Sanderson's Rodeo a Success

Sanderson's 2nd Rodeo which was held June 3 and 4 was a decided success.

Thursday, the first day, opened with a big parade in which cowboys, cowgirls and decorated cars participated. The prize, a $10 gold piece for the best representation in the parade went to Mrs. W. A. Banner and Doc Turk who represented the old time riders, a $10 gold piece went to Miss Mahlon Couch for the best decorated car.

In the horse race, the winner of the 3 year old Maiden Race was "Pickaninny," with "Montie" 2nd and "Flapper" 3rd. In the 300 yard dash "Lilly B" won first, "Henry" 2nd and "Crip" 3rd. The Free-For-All was won by "Catherine Pankin" 1st; 2nd, "Henry" 3rd, "Davis." From the race the crowd went to the Court House lawn where delicious barbecued meat, bread, pickles, onions, coffee and all that goes with a barbecue dinner awaited them. There was plenty of eats for the large crowd and all did ample justice.

At 1:30 the crowd gathered at the ball park where the main show took place. The steer riding contest was the first on the program which was very thrilling and some of the best riders to be found rode. The winning riders were: 1st, Lyn Welch; 2nd, G. Jolly; 3rd, Damon Persinger. In the next event, the wild bronco riding, there were broncos that meant business and they had riders who stayed with 'em and gave them a ride. Winners in this event were: Chief Corrells of Oklahoma, 1st; "Shorty" Rutledge of Marathon 2nd; Louis Babb of Langtry 3rd. In the goat roping some good work was done showing excellent skill on both roper and horse. Winners were: 1st, Charlie Norton, 12 flat; 2nd, Allen Holder, 14 flat; Walter Babb, 3rd, time 14 4-5. Again in the calf roping the crowd witnessed good riding and roping. Time in this event was: 1st, Buck Means, 23 flat; 2nd, Henry Means 23 1 5; 3rd, Roy Rutledge, 30 flat. In the wild mare roping contest Anja Wilson and Charlie Norton won 1st; Buck Means and Elmer Jones 2nd; Grover King and Boye Babb 3rd. The wild cow milking was very exciting which was won by Elmer Jones and Ad Eddings, 1st; Charlie Norton and G. Means, 2nd; Anja Wilson and Buck Means, 3rd. "Blackie" Russell gave an exhibition bull-dogging that was good and a hard feat to accomplish. Another good ride was when Grady Jolly rode a wild steer with a mane hold. The huge crowd also witnessed exhibition riding of steers by three 15 year old boys, Busty Edwards and Jack Sellers of Del Rio and Bobby Jones of Oklahoma City. These youthful riders gave exhibitions both days. The day ended with a big dance on an open air platform with music furnished by the Lone Star Dance Entertainers of San Angelo.

Friday, the second day, found everyone eager to see the Rodeo more so than ever, and also found more visitors here. The morning quickly passed with the horse race which started the day off. The 1/4 mile Free-For-All race found several good entrants, "Black Beauty" 1st; "Catherine Rankin" 2nd; "Crip" 3rd. The afternoon program started off with steer riding which was won by Jack Jolly 1st; Grady Jolly 2nd; C. A. Norton 3rd. Bronco riding, 1st Blackie Russell; 2nd Chief Corrells; 3rd Grady Jolly. Goat roping: 1st, Elmer Jones 11 3-5; 2nd, Allen Holden, 12-1; 3rd, Walter Babb, 12 2 5. Calf roping: 1st, Walter Babb 22 4-5; Cole Means, 24 flat; 3rd Elmer Jones 24 3-5. Wild cow milking: 1st, Elmer Jones and Ad Eddings; 2nd, Buck Means and Anja Wilson; 3rd, Charlie Norton and "Shorty" Rutledge.

Due to the good roping and riding and helping the handling of the riders thus avoiding no accidents during the rodeo, Boye Babb is to be congratulated upon his skill in such events.

Fully 1000 visitors were in attendance here, and everyone present spoke well of the rodeo and all had a good time. Credit to the success of the rodeo is due to the promoters, Grover King and Ed. Downie.

Mrs. W. H. Savage visited in Del Rio this week.

GRIGSBY-LEA
Miss Lillimae Lea and Mr. Gerald Grigsby were quietly married Saturday evening, June 5, by Rev. A. M. Hines at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Attaway.

The bride is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Lea. She is a young woman of attractive personality and versed in the art of home making.

The groom is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Grigsby and is pumper of the G. H. & S. A. Ry. Co. His steady habits and manly character bespeak of his future happiness. Following several days in Del Rio the young couple returned and will make this city their future home.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL
AT THE AGE OF 83

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many con-sidered infants and children had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he did not believe that a steeking "purge" or "physic" was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even if the child is chronically con-stituted. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy

THOUGHT MALARIA STILL IN SYSTEM

Until Dodson's Liver Tone Drove Out Quarts of Sour Bile and Other Poisons.

There are entire sections where everyone seems to think they have malaria. Others believe they never fully got the malarial poison out of their systems.

Arnold Whitson says: "For years I took calomel for the aches, biliousness, headache, constipation and the deathly feeling associated with what we believed to be malaria.

"Last year I heard about Dodson's Liver Tone and bought a bottle for a few cents. Man, man, what a Godsend. In the morning it drove out quarts of black, sour bile. I got back my appetite for food, braced right up and haven't had a sick spell since. When-ever I feel a little bilious or the stom-ach gets sour, one dose of Dodson's Liver Tone is all I need. It is surely a blessing."

Hundreds of others tell the same experience.

Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dod-son's Liver Tone acts better than hor-rible calomel your money is waiting for you.

Dr. Caldwell's SYRUP PEPSIN

Child Handicapped by Modern Parents' Lack of Sympathy and Understanding

By PROF. JOHN ERSKINE, Noted Author.

LIFE for the average parent ceases at the age of thirty, when he forgets he ever was a child. The present generation of par-ents are a necessary evil and more evil than necessary.

Instead of taking an interest in the child and seeking to become his companion, most parents are satisfied if the child gets through life without doing any damage to the family reputation or to himself. The tragedy of Shelley's life was that he was a renegade to the honor of the family name.

The legend that children owe their parents anything is false. Not even before they made our acquaintance did they owe us anything, and after they know us they can hardly owe us much. Our ideas about chil-dren are inherited. The fact is that our children are either our com-panions or they are not.

The modern child is packed off to school at an early age, when he is eager to be the companion of his parents, and it is only after he has finished college that he is considered fit to associate with them. By that time he has lost interest in his elders and would rather associate with people of his own age.

Or, if the parent does approach the child, it is not to show an in-terest in what he is learning, but to talk morality. As a matter of fact, the New Testament says a lot more about living than it does about morals. When the parents begin to preach morals the case is hopeless.

The present generation of children are healthier than in the past. The modern boys and girls are, therefore, beautiful to look at. But look at them, don't try to talk to them.

About the only hope for the present generation lies in those arts which we like so much that we cannot stop practicing them. Of these the principal one is dancing, which practically everybody enjoys. But any other art will do. If the children like anything, the parents should encourage them to practice it and make it an art, for when you practice an art and carry it right through, good behavior and fastidiousness of character are bound to follow.

Psychology Test of Highest Value in Revealing Extraordinary Talent

By PROF. CARL C. BRIGHAM, Princeton University.

The psychological test for determining intelligence is no more in-fallible than the old-fashioned written examination. A low score in a psy-chological test should not be considered an educational death warrant. One of the greatest benefits of such tests lies in their value in revealing extraordinary talents.

We find psychological tests of the greatest use in locating talent—in discovering men of exceptional promise. We do not find that they are negatively significant—that is, that low scores necessarily mean dullness or incompetence.

