On Monday morning, when Elroy Wilson, who is employed by the Santa Fe Grain Company, opened a box car on the siding to prepare it for shipping grain in, he found a man lying inside the car.

The man was lying on a newswhich was spread on a paper grain door and was perfectly mo- and he and his family formerly tionless. Elroy called to him but got no response by voice or movement. He then went on the out- from there to California a year or side of the car opposite where the man was lying and beat upon the car with a brick bat, but this failed to produce any response.

Since the car had been lying on the siding since Friday of last week, he began to fear that the man might be dead. He therefore climbed into the car and resorted to other methods of arousing the sleeper. First he tried shouting to him; then he used the toe of his shoe on him gently: he then used the toe of his shoe rather forcibly, which the effect of producing signs of life, to the extent that the man turned over and asked to be helped up.

Elroy assisted him to his feet and assisted him to walk to the door and placed a grain door with one end on the ground and assisted him in getting down from the car. The man's nose had been bleeding rather profusely and in wiping his nose he had almost covered his face with blood. Elroy took him to the engine house and washed his face, then took him to the office and made him warm, he seeming to be almost chilled to death.

was going. He seemed to remember nothing as to why or how long he had been in the car, but must have gotten on east of Amarillo, as he had no recollection of passing through that city. When asked if he had any money, he replied that he had a little, enough to buy something to eat and was directed up town to the cafe.

He seemed to be almost famished for water and Mr. Wilson became fearful lest he drink enough to kill himself, as he thinks the man drank near a gallon before stopping. If he entered the car east of Amarillo, he must then have been in there since some time Friday morning at least, and would therefore been greatly in need of water. Elroy states that he had often thought of taking a little adventure of this sort, but the condition of this poor fellow had robbed such an experience of all of its romance so far as he was in the mountains for camping in concerned.

"It was," Malet said. "He was a broken-down steeplechaser which had been brought out to Mexico City by an English mining magnate."

"What happened to him?" "He ran until he dropped dead," Malet returned. "I'm not a horseman. I had no idea how far or fast a horse could run."

"That's the thoroughbred strain," Barnes said. He passed into a disquisition on feats of thoroughbred horses and dogs. It was a hobby with bim.

"Is there a thoroughbred strain in men, too?" Malet asked.

"You bet there is," Barnes said promptly. "Put the thoroughbred to the test, and, whether he be man, horse, or hound, he'll respond."

"Barnes," Malet began, when the subject was exhausted, "haven't you yet found out that Nita is in love with young McKimber?"

"Impertinent puppy," Barnes stormed. "If I'd been in your place instead of being cast for a d-d flunkey, this would never have happened. I'm not sure but you couldn't have stopped it if you'd tried."

"Stopped It?" Malet returned. "You talk like a fool. I could just as easily have stretched out a hand and dammed the Colorado river in flood. Robin McKimber's been a better man than you have. What have you done all your days but loaf until you were so scared of the sight of Lippsky you took those long hikes which put you In condition? Don't scowl at me. I know you could lick me easily, but that won't make you worthy of your daughter, will it?"

Barnes listened to the story that had been told Milman and Bradney.

"What's the good of telling me this?" Barnes said. "Do you suppose

I want to go back to Peekskill?" "You won't have to. You are six hundred dollars to the good, your wardrobe is enlarged, and you've Nita. Milman admits that what we have done leaves us less clean than we were-'

"It won't hurt me," said Barnes. "You wouldn't notice it on my hide."

"I'm not approaching you from that "I keep on reading about capital and angle," Malet said craftily. "I'm reminding you that you are winning success at Nita's expense. I'm not in the least doubt about you. With Bradney and Milman there was a much greater chance of defeat." "What the devil are you counting

> "Can I come?" Robin McKimber asked anxiously.

> "I think it might be arranged," Malet smiled. He could say no more, because McKimber bombarded him with questions and made innumerable notes. He was a shrewd and hard-headed man. Malet took the midnight train back to New York feeling he had made a friend. Robin's changed attitude was amusing. He listened with the greatest deference to Malet's remarks and thrust something into his hands as he boarded the train.

> "Thank you," Malet said, "but I don't deserve a tip." "It's a letter for her." Robin flushed a little.

On Thursday evening, which was for ever afterward memorable in the lives of Peter Milman's guests, Paul Raxon walked down Fifth avenue wondering for what purpose he had been asked to confer with the recluse. Over the telephone Milman had said it was a matter of urgent import and had to do with his political ambitions. Ordinarily Raxon would have suspected danger, but not where Peter Milman was concerned.

