CONTRACT LET FOR 3rd SECTION OF HIGHWAY

Bids were received and opened Tuesday morning, January 6th, for the third section of Robert E. Lee Highway No. 3, through Terrell county. The dirt work was contracted to W. T. Montgomery, of San Antonio, for $68,044.10 and the concrete work was awarded to Hayner and Burn, of Sanderson, for $27,450.56 plus 10 per cent for cost. The work on this section is to be completed in five months. There were only six bids submitted.

This third section of State Highway No. 3 is 17.4 miles long. It extends from the railroad section of Mofeta up to seven miles west of the Watkins Oil Well.

LOCAL VETS ARE RECEIVING BONUS POLICIES

Charles Rogers received his life insurance policy the first of the week from the veteran's bureau, representing the bonus granted veterans of the world war. Mr. Rogers' policy was for the limit amount of $1501, he having entered the service shortly after the outbreak of the war and served a long time overseas. Other veterans who received their certificates are Ray Parker and D. L. Duke. It is expected most of the veterans in Sanderson will be receiving their bonus vouchers in the near future.

The Remedy That Has Passed The Test

It has been before the public for more than fifty years— It is a scientifically compounded prescription It has healed thousands— It is of special value in diseases of catarrhal nature— Catarrh is inflammation of the mucous membranes. It manifests itself in the nose, the throat, the stomach, the bowels and other parts of the body.

PE-RU-NA

will prove helpful wherever and whenever there is catarrhal inflammation. Sold Everywhere Tablets or Liquid

Valuable Catch

Sixty thousand dollars was realized from a single day's catch of fish just off the beach near Cape Charles, Va., when 12 refrigerator cars moved to the markets 1,500 barrels of gray trout that averaged the fishermen $40 a barrel. It was the biggest catch of the season and possibly in years of any of the seaside fishermen and came at a time when the season is about to close, which will serve to stimulate the fish industries along the coast of the two eastern shores of Virginia counties, which have had a comparatively poor season throughout the year.

"CASCARETS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS—10c A BOX

Don't Stay Dizzy, Bilious, Headachy, Sick or Constipated.

Feel fine! Let "Cascarets" clean your bowels and stimulate your liver. No griping or overacting. Millions of men, women, and children take this harmless laxative-cathartic. It doesn't sicken you like pills, oils, calomel and salts. Tastes nice—acts wonderful. Sold at drug stores.

Play Ball

The two English-speaking nations have a good deal in common. They are both loyal to King Shakespeare, for example, and they also spend the greater part of their leisure time in doing something somehow to some kind of a ball rather than looking at Shakespearean revivals.—London Morning Post.

The infection and inflammation are healed by using Human Eye Balm. Young's Ointment for 25-cent jar or send 5¢ for 10¢ jar. N. Y. Adv.

Unkind Thrust

Mrs. Bragg—"My daughter's muscle cost a lot of money." Mrs. Tagg—"Indeed. Did some neighbor sue you?"

When You Catch Cold Rub on Musterole

Musterole is easy to apply and it gets in its good work right away. Often it prevents a cold from turning into "flu" or pneumonia. Just apply Musterole with the fingers. It does all the good work of grandmother's mustard plaster without the blister.

Musterole is a clean, white ointment, made of oil of mustard and other home remedies. It is recommended by many doctors and nurses. Try Musterole for cold on the chest, rheumatism, pleurisy, stiff neck, bronchitis, neuralgia, congestion, sore of the back and joints, muscle bruises, chilblains, sores of all sorts.

Musterole is also a good ointment for all children. It is sold in 1/2 oz. tubes; 50¢.

The Great Question: How to Get Mankind to Try to Improve Itself

By ELIHU ROOT, Milbank Memorial Fund.

WE HAVE the money to spend on public enlightenment. We can buy health for the people with it—to a certain extent. But before we can get the people to benefit by a medical education, we have to get them really to want improved health and lengthened life. And that we are discovering to be exceedingly difficult. I don't know whether people really want long life enough to spend money on their health.

I think the power of coal saved in our locomotives is a little less than 5 per cent, and the loss 95 per cent. If there is that loss in the power of coal, you may multiply it by 100 in order to obtain an idea of the losses which occur when we try to impress the importance of the people's health on the people themselves. We pour out useful words upon the people by day and by night, in newspapers, magazines, books and lectures, class rooms and public meetings—words upon words in fogs—and there is not one-tenth of one one-hundredth of 1 per cent of them which makes an effect on the minds to which it is directed.