On the other hand, we do feel that high scores are significant, for they are demonstrably associated with academic work of a high order after admission, if conditions are favorable for the realization of the latent ability thus manifested.

The psychological test will reveal possibilities of development that cannot be explained by conventional measures of attainment in school subjects. When used positively for locating talent they are most helpful.

Of course, a group test of intelligence is a rather crude measure, and one is certain that when three or four hundred men are examined in one room at the same time, that some cases of undoubted ability will not be discovered. But every case actually discovered is an asset to society whose potential worth cannot be measured or estimated.

Would Eliminate the Term "Sex Appeal" From Motion Picture Industry

By CLARENCE BROWN, Motion Picture Producer.

The expression "sex appeal" should be eliminated from the movies. The term, wrongly applied, is proving a destructive force to the picture industry. In place of the much-abused expression I recommend "personal magnetism."

Although it is patent that the appeal of the sexes is the basis of life and of romance, the structure on which almost every motion picture is built, the commonly used phrase has an ugly sound, implying to the mind of the average person something unsavory and unclean.

Because of its common usage in connection with motion pictures, those hypercritical persons who refuse to believe that there can be any-thing good in pictures have been far too willing to take the expression, "sex appeal," at its worst, and on their false assumption have denounced picture-makers in general as panders of the unclean.

Today the motion picture stands on a pedestal of respectability—in cleanliness of thought and expression far ahead of the stage or of modern literature. Despite carping criticism to the contrary, the producers are striving to attain even a higher degree of artistry and wholesomeness.

If we must refer to the appeal underlying all life and romance, then let's call it by another title, but with the same meaning. I suggest the phrase "personal magnetism."

Response to Urge of the Primitive of Benefit to All, at Times

By F. H. COLLIER, St. Louis Newspaper Writer.

It requires some strength of mind to hold fast to the ideal that we are on earth to live and not to keep up with the latest mechanical in-ventions. One doesn't care to be hustled through life by machinery.

Anyone with a trace of old humanity (old Adam) in him feels the urge of the primitive at times—with its silences and its yet unsolved mysteries. The ticking of a clock is then click-clack enough for a mind that rejoices in serenity. Blessed it is to be where wheels are not mak-ing some kind of a roar and all you have of that description is a cataract or the wind in the tops of the big trees; and to be dimly conscious of lesser sounds seemingly unheard because they are part of nature's har-monious chorus day and night.

Nor is a man a visionary and an impracticable who craves and seeks a period of "recovery from civilization," brief or extended, some-time in the year. The cities must carry on, but they need not carry you off. Through the hard days of toil in them, memory can keep vivid the blue, far-off vistas—a memory which vitalizes the soul. Work loses nothing by being valued only as an interval between outings; and the thought makes it less arduous, cheers its daily grind and, truth to tell, gets it better done.

Shin Guards Worn by Yankee Pitchers

In Boston the Yankees saw Paul Zahnlser get bumped on the shins and have a bone in his ankle chipped. Then they went to Washington and saw Joe Bush get clipped on the knee with a ball that came back at him with lightning-like speed.

So now, whenever the Yank twirlers are pitching in batting practice they wear catchers' shin guards. They think the time is not far off before all pitchers will wear some sort of a shin guard.

RUCKER ONE OF BIG SOUTHPAWS

Lasted More Than 10 Years in National League.

It was in 1907 that Nap Rucker, then young, made his first appear-ance in big league circles. A very unsophisticated youngster was this southpaw variety of a Georgia Peach when he landed in Brooklyn. It was the first trip north of Mason & Dix-on line he ever had taken. He con-tracted a kink in his neck looking up at the tall buildings of Greater New York, for they were consider-ably higher than the ones he had been used to gazing at down Alphetret-way.

Nap had been a teammate of Ty Cobb's during 1904 and 1905. He never had the pleasure of pitching against the other Peach, consequen-ly never found out by actual test just how hard Ty could hit a ball. Ty, on the other hand, never found out just how well Nap could pitch and what a swell hurler he was. However, both became famous.

Rucker was one of the twelve hurlers of the southpaw brand who survived more than ten years of big league pitching. During his time with the Brooklyn club, the only club he was with, he pitched wonderful ball, but the team during that period was a chronic second division outfit and in only the last two seasons of his career did it move up in the race and in 1916 won a pennant, but Nap was doing his farewell stunt, for that great left arm was all in. It was the honor he had waited long for but came too late, although he pitched two innings in one of the games and did nobly.

September 2, 1908, Rucker pitched one of the greatest no-hit, no-run games ever recorded. Boston failed to make a hit or run and in the nine innings he didn't issue a run or pass or have a pitching error of any kind. To crown this brilliant work he fanned fourteen batsmen. His team mates marred the record by making two errors.

July 24, 1906, Rucker equaled the modern day strikeout record when he fanned sixteen of the St. Louis Cardinals in nine innings. To add a little more class to this feat he held the Cards to a pair of singles.

The prince of Wales will open a new race track at Chesport, England, in August, with classic races to be known as the Welsh derby, Oakes and St. Leger.

The Oxford-Cambridge crew race is the oldest sporting event in which big colleges annually meet each other. They first met in 1829 at Henley, and since then there have been a series of 78 races.

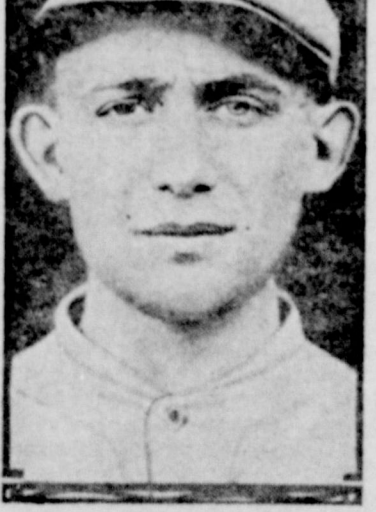

D. L. Meehan, who led Columbia uni-versity to an intercollegiate basket-ball league title in his first year as head coach, and Paul Mooney, his assistant, will again coach the Lion five during the 1926 campaign.

Roland R. MacKenzie of Washing-ton, D. C., a member of the Walker cup team, is nineteen years old. He is the youngest champion to have the honor of competing in the matches in Scotland this year.

Charley Hoff, premier Norwegian pole vaulter, boosted his world's in-door pole-vault record to 13 feet 8 inches at the Washington university interscholastic indoor track meet re-cently held in St. Louis, Mo.

Many American women own and race thoroughbred horses, but Mrs. Herman B. Duryea, widow of the noted turfman of that name, confines herself to breeding at her stud farm in Nor-mandy.

Pitcher Art Neff, veteran left-hander of the New York Giants, has been purchased by Cincinnati. The purchase price was not given.

Cities Paid $18,816,000 for Play in Year 1925

American grownups, reputed by their foreign cousins to be chiefly in-terested in money grabbing, are learn-ing how to play more every year.

In the year book of the Playground and Recreation Association of Amer-ica, published recently, an expenditure of $18,816,105.55 is shown by cities of the United States and Canada.

Public golf, which five years ago was not important enough to list in the year book, is now played in more than 150 cities. Tennis courts totaled 6,110 in 474 cities in 1925, as against 4,985 in 410 cities in 1924.

Swimming pools primarily for adult use more than doubled in the last five years and now total 879. Five hun-dred more quota courts were reported in 1925 than in 1924. Ball fields, ath-letic fields, picnic grounds, and skating places also show big increases.

Public recreation was originally a children's movement, but today every-where east of the Rockies except in North Carolina and Florida practically 50 per cent of the participants in mu-nicipal sports and other recreations are adults.