The Milmans had been a great family intermarried with those who wielded immense financial power. Their prestige was undoubted in New York. Perhaps Peter Milman, brooding over his misfortunes, had some scheme to utilize the influence of his kin. The message was given in such a way as to enlist Raxon's lively interest. It was impossible to think of a visit to this austere mansion as in any sense perilous. A French manservant admitted him. The financier was shown into a splendid drawing room. The brilliant group which Malet had done many years before took Raxon's eye immediately, although he was ignorant of the sculptor's name. He was examining the group closely when Peter Milman enered. Raxon looked at him intently. He saw a slim man of late middle age wearing the correct garb for the evening. There was a coldness about Peter Milman's manner that was not reassuring. It was almost as if the presence of Raxon were an offense. Miliuan looked toward the sculptured group. "I see you are interested in that." "I am," Raxon responded. "Who

"I did not tell you, I think, of my villa there. It lies on the hills to the west of the city and overlooks the gardens of the Villa Palmieri. It has about twenty rooms, and was well furalshed. The gardens are productive and charming. Years ago I gave it to a distant cousin. She died recently, and it comes to me again. I find, after settling my affairs, there will be enough for us all to live comfortably in Italy, where the exchange rate favors us very much."

"I don't understand you," stammered Malet. Was this indication that Peter Milman had deliberately thrown away this New York home?

"I sent Sneed to Nita's room with a request that she would give me five minutes after you left last night. You were quite right. I shall always remember you were the first one of us to do the right thing. I could never live in this house happily knowing that to do so was the price of her unhappiness. into the cold face of young McKimber.

"Well," said McKimber, "how is your friend, the duchess of Green-Cheese?"

"Much better," said Malet, undisturbed. "She can now sit up and drink in the view."

"D-n it!" Robin exploded. "Don't shake hands with me.'

"I came to your fair city for no other purpose. I want to see your father at once."

"My father isn't well," said Robin. 'He doesn't see strangers.'

"He will see me," said Floyd Malet airily, "because I bring him back his youth, his reputation, and his future." By this time they had come to the car which Robin had parked by the curb. "If this is your automobile, let us lose no time."

"Look here," said Robin, "you deliberately lied to me about Miss Browp's address. I cabled to England and Lady Horsham had never heard of Miss Agatha Brown."

"I didn't give you her aunt's address," said Malet. "I referred you to a duchess traveling in Tuscany." "Her aunt?" Robin cried.

"The countess of Horsham is the aunt of the lady we will call for the moment Miss Agatha Brown. She spoke truly in not having heard of such a person.'

"I've got to know more about this," Robin exclaimed.

"You will not while you grip my arm like that. I have come to see your father. Until I do see him I shall not say any more.'

Ten minutes later Malet was in Mc-Kimber's private room. The man who was now working as Raxon dictated showed very markedly his depression. "I think I'd better see you alone."

Malet suggested. "Why?" said McKimber slowly. "My son is my full partner in everything." "Even in your St. Louis affairs?" "I don't know what you have to do with St. Louis, but he knows everything that happened to me there." "This simplifies matters very much," said Malet. "Something of the sort," Milman answered. He pointed to a seat. "Please sit down, Mr. Raxon."

"I'm wondering what you can possibly have to say to me." Peter Milman smiled.

"I'm quite sure you are. It has to do with your political future mainly. It seems you wish to go to the senate from this state. My grandfather was a senator for many years, and I still retain an interest in politics."

"You didn't ask me to call just to hear that," Raxon said bluntly.

"There is more to come, much more."

The door opened and Fleming Brad ney came in. He had been compelled to shave off his few days' growth of beard. Raxon looked up at bim, frowning

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

On the day set aside as an annual

Thanksgiving day, surely every person has something for which to be grateful. Many of these blessings are so commonplace that they are forgotten. The greatest blessing in life is good health, a happy home and a reasonable amount of leisure for the cultivation of the higher and finer privileges. Financial prosperity is not the main criterion of a successful life. The true thanksgiving will be expressed in many very humble homes

as well as in palaces upon boulevards

Today's Toast on Thanksgiving

Here's to Thanksgiving! The feast of thanks for happy days, When grateful hearts voice humble praise For Life and all the good thereof, Few but Have Some Cause

And for the Giver's care and love. Here's to Thanksgiving! -Detroit Free Press.

Country's Annual Harvest Festival

Reason for Thanksgiving Being a Season of Rejoicing.

Our annual festival of Thanksgiving is with us again and our grateful thanks are given to a loving Father for the blessings that have been poured upon us during the year.

Thanksgiving is our national harvest festival, the season for bringing in the sheaves, when the barns and storehouses of our land are being filled with an abundance of food for man and beast for the year 1928.