The only people who read things are the people who don't need to read them. The people that ought to be affected by a speech are bored by it. We keep saying over and over again to each other the things that we agree upon, but we never get at the people who don't agree with us.

Now, when it comes to humanitarian efforts, it is almost impossible to do anything of value from without—by external forces, such as money—unless we can get sympathy and assistance from the individuals we try to help. The great question of all the people who want to improve the condition of mankind is, how to get mankind to try to improve itself. In the attempt to teach people how to avoid the scourge of tuberculosis, to teach them to stop it when it begins, to cure it, to make it a continually dwindling evil, we are being led by wise advice to undertake that through something besides mere words—namely, through demonstration.

Your Film People Simply Don't Know How to Behave Themselves

By G. B. SHAW, in Harper's Magazine.

Don't I think American films superior to all others? No. Many of them are full of the stupidest errors of judgment. Overdone and foolishly repeated strokes of expression, hideous makeups, closeups that an angel's face would not bear, hundreds of thousands of dollars spent on spoiling effects that I or any competent producer could secure quickly and certainly at a cost of ten cents, featureless overexposed faces against underexposed backgrounds, vulgar and silly subtitles, impertinent lists of everybody employed in the film from the star actress to the press agent's office boy—are only a few of the "gaffes" that American film factories are privileged to make.

Conceit is rampant among your film-makers; and good sense is about nonexistent. That is where Mr. Chaplin scores; but Mr. Harold Lloyd seems so far to be the only rival intelligent enough to follow his example.

Your film people simply don't know how to behave themselves; they take liberties with the public at every step on the strength of their reckless enterprise and expenditure.

The Men of the Future Will Know Too Much to Laugh at Anything

By DR. CHARLES G. SHAW, New York University.

Man may be defined as a creature of laughter and tears. If pacifism, socialism and the like are seeking to efface all tears, it may happen that certain other causes will work for the destruction of laughter. Primitive men did not know enough to laugh, since wit involves a certain amount of intelligence. The men of the future will know too much to laugh at anything. There is so little laughter left now in the world that already we are forced to resort to the synthetic smiles of comic strip artists and vaudeville jokesmiths.

Laughter arises from the twin causes of incongruity and inequality. The laugh is at once of physical and social origin. We laugh at what seems inferior to us. In both cases our pride induces us to assume an exalted position and lofty air. Men used to laugh at Columbus and Galileo. Now they try to joke about Einstein and Freud.

The laugh is going fast. We have passed from the age of Shakespeare to that of Ibsen. Jokes are kept alive by professionals, who are like doctors administering oxygen. But the life of laughter cannot be saved. He laughs best who laughs first.

When You Are As Safe on a High Mountain Peak as Anywhere Else

By CARL BLAUROCK, Colorado Mountain Club.

Yes, there is danger in mountain climbing. But there is that in walking on a city street. What is more important, you are your own danger in the mountains. There are no other people except those of your party to reckon with. If you know them you feel safe. On a crowded street the other fellow is your danger and you don't know him. The worst danger of all in mountain climbing is the tenderfoot. I recall one occasion when I had to tell a rattle-headed novice that if he did not put himself absolutely in our hands for the rest of the trip and do what we directed he would have to take the back trail at once. Just so long as you keep your head, do not get rattled, and do not have some greenhorn to contend with, you are as safe on a mountain as anywhere. You never get in a tight place that you cannot figure your way out of, if you have time and keep your head.

Such a Heaven Is Unthinkable. My Happiness Is in Pleasurable Activity

By DR. C. W. ELIOT, President Emeritus Harvard University.

The usual conception of heaven to the dying man is a place of refuge from pain, of rest from monotonous drudgery. To me such a heaven is unthinkable. My greatest happiness is in pleasurable activity. Joy in work is my ideal of existence, here or hereafter. An existence of idleness, of relief from work, would be wholly unbearable.

Institutional Christianity has condemned a portion of humanity to torments. The new religion will make no such pretension and will teach no such horrible and perverse doctrines. But sentiments of love and beauty and reverence will remain and increase.