Tris Speaker Consistent Hitter

This Speaker, veteran manager and center fielder of the Cleveland Indians, has fallen below the 300 mark in batting just once. That was in 1919, the year he succeeded Lee Fohl as pilot. Speaker hit 296 that season.

Though he has been in the big show continuously since the latter part of 1908, Spenser has topped the league's batters on only one occasion. He turned the trick in 1916, beating Cobb out after a hectic struggle.

Speaker's triumph, by the way, brought a temporary halt to Cobb's sensational string of clotting championships that had run to nine.

Sporting Squibs

Polo players frequently pay as much as $10,000 for a pony.

Washington (D. C.) municipal golf links are ready for play at 5 a. m.

The average football player in Eng-land participates in fifty or more con-tests each season.

A league composed of six teams has been formed in Sacramento, Calif., to play polo on roller skates.

The Canada vs. Cuba Davis cup ten-nis match will be played in Cuba late in July or early in August next.

A Philadelphia rowing organization, known as the Schuykill Navy, has be-gun a campaign to boost the sport in the schools.

Another matter that ought to be looked into before the year is much older is who is going to deliver ice this summer in Wheaton, Ill.

BASEBALL NOTES

Bill Klein has started his twenty-second year as a baseball umpire.

By making ten home runs in a game, Philadelphia and St. Louis set the major league record in 1923.

Chester Fowler, Red Sox infielder, has been released to the Minneapolis club of the American association.

Stanford and University of Wash-ington may send their baseball nines on a joint tour of Japan this fall.

Bob Fothergill, Detroit outfielder, is the fastest fat man in the major leagues. He is also one of the most aggressive.

Before the baseball season is fur-ther advanced, the elite fan would like to know whether the pitcher uses resin or rosin.

Manager Art Fletcher of the Phil-lies looks for a great season from Wayland Dean, young hurler obtained in a trade from the Giants.

The major league record for the largest score in a single game was established when Chicago beat Phila-delphia, 26 to 23, in 1922.

When the Louisville ball team ac-cumulated twenty-five hits in one game it must have been trying to set aside a surplus for later in the season.

Ira Flagstead of the Boston Red Sox is generally the starter of all Boston rallies, and Todd, first base-man, is usually there with the finish-ing touches.

It isn't very often that a batter in the major leagues strikes out and yet gets to first base in safety, as was the case when Catcher Collins of the New York Americans dropped a third strike.

Harry Wolter, a Coast league star some years back, has signed as play-ing manager of the Logan team of the new Utah-Idaho league. He will take a number of youngsters from South-ern California to Logan with him.

COMPLICATIONS

SYNOPSIS.—Traveling by canoe on the Mississippi, on his way to Biloxi, in the early days of the settlement of Louisiana, William Brampton, English spy, known to Indians and settlers as the "White Indian," sees a "White Indian" post a declaration of war against the French. For his own purpose, he hastens to Biloxi to carry the news to Bienville, French governor. Brampton meets an old friend, Joe Labrador, Indian half-breed, who warns him Bienville has threatened to hang him as a spy. Brampton refuses to turn back. He falls in with Jules and Basile Mattor, on their way to Biloxi to secure wives from a ship, the Maire, bringing women from France. At Biloxi Brampton protects a woman from a sergeant's brutality. She tells him she is Claire Dahlgarde, picked up in a raid in Paris. Evidently well bred and educated, she is a mystery to Brampton. He intervenes to prevent a man, English, known as "Old Six Fingers," following her to New Orleans. A Frenchman, Francois Narbonne, slightly demented by stories he has heard of the riches of the New World, introduces himself. Bienville accuses Brampton of treachery, but the latter secures a respite from death by revealing the Natchez declaration of war. He is to await the arrival of a former companion, Damoan the Fox, who will exonerate or condemn him. Damoan has documents proving Brampton an English spy. Brampton receives a message from Claire, begging him to help her reach the English settlements. Brampton trusts Narbonne with a note to Claire, promising to meet her at New Orleans. He plans his escape. After a struggle Brampton wrests the incriminating papers from Damoan and escapes from Biloxi. He meets the Mattors and they go to New Orleans in a sailing packet. At the landing place Brampton again encounters Joe Labrador, whom he sends to bring Claire to him. Brampton questions her closely, but she will tell him little of her history. With Labrador, Brampton and Claire leave in two canoes for the English settlements. Claire turns out to be a creature of moods and a terrible handicap in a race for life.

CHAPTER VII—Continued

"One must catch the fish first," was the quiet response. "Besides, I placed the wood on the blaze monster started. The coals will be ready."

"All the wood?" I sharply demanded.

She bridled at my tone. A tug at my line demanded my attention. After a brief fight I landed a catfish.

She waited until I had secured my hook and coiled my line; then she said:

"The wood was to burn?"

"Yes, yes. But not all at once. A little at a time."

"I was not to know without being told," she said with much dignity. "If monsieur will be explicit another time perhaps I will do better. But wood! La! La! There is nothing but wood. Surely one does not have to be sparing of wood in this land!"

I hesitated whether to explain the danger of big fires and much smoke

I Darted My Gaze on the River. I Discovered Nothing Until She Stood Close at My Side and Pointed a Finger.

being seen by an enemy, or to wait and after acting as my own fire-tender for a while, see if she did not learn her lesson by observation.

"If we have finished with the matter of the fire," she quietly resumed, "I would like to ask monsieur the meaning of that object which floats upstream across the dying patch of sunlight."

I darted my gaze on the river. I discovered nothing until she stood close at my side and pointed a finger; then I saw it, a canoe, far out and presumably hunting for dead water on the opposite shore.

"Indians. Probably Humas. We are in their country," I told her.

"Are they wicked? Will they trouble us?" she demanded, glancing up into my face.

"Not a bit." Nor was I afraid of Indians, for I had many friends among the river-people, including the Humas.

Returning my gaze to the river I was troubled to observe the canoe was making no progress toward the opposite shore. And only white men, ignorant of the river, would strike the edge of the mighty current and barely hold their own, when easy paddling would be enjoyed along the shore.

"Now one can hardly see them," she cried.

"We'll go back and cook our fish," I said. The canoe was heading toward us, thus making it appear to be a speck. And I had no doubt the smoke from our generous fire had attracted the voyagers' attention. If Damoan and his companions were on the same side with us the intervening forest would prevent his seeing the smoke. It was his manito against mine, and I was hampered by an irresponsible girl-woman.

CHAPTER VIII

What the Smoke Brought.

Even if the distant canoe was making for our smoke I did not see how I could break camp and hide in the forest, or take to the pirogue. Had I been alone the problem of avoiding the two men would have been child's play; but the girl would hold me back in the woods, while to continue in the pirogue would bring the men upon us. I was convinced they could not be some of Damoan's men, and this belief reconciled me somewhat to meeting them. On reaching the fire I hurriedly cleaned the fish. The girl watched my preparations with a little grimace. I feared she was overfastidious.

I broiled the fish on the coals and served it on two clean pieces of bark. She sat back from the fire and tentatively nibbled at some smoked meat but refused the fish. This was an arraignment of my rough-and-ready cooking, and provoking because she had made no offer to do the squaw-work herself. I was beginning to realize how entirely useless this young person was when it came to caring for herself. For one raised in poverty the instinct of self-preservation seemed to be meagerly developed; of course, her hands should have told me that at the beginning.

She eyed the tough smoked meat disapprovingly; then bravely remarked:

"The fire burned well."

"Exceedingly well, mademoiselle!"

