Lesson for October 2

THE ONE TRUE GOD

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:2, 3; Isaiah 45:22; Mark 12:29-34; 1 Corinthians 8:4-6.

GOLDEN TEXT—And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart and with all thy soul, and with all thy might.—Deuteronomy 6:5.

Today we begin a series of studies which should be of unusual value, a consideration of the Ten Commandments in the light of the teachings of Jesus and related New Testament passages. It is appropriate to point out that, far from being outmoded, the Ten Commandments are really the basis of all moral law. They need a diligent re-study and re-emphasis in our day of disregard of moral standards.

The lessons begin at the right point, for the first commandment properly deals with our conception of God. What a man thinks about God determines his entire outlook on life. We begin right when we declare that there is but one God.

I. The Truth Stated—There Is One True God (Exod. 20:2, 3).

Jehovah means "I will be what I will be," or "I am that I am." (Exod. 3:14). His very name declares God to be the self-existent, eternal one. How infinitely gracious then is the use of the word "thy" in verse 2! He—the great I AM—is my God.

There are many things concerning which we do not speak dogmatically. There are even Christian doctrines about which spiritual and earnest men may honestly differ, but regarding God we say with absolute assurance and complete exclusiveness—there is but one true God. If He is what He claims to be, if God is not to be declared to be a liar, then it is beyond the realm of possibility that there could be any other God. Hear it, ye men and women of America who in an enlightened land and age bow down in heathenish worship "before the god of gold, the god of self, the god of wine, the god of success, the god of fame, the goddess of pleasure, the god of licentiousness." The one true God says, "I am Jehovah . . . thou shalt have no other gods before me."

II. The Truth Explained.

1. God is our Deliverer (Exod. 20:2). He who brought Israel out of the bondage of Egypt is the one, and the only one who can deliver men from the bondage of sin. If you think that a sinner is not in bondage read Titus 3:3 and Romans 6:16 and then read the verses following in both passages, and not only see but follow the way of deliverance.

2. God is our Saviour (Isa. 45:22). Again note that "there is none else" who can save. "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12).

It was this verse that led one of the world's greatest preachers, Charles Haddon Spurgeon, to accept Christ as his Saviour when he was just a humble lad. Perhaps some boy or girl who reads these lines may do likewise, and become great instrument in God's hand.

Teacher, perhaps the Spurgeon of the next generation will be in your class today. Win him for Christ!

3. God is Love (Mar 12:28-34). In 1 John 4:8 the truth is stated in all its glorious simplicity. "God is love." He not only loves us, and calls on us to love Him, and enables us to love both Him and our neighbors, but He "is love." Love is of the very essence of God's nature. He is the source of all true love. He is love.

It was for this reason that Jesus replied to the question of the scribe as He did, directing the whole life of man into love toward God and his fellow man. It is worthy of careful note and emphasis in our teaching that the recognition and appreciation of this truth on the part of the scribe brought him near to the Kingdom of God, but not into it. He was "not far from," but he was not in it. It is terrifying to think how close men may come to entering without doing so. Reader, have you entered into eternal life through Jesus Christ?

4. God is our Father (1 Cor. 8:4-6). Paul is speaking of the eating of cut offered to idols, and points out that such false gods are really nothing. This is true not only of the idols of wood and stone, but of supernatural beings, demons worshipped by primitive peoples. There are such spirit beings, active even in our day in such cults as spiritism, but they are not divine, not true gods (v. 5).

The true God is a Father, yes "the Father," of whom are all things and we in Him (v. 6). As there is but one God, there is also but one Lord, Jesus Christ through whom the one God has wrought all things, and through whom we also come to God. If we have Christ we have all; if we have not Him we have nothing. Is He your Saviour?

Weekly News Review 'Sell-Out' of Czechoslovakia Fails to Erase War Dangers

By Joseph W. La Bine

Foreign
A month ago, long before Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler challenged the world at his Nuremberg Nazi congress, before Geoffrey Dawson's London Times editorialized on the advisability of giving Germany her way, Great Britain showed signs of weakening in the struggle to keep Czechoslovakia intact. All summer her Viscount Runciman had tried to make peace between Prague and 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans who wanted autonomy and eventual annexation by Germany, yet nothing was accomplished. Moreover, though Britain was pledged to aid France, who has a pact with Czechoslovakia, it has long been apparent that what England wanted, above all, was peace.
Fortnight ago, as Berlin and Prague veered on the edge of war, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain took his first airplane ride, speeding to Fuehrer Hitler's chalet at Berchtesgaden in a desperate effort to stave off a conflict that would certainly involve all Europe. Next day he flew back, hastily calling his cabinet into session. To France went an invitation: Would Premier Edouard Daladier and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet come to London for a conference? They would, and did, rushing across the channel like hungry dogs after a bone.
By this time it was apparent Europe's two greatest democracies individuals and corporations paying a higher tax rate.

For years, men have run for office on a promise of outlawing tax exempt securities, and next winter's congress will have a chance to fulfill the promise. Backed by White House favor, new tax measures will include not only this feature, but also a plan for levies reciprocally arranged on salaries of state, local, federal officers. Still uncertain is a proposal to broaden the tax base by including lower income brackets.

Labor
Mushroomed in little more than a year from 20,000 to 400,000 members, C. I. O.'s United Automobile Workers of America is headed by Homer Martin, one-time preacher, is run by young zealots who split last June into two factions accusing each other of communistic leanings. Result was President Martin's dismissal of three vice presidents and a secretary-treasurer, temporary suspension of another vice president.
Fe-rful lest his pet union be torn asunder, disliking U. A. W.'s publicity, John L. Lewis finally secured Homer Martin's permission to intervene after the latter insisted U. A. W.'s autonomy be preserved. To Detroit went C. I. O.'s Sidney Hillman and Phillip Murray for a two-week study.
Outcome was labor peace, temporarily at least. Though Homer Martin won his autonomy plea, he gave in on other points, allowing Peacemakers Hillman and Murray to decide whether U. A. W.'s suspended officials shall be reinstated. In the future, they will help U. A. W. settle inter-union squabbles.