It is a season of rejoicing, of the gathering together of families to give thanks and renew the ties that bind and hold together the loved ones of other days.

Thanksgiving day is American from its conception and spirit to its turkey and cranberry sauce. Europe has her harvest festivals, but no Thanksgiving. The union of a solema thanksgiving service in the church for mercies youchsafed throughout the year with feasting and merry-making in the home, is distinctly American. The last Thursday of November is unique in history.

We can look to Plymouth for our first real Thanksgiving. That first winter was a terrible one. Of those one hundred who so joyously landed from the Mayflower, spring found only fifty famished survivors, but with indomitable courage they succeeded in growing an "indifferent good" crop of barley, and "a good increase of Indian corn."

That such a people should rejoice! Nevertheless it was Pilgrim and New England-one as grim as the otherthat gave Thanksgiving day, with its solemn thanks, merry-makings and family reunions, to America. For that let us be thankful to them both.

Washington, after the adoption of the Constitution, in 1789, appointed a day of thanksgiving. Since 1817 the festival has been observed in New York, and since 1863 the Presidents have always issued proclamations appointing the last Thursday of November as Thanksgiving day .- Farm and Ranch,

Seek Specific Name for the Boy Friend

"She's my girl," is carroled by every male human heart when in love, but the girls themselves have never agreed upon what "he" is to them. Some 20 names "he" has been given are listed by a writer in the Survey, ranging from the romantic but discarded "beau," to the modern "steady," "cutle," "shelk," "date," and even "boy friend." The writer, Eleanor Rowland Wembridge, makes a plea for the world to get busy and find a noble name to denote the attendant male person-a word free from self-conscious personalities, one not too humorous, apologetic, romantic, rude, rustic or in any way specific, yet one applicable "equally to Zeke the baggageman or the prince of Wales." How about it, girls? What is he to you?

Flapper's Clock

"We have all heard of the old-fashloned woman who sang one or more verses of 'Nearer, My God to Thee.' to determine the exact moment when the boiled eggs were properly done," writes Pansy of Urbana, "but it remained for a modern flapper to give us a brand-new and practical idea on the subject.

"Recently married, she was being 'razzed' about her mability to cook, and her brother remarked: 'Why, she can't even boll eggs!"

"'I can, too,' she said. 'I smoke one cigarette for soft two for medium and three for hard-boiled !""-Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Let All Give Thanks for Year's Blessings

It is well that one day in the year should be set apart for the formal expression of our thanks, as a nation, for the blessings which the year has brought.

Individually and collectively, we too seldom put into definite form our appreciation of benefits. To do so is to quicken our minds to a livelier realization of them.

There is no better way to realize how we have been blessed as a nation than to compare the country as it is now, rich, powerful, prosperous. with the feeble, struggling Plymouth colony which returned heartfelt gratitude for bare existence.

The year new drawing to a close has brought generous benisons. We have been at peace. Agriculturally, industrially and financially we have thriven. Benefits received bring their mandate. By so much as we, individually, as a community and a nation. share our prosperity with those less fortunate will these blessings continue to multiply. Generously we have received; generously let us give .-- Cleveland Plain-Dealer.

On Right Side of Ledger

Casting up the account on both sides of life's ledger there are few who are not greatly in debt to a merciful and generous Providence. In any event, there is nothing better calculated to generate a spirit of optimism over the future than the indulgence in the sentiment of gratitude for the good things that have come ip the past.

RADIO It has come!

OVERWHELMING demand for Atwater Kent radio brings mass-production prices.

Atwater Kent Radio, because of its obvious and convincing superiority, won universal preference. When America approves, it buys. An avalanche of demand resulted. A two acre factory has expanded into an enormous plant covering fifteen and one-half acres.

As the great staff of Atwater Kent ex-perfected one startling improvement after another, keeping Atwater Kent Radio always ahead in supremely satisfactory performance, the price-reducing power of mass production kept pace.

Now, Atwater Kent Radio, recognized the world over as the highest development of radio, is offered at prices which pass on to the public savings achieved by scientific manufacture on a gigantic scale.

We have a valuable message presented us by Micah. It is a sort of symposium of prophetic sentiment as it has been cast by the assumes the guise of fair mertwo prophets preceding him, Amos chandise, but at base is the kind 4:16-21 and Hosea, and by his contemporary, Isaiah. All the vehemence of Amos against injustice, all of the strong sense of divine judgment an equity in the social exchange resent in Micah.