The new religionist will not worship his ancestors, but will feel his indebtedness to preceding generations. The new religion will have saints, but canonization will be based on grounds somewhat new. It will teach only the use of such authority as will develop co-operative good-will.

Long Submarine Cable

A submarine cable in one continuous length of 2,700 feet has been recently laid across the Hudson river at Garrison, just below West Point, according to the Electrical World. The makeup of the cable and the method of laying it presented some features not encountered in everyday practice. The cable is to carry current from the east side of the river to the west side for local distribution in the immediate vicinity of Garrison. Power is to be transmitted at first at 2,900 volts with ungrounded star-connected transformers, and this will later be changed to 4,000 volts with the neutral grounded.

"HELP US BOTH!"

SYNOPSIS—Living in the small English village of Darbury, old-fashioned and sedate place, Barbara Stockley, daughter of a widowed mother, is soon to celebrate her marriage to Hugh Rochdale, rich and well connected. Barbara is adventurous, and has planned, with an aunt, an airplane trip to Australia. Major Alan Croft, famous as an aviator, is to be the pilot. At her first meeting with Croft Barbara is attracted by his manner and conversation, different from the cut-and-dried conventions of her small town. They set out, Barbara, her aunt, Croft, and a mechanic. Word in a few days comes to Darbury that the plane is missing and its occupants believed lost. Croft and Barbara, after the wreck of the airplane in a furious storm, reach an apparently uninhabited island in the Pacific ocean. The other two members of the party had perished. The two castaways build a shelter. In Croft's absence Barbara is attacked by a cannibal. Croft rescues her. Croft discovers a party of blacks, evidently reconnoitering. Croft fixes up an electrical guard which scares off an attacking party. Secure from immediate danger, Croft and Barbara settle down to make the best of things. Croft already has recognized the charm of the girl and fears the outcome of their situation. Croft, who has traveled much among savages, makes friends with the blacks.

"They would have you to cultivate again the taro plant, which now is as a weed; weave much tapestry for your from the reeds; dry the sliced of the cocount; cultivate the seed. Then, perchance, when remove to other lands, we shall and great ships hither with wondrous in return for the fruits of your Further shouts arose. "The would have us to visit freely your situations and show you how to prevent the pestilences which devour your

"This program was vociferously aced; but Croft's experience of na was too wide to allow of reliance on their momentary enthusiasm. Flashing a stern glance around, he led them into silence.

"If all this is done peacefully," he continued, in threatening tones, "ye shall rest in safety. But if again your hands are lifted against us, your bodies shall be burned afresh with blue fire-devils! Your women shall be slain; your little ones thrown to the sharks! The wrath of your god will I bring down," waving his hand threateningly skyward, "and turn you into tortured slaves. If ever again ye molest the great white chief or his wife!"

Fear overcame the natives' enthusiasm. They fell on their faces again, babbling incoherently of obedience and mercy. He motioned them to rise; then he drew back, satisfied. He had established comparative safety for them both, for the time being at all events, and explained the scene to Barbara, exultantly.

This introduction over, Chimabohol now informed his guest of his privilege in choosing the great sacrifice to be offered up at the close of the feast. Should the great white chief decide upon human sacrifice? The old man waved toward the crowd of faces, watching in tense apprehension: "All are here, O Mighty Chief."

Upon this arose a chorus of dissentient cries, mixed with shouts of "Meama! Meama!" The natives pressed forward in eager anxiety. Chimabohol glanced up quickly. "Where is Meama? I see her not. Where is Roowa, her husband? And Laalo, her son?"

A little black figure was thrust roughly forward. He glanced round, fearfully, uncertain whether to cry or prove the manhood of his five years. Deciding upon the former course, his eyes, in the act of screwing up, encountered those of the white girl watching him curiously; and he paused, gazing at her, his mouth open. She smiled. A wonder-stricken smile, spread his small lips, and he moved nearer, looking up at her with childish adoration.

For the first time Barbara felt the humanity behind the repulsive exterior of these folk. She held out her free hand. The little fellow came shyly toward it, but some one roughly pulled him back; and she remembered, with some amusement, that she was tiring.

Accompanied by much muttering and scuffling, a man whose face was distinctly more intelligent than that of many of his fellows, slowly advanced. Croft watched him closely.