Politics
Among candidates in Pennsylvania's primary election were Philadelphia Mayor S. Davis Wilson and Gov. George H. Earle, both running for Democratic senatorial nomination. Candidate Wilson lost, was subsequently indicted for misconduct in office by a grand jury summoned by Candidate Earle. In another phase of the campaign, Atty. Gen. Charles J. Margiotti ran for gubernatorial nomination, using as campaign fodder the charges that Governor Earle had extorted money from state contractors and employees, and "sold" legislation.
Appointed to investigate was a Dauphin county grand jury. Almost immediately Governor Earle sprang into action, summoned the legislature and rushed through special bills which would defeat the grand jury's investigation, would instead leave the quiz up to the governor's hand-picked legislative committee.
Fortnight ago this committee met, yawning politely over six days of perfunctory testimony. Not until Accuser Margiotti himself took the stand was there much interest. His testimony: (1) That Governor Earle's administration leaders had "sold" legislation to beer and movie interests for $150,000; (2) that Governor Earle prompted him to go ahead with the probe of Philadelphia politics; (3) that the governor had borrowed money from Matthew H. McCloskey Jr., contractor working on many state jobs. When Witness Margiotti had finished, administration critics admitted he had been permitted to speak more freely than they expected.
Still to be heard from were scores of witnesses including State Rep. Charles Melchiorre, Philadelphia Democrat, and Governor Earle himself, whose senatorial campaign will be decided a bare two months hence. Also to be heard from was the state Supreme court which is deciding legality of the legislature's "rubber stamp" bills, one of which would remove District Atty. Carl B. Shelley from supervision over the grand jury quiz. In his place would be Atty. Gen. Guy K. Bard, a governor's appointee. Moreover, no one knew if the grand jury would be permitted to investigate before the legislative committee concluded its hearings.

Business
In the U. S. last year were $65,648,000,000 in securities wholly or partly exempt from federal income tax. Of these, $50,522,000,000 were eligible for assessment if the U. S. should change its mind about exempting government securities (federal, state, local). In 1937, this investment brought security holders an estimated $1,544,000,000 interest, which at the 4 per cent normal tax rate would yield $62,160,000. Actually, the tax would be higher, since most exempt securities are held by were playing ball with Adolf Hitler, were willing to sacrifice Czechoslovakia to keep Der Fuehrer satisfied. After a week-end's study, the French statesmen went home. A few hours later, from simultaneous cabinet meetings in London and Paris, came announcement of the scheme that spelled Prague's doom.

The scheme: (1) Cession to Germany of Sudeten areas in Czechoslovakia which are overwhelmingly German; (2) a plebiscite to determine future status of Sudeten areas where German population is more than 50 per cent; (3) international guarantee of Czechoslovakia's remaining boundaries.
It was plain that Prague had been sold down the river without a hearing, since the British-French plan received French cabinet approval before Czech Minister Stefan Osusky was officially notified in Paris. When he finally was told, Minister Osusky's lips trembled as he asked newsmen: "Do you want to see a man convicted without a hearing? Here I stand."
Though immediate responsibility for the sell-out was directed first at Neville Chamberlain, observers soon placed it on France's doorstep. Actually, Premier Daladier had inspired the English conversation with Hitler, had urged Britain to back down on Franco-British agreement of April 29 to defend Czechoslovakia. But whatever the cause of this capitulation, it probably cost both Premier Daladier and Chamberlain a good-sized chunk of public support. As before, democracy had capitulated before the bluff of a totalitarian state.
Still left to straddle was Czechoslovakia's unequivocal opposition to the scheme. Shouted Premier Milan Hodza: "In the name of the lawful authorities of this state I declare that... the government will defend completely the integrity of the state. A plebiscite would be unacceptable." While Hungary and Poland began looking for liberation of their minorities in Czechoslovakia, while Soviet Russia considered coming to Prague's aid a moot question was whether the orphaned nation might not become another Spain, in which Communistic Russia and Nazi Germany would furnish the manpower for a civil war.

Gov. George H. Earle
He was busy investigating himself.
Administration critics admitted he had been permitted to speak more freely than they expected.
Still to be heard from were scores of witnesses including State Rep. Charles Melchiorre, Philadelphia Democrat, and Governor Earle himself, whose senatorial campaign will be decided a bare two months hence. # Bruckart's Washington Digest Three Times in Row President's 'Purge' Attempts Prove Futile

Roosevelt Unable to Transmit Personal Popularity to His Followers; Political Prestige Suffers Irreparable Damage; Forced Realignment Seen Complete Flop.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART
WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—There was quite a sermon, for me, in the telegram of congratulations that Virginia's great leader, Sen. Carter Glass, sent to Senator George upon the occasion of Senator George's victory in the attempted New Deal "purge" in Georgia. I don't know why that telegram was not more widely printed, but it was typically like Carter Glass, so cryptic, so full of meaning, that I am going to reprint it here:
"Senator Walter F. George, Atlanta, Ga.
"God bless you, Walter. Likewise, the sovereign State of Georgia.
"Signed, Carter Glass."