Another, and a longer pause; then she was timidly remarking:

"There came to me the absurd notion that monsieur was displeased because I used the wood. But I tell myself there is much wood, enough for all France. Also, the more wood the more coals. What have I done that is wrong?"

"Nothing that is wrong. Only, this fire—I asked the wood to be fed on a little at a time. You put it all on at once."

"But it made a good fire, monsieur. You have said it yourself. I fear you are overnice in your exactions."

"I only mention it because the heavy smoke is drawing the strange canoe to our shore, and soon we shall have visitors," I gently explained. "I would have said nothing this time, but I did not want mademoiselle to be taken by surprise, and, perhaps, alarmed."

"This awful country, where the simplest act may bring death!" she dramatically whispered.

I smiled reassuringly.

"Hardly death, or we would not be here waiting. It is nothing—these strangers coming. I only mention them so mademoiselle will not be startled."

"You have your musket close my your side, as if you feared! I, too, will be ready."

And she pulled the sheathed dirk from her bosom and allowed it to hang outside her blouse. Then as an inspiration: "But the log boat! We should hide it. Then they could not find us."

"Now that they have seen the smoke it is better that they find us," I answered. "If we should disappear they would find the fire, and they would go on up the river and tell of the desert-camp. It would be bad for them to tell such news to Damoan the Fox."

"Finishing my fish, I took my gun and said:

"Mademoiselle's courage is fine. She will sit where she is while I withdraw to one side."

"I do not understand," she faltered.

"By this time the two men will be landing near our pirogue. They will reconnoiter cautiously. I must get them to the fire to see who they are, to make sure they carry no tales ahead of us."

"But would you leave me here alone?"

"Only as bait for the trap into which they must walk. As soon as they break cover I will be by your side."

"Monsieur does not go far away?"

"Only inside the trees. Have courage. Nothing shall harm you."

"I am not afraid of men," she coldly replied, now sitting very erect. "It is the land, the great river, the unnamable loneliness, that brings fear. But I shall not disgrace you."

pleasure to speak with mademoiselle again. I am in your debt."

The girl now shyly advanced and extended a hand to Narbonne, saying:

"I have the brave Frenchman to thank again."

The absurd fellow was all but kneeling as he reverently kissed the slim hand, his cap gathering more grime from the forest-mold. And I was poyed to observe how calmly she accepted his homage. She retired to her log, pulling us along after her by the exquisite charm of her manner. It caused me grim amusement, and some chagrin, to realize she waited until Narbonne was present before exercising the height of her charms. With a glance to make sure Six Fingers was not within hearing she confessed:

"Messieurs, I am much afraid of that man."

Narbonne bowed and turned to leave us, but I seized his arm and detained him. He roughly shook off my grasp and whispered:

"Did you not hear? I have endured the little beast, but surely mademoiselle should not be annoyed."

She understood this play and was between us. "If you have respect for the women of France you will dismiss me."

Spokane Is Run for One Week by Its Girls

For a week the girls of Spokane, Wash., ruled supreme in the northwest city. They held all administrative offices, preached in the city pulpits, worked in great industrial plants and wound the week up with a huge parade. Even the post office was turned over to them, and the photograph shows a group loading a mail truck under the direction of the postmaster and his clerks.

such black thoughts from your mind," she murmured. "Of course I feel no fear when you two are with me."

To me her fear of Six Fingers was incomprehensible. He was only a senile old spider of a man, who could do no mischief beyond hurling a knife and guzzling brandy.

Narbonne surrendered his purpose of seeking Six Fingers and putting him to the sword, and said:

"The old thief goes with me to the land of Acanibas, where his pirate's soul can revel over hills of gold. He will not discommodate mademoiselle. We two will push on ahead."

I feared for Six Fingers' treacherous old tongue if he fell in with Damoan. It was not my plan to have him ahead of me, spreading the news of our coming.

"Our ways, monsieur, are the same for many leagues," I said. "It is my wish that you and your companion travel in our company."

With a side-glance I directed the girl to second the invitation. She returned my look rather defiantly, but was warm and gracious in adding:

"I also ask it. You will not refuse me, monsieur?"

"God pity a madness which would permit me to refuse you, mademoiselle," he piously exclaimed. "Now we will take the creature from the brandy, or the king of Acanibas will go with a dry throat. It is incredible, monsieur, the amount of drink that withered old man can hold."

"Of course you do not really believe there is any land called Acanibas?"

"No Acanibas? Impossible."

"There is no such land, monsieur. I have been through the region—the Falls of St. Anthony—where he located the fairyland. It was not there. It never was there."

"Mon Dieu!" he muttered, wiping his forehead. "Is there anything true about this country?"

"All you have seen is true. It continues the same to the Great Lakes in the north. Wild waters. Wild woods. Wild men and beasts. No diamonds. No gold or silver as yet found. No giants nor dwarfs. No place where the Indians are anything but Indians. No land of plenty until you clear the ground, plant and reap."

Nothing but disaster can come to such an ill-assorted party. What will the disaster be?

SHOULD HUSBANDS DO HOUSE WORK?

How Mrs. Dyer Solved the Problem.

Mrs. Mildred Dyer was lucky. She had a good natured husband who helped her with much of her housework. Because she was in ill health for five years, it was often necessary for him to do this. But it bothered Mrs. Dyer. She felt that he had to work hard enough anyway. The time he spent in doing her work was needed for his own. She determined to find the road to better health.

She writes: "I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is simply wonderful. My health is better than it has ever been. I am getting stronger and gaining in weight." She has solved her problem and her household is happier. The Dyers live at Redlands, Calif., Route A, Box 153. How often does your husband have to do your housework? No matter how willing he is, no woman feels comfortable about it. Perhaps you, too, will find better health through the faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

SMART TAILORED MILLINERY; OUTFITTING LITTLE FOLKS

PARIS sends us, in terms of these five fascinating, new street hats, the latest word of five world-famous modistes as to tailored millinery. They are gossipy messages, all of them emphasizing the disappearance of the mannish note in headwear and the return of dignified types in street clothes.

One glance at this little galaxy of stars in the millinery sky, reveals that the combination of straw braids and millinery fabrics makes a strong appeal to French designers. Every one of these models is an example of fabrics used in the body of the hat, and quick and economical production, high-speed power machines and expert operators. Mothers cannot compete with this quantity production of little garments that are well made and of sturdy materials. The fields of hand-made clothes and tailored things are different and thereby hangs another story.

There are few style changes in little tots' clothes from season to season. Designers vary the patterns in materials used and the decorations, or promote certain colors and fabrics, but the same dependable cottons, linens and silks reappear every season. In

GROUP OF TAILORED HATS

In three out of five, fabric and straw are combined to make the shape.

The group pictured, leads off with a black satin hat faced with milan straw. The shape is in line with the big majority of others intended for street wear and turns up at the back. Rose foliage is arranged about the crown and a few leaves extend to the crown on the right side, where a single rose is posed on the brim. Rose foliage is used in flat collars also, with the leaves regular in arrangement (the tip of one overlapping the base of another) and finished with two small, flat roses. Velvet ribbon with silk accents for the hat with draped crown at the left and satin, in three shades, makes the interesting model at the right. The upturned brim with wings at the side, is covered with fine folds of satin, shading cottons this year there are new patterns in the English prints, in voiles and crepes. Plain broadcloth, chambray, poplin, linene and gingham appear in popular colors; batiste and dimity are woven in dainty stripes and cross-bars and percales are shown in quiet colors and inconspicuous stripes or figures. The keynote of the styles in this season's children's clothes is daintiness and neatness. The simplest needlework is used for decorative touches, as feather stitching, scallops, tiny embroidered flowers and outline stitch for sketching amusing figures on pockets. Little from light to darker tone and small blossoms almost cover the side pieces. The most original and spirited hat in the group has a high crown of milan straw and an eccentric taffeta-covered brim that makes the most of the fashionable upward turn at the back. Crisp taffeta ribbon is used in the buoyant bow and drapery. The plainest hat in the group is similar in shape. It is a milan with a brim that folds in a plait at the back and has a collar and facing of satin.