"Roowa," cried Chimabohol, "where are Meama and thy babe, that they obeyed not the command to greet the great white chief?"

Many eager voices broke in, before he could reply.

"The babe is sick, O Chief!"

"The scourge, O Chief! It is again in the house of Roowa! Let the great white chief save us from the scourge, at the sacrifice of the Full Moon tonight."

Roowa uttered a great cry, and fell on his knees before Croft, eyes wild, arms outstretched, babbling protestations and pitiful supplications.

The white man fully realized the craftiness of these fellows, also the delicacy of his own position, with the possibility of causing no offense in this first action as overlord. His face set in an iron determination, impregnable; and his eyes flashed round on all around, keeping their in the hearts of those upon whom they occasionally rested. Recognizing at last the man he sought, he motioned him forward.

Larger than most, more brutal of countenance, Barbara quickly recognized her late pursuer.

"What is he called?" Croft demanded of Chimabohol.

"Bahooma, O Greatest of Chiefs!"

The two men regarded each other silently; and in the look of the native Croft recognized hatred and defiance, in spite of the fear lurking in the bold eyes which met his own.

A dull murmur arose, in which his ear was quick to note hostility. The old chief's face was full of anxiety as he stepped forward, pulling his beard nervously.

"Few have so straight an aim as Bahooma, Great Chief. He is of kin to my house. He will become chief in my stead. Many," he added in a low voice, "would have him now; for I am old and my heart is dead with my sons."

"He hath not found favor in my sight," replied the gods' messenger curtly, frowning upon the wretch, whose expression of defiance was rapidly fading. "He hath raised his eyes and his hand to the white chief's wife!" he thundered, glaring ferociously at the now trembling figure.

Like a sudden breeze rippling over a group of poplars, a breath of fear swept across the listening crowd. Bahooma began a stream of gabbling protest; he was unaware of the sinfulness of his action; he had not seen the great chief nor heard of his mission from the gods; it was the Vow. . . .

Croft waved him away.

"Thou knowest now. Take heed, over-bold one!" Then he turned to Roowa, still on his knees in despair.

"Roowa," he asked, "thou lovest thy little ones?"

"A-aa! As myself, Mighty Chief!"

The look in his eyes touched Barbara. It was another glimpse into a human soul, although as yet she understood nothing of his trouble.

"It is well. Take heed, Roowa! My will is not to offer up thy sick babe; but to go with thee now to thy hut, and perchance, cure the child."

The joy which transfigured the native's face was indescribable. Upon the dismissal of the tribe, he led the visitors to his hut, incoherent in his excitement. As Croft had guessed, the child only suffered from fever, needing more air and cleanliness—the filth and stench being abominable. Ordering those necessities, he produced from his pockets one of his fever antidotes, Meama watching him in terrified bewilderment; then he precipitately pushed Barbara out into the fresh air again.

The feast, to which they were now led, was spread upon the ground in an open space between the huts and the lagoon. Only the men squatted round to eat, the women—occupying a lower position—waited upon them, with the pleasant expectation of finishing their leavings.

At the end of the feast the pair became aware that all eyes were fastened on them. The sun had set. The sacrifice must be decided upon. An air of anxiety, of strained expectation, was manifest.

Croft's wits had not been slumbering. "Our gods have told me," he informed Chimabohol confidentially, "that thy god, Balhuaka, doth not hunger for the flesh of man this moon; neither doth he desire fish or bird to be offered unto him. He desireth to taste the dishes thou hast prepared for those who have sailed here from the skies. All that we have left uncast shall thou collect, therefore, and offer unto him. It is food tabu to those sent by the gods; therefore doth he require it beyond all other food."

This distinct greediness seemed more in character with a peevish child than a celestial being; but to Chimabohol it appeared natural enough. He communicated the decision to the tribe, which showed vociferously its unmistakable relief.

The ambrosial remains were therefore gathered together and placed in receptacles of plaited reeds. Lighted reed torches were produced for everybody, and the procession set forth, headed by the old chief and the white visitors. Turning westward through the council chamber, they bore a little inland to the sacred palm grove.

Within a few moments the torches had formed two waving lines of light, as the natives divided upon either side of the central path. The bearers of the sacrifice advanced up the center and laid it upon the unlighted bonfire; the musicians squatted on the ground near the altar, beginning again their uncanny music.