To get its true meaning, one has to recall that Senator George was the third democratic senator, in a row, who was openly opposed by President Roosevelt; the third marked to be "purged" from the Democratic party and the third in a row to be victorious over the President's ill-advised attempt to dominate voters of a state, and, in due course, the congress of the United States, by personally picking the Democratic party nominees.
Next, Mr. George had been subjected to perhaps the strongest New Deal slap by the President, of any of the nine senators whom the President originally described as men behind the times. It will be recalled how Mr. Roosevelt, with Senator George on the platform, spoke his blessing of United States Attorney Camp at Barnesville, Ga., and announced his conclusion that Mr. George represented the past, not the future. It was on that occasion, too, that Mr. Roosevelt uttered the now famous: "God bless you, Walter; I hope we will always be friends."
The third feature to be remembered is that Mr. George won, that former Governor Talmadge was second and that the New Deal candidate was third in the race, and that Mr. George's victory was so overwhelming that there was no need for a run-off primary—the method in the solid Democratic states of choosing between the two highest candidates from the primary vote. This means that a majority of the voters—more than 50 per cent—voted for Mr. George.

President's Prestige Has Suffered Heavy Damage
Couple these facts with Senator Tydings' victory over Rep. David J. Lewis for the Democratic senatorial nomination in Maryland, and Sen. "Cotton Ed" Smith's substantial margin over Governor Johnston in South Carolina, and it appears to me that several conclusions are proper and justifiable. Mr. Roosevelt went into South Carolina in behalf of Governor Johnston and he went into Maryland to promise construction of several huge Chesapeake bay bridges and to point to the good qualities of Representative Lewis. Yet, the President's wishes were well ignored.
The conclusions I have reached—and I believe they will stand the most critical test—are:
1. Mr. Roosevelt is unable to transmit to his followers the same personal popularity that he has enjoyed since entering the White House.
2. His prestige as a political leader, which undoubtedly was slipping to some extent before, has now suffered irreparable damage.
3. The congress that will be elected in November will be the most independent, indeed, probably the most obstreperous, that the President has faced, and that spells trouble in a big way.
4. There can be no discounting the influence that victories for the conservatives, like those won by Tydings, Smith and George, will have on the rest of the country in the November elections. It is an honest statement, I believe, that there are numerous voters who have been wavering between the New Deal and the conservative school of thought, and a large percentage of them will turn to conservative candidate when they have a chance. They will be influenced strongly, and that fact worries the New Deal thinkers at the moment.

'Purge' but Step In Plan Of Political Realignment
But there is yet another thought in this connection. I refer to the President's program for a realignment of political groups in this country. He has called for it; of that there is no obvious doubt. The "purge" of the senators marked for political destruction was one of the early steps. So, it is significant that Mr. Roosevelt's early maneuver in the direction of a forced realignment has succeeded to the extent of a complete flop. The thing that started out to be a beautiful swan-like dive became a belly-buster, much to the chagrin of the great thinkers who surround the President and give him such poor political advice.

There will be a condition in the next congress that will be worthy of watching. Surely, no one will expect Tydings and Smith and George and Clark of Missouri and six or eight other senators to go out of their way to support a Roosevelt program in which they may not believe. There is the nucleus. There were already 20 or more senators of that mind. With those re-elected after overcoming the "purge," it seems reasonable to suppose that as little political credit as possible will be given to the President.
House members nearly always keep in close touch with the senators of their respective states, particularly if they are of the same political faith. They will take encouragement from the forthrightness of their seniors and, quite naturally, will be bolder and more outspoken. It will be much more difficult for Democratic Leader Rayburn to hold his majority together in the house of representatives because of this new-found courage and, in some cases, resentment.
All of which leads into a third phase. Few Presidents have been able to withstand bushwhacking from Capitol Hill. It confronts Mr. Roosevelt to an unparalleled degree because of the "purge." Thus, a further analysis seems to offer evidence, at least a hint, that Mr. Roosevelt's control of the Democratic party may be broken. If it is not now an accomplished fact, I see no reason to expect that the President can control the Democratic national convention of 1940. That, after all, is one of the things at stake in the President's ill-starred "purge" attempts.

Some Heads May Fall; New Spokesmen Appear
In consequence of these things, I have an idea that there will be many a move made during the next session and in the session just before the 1940 convention designed to take the Democratic party out of the hands of the Roosevelt advisers. I think you will see delegates being groomed here and there, 18 months before they are to be formally chosen. I believe also that state political bosses will become quite active next summer as they watch which way the wind blows. Some will guess wrong, some right. Some political heads will fall and new spokesmen will appear on the scene.
All of these things, I predict, will happen, barring one thing. That one thing is war. If there is a general European war on the horizon, then we may expect a different course of political events in the United States.
What I am about to say, now, is not said in discredit of the President. It is merely voicing a fact in politics. If there be a general war abroad, and, more particularly, if American relations become involved in it, then Mr. Roosevelt unquestionably will appeal for solidarity of public opinion, for unanimous support for the government of the nation. His spokesmen and benchmen will be busy as bees showing him to be the only man for the job, the only man capable of saving the nation. That happened in Woodrow Wilson's time and it has happened in every other war, and it will happen again.

Political Destruction Of Roosevelt Threatened
I know that Mr. Roosevelt is no more anxious to have the United States become involved in war than you or I. He realizes its cost in blood, as well as the disarrangement of world economies that follows. And if war comes, he naturally will want a united nation back of him. But, coldly and abstractly, I repeat that war conditions are the only set of circumstances that I see now which may prevent a thorough-going movement on Capitol Hill for the political destruction of Mr. Roosevelt. When I say, political destruction, I do not mean to imply, or to hint that opponents of the President within his own party want to send him to oblivion. They will seek—they are seeking, now—to de-throne him in every way except as titular head of the party. They want the guidance to come from old Democratic leaders and they want adherence to old Democratic principles. That is to say, the long time oracles of the Democratic party have witnessed stupidity, sheer dumbness, on the part of the young squirts who have crowded close to the President, and they want to send those squacks back to the oblivion from which they came. Further, the old line Democrats want to avoid a wide-open split in their party. Unless that can be done in 1940, there will be a Republican victory followed by exactly the same conditions that wrecked the Republicans after the "purge" that the voters gave the G. O. P. in 1932 and 1936. © Western Newspaper Union.