Outfitting little folks has become a simple matter, thanks to the manufacturers of clothes for children. Ready-made things for little tots are so excellent and so low-priced that there is no economy in making their ordinary everyday garments at home. This is accounted for by the stupendous quantities turned out by the factories and by their methods of Japanese figures are popular—lanterns, parrots and people—and so are birds, bunnies, chickens and puppies—done in outline or cross-stitch. For wear on the bench there are coats and capes of cotton toweling or cotton chenille; cut-out flowers or figures in the same fabrics but contrasting colors make amusing decorations for them or pictures representing bench sports are sketched on them with gay-colored cotton floss. Some little beach coats are entirely covered with cut-out applique figures. Bathing suits are knitted in one piece and made usually in bright colors. Sweaters are important items in little folks' outfits, and are shown in all colors, but peach, tan and yellow tones are featured, and overalls are never omitted from the equipment of happy youngsters.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By Mary Graham Bonner

BACON'S ADVENTURE

Brother Bacon had not been successful when he had suggested having birthday parties for himself.

Don't Go Into the Woods.

matured and grown-up pig.

Brother Bacon thought the same about this, too, but there were some of the modern young pigs who had new ideas and who wanted to do things their own way.

Of course Brother Bacon had been given his name by his food mother long, long before.

She had thought of it as a very fine name, and hadn't had the least idea or thought about its being the name of pig when all ready for a person's breakfast.

Well, when Brother Bacon wanted an adventure his mother said to him: "Don't go into the woods. There are many, many dangers there."

"Take a walk if you will and try to grow thin if you think that's nice—but don't, don't go in the woods."

A grunt or two came from Brother Bacon which meant both a good-by and that he'd do as he pleased. For Brother Bacon was far from being always an obedient son.

When his mother said there were dangers in the woods he at once wanted to find them out for himself.

"I'll go to the woods and show them how brave I am and how much I know."

No sooner had he finished saying this than he heard the most awful sound.

Then he shook with fear and started to run—but not far off he saw a great, enormous wild animal.

"Hello, Brother Bacon," said the wild animal, "I've been waiting to make friends with you. I'm sorry you're no plumper, though."

"However, my wolf appetite will be all right."

"You'll do for Mrs. W. for breakfast. Just a tasty breakfast."

"What's that you say?" asked Brother Bacon. "I'd make a nice breakfast for you? Oh, please, save my life."

And poor Brother Bacon squealed for all he was worth.

Well, off he ran and the wolf after him and oh dear, he didn't think his legs would carry any further.

He knew the wolf would catch him.

And then he reached safety.

"Oh dear, I'm all in a tremble. That wolf almost got me."

He looked around and saw that he had been asleep and dreaming.

But he had had enough of an adventure.

From now on the pig pen would be the place for him. Oh yes, he would not want to wander off for adventures.

Some adventures were too dangerous for that. They were too adventures for his liking!

War on Smallpox in China
Peking's great park-like Temple of Heaven enclosure, where emperors worshipped, is now the scene of a free vaccination clinic. In an effort to stamp out smallpox, the scourge of China, the central plague prevention bureau is establishing free vaccination points at various places. A special police order to physicians forbids old-fashioned Chinese vaccination and insists that more sanitary modern methods must be adhered to under penalty of heavy fine.

Autos Destroy Poles
Two telephone poles are destroyed every day in Los Angeles, Calif., in automobile accidents. So says Carl A. Heinz, testifying as the chief engineer of the power system. He was relating the detailed expenses in operating the systems and the loss of poles in automobile crashes was included as an item.

To the Sheriff or any Constable of Terrell County, Greeting:
You are hereby commanded to summon Ramon Escamilla by making publication of this Citation once in each week for four consecutive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county; if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then in the nearest county where a newspaper is published, to be and appear before the Honorable District Court of Terrell County, Texas, at the next regular term thereof, to be held at the courthouse in Sanderson, Texas, the second Monday in July A. D. 1926, same being the 12th day of July A. D. 1926, then and there to answer the Plaintiff's Petition, filed in a suit in said court on the 8th day of June A. D. 1926, wherein Maria Escamilla is plaintiff and Ramon Escamilla is defendant, file number of said suit being No. 1682.

The nature of plaintiff's demand is as follows, to-wit:
Suit for dissolution of marriage relations and divorce, plaintiff alleges that defendant, without any provocation or fault on the part of plaintiff abandoned plaintiff on or about the 31st day of October, 1917, with the intention of permanently abandoning plaintiff; that defendant has failed and refused to continue to fail and refuse to support or contribute to the support of plaintiff and their children, and has failed and refused to support or contribute to the support of said plaintiff and their children for a period of more than three years before the filing of this suit.

Herein fail not, but have you before said court, on the said first day of the next term thereof, this writ, with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

Witness my hand and the seal of said Court, at office in Sanderson, Texas, this 9th day of June, A. D. 1926.

courthouse in Sanderson, Texas, the second Monday in July A. D. 1926, same being the 12th day of July A. D. 1926, then and there to answer the Plaintiff's Petition, filed in a suit in said court on the 9th day of June A. D. 1926, wherein J. H. Snell is plaintiff and A. T. Folsom, Julian M. Bassett, J. D. Nichols, Arthur Earles and the Southwest Texas Oil & Gas Company are defendants, file number of said suit being No. 1683.

The nature of plaintiff's demand is as follows, to-wit:
Suit to foreclose Vendor's Lien on Section No. 62, Certificate No. 35-892, Block A1, Grantee G. H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (H. T. Dodson), the notes being sued on being Notes Numbered 9, 10, 11 and 12, of a series of Twelve Notes dated July 15, 1915, each in the sum of $100.00 respectively, and each bearing interest at the rate of 8 per cent per annum from date until paid, executed by A. T. Folsom, payable on or before July 15, 1924, 1925, 1926 and 1927, respectively, each providing for an additional ten per cent on the principal and interest if placed in the hands of an attorney for collection or collected by legal proceedings, as attorney fees.

Plaintiff alleges that Notes Numbered 9 and 10 are past due and unpaid; that the interest on all four said notes Numbered 9, 10, 11 and 12 is due and unpaid from July 15, 1924, and that by reason of such default in the payment of said principal and interest, plaintiff has declared all of said notes matured due and payable, together with all unpaid interest.

That plaintiff has turned said notes over to G. J. Henshaw, an attorney, for collection and has agreed to pay him the said ten per cent as attorney's fees, which is a reasonable attorney's fee.

The amount of said notes sued on, including interest, attorney's fees and charges which plaintiff has been forced to pay by reason of defendants' default in the payment of said notes, interest and interests due to the State of Texas on said lands, amounts in the aggregate of the sum of $677.82, for which amount the plaintiff prays judgment of the court, for costs of suit, general and special relief in law and in equity that he may be justly entitled and etc.

Herein fail not, but have you before said court, on the said first day of the next term thereof, this writ, with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

Witness my hand and the seal of said court, at office in Sanderson, Texas, this 9th day of June, A. D. 1926.

GUM-DIPPING

the Extra Process for Extra Miles!

Breaks all Tire Records

The 500 Mile Speed Classic at Indianapolis has always been a Battle of Tires. In 1911, Firestone won with fabric tires at 74.59 miles per hour. In 1920, Firestone won with cord tires at 88.55 miles per hour. In 1925, Firestone won with Full-Size Gum-Dipped Balloons at the record breaking average speed of 101.13 miles per hour.