The preliminary rites ceased, and Chimabohol turned to Croft.

"Thou, O Great White Chief, shalt make the flames arise, straight and high! Thus shall we know that our sacrifice is accepted by our god."

The great white chief inclined his head. Stepping forward with the assurance of one used to guiding sacrificial flames from childhood, he advanced to the altar, Barbara watching him in astonishment. There he paused for a solemn moment—whether to give the effect of reverence, or to grasp some elusive memory, or from sheer joy in the situation, she could not tell.

Slowly, at last, he raised his arms, waving the flaring torch high above his head. Then he embarked upon a short display of physical drill, as if invoking the spirits of an unborn host. It impressed the natives into awe-struck silence, while filling the girl with an almost irrefragable desire to laugh. After this performance, he bent slowly down and held his torch to the heap of dry sticks and leaves. Immediately the fire caught on, crackling and fizzling, sending up leaping yellow flames and thick curling smoke into the somber vault above.

This instant and splendid conflagration was a sign of the offering being acceptable to Balhuaka. Another burst of excited incantation broke from the assembly, the musicians once more blowing upon their reeds and shells. The torches flared, the bonfire belled forth thick gusts of flame and smoke, its roar mingling with the music and wild singing.

At last the flames reached the sacrifice and the air was filled with the smell of burning food.

A great shout went up. The god was even now eating of their offering! Health and prosperity would be theirs for at least the duration of this moon! The music abruptly ceased; the dancers sank breathless to the ground; an awed hush fell upon the gathering.

When the fire had died down to a glowing heap of red embers, the silence broke stormily in an outburst of joyous hilarity. The procession started back to the settlement, the riotous merriment continuing all the way, the waving torches making the moon seem pale by contrast.

At a small hut on the outskirts Chimabohol paused, intimating that it was the best they could offer and would in future be tabu to the great white chief. Then the revellers dispersed, the torches flickering like miniature fires among the neighboring huts. The man and the girl were left alone.

The barbaric excitement still tingled in their veins and shone in their eyes, when, for a moment, they looked at each other. Instinctively Barbara caught her breath, putting her hand to her throat, as if to wrestle with something choking her; her torch fell to the ground.

"We—We—Can't Stay—Here!"

"We—we—can't stay—here!" she muttered, half to herself.

She felt his hand upon her arm; the touch sent a wild tremor through her entire frame. It was as if in her wrought-up state, an electric wire had touched her, imparting strange currents which, with waves of magnetism, dragged her close within their field, while simultaneously repelling her with an unknown fear. Feebly she resisted, but his grip tightened, "pulling her across the threshold."

"The natives are watching!" he muttered in her ear.

His torch showed the interior to be small and bare, the sole contents being two rolls of reed-matting or "tapestry." Loosing her, he fixed the torch in the ground and took up one of these heaps.

"They roll themselves in this, to sleep," he said. "It will make a substitute for a door."

She mechanically helped him to fix it across the opening. Like revellers in a Continental carnival, the natives were too much excited to settle down for the night; the noise outside was still boisterous.

Alan, the same primitive tingling in his blood, talked rather wildly as he arranged the cover.

"We are savages now! Conventions don't count here. As you remarked, these may henceforth be our sole companions. And they regard you as my wife—remember!" Finishing his job, he turned round, his eyes glittering in the dim light. "You must play up, too, for—your own sake. . . . What is it, Barbara. . . . What's the matter? Why—do you look at me—like that?"

"We—we—can't stay—here!" she muttered again, not moving in his grasp.

"But we—we've shared a hut before—all these weeks! Why are you afraid now? Tell me!" He bent over her.

"Tell me, Barbara. . . ."

"I can't. . . . I don't know. . . . I—I'm not. . . . Desperately she tried to withdraw her hands and eyes from his. She felt powerless, as if she were slipping down some precipice into roaring torrents which would engulf her, sweep her away from every known landmark. This was utterly different from that other night's fear. Then it had been fear of him, and tangible. Now it was subtle, terrifying, and—of herself, in some strange way.

He drew her suddenly closer; but, with all the strength of her will, she flung herself back in his grasp.