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses Sugar, Sirup and Molasses; Describes Correct Use of Sweets, Peerless Body Fuel

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

THERE is an old saying that good things come in small packages. That is particularly apt when we pause to consider the nutritive value of sugar in its various forms. For two scant tablespoons of sugar supply as much caloric value as does three-fourths cup of cooked farina, or one and one-third eggs, or the lean meat of one lamb chop.
Sugar is a highly concentrated fuel food which burns quickly and completely in the body furnace.

The Sugar Bowl is a Dynamo
It has been said that our present day civilization could not have reached its present heights without the driving force that sugar gives to men and women. And it is a fact that until comparatively recent times, only the very wealthy could afford this quick energy food which we now consume at the rate of more than 4,000,000 tons a year, or more than 100 pounds annually for every man, woman and child.
This peerless fuel food was once regarded almost as a medicine because of its ability to relieve fatigue and sustain vitality. And no wonder! For sugar is transformed into heat and power in less time and with less effort than any other foodstuff.

A Real Stimulant
While starchy foods require an average of from three to four hours for digestion, the body begins to burn a ration of sugar from 10 to 30 minutes after it is eaten.
It reaches the blood and muscles in a few minutes—as rapidly in fact as alcohol! That is why concentrated sweets, which are largely sugar, are so effective in combating fatigue.
Athletic coaches are well aware of the unique power of sugar as a stimulant and restorative of energy. That is why school and college youths are so frequently given highly sweetened beverages and other concentrated sweets before engaging in athletic competition.
Military leaders also appreciate how it increases endurance, and sweets are an important part of the soldier's ration. During the World War civilians were urged to reduce their consumption of sugar in order to make larger amounts available for the army, and most people found it difficult indeed to forego this agreeable food.

Indispensible for Most People
Sugar is such an indispensable ingredient in cakes, cookies, pies, puddings and ice creams, it is so necessary in beverages, on breakfast cereals and with fruits that it seems a great hardship to do without it even for one meal.
We are extremely fortunate, most people will agree, to live in an age when sugar is so high in quality and so reasonable in price. In the Thirteenth century when sugar was introduced to England through India, it cost the equivalent of ten dollars a pound in the monetary terms of today.
Refined sugar is now priced at a few cents a pound and one pound supplies over 1,800 calories! Moreover, when you buy a branded product, backed by a well-known name, you have the assurance that quality and purity are of the highest.
Moderate Use Desirable
Like all sources of great power, however, sugar must be handled with care. Too much sugar may prove as disastrous as too little. Possibly because of this, several false notions have grown up regarding this splendid food.
It is often charged that sweets cause indigestion, and it is true that when consumed in excess, they may ferment and result in irritation. Therefore, moderation should be the watchword.
But that is an excellent rule to follow in regard to all kinds of foods. For when consumed to excess, any food ceases to be beneficial.
It has also been charged that sweets are harmful to the teeth. But recent investigations suggest that the teeth are far more likely to deteriorate because the proper minerals and vitamins have not been included in the diet.
It is, however, desirable to restrict the amount of sugar given to children. That is because it quickly satisfies the appetite and may therefore decrease the consumption of other good and necessary foods, particularly those containing an abundance of minerals and vitamins. Children therefore can best take sweets in the form of sweetened puddings, gelatin, cooked and fresh fruits, and fruit juice and milk beverages.
The quick pick-up of sugar can be obtained in many forms besides the sparkling crystals of granulated sugar with which we are most familiar, or the brown sugar which is quite similar in composition, except for a larger moisture content, despite popular notions to the contrary.

C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

Most fruits contain easily digestible sugars, the percentage in dried fruits ranging from 50 to 75 per cent. Milk sugar is also easily digested. Honey, molasses, corn sirup and the popular blended sirups are usually eaten in combination with other foods and are therefore unlikely to be consumed in too large amounts.
Corn sirup is often added to milk, fruits, vegetables, cereals, breads and desserts. It helps to make these foods more palatable and adds 60 calories with every tablespoon. It is so easily digested that it is often used in infant feeding.
Molasses provides significant amounts of both calcium and iron and is a good sweet for growing children. One and one-half tablespoons of molasses supplies as much calcium as one and one-half cups of dried carrots. It is a wise mother, therefore, who uses it in making the cookies that children like so well.
The mixed or blended sirups that are so popular with griddle cakes and french toast on cool fall days, also add palate appeal and energy values to the diet.
For in whatever form sugar is consumed, it remains nature's shortcut to press-the-button heat and quick, healthful stimulation. ©-WNU-C. Houston Goudiss-1938-39.

ADVENTURES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF

"Death's Sleigh Ride"

ALSO EVERYBODY: Kathleen Donovan of Chicago is bringing us a regular-raiser of a yarn—the tale of an adventure that happened to her in 1888, when she was a little girl.

Those days, Kathleen lived on a farm in Alcona county, Mich.
Her mother and dad, and her five brothers and sisters. It was wild country up there then.

Hunters Shunned Desolate Forest.

There were thousands and thousands of acres of forest," Kathleen told us, "and even the most daring hunters never camped. Settlers lived far between. On the borders of this wild tract were just settlers, living along a road that was fairly passable."

Kathleen says that winter hung on until an unusually late date the year 1888. The cattle in the neighborhood were on short rations, and the wild life in the woods was beginning to feel the pangs of hunger. It was not an uncommon occurrence, on those cold nights, to hear timber wolves howling, calling comrades to join in a raid on some farmer's barnyard.

Nearest neighbors lived five miles away, and there wasn't much between families. But one Sunday morning, in March, a family near to Kathleen's home to spend the day, bringing their own food with them.

They had walked the whole distance in the morning, before the sun melted the snow, and intended to remain until evening when the ground would freeze again, and walk home by moonlight.
Hunters were scarce in Michigan in those days, but Kathleen's dad bought a fine, young team.