In 1926, Firestone again won with Full Size Gum-Dipped Balloons. The ten cars to finish "in the money" were all Firestone-equipped. They went the distance without a single blowout and with but two tire failures—one due to a puncture and the other to a leaky valve.

The Firestone Record in Battle of Tires at Indianapolis

Year	Driver	Car	Tires	Miles Per Hour
1911	Harvorn	Nation	Firestone	74.59
1912	Dawson	Nation	Firestone	78.70
1913	Cox	Pugnet	Firestone	76.92
1914	Thomson	Delage	Firestone	82.47
1915	DePalma	Mercedes	Goodyear	89.84
1916	Wynn	Pugnet	Goodyear	83.26
1917	No Race
1918	Wood	Peugeot	Goodyear	88.06
1919	Waters	Peugeot	Firestone	85.55
1920	Chevrolet	Monroe	Firestone	89.62
1921	Milnes	Ford	Firestone	94.48
1922	Murphy	Murphy Sp.	Firestone	90.95
1923	Milnes	HCS Sp.	Firestone	90.95
1924	Cox	Duesenberg	Special	88.23
			Firestone	101.13
1925	DePalma	Duesenberg	Full-Size Balloons	101.13
			Firestone	95.58
1926	Lockhart	Miller Spec.	Full-Size Balloons	95.58

This performance is even more remarkable when you consider the terrific speeds at which the cars traveled over this fifteen-year-old, rough brick track.

Experienced race drivers will not risk their lives or chances of victory on any other tires. And in the commercial field, large truck, motorbus and taxicab fleet operators, who keep careful cost records are among the big users of Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires.

The City Transportation Co., of Tacoma, Wash., writes: "One of our 12 buses on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires has gone over 40,600 miles and still looks good for many miles of extra service. For all around tire safety and mileage, Firestone cannot be beat."

From Calumet Motor Coach Co., Hammond, Ind., the following: "We operate 40 buses all equipped with Gum-Dipped Tires. The very low cost per mile on which these tires operate is considerably less than that of any other make." Hayes Bus Lines, Columbia, S. C., say: "We operate 19 buses equipped with Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. A number of these tires have run over 45,000 miles without ever having been removed from the rim."

The largest taxicab companies in the world standardize on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. W. R. Rothwell, taxicab operator, Detroit, Mich., writes: "Two of my Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires have run 76,000 miles."

Hundreds of thousands of car owners voluntarily testify to the safety, comfort and economy of Full-Size Gum Dipped Balloons. W. H. Peacock, Birmingham, Ala., testifies: "I have had Firestone Balloons for thirteen months and they have delivered in that time 24,469 miles." H. C. Stachle, Minneapolis, Minn., says: "My Firestone Balloons have gone 49,900 miles and are still in good condition."

These records of endurance, speed, safety and mileage could only have been made because of Firestone development of the Gum-Dipping process which insulates and saturates every fiber of every cord with rubber, reducing friction and heat and building greater strength and endurance in the cords—assuring you at all times—

READ THE TRUTH ABOUT KILLING INSECT PESTS

In the first place—
don't pay a Big Price for an insecticide

WHY pay a big price for an insecticide or buy expensive spraying apparatus when so little as 25c buys a generous size of Bee Brand Insect Powder—sufficient to rid your home of insects, or to prevent insects invading it for a long time to come. Bee Brand Insect Powder is not only a most effective insecticide, but it is also the least expensive.

Bee Brand Won't Explode
You can use Bee Brand Insect Powder anywhere, near an open fire or flame of any sort, without danger. It will not explode nor is it easily inflammable. An insecticide that is explosive, or highly inflammable is a menace—a fire risk.

What of the Plants?
Dare you apply your present insecticide to plants? If you wish to remove insects from plants or flowers, or if you wish to use Bee Brand in a room where plants and flowers are, have no fear. It will not harm them. Bee Brand is non-poisonous. Dust it or sprinkle it on your pets and domestic animals. It will not harm them. Eat it if you wish—it will not hurt you.

How Much Apparatus
None is necessary. If you prefer to use the little puffer gun, the cost is only 10c. Blow Bee Brand Insect Powder from a piece of paper. It floats in the air and its fine particles kill Flies, Mosquitoes, and Moths. Dust it in cracks and crevices, or about the furniture, it kills Roaches, Water Bugs, Fleas, Lice and Bedbugs.

Settle It Once and for All
You know what kind of soap serves you best. Modern sanitation has made insect powder as necessary as soap. If you have never used Bee Brand you have not yet found the most effective and least expensive insecticide. Order it by name and insist on getting it.

Bee Brand INSECT POWDER

Sanderson's Rodeo a Success

Sanderson's 2nd Rodeo which was held June 3 and 4 was a decided success.

Thursday, the first day, opened with a big parade in which cowboys, cowgirls and decorated cars participated. The prize, a $10 gold piece for the best representation in the parade went to Mrs. W. A. Banner and Doc Turk who represented the old time riders, a $10 gold piece went to Miss Mahlon Couch for the best decorated car.

In the horse race, the winner of the 3 year old Maiden Race was "Pickaninny," with "Montie" 2nd and "Flapper" 3rd. In the 300 yard dash "Lilly B" won first, "Henry" 2nd and "Crip" 3rd. The Free-For-All was won by "Catherine Rankin" 1st; 2nd, "Henry" 3rd, "Davis." From the race the crowd went to the Court House lawn where delicious barbecued meat, bread, pickles, onions, coffee and all that goes with a barbecue dinner awaited them. There was plenty of eats for the large crowd and all did ample justice.

At 1:30 the crowd gathered at the ball park where the main show took place. The steer riding contest was the first on the program which was very thrilling and some of the best riders to be found rode. The winning riders were: 1st, Lyn Welch; 2nd, G. Jolly; 3rd, Damon Persizer. In the next event, the wild bronco riding, there were broncs that meant business and they had riders who stayed with 'em and gave them a ride. Winners in this event were: Chief Corrells of Oklahoma, 1st; "Shorty" Rutledge of Marathon 2nd; Louis Babb of Langtry 3rd. In the goat roping some good work was done showing excellent skill on both roper and horse. Winners were: 1st, Charlie Norton, 12 flat; 2nd, Allen Holder, 14 flat; Walter Babb, 3rd, time 14 4-5. Again in the calf roping the crowd witnessed good riding and roping. Time in this event was: 1st, Buck Means, 23 flat; 2nd, Henry Means 23 1-5; 3rd, Roy Rutledge, 30 flat.

In the wild mare roping contest Anja Wilson and Charlie Norton won 1st; Buck Means and Elmer Jones 2nd; Grover King and Boye Babb 3rd. The wild cow milking was very exciting which was won by Elmer Jones and Ad Eddings, 1st; Charlie Norton and G. Means, 2nd; Anja Wilson and Buck Means, 3rd. "Blackie" Russell gave an exhibition bulldogging that was good and a hard feat to accomplish. Another good ride was when Grady Jolly rode a wild steer with a mane hold. The huge crowd also witnessed exhibition riding of steers by three 15 year old boys, Bussy Edwards and Jack Sellers of Del Rio and Bobby Jones of Oklahoma City. These youthful riders gave exhibitions both days. The day ended with a big dance on an open air platform with music furnished by the Lone Star Dance Entertainers of San Angelo.