"Don't—touch me! I don't—understand—Oh. . . . Alan—help us both!"

The cry was one of desperation. It startled him. For a long moment he gazed deep within her darkened eyes, the blood mounting in his face, throbbing in his temples, his very lips trembling. Then, almost violently, but with a strange look of exultation, he let her go.

"I'll go and see if—all's safe outside," he stammered.

She heard him leave the hut; and she sank down in the far corner, trembling violently. . . . She heard him enter later; and she buried her head in her arms.

He threw himself down across the threshold without a word.

From outside, the noise of the revellers still came to their ears, growing gradually fainter. . . . and fainter. . . . until, at last, silence fell.

VIII

After that memorable night, Barbara and Alan had walked back together early next morning, Alan for the most part silent, Barbara talking feverishly of the natives' feast, music, rites—anything to prevent awkward pauses. From that day another paradoxical phase opened before them. For, though they now had many surface interests in common to heighten their companionship, the wall between was yet more strengthened. And, this time, it was the girl who unconsciously built up the crumbling bricks with hasty fingers, not daring to look at that yawning precipice beyond.

From a pocket-book diary they were able to keep count of the days and nights which flitted by so rapidly now. The natives left them alone; save when, at Croft's command, or swords, spears, implements. Only one, as he knew well, still hid defiance under the cloak of submission, biding his time.

Thus, for a while, all danger seemed past. Barbara, blissfully unconscious of any flaw in this part of friendship, lost her fear of these childlike folk. Having proved the effect of a random shot from the revolver, she felt safe.

One evening, shortly before Christmas day, having prepared their supper, she wandered down to the shore, waiting for Alan's arrival. Sitting idle upon a rock, she watched the spray and foam glistening in the sunshine against the distant reef, her thoughts occupied by a variety of small things—chief among them being a cottonless future! The constant mending of their combined wardrobe had drained her slender resources of thread. Pins had been resorted to that day. Alan sat on one and swore loudly; she smiled lingeringly over the recollection. . . .

Her face sobered and she leaned forward, then rose quickly to her feet. Slowly moving through the clear water, not far from the shore, appeared a large gray outline suggesting in its general shape an airship. Barbara drew in her breath quickly, watching the silent bulk glide slowly by until, making a large circuit, it disappeared in the direction of the reef.

It was, she guessed, a shark.

For the first time the remembrance dawned upon her of islands in the Pacific ocean being often shark-infested; the recollection brought, in a flash, full realization of the risks Alan took when he swam with her to land.

With another chaotic tumult of mind, she remembered Alan's further risks when saving all necessities for their comfort, his stubborn refusal of her offers of help, his stringent commands against bathing in the lagoon. . . . She realized, too, his consideration in not mentioning this horrible danger to add to her dread of those which already menaced their lives.

A wave of gratitude—or admiration—swept over her, and she covered her face, hiding the hot involuntary blush, shutting out the sudden, unbearable glory of sky and sea. . . .

Presently, lowering her hands, she turned her glowing face inland. . . . With a gasp, she grew rigid.

A heavy cloud of smoke hung in dense plumes over the hilltop! Even as she looked, a long jagged flame leapt up. . . . then another, and another. . . . The beacon was on fire! She gazed at it, fascinated. What did it mean? Rescue at last? The rescue for which they had looked, and longed, and lived, all these weeks and months. . . . Suddenly, like a heavy cloak, all the previous excitement and exultation fell from her.

A feeling as of a cold wind, full of vague foreboding, chilled her heart in that warm evening air.

Anyway, both man and woman now have the same thoughts and feelings. What next?

NATURELAND NEWS

Billie Brownie sat down and commenced to read aloud the latest copy of the Natureland News.

Mr. Gray Squirrel Had a Banquet.