Kathleen's Dad Suggested a Sleigh Ride.
They were splendid for driving as well as on the plow," Kathleen told us, "and my father suggested that if our guests would remain until a clock, when the mud and slush on the road would be well frozen, they would drive them home and we children could have a sleigh ride."

Well, sir, that plan was agreed upon. When night came, they dressed out, and the neighbors on the seat and the kids burrowed into the straw pile in the back of the sleigh. After an hour's ride, they reached the friend's house, stopped for a cup of hot chocolate, and then started for home again.

The kids were enjoying the ride. The moon was bright and the ground was easily over the frozen road. They had covered about a mile distance when, away to the south, they heard the long, piercing cry of a wolf. Immediately, other wolves took up the cry. Inside of a minute it seemed to Kathleen as though the whole forest were filled with their terrible howls.

She heard my father exclaim, "My God!" and from that moment on she knew it was a race for our lives. There were three of us children, and my father, my brother, who was about 10, and my sister, who was 12, and I myself, then about 8.

A Race for Life With Hungry Wolves.
My sister covered my brother and me with straw and told us to hold our breath. The horses seemed to understand our terrible situation and fairly flew over the road.

"From the first alarm, there was no need to urge them. I had seen the flash of fire from their feet when they bounded forward.
We were about two miles from home we could see dark spots on the long straight road a scant half mile behind us."

The kids huddled on the straw in the back of the wagon. None of us until Mary, Kathleen's older sister, put her head down and said, "I jump, don't tell father. Let him keep right on."
She stared at her sister. She was going to sacrifice herself to save the wolves for a few moments. Kathleen caught Mary and clung to her brother told Mary he would certainly scream if she jumped.
While the wolves were gaining!

The horses were doing their best, but they had a heavy sleigh to pull and the wolves were running free. They were less than a quarter of a mile behind now, and the sleigh was a mile from home.

Mother Was Handy With Shooting Iron.
Kathleen screamed as it lurched along the road. They were almost home when they heard the report of a rifle. Then, they heard another shot. Thus, they knew that their mother, at home, had heard the howling and was ready to help them.

As they rounded a turn in the road, they saw a great bonfire near the spot where the sleigh would turn into the yard.
Kathleen is afraid of fire, and they knew if they reached that blaze they'd have a chance. As they came closer to home, they saw Mother standing near the fire. Dad owned two fine rifles—the first that had ever come into the locality—
Mother had brought out both of them.

They were closer they came to the blaze. And still the wolves were on them. As the sleigh turned into the yard and pulled up beside Mother threw one of the rifles to Dad. And together, firing shot after shot, they held the pack at bay.

When says there must have been at least 30 wolves in the pack.
They roared around the big fire, snarling and snapping, while Mother blazed away with the guns. When nine had been shot down, the pack broke and scattered. And the next morning two more were killed at a short distance away.

The wolves were gone, the horses were cared for. Says Kathleen:
"There was a look of wonderful thankfulness on my mother's face as we gathered around the kitchen fire, but all she said was,
'Thank your prayers. And then to bed.'"

Wonder if any one of those kids did any sleeping? How about you?

HERE'S REAL FISH SCHOOL

No textbook information for the marine zoology class at the University of Miami, Fla. Students under Prof. J. F. Pearson, who created the unique department, actually "go to school" in an under-sea classroom where marine growth is studied at first hand. Equipped with diving helmets, operated from a special yacht, students get a different location for study each trip. Naturally, they're the envy of the entire school. Here a pretty coed poses on the ladder while a fellow student places the heavy helmet over her head. Advanced students work as deep as 50 feet below surface.

Picture Parade

No, ocean water isn't quite this clear. This threesome of advanced pupils are testing their underwater skill at Ocala, Fla., on the floor of Crystal Springs lake. One tried an under-sea camera while himself acting as a camera subject.

There's no trouble catching fish here. This young lady reaches out and plucks one from the air (excuse us, water).

Undersea study isn't always peaceful. This turtle is one of the many formidable foes encountered down there. Right now, however, he looms as a fit subject for a soup bowl. The student isn't scared.

Brought up from the ocean floor, this has all the earmarks of a porcupine. However, it's only one of the hundreds of forms of marine growth which students pluck right from the sands of their "classroom."

Please write your name, address and pattern number plainly.

HOW to SEW By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

M. S. writes: "I followed the directions in Book 2 for a fabric hat and it was so satisfactory that I wonder if you could tell me how to use a piece of woolen material that I have to make a hat for my little girl who is just starting to school?"

Here is a cunning schoolgirl hat that's easy to make. You need two pieces of goods—one for the hat and one for the lining. They may either match or contrast. Each piece should be 1-inch longer than the measurement around the largest part of the child's head. The depth of the pieces should be half their length. The diagram at the upper right of this sketch shows how to make a paper pattern for the hat. Cut a square piece of paper 1/2-inch wider and deeper than half the head measurement. Mark point A on the right edge half way between the top and bottom as shown. Points B and C are marked at the center top and bottom of the paper. The dotted lines are guide lines to help shape the curved lines between A and B and C and D. Point D is the center front of the top of the hat pattern and is placed on a fold of the goods in cutting each of the two layers. The diagonal line from A to C is the center back seam line.

finish with a ribbon or a stitched fabric bow and a feather.

He told himself he disliked his housemates. He disliked Halcyon Camp. Most of all, in that moment, he thought he disliked Casper Kneeland. Kneeland could, and should, he reflected, have left all that to Hale's sense of his social obligations as a guest. Naturally, he would have done his best. But to be under orders as an official entertainer, and of such a group as this one around him, was different. There was something ghastly in its humor. Kneeland read his thoughts.