Friday, the second day, found everyone eager to see the Rodeo more so than ever, and also found more visitors here. The morning quickly passed with the horse race which started the day off. The 1/4 mile Free-For-All race found several good entrants. "Black Beauty" 1st; "Catherine Rankin" 2nd; "Crip" 3rd. The afternoon program started off with steer riding which was won by Jack Jolly 1st; Grady Jolly 2nd; C. A. Norton 3rd. Bronco riding, 1st Blackie Russell; 2nd Chief Corrells; 3rd Grady Jolly. Goat roping: 1st, Elmer Jones 11 3-5; 2nd, Allen Holden, 12-1; 3rd, Walter Babb, 12 2-5. Calf roping: 1st, Walter Babb 22 4-5; Cole Means, 24 flat; 3rd Elmer Jones 24 3-5. Wild cow milking: 1st, Elmer Jones and Ad Eddings; 2nd, Buck Means and Anja Wilson; 3rd, Charlie Norton and "Shorty" Rutledge.

Due to the good roping and riding and helping the handling of the riders thus avoiding no accidents during the rodeo, Boye Babb is to be congratulated upon his skill in such events. Fully 1000 visitors were in attendance here, and everyone present spoke well of the rodeo and all had a good time. Credit to the success of the rodeo is due to the promoters, Grover King and Ed. Downie.

Mother! It's Cruel to "Physic" Your Child

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he did not believe that a steaming "purgative" or "physic" was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even if the child is chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy

THOUGHT MALARIA STILL IN SYSTEM

Until Dodson's Liver Tone Drove Out Quarts of Sour Bile and Other Poisons.

There are entire sections where everyone seems to think they have malaria. Others believe they never fully got the malarial poison out of their systems.

Arnold Whitson says: "For years I took calomel for the aches, biliousness, headache, constipation and the deathly feeling associated with what we believed to be malaria.

"Last year I heard about Dodson's Liver Tone and bought a bottle for a few cents. Man, man, what a Godsend. In the morning it drove out quarts of black, sour bile. I got back my appetite for food, braced right up and haven't had a sick spell since. Whenever I feel a little bilious or the stomach gets sour, one dose of Dodson's Liver Tone is all I need. It is surely a blessing."

Hundreds of others tell the same experience.

Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

Child Handicapped by Modern Parents' Lack of Sympathy and Understanding

By PROF. JOHN ERSKINE, Noted Author.

LIFE for the average parent ceases at the age of thirty, when he forgets he ever was a child. The present generation of parents are a necessary evil and more evil than necessary.

Instead of taking an interest in the child and seeking to become his companion, most parents are satisfied if the child gets through life without doing any damage to the family reputation or to himself. The tragedy of Shelley's life was that he was a renegade to the honor of the family name.

The legend that children owe their parents anything is false. Not even before they made our acquaintance did they owe us anything, and after they know us they can hardly owe us much. Our ideas about children are inherited. The fact is that our children are either our companions or they are not.

The modern child is packed off to school at an early age, when he is eager to be the companion of his parents, and it is only after he has finished college that he is considered fit to associate with them. By that time he has lost interest in his elders and would rather associate with people of his own age.

Or, if the parent does approach the child, it is not to show an interest in what he is learning, but to talk morality. As a matter of fact, the New Testament says a lot more about living than it does about morals. When the parents begin to preach morals the case is hopeless.

The present generation of children are healthier than in the past. The modern boys and girls are, therefore, beautiful to look at. But look at them, don't try to talk to them.

About the only hope for the present generation lies in those arts which we like so much that we cannot stop practicing them. Of these the principal one is dancing, which practically everybody enjoys. But any other art will do. If the children like anything, the parents should encourage them to practice it and make it an art, for when you practice an art and carry it right through, good behavior and fastidiousness of character are bound to follow.

Psychology Test of Highest Value in Revealing Extraordinary Talent

By PROF. CARL C. BRIGHAM, Princeton University.

The psychological test for determining intelligence is no more infallible than the old-fashioned written examination. A low score in a psychological test should not be considered an educational death warrant. One of the greatest benefits of such tests lies in their value in revealing extraordinary talents.

We find psychological tests of the greatest use in locating talent—in discovering men of exceptional promise. We do not find that they are negatively significant—that is, that low scores necessarily mean dullness or incompetence.

On the other hand, we do feel that high scores are significant, for they are demonstrably associated with academic work of a high order after admission, if conditions are favorable for the realization of the latent ability thus manifested.

The psychological test will reveal possibilities of development that cannot be explained by conventional measures of attainment in school subjects. When used positively for locating talent they are most helpful. Of course, a group test of intelligence is a rather crude measure, and one is certain that when three or four hundred men are examined in one room at the same time, that some cases of undoubted ability will not be discovered. But every case actually discovered is an asset to society whose potential worth cannot be measured or estimated.

Would Eliminate the Term "Sex Appeal" From Motion Picture Industry

By CLARENCE BROWN, Motion Picture Producer.

The expression "sex appeal" should be eliminated from the movies. The term, wrongly applied, is proving a destructive force to the picture industry. In place of the much-abused expression I recommend "personal magnetism."

Although it is patent that the appeal of the sexes is the basis of life and of romance, the structure on which almost every motion picture is built, the commonly used phrase has an ugly sound, implying to the mind of the average person something unsavory and unclean.

Because of its common usage in connection with motion pictures, those hypercritical persons who refuse to believe that there can be anything good in pictures have been far too willing to take the expression, "sex appeal," at its worst, and on their false assumption have denounced picture-makers in general as panders of the unclean.

Today the motion picture stands on a pedestal of respectability—in cleanliness of thought and expression far ahead of the stage or of modern literature. Despite carping criticism to the contrary, the producers are striving to attain even a higher degree of artistry and wholesomeness.

If we must refer to the appeal underlying all life and romance, then let's call it by another title, but with the same meaning. I suggest the phrase "personal magnetism."

Response to Urge of the Primitive of Benefit to All, at Times

By F. H. COLLIER, St. Louis Newspaper Writer.

It requires some strength of mind to hold fast to the ideal that we are on earth to live and not to keep up with the latest mechanical inventions. One doesn't care to be hustled through life by machinery.

Anyone with a trace of old humanity (old Adam) in him feels the urge of the primitive at times—with its silences and its yet unsolved mysteries. The ticking of a clock is then click-clack enough for a mind that rejoices in serenity. Blessed it is to be where wheels are not making some kind of a roar and all you have of that description is a cataract or the wind in the tops of the big trees; and to be dimly conscious of lesser sounds seemingly unheard because they are part of nature's harmonious chorus day and night.

Nor is a man a visionary and an impracticable who craves and seeks a period of "recovery from civilization," brief or extended, some time in the year. The cities must carry on, but they need not carry you off. Through the hard days of toil in them, memory can keep vivid the blue, far-off vistas—a memory which vitalizes the soul. Work loses nothing by being valued only as an interval between outings; and the thought makes it less arduous, cheers its daily grind and, truth to tell, gets it better done.

Tris Speaker Consistent Hitter

This Speaker, veteran manager and center fielder of the Cleveland Indians, has fallen below the 300 mark in batting just once. That was in 1919, the year he succeeded Lee Fohl as pilot. Speaker hit 226 that season.

Though he has begun in the big show continuously since the latter part of 1908, Speaker has topped the league's batters on only one occasion. He turned the trick in 1916, beating Cobb out after a hectic struggle.

Speaker's triumph, by the way, brought a temporary halt to Cobb's sensational string of clotting championships that had run to nine.