Yet we have the traces of Hosea's sense of the divine love. in Micah. For instance, in Chapter 6, we find the divine plea for love as in Hosea's "O Ephraim, how shall I give thee up?" as Micah pictures the Lord saying, "O my people, what have I done to thee? and wherein have I wearied thee? testify against me. For I brought thee up out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed thee out of the house of servants."

But we have the outlook of Isaiah also. The prophecies of Micah coincide with the latter half of the prophecies of Isaiah in point of time and general spirit. Indeed, Isaiah and Micah have one passage in common. Compare Micah 4:1-3 with Isaiah 2:2-4. The verbiage is almost identical and the thought is precisely the same. Thus, if the Bible student wishes to get a composite idea of the spirit and content of prophecy up to the Issianic period he can get it by a careful study of the little book of Micah. Turning now to the lesson after the prophetic setting of Micah, the reader is asked to read in addition to the appended readings, the lesson text in Micah 2:1-3, 6:1-13, and the Golden Text in Chapter 6 and 8th verse. The evil spirit of the oppressors of the common people of Israel has grown in avarice through the period since Amos first thundered his denunciations against them. It has so thoroughly woven itself into the character of the exploiters that the days are not long anough for Micah their nefarious deeds. shows them dreaming of the clever wickedness which they are to perpetrate upon the people. 'Woe to them that devise iniquity, and work evil upon their teds! when the morning is light, they practice it, because it is in the power of their hand." What a picture of degeneracy! Wilfulness in sin has now grown into enthusiasm for sin. The wrong-doer can not sleep because of his growing enthusiasm for wronging his fellow man. Every conscious hour is given to wrong. Every hour of daylight is an hour of iniquitous practice. The eyes close with an evil conscience meditating further wrongs; the eyes open with a plotting out of the strategies of evil. Before the light dawns, avaricious imaginations see fields changing hands, and the dawning light finds iniquitous hands by violence ousting the owners from their lands. It was a violence against the poor and their families. It was even worse; it was a subversion of the sacred heritage of the people of Israel. For the land had been the subject of divine covenant as far back as Abraham and had been proportionately divided to the tribes and families in the days of Joshua after the universal toll of blood necessary to conquer it. But while evil minds were devising iniquity, the almighty mind of God in its justice was devising judgment. The cumulative progress of evil was to have as its check-mate the cumulative indignation of the divine wrath witnessed by the cumulative message

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Annie Kwinski of 526 1st Aveue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes that she became so weak and run-down that she was not able to do her housework. She saw the name Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the paper and said to her husband, "I will try that medicine and see if it will help me." She says she took six bottles and is feeling much better. Mrs. Mattie Adams, who lives in Downing Street, Brewton, Ala., writes as follows: "A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Com-pound and since taking it I feel like a different woman. With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before -read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grand-children, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women past fifty, say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Com-pound, and are recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

Jersey Man Started It

The story of how this proclamation came to be issued is also an interest ing one On Friday. September 25 1789, Elias Boudinot of New Jersey took the floor of the house of repre sentatives, and declared that the ses sion of congress should not end with out offering an opportunity to all citi zens of the country to join in a mighty thanksgiving service, principally be cause the adoption of the Constitution guaranteed their future "life, liberty and pursuit of happiness." He there upon presented the following joint resolution :

Resolved, that a joint committee of both Houses be directed to wait upon the President of the United States, to request that he would recommend to the people of the United States a day of public Thanksgiving and prayer to be observed by acknowledging, with grateful hearts, the many signal favors of Almighty God, especially by afford ing them an opportunity peaceably to establish a Constitution of government for their safety and happiness.

Strange as it may seem, this reso lution precipitated a bitter debate Aedanus Burke, a Democrat from South Carolina, declared that he did not like this mimicking of "European customs where they made a mere mockery of Thanksgiving," since two nations at war frequently sang "Te Deum" for the same event, even though to one it was a victory and to the other a defeat. Thomas Tudor Tucker, a Federalist of South Caro lina, declared that the house had no

After some further argument the resolution was finally adopted by the house and sent to the senate the next day. The upper body acted upon it immediately as follows:

Resolved, that the Senate do concur in the above recited resolution and that Messrs. (William S.) Johnson (of Connecticut) and (Ralph) Izard (of South Carolina) be the committee en the part of the Senate.

Accordingly, Senators Johnson and Izard, acting with the committee appointed from the house, composed of Boudinot, Sherman and Peter Sylvester of New York, notified President Washington of the wishes of congress and on October 3 he issued the proclamation. Both the New York Daily Advertiser and the New York Dally Gazette gave it prominent display in their issues of October 8, and so far as is known the day designated (Thursday, November 26) was generally observed as a day of thanks. giving.