"Don't get restless," he said. "This assignment is between you and me. No one else will know anything about it. Officially, you're my home secretary. You can give color to that by spending an hour or two a day in this study. You can write your own letters in here. But the main thing," he went on, straightening suddenly and speaking with a may be just a harmless bunch of hangers-on, getting what they can out of me. Perhaps I'm only a meal ticket to them. Perhaps I'm meeting riddled and suspicious. Anyway," he smiled with an effort, "they're not being the gay little group a man would choose for a house party."

"No, they're not," Hale agreed. Kneeland stood brooding for a moment. He seemed to have forgotten the contract game. Suddenly he threw up his head with a gesture oddly like Hosanna's. Both, Hale reflected, might have inherited it from some Indian-fighting New England ancestor.

"I'm going to treat you like a father," he ended with his best smile. "I'm going to refer sentimentally to old times and old ties. Perhaps I'll slip over a little. What I want is to rub into these people the fact that you're my godson and the son not if he worried or annoyed Joan." He hesitated, then went on.

"Bert's a big puzzle to me this summer. He graduated from Princeton a year ago this month, and he loafed here all last summer. Of course I expected that he would come into the factory in the fall. He's no young Napoleon of Industry but he's no fool, either. He could be mighty useful to me at the factory. I was looking forward to it. Everything seemed to be going all right till he brought his friend Craig here last August. After that he changed completely. He thought he wanted to go in for medicine. Craig has filled him up with that idea. He asked Craig here for the summer, and Bert himself has been mooning around ever since. To be frank, what I suspect Craig is of using his influence with Bert to keep him in the medical game. I think Bert has lost interest in it. I even think he has lost a lot of interest in Craig. He certainly goes off by himself, day after day, while Craig works in the laboratory. But Craig has no idea of being shaken off. Perhaps he has dreams of Bert's building a hospital for him some day, when he's a rich man. I don't know. I don't know anything. I only guess. But my plan has always been to give my boy his head. I can't put him into leading strings now."

Hale nodded sympathetically, and waited. But Kneeland had said all he had to say. Rex suspected that he was regretting his frankness. He asked conversationally, "Is Craig in love with Miss Joan, too?"

Kneeland seemed relieved by the change of subject.

"He says he is. You can form your own conclusions. Anyway, she has turned him down cold. She's fond of Bert. She loves him like a brother. That's part of the trouble. They were brought up like brother and sister. No romance there, on her part. But she doesn't like Craig a little bit."

"How about Ainsworth? I suppose he's in love with Miss Kneeland, too."

"He made a little drive for her, but not a serious one. She gave him his walking papers at the first sign of it. Since then he hasn't bothered her. Ainsworth is in love with himself and his schemes. He doesn't pay any more attention to Joan, and she detests him."

"All right. I guess I've got what I want. Now I'm ready for your contract game, sir."

Kneeland was himself again. His ill-humor had vanished.

"If you can remember to say 'Uncle Cass,' it may help," he suggested.

"All right, Uncle Cass. It's Uncle Cass from now on, Uncle Cass." Kneeland grinned and his face grew young again.

"That's the stuff," he commended. He threw his right arm across his new employee's shoulder, and in that friendly position they went back to the living-room.

CHAPTER IV

Hale returned to his room toward midnight. He and Kneeland had played some good contract with Herbert and Joan. The remoteness of the other four, playing at a second table, had clearly been a relief to the host. In the intimacy of his family group his natural optimism and cheerfulness burst into full bloom. He won several rubbers, played successfully two "little slams," and enjoyed the evening.

He was sorry to have the party break up. Hale was not, Hale wanted to be alone and to think over his new responsibilities.

"What changed your opinion?"

new quality in his voice, "is that there's a little string to all this."

"Oh."

Hale began to see the light, and to object mentally to what he saw. "Your real job," Kneeland ended, "will be to find out what sort these people are."

"Oh," Hale repeated the word blankly. "You mean amateur detective work? You mean that I'm to worm myself into their confidence—"

"Nothing like it," Kneeland interrupted sharply. "In the first place, my lad, you couldn't get into their confidence. They're not a confiding bunch. Moreover they're not talking about their little plans. They're just working at them."

"Little plans? Do you know what those little plans are?" "Of course I don't," Kneeland jerked out impatiently. "If I did, why would I be asking you to look into things? I only suspect that Ainsworth, Craig and Mrs. Forbes are up to something. I believe they have axes to grind and that they're very busy grinding them."

"These people are guests in my house. They're eating my bread—and in one way or another I'm afraid they're trying to do me dirt. It may be in some trivial thing, or it may not. If they're playing some skin game on me, am I or am I not justified in asking you to help me to find out what it is? They're after something—my money, no doubt. Perhaps they're helping Ainsworth. Are you, or are you not, justified in pitting yourself against them if you've got the ability to do it?"

"I think you are—and I guess I am," Hale said slowly.

"Good. Will you tackle the job?"

"Yes, sir, I will."

"Fine. As to salary, we'll say a hundred a month and expenses till I get here in August. More after that, when there's more to do. A good bonus at the end of the summer if you've succeeded in unearthing anything I don't know. Expenses paid, of course. You'll have to take trips to New York, to find out some things about Ainsworth's recent activities, and Craig's. I've looked up Ainsworth's professional record, but you can find out more than I can about his private life. Mrs. Spencer Forbes may be in it, too, perhaps. I don't know. You'd better decide that yourself. All satisfactory so far?"

"Quite, sir. But don't imagine that I'm one of those super detectives you read about in mystery stories." "I hope you're not. What we want is observation. You've got it. We want common sense. You've got that. We want some brains, and you seem to have them."

Kneeland heaved himself out of his chair. "Now let's go back to the bunch and play contract," he suggested. He hesitated, then added abruptly, "I may be all wrong about these suspicions of mine, except in Ainsworth's case. He and I understand each other, all right. The others of my best friend. You're at loose ends for the moment, owing to the depression. I'm giving you a little job and a restful summer for old times' sake. Then they won't be suspicious. See?"

