gave the staid man, "now you really sound dangerous."

Fannie appeared at the door.

"Mr. Edward Gilder wishes to see you, Miss Turner," she said. "Shall I show him in?"

"Oh, certainly," Mary answered, with an admirable pretense of indifference, while Burke glared at Demarest, and the district attorney appeared ill at ease.

CHAPTER XI
Gilder Meets Bride.

THEY entered the erect, heavy figure of the man whom Mary had hated through the years.

He stopped abruptly just within the room, gave a glance at the two men, then his eyes went to Mary, sitting ting at her desk, with her face lifted inquiringly. He did not pause to take in the beauty of that face, only its strength. He stared at her silently for a moment. Then he spoke, a little tremulous from anxiety.

"Well, gentlemen, what are you going to do about it?"

"Are you the woman?" he said. There was something simple and primitive, something of dignity beyond the usual conventions, in his direct address.

Mary's acknowledgment was as plain as his own question.

"I am the woman. What do you want?"

"My son."

Mary guessed that his coming was altogether of his own volition, and not the result of his son's information, as at first she had supposed.

"Have you seen him recently?"

"No."

"Then, why did you come?"

"Because I intend to save my boy from a great folly. I am informed that he is infatuated with you, and Inspector Burke tells me—why—he tells me—why—he tells me—"

He paused, unable for a moment to continue from an excess of emotion.

Inspector Burke filled the halting sentence.

"I told you she had been an ex-convict."

"Yes," Gilder said, after he had regained his self control. He stared at her pleadingly. "Tell me, is this true?"

Here, then, was the moment to which she had longed through weary days, through weary years. He looked at the man whom she hated, and before her to know the truth, her heart quickened. Truly a man's sweet to one who has suffered justly.

"Is this true?" the man repeated with something of horror in his voice.

"It is," Mary said quietly.

For a little, there was silence in the room. At last, Gilder spoke with the sureness of a man of wealth, confident that money will save any wound.

"How much?" he asked, baldly.

Mary smiled an inscrutable smile.

"Oh, I don't need money," she said, carelessly. "Inspector Burke will tell you how easy it is for me to get it."

"Do you want my son to learn what you are?" he said.

"Why not? I'm ready to tell him myself."

Then Gilder showed his true heart in which love for his boy was before all else.

"But I don't want him to know," he stammered. "Why, I've spared the boy all his life. If he really loves you—it will."

At that moment the son himself entered hurriedly. In his eagerness he saw no one save the woman he loved. At his entrance, Mary rose and moved backward a step involuntarily, in sheer surprise over his coming.

The young man went swiftly to her, while the other three men stood silent. Dick took Mary's hand in a warm clasp, pressed it tenderly.

"I didn't see father," he said happily, "but I left a note on his desk at the office."

Then, somehow, the surcharged atmosphere penetrated his consciousness, and he looked around, to see his father standing grimly opposite him. But there was no change in his expression beyond a more radiant smile.

"Hello, dad!" he cried, joyously. "Then you got my note?"

"No, Dick, I haven't had any note."

The young man spoke with simple pride.

"Dad we're married. Mary and I were married this morning."

Mary kept her eyes steadfast on the father. There was triumph in her gaze. This was the vengeance for which she had longed, for which she had plotted, the vengeance she had at last achieved. Here was her fruition, the period of her supremacy.

Gilder seemed dazed by the brief sentence.

"Say that again," he commanded.

"Dad, Mary and I were married this morning."

"I married your son this morning," Mary said in a matter of fact tone. "I married him. Do you quite understand, Mr. Gilder? I married him."

In that insistence lay her ultimate compensation for untold misery. The father stood there wordless, unable to find speech against this calamity that had befallen him.

"It's a frameup!" Burke roared. He glared at the young man. "Tell your father it ain't true. Why, do you know what she is? She's done time."

He paused for an instant, then spoke in a voice that was brutally menacing. "And she'll do it again!"

The young man turned toward his bride. There was disbelief, hope, despair, in his face.

"It's a lie, Mary," he said. "Say it's a lie!" He seized her hand passionately.

"It is the truth," Mary said firmly. "I have served three years in prison."

There was a silence of a minute that was like years.