"The weather will be different at different times," he read. "Some days it will be cold, other days it will be warm, but on the whole the weather report is satisfactory. The weather will have variety and interest for all at one time or another. 'And now,' Billie Brownie said, 'I must read the Personal Items.' 'Mr. Robin is expecting to leave the South before long. He has had a delightful autumn and early winter and has met many old friends. 'Mr. Gray Squirrel had a banquet last night of nuts which he had put under the snow last fall. It was a splendid banquet. Covers were set for many and a good time was had by all. 'The animals in the zoo are eating a great deal during the cold weather and find their appetites excellent. They have a good cook, but they ask their friends in other zoos not to call him away. They would like to keep him. 'The opossums are still up to their own tricks and will not change until they find others which are better. 'Up to now they think their own tricks are very clever, particularly the one about pretending not to be alive when an enemy comes near, or else pretending to be sound asleep. 'Mr. Woodchuck has not decided whether he will see his shadow or not when he peeps forth from his sleeping quarters in the near future. 'He says all the people like to take his photograph then and to write about him in the newspapers. 'He is also known as Mr. Groundhog, he states. 'Mr. Groundhog's cousin, residing in sunshine. 'Sometimes people use the word 'admire them. They only friends and no enemies, which was very delightful. 'Their winter dreams are now of the sweetest. 'King Snow and the Icicle Girls and Old Man Winter and Madame Snow and Prince Sleet have all sent word that they are going to remain around a little longer anyway. 'What is meant by that 'anyway' we cannot quite tell. 'The Snow Jewellers wish to run an advertisement about their Snow Crystals. They say they have the finest collection ever brought together and that the prices are reasonable and the Jewels exquisite. 'Their advertisement is to be found on the left-hand side of this paper.' Billie Brownie showed it to every one. Then he continued reading: 'The Donkey family held a braying contest the other day. Each he-hawed so well that all were specially deserving of the prize, but no one received it, because no one was better than the others. 'Mr. Fly rubbed his wings with his two hind legs and went a-calling the other day. 'No one wanted to see him, but that did not bother Mr. Fly. Nor will he mind what we say about him in our valuable paper. 'His manners are as bad as ever. And he was not a welcome visitor. 'Everyone had hoped that there would be no flies for a long time. But, Mr. Fly found his way to a warm house on a warm day quite a warm place. He said 'I wish to call on other friends on the way.' Billie Brownie folded up the

THE STATE OF TEXAS.

To the Sheriff or any Constable of Terrell County—Greeting—

You are hereby commanded that you summon, by making publication of this Citation in some newspaper published in the County of Terrell if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then in a newspaper published in the nearest County to said Terrell County, for four consecutive weeks previous to the return day hereof, Francisco Aragon whose residence is unknown, to be and appear before the next regular term thereof to be holden in the County of Terrell at the Court House thereof, in Sanderson, Texas, on the Fourth Monday in January, 1925, the same being the 25th day of January, A. D. 1925, then and there to answer a Petition filed in said Court, on the 17th day of December, A. D. 1924, in said Court No. 1666, wherein said Court No. 1666, wherein Francisco Aragon is plaintiff and Francisca Aragon is defendant. The nature of the plaintiff's demand being as follows, to-wit: Suit for divorce.

Plaintiff alleges that he and defendant were lawfully married on or about the 25th day of May 1921; that they continued to live together as husband and wife until about the 30th day of June, 1921, when they were permanently separated; that during the time plaintiff and defendant lived together as husband and wife, plaintiff was kind and affectionate to her, but defendant, unmindful of her marital duties and obligations, began a course of unkind, cruel, harsh and tyrannical treatment against plaintiff which continued until on or about the last mentioned date, when defendant went away with and lived in adultery with an Indian man whose name is unknown to plaintiff; that defendant without any cause or provocation on the part of plaintiff left plaintiff's house, bed and board and has remained away for a space of time more than three years; alleges that plaintiff's actions and conduct toward defendant, are generally of such a nature as to render their further living together as husband and wife insupportable, the premises considered.

Plaintiff prays for a judgment dissolving the marriage relations between him and defendant, for cost of suit, etc.

Herein fail not, and have you before said Court, on the said first day of the next term thereof, of this Writ, with your endorsement thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand and seal of said Court, at office in Sanderson, Texas, this, the 17th day of December, A. D. 1924.

(Seal) LUELLA LEMONS, Clerk. District Court Terrell County, Texas.

THE STATE OF TEXAS

To the Sheriff or any Constable of Terrell County, Greeting—

You are hereby commanded to summon Ruth Gallos, whose residence is unknown, by making publication of this citation in some newspaper published in the County of Terrell, if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then in a newspaper published in the nearest county to said Terrell County for four consecutive weeks previous to the return date hereof, to be and appear before the Hon.