"Perfectly. You'd make a pretty good detective yourself, sir. But there are a few leading questions I'd like to ask. May I?"

"Of course. Fire away."

"Is it true that your son is in love with Miss Kneeland and wants to marry her?"

"Yes, it is. He's asked her a dozen times. He told me so."

"Has she refused him?"

"Of course she has, or he wouldn't have kept on asking her."

It was plain that Casper Kneeland was not as much pleased with his young friend as he had been a few minutes before. His manner was truculent.

"Is he very much cut up by her refusals?"

"Of course he is—confound you."

"I don't see why you should mind answering these questions, sir. Isn't it true that part of the tension one notices in him may be due to the relations between those two—to her refusals and his disappointment?"

"Yes, it is," Kneeland admitted more calmly. "In fact, I thought at first it was just that."

"What changed your opinion?"

"It didn't fit in with Bert's character. He's in love with Joan. He has been for years. But he isn't the sort to moon around and make her life a burden because she turned him down. He's a better sport than that. He might keep on trying, but

Traces of Townsites of Undetermined Age Discovered on Isle Royale by Explorers

The history of a vanished race that once inhabited Isle Royale has not been rendered illegible by the forest growth, according to George A. West, of the Milwaukee Public Museum, who with other scientists conducted an expedition searching into lore of the island.

Traces of townsites of a still-undetermined age have been found which tend to bear out the evidence obtained in long-forgotten burial grounds that Isle Royale's copper was mined by a prehistoric race that made seasonal raids on the island.

"Mystery surrounds the discovery of three depressions found in the eastern extremity of the entrance to McCargoe's cove by Dr. Carl E. Guthe and Fred Dustin, University of Michigan archeologists," according to Earl G. Kirby, whose ship, the Alabama, calls regularly at Isle Royale on cruises from the lower lakes.

"Bowl-shaped, the depressions disclosed a 14-inch layer of carefully placed rock, under which was found a bed of charcoal. Pottery and other relics of the Indian civilization believed to have reigned on Isle Royale long before Father Dablon in the Seventeenth century made the first white man's visit to the territory, were taken back to Ann Arbor by Doctor Guthe and his assistants," Kirby said.

China Has Suicide Mountain

A cruel trick of nature causes many suicides on sacred Mt. Omei, according to the Chinese government in discussing the 11,000-foot peak which sits on a carpet of clouds. At the top, pilgrims stand on a plateau, look down and sometimes see on clouds below the "image of Buddha." Believing he has come in person to welcome them to the after-life, they jump off the cliff. Actually, the "image of Buddha" is their own shadows, cast on the clouds below by the sun. Nature has other tricks that lead humans astray. Best known is the mirage, the reflection of distant objects by rebounding light. Mirages occur most often in deserts, but back in 1868 Gaston Tissandier reported one from a balloon above Calais, France. He saw ships, "sailing in the sky," reflected from the English channel.

Aunt Tibby's Trunk

By D. J. WALSH

Copyright—WNU Service.

"BUT, Mazie," remarked Bert Howard to his pretty little wife, "it isn't quite fair that Aunt Tibby should want to come back so soon; it's less than three weeks since she left, and she had been here six months. I have no objections to your aunt; she's a nice old lady, if a bit eccentric, but you always work so hard entertain- ing her that you wear yourself out. Between worrying over her comfort and fussing about the safety of that old cowhide trunk, home becomes a place of torment for me instead of a haven of rest."

And then Mazie, whose bobbed crown of glory was decidedly of the shade beloved by Titian, and with a temper to correspond, replied thus: "If you were properly interested in the welfare of your family you'd want to keep Aunt Tibby here all the time! Do you fancy that she herself would be so particular about that old cowhide trunk, as you are pleased to call it, if it didn't contain valuables? She told me—no, I won't say she exactly told me, but she gave me to understand, and, I know all the family have the same impression—that in it she carries her stocks and bonds. She has bequeathed the trunk to the one in whose home she happens to die."

"Mazie!" exclaimed Bert, putting his arms around his wife, "waiting for 'dead men's shoes' is sorry business! Do what you can for your aunt without making your family unhappy, but put all such ideas as you've just mentioned out of mind; they are unworthy of you!" and Bert stopped to kiss his wife good-by.

The first evening of Aunt Tibby's arrival Mazie began, "Barbara! do sit still! You'll make Aunt Tibby nervous!" or "John! don't walk so heavy!"

Aunt Tibby had been with them several weeks when she came down with a cold. The doctor called pronounced the trouble pneumonia. "Which at her age," said he (Aunt Tibby was 86), "is a serious matter. You had better get a nurse." Aunt Tibby had been so humored by her niece, however, that the nurse could do little to suit her, and Mazie was obliged to fetch and carry, to run up and down stairs until, ten days later, Aunt Tibby sank into her last sleep.

After the funeral the relatives who had gathered from far and near demanded that the will be read at once. So the old cowhide trunk was brought down to the living room and opened in the presence of all. It contained Uncle David's army uniform, a few books, half a dozen packages of old newspapers—and a long letter written by Aunt Tibby herself. This was addressed to her relatives in general and was a sort of confession. In it she stated that her income since Uncle David's death had been limited to a pension of $6 a month. That in some way the story had been circulated that this old trunk contained valuables and she had never contraditioned out of mind; they are unworthy of you!" and Bert stopped to kiss his wife good-by.

On the Highway

It is a curious trait in human nature that we will take off our hats when a woman enters an elevator, and be most apologetic if we bump into somebody inadvertently; but the instant we get our hands on a steering wheel we damn all mankind—woman and man alike.