Proclamation Disappears

How this proclamation disappeared rom the archives of the nation is still mystery, but disappear it did-and to one seemed to have noticed its absence until 1921, when it was advertised with numerous other manuscripts by the American Art Galleries in New York and was purchased there by J. C. Fitzpatrick, assistant chief of the division of manuscripts of the Library of Congress. The handwriting of the document itself is that of William Jackson, Washington's secretary, but the signature .t the end is Washington's. It is curious to note that the great seal of the United States does not appear on it nor is the proclamation countersigned by the secretary of state, as has been the case with all later Presidential proc lamations, including those for Thanksgiving. # Care of Tires Is of Big Importance

THE FRIONA STAR

Pressures Maintained Must Conform to Loads Carried.

In the course of tire development, tire experiments have proven that among the most important factors in the proper treatment of tires is the adjustment of the ratio between the air pressure of the tire and the load to be carried. Engineers have made long and comprehensive studies of the proper amount of air to be used with certain loads. The life of the tires is actually lengthened and the service given is improved if these observations of the engineers are regarded.

Overloading Is Fault.

Overloading is a common fault and the disregard for careful adjustment of air pressure in the tires caused all sorts of tire troubles, which are not attributable to the construction of the tire but to their use. The engineers and chemists are at work constantly improving the materials from which tires are made and the machinery for their production but all of the principles back of the construction of the tire are based on maintaining an air pressure commensurate with the load to be carried and the design of the tire

If the loads are increased the air pressure must be made to conform, otherwise there is an insufficient amount of air in the tires for the load carried and this produces unnatural inflation which causes an unnatural wear on the tires. If the load is too light for the air pressure carried there is not the resiliency or buoyancy to the tires that there should be. This is particularly true of balloon tires in which the variation of the air pressure is a matter to be most carefully attended.

Engine Improves.

Tires like the motor of the automoblle respond to good treatment and the good motorist is the one who will leed the best advice as to the care of the engine. He will use his automobile for years and the engine will actually improve in his hands while in the ands of the poor motorist the engine will develop a multitude of troubles. So it is with tires. Proper care actually will give maximum mileage. Conidering that the tires carry the load of the car and the contents, as well as protecting the whole mechanism of he car against the road blows, there are no more important elements in the operation of the car than proper tire adjustment, inflation and load.

Fix Rope for Towing

No one cares to think much about being towed home, but not to make a bad matter worse, some thought should be given to this subject. In attaching the rope which is to be used in the towing, many drivers fasten it to the axle, which is wrong. The rope should be fastened to one of the front portions of the frame, so that the pull comes on the chassis. The same thing applies to the car doing the towing, except that the rope should be fastened to some part of the rear frame.

Static Experiments

gets down to the freezing point, the amount depending on the climate in which the car is operated. The use of powerful chemicals, while sometimes cheaper in first cost, is very likely to cause damage later, costing more in repair bills than the amount saved, as they attack the metal system and rubber hose connections. In order to guard against loss of solution make sure that all water connections are tight before adding alcohol. If the above precautions are followed there will be no danger of freezing to a car that is used regularly. However, if a car is to be laid up the cooling system should be drained.

Constant Voltage Best

If one is given a choice of operating the filament of a vacuum tube with constant current or with constant voltage there should be no question as to the selection because the latter is by far the most important in that it prolongs the life of a tube.

What Dr. Caldwell Learned in 47 Years Practice

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It cannot harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and to break up fevers and colds. and harm to the system.

Often Called In to Give His Views on Home-Built Machines. Quite frequently the service man is called in to give his views on the fallure of a home-built tuned radio-frequency set to afford volume and selectivity. Often this can be traced to the grid returns of one or more of the RF colls or the detector coll secondary being run to the wrong filament lead. There is a quick way to check up on the former, if the set is the usual type, using 90 volts of "B" battery potential on the plates of all amplifier tubes and 45 volts on the detector tube, with a 41/2-volt negative bias on the audio-amplifier grids. It is to insert a 0-50 scale milliammeter in the wire running from the negative terminal of the "B" battery to the common "A" and "B" battery connection. If all is well, the deflection of the needle on the meter will indicate that a current of 17 mils or less is flowing. When a greater amount of that the polarity of the "C" battery is correct, and that its positive terminal is connected to the negative "A" lead. Next, inspect the set and make sure that the RF amplifier grid returns are connected to the negative side of the filament circuit and that those of the audio tubes are run to the negative "C" battery terminal. If a 201-A type tube is being used as detector, it should have a positive grid return, and if the detector is of the 200 or 200-A type, the grid return should be negative. The milliammeter reading of about