Too often, we are inclined to look upon traffic guides and regulations as irritating restrictions designed primarily to keep us from having a good time, when the truth of the matter is, they have been devised solely for our convenience and comfort.

dicted it, fearing if she told the truth some one might put her in an old ladies' home, an institution she detested. She trusted her relatives would pardon her and that the old trunk would be kept for her sake; that it might prove a magic casket to the owner, just as it had to her.

The trunk was left with Mazie, as she was the only person who displayed the least desire to possess it. After everyone had departed she threw her arms around her husband's neck and cried, "Oh, Bert, can you ever forgive me?" Judging by the sigh of contentment she uttered Bert's answer was satisfactory.

Aunt Tibby was right; the trunk did prove a magic casket for Mazie. It stood in the upstairs hall where she had to pass it many times a day and whenever she was seized with envy, stubbornness or a desire for finery she could not afford, one glance at the old trunk was sufficient to dispel such feelings in a twinkling.

SALES OF COTTON INVOLVED IN COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION MAY BE POSTPONED UNTIL APRIL 1

Committee Representing Fifteen West Texas Counties Hear Hon. George E. Rathell

Special to the Plainsman:

Mrs. A. H. Kreis, Dougherty, and Mrs. George Stiles, Campbell, members of the exhibit committee of the county home demonstration council, set up an educational exhibit Friday at the Panhandle South Plains Fair at Lubbock. The display represents the Floyd County home demonstration clubs.

For the past few years, each county in the district with a home demonstration agent has arranged an educational exhibit at the fair, demonstrating some proven method for farm and home use recommended by the extension service. The exhibit from Floyd County called "Balance Your Meals With Milk", brings out the need of the quart of milk each day in the diet of every individual.

Fourteen counties arranged exhibits this year in the Woman's Building at the fair. These are not on a competitive basis since each county is awarded the same prize of $10.00.

Cotton Starts Coming to Gins At Good Rate

Cotton gathering in Floyd County has started in Floyd County with farmers bringing cotton to town for ginning at the rate of around thirty five bales a day. This week found the first activity of the year and gins started operating regularly.

Up to last night the total number of bales brought to Floydada for ginning had passed the 100 mark. This number represents the total amount weighed at the Public Weigher's yard.

Recent Books Topic Of 1929 Study Club

"Recent Books" was the topic for discussion when the 1929 Study Club held a regular meeting last Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. A. D. Cummings. Mrs. Conner Oden was director of the program.

Mrs. Joe. E. Eldridge gave a very interesting review of the book "Lisa Vale" by Olive Higgins Prouty, who wrote "Stella Dallas". Mrs. T. A. Hamilton was received as a new member.

In business session of the club, it was decided that the Children's Library, sponsored by the club during the summer, would be left at the Andrews Ward School for use of the students during the school year.

Next meeting of the club will be October 13, with Mrs. A. B. Keim as hostess, instead of Mrs. Bill Daily as announced in the year book. Speech will be the subject for discussion on that date.

Mrs. Delbert Jones left Friday for Artesia, New Mexico, after being here several days visiting with her parents.

J. D. Nelson, of Amarillo, visited in Floydada with friends Saturday night and Sunday.

Lubbock, September 28.—Sale of cotton involved in Commodity Credit Corporation loans which are being called in a number of West Texas counties may be postponed until at least April 1st, according to a proposal made by the Honorable George E. Rathell, secretary treasurer of the Commodity Credit Corporation, from Washington, in a meeting with a committee of producers in Lubbock Monday.

The producers committee, representing about fifteen West Texas counties and headed by Joe M. Rose of Dickens as chairman, requested of the Commodity Credit Corporation in presenting their case to Mr. Rathell that no liability be placed on the producer. Rathell did not approve this request but made a tentative proposal for the Commodity Credit Corporation under the terms of which the suggested postponement of the sale would be made until April 1st, prior to which time plans for a final disposition of these loans might be made.

Rathell stated that in any event none of the cotton involved in these loans which are being called would be sold by the Government until he has had time to return to the Washington office and confer with his associates and submit a report to the committee headed by Mr. Rose of Dickens.

Rose stated that when the Commodity Credit Corporation had reported to him he would advise the members of his committee and the county agents in the territory involved.

The particular cotton now involved in this matter includes cotton stored at Haskell, Hamlin, Lorenzo, and Snyder as well as cotton formerly stored at Jayton.

Elder Joe Kelley of Abilene, preached at the Church of Christ on Wall Street Sunday morning and evening.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Hollams and Mrs. Arthur B. Duncan, visited in Lubbock Sunday with Mrs. Duncan's daughter, Mrs. Chas. Watkins, and son, Mark Duncan.

Veterans of 36th Division Will Meet It Ft. Worth

Special to the Plainsman:

Fort Worth.—Veterans of the 36th Division, meeting in Fort Worth October 8th and 9th, at their annual reunion, are assured of plenty of diversified entertainment. Local committees are perfecting plans for handling the largest reunion since the war.

Saturday morning, October 8th, will be given over to registration at headquarters in the Texas Hotel. Facilities are being secured to permit members of the various wartime units to have specified meeting places.

On Saturday afternoon the annual stag party will be held and it is promised that the program will be better than ever.

Saturday night the annual dance will be given in the Crystal Ballroom of the Texas Hotel.

Sunday morning Memorial Services will be held in Fort Worth's beautiful Municipal Auditorium, followed by a short business meeting. At noon a barbecue lunch will be served in the Pioneer Palace, a building well known to visitors to Fort Worth's Frontier Centennial and Fiesta.

Plans are being worked out to keep the veterans entertained in additional ways so that none will find time on his hands.

Reports from Oklahoma promise the largest turn out of veterans from that state to date, and word received from points in Texas indicate the Texans will arrive in much greater numbers than in the past years.

Many distinguished visitors are expected to attend the reunion from both Texas and Oklahoma.