COMPLICATIONS

SYNOPSIS—Traveling by canoe on the Mississippi, on his way to Biloxi, in the early days of the settlement of Louisiana, William Brampton, English spy, known to Indians and settlers as the "White Indian," sees a Natchez Indian post a declaration of war against the French. For his own purposes he hastens to Biloxi to carry the news to Bienville, French governor. Brampton meets an old friend, Joe Labrador, Indian half-breed, who warns him Bienville has threatened to hang him as a spy. Brampton refuses to turn back. He falls in with Jules and Basile Matter, on their way to Biloxi to secure wives from a ship, the Maire, bringing women from France. At Biloxi Brampton protects a woman from a sergeant's brutality. She tells him she is Claire Dahlgarde, picked up in a raid in Paris. Evidently well bred and educated, she is a mystery to Brampton. He intervenes to prevent a man, English, known as "Old Six Fingers," following her to New Orleans. A Frenchman, Francois Narbonne, slightly demoted by stories he has heard of the riches of the New World, introduces himself. Bienville accuses Brampton of treachery, but the latter seizes a respite from death by revealing the Natchez declaration of war. He is to await the arrival of a former companion, Damaon the Fox, who will exonerate or condemn him. Damaon has documents proving Brampton an English spy. Brampton receives a message from Claire, begging him to help her reach the English settlements. Brampton trusts Narbonne with a note to Claire promising to meet her at New Orleans. He plans his escape. After a struggle Brampton wrests the incriminating papers from Damaon and escapes from Biloxi. He meets the Matters and they go to New Orleans in a sailing packet. At the landing place Brampton again encounters Joe Labrador, whom he sends to bring Claire to him. Brampton questions her closely, but she will tell him little of her history. With Labrador, Brampton and Claire leave in two canoes for the English settlements. Claire turns out to be a creature of moods and a terrible handcap in a race for life.

"One must catch the fish first," was the quiet response. "Besides, I placed the wood on the blaze monster started. The coals will be ready."

"All the wood?" I sharply demanded.

She bridled at my tone. A tug at my line demanded my attention. After a brief fight I landed a catfish.

She waited until I had secured my hook and coiled my line; then she said:

"The wood was to burn?"

"Yes, yes. But not all at once. A little at a time."

"I was not to know without being told," she said with much dignity. "If monsieur will be explicit another time perhaps I will do better. But wood! La! La! There is nothing but wood. Surely one does not have to be sparing of wood in this land!"

I hesitated whether to explain the danger of big fires and much smoke

I Dared My Gaze on the River. I Discovered Nothing Until She Stood Close at My Side and Pointed a Finger.

being seen by an enemy, or to wait and after acting as my own fire-tender for a while, see if she did not learn her lesson by observation.

"If we have finished with the matter of the fire," she quietly resumed, "I would like to ask monsieur the meaning of that object which floats upstream across the dying patch of sunlight."

I dared my gaze on the river. I discovered nothing until she stood close at my side and pointed a finger; then I saw it, a canoe, far out and presumably hunting for dead water on the opposite shore.

"Indians. Probably Humas. We are in their country," I told her.

"Are they wicked? Will they trouble us?" she demanded, glancing up into my face.

"Not a bit." Nor was I afraid of Indians, for I had many friends among the river-people, including the Humas.

Returning my gaze to the river I was troubled to observe the canoe was making no progress toward the opposite shore. And only white men, ignorant of the river, would skirt the edge of the mighty current and barely hold their own, when easy paddling was to be enjoyed along the shore.

"Now one can hardly see them," she cried.

"We'll go back and cook our fish," I said. The canoe was heading toward us, thus making it appear to be a speck. And I had no doubt the smoke from our generous fire had attracted the voyagers' attention. If Damaon and his companions were on the same side with us the intervening forest would prevent his seeing the smoke. It was his mantle against mine, and I was hampered by an irresponsible girl-woman.

CHAPTER VIII

What the Smoke Brought.

Even if the distant canoe was making for our smoke I did not see how I could break camp and hide in the forest, or take to the pirogue. Had I been alone the problem of avoiding the two men would have been child's play; but the girl would hold me back in the woods, while to continue in the pirogue would bring the men upon us. I was convinced they could not be some of Damaon's men, and this belief reconciled me somewhat to meeting them. On reaching the fire I hurriedly cleaned the fish. The girl watched my preparations with a little grimace. I feared she was overfastidious.

I broiled the fish on the coals and served it on two clean pieces of bark. She sat back from the fire and tentatively nibbled at some smoked meat but refused the fish. This was an arraignment of my rough-and-ready cooking, and provoking because she had made no offer to do the squaw-work herself. I was beginning to realize how entirely useless this young person was when it came to caring for herself. For one raised in poverty the instinct of self-preservation seemed to be meagerly developed; of course, her hands should have told me that at the beginning.

She eyed the tough smoked meat disapprovingly; then bravely remarked:

"The fire burned well."

"Exceedingly well, mademoiselle!"

Another, and a longer pause; then she was timidly remarking:

"There came to me the absurd notion that monsieur was displeased because I used the wood. But I tell myself there is much wood, enough for all France. Also, the more wood the more coals. What have I done that is wrong?"

"Nothing that is wrong. Only, this fire—I asked the wood to be fed on a little at a time. You put it all on at once."

"But it made a good fire, monsieur. You have said it yourself. I fear you are overnice in your exactions."

"I only mention it because the heavy smoke is drawing the strange canoe to our shore, and soon we shall have visitors," I gently explained. "I would have said nothing this time, but I did not want mademoiselle to be taken by surprise, and, perhaps, alarmed."

"This awful country, where the simplest act may bring death!" she dramatically whispered.

I smiled reassuringly.

"Hardly death, or we would not be here waiting. It is nothing—these strangers coming. I only mention them so mademoiselle will not be startled."

"You have your musket close my your side, as if you feared! I, too, will be ready."

And she pulled the sheathed dirk from her bosom and allowed it to hang outside her blouse. Then as an inspiration: "But the log boat! We should hide it. Then they could not find us."

"Now that they have seen the smoke it is better that they find us," I answered. "If we should disappear they would find the fire, and they would go on up the river and tell of the deserted camp. It would be bad for them to tell such news to Damaon the Fox."

"Finishing my fish, I took my gun and said:

"Mademoiselle's courage is fine. She will sit where she is while I withdraw to one side."

"I do not understand," she faltered.

"By this time the two men will be landing near our pirogue. They will reconnoiter cautiously. I must get them to the fire to see who they are, to make sure they carry no tales ahead of us."

"But would you leave me here alone?"

"Only as bait for the trap into which they must walk. As soon as they break cover I will be by your side."

"Monsieur does not go far away?"

"Only inside the trees. Have courage. Nothing shall harm you."

"I am not afraid of men," she coldly replied, now sitting very erect. "It is the land, the great river, the unnamable loneliness, that brings fear. But I shall not disgrace you."

The grande dame air in a doll; and yet she carried it off most excellently. I took my musket and slipped into cover and waited. I heard the two men climbing the bluff long before they should have betrayed themselves. The carelessness, or awkwardness, of their approach told me they were not coureurs de bois. This left them colonists from New Orleans, sent in blundering pursuit of me; and I was confident I could soon send them to the right about.

Now they were passing through the last fringe of bushes encircling the fire, and the girl suddenly gave a shrill scream. As I glided forward to close the trap I heard a rough voice yell in English:

"Blast my eyes if it ain't her! Ahoy, lass, where's your convoy?"

"Here!" I spoke up, stepping into the firelight, my musket across my left arm.

The girl was crouching behind a log and from her face one would have thought she was facing a panther. Old Six Fingers, more apish than ever, stood leering at her, his yellow snags showing in an ugly grin. On recognizing me he lowered his arm, and with a scowl growled:

"So it's you, is it?"

"Ho, Monsieur Brampton, we meet again!" loudly greeted Narbonne, lunging clear of a grapevine. "Behold, I give you the freedom of my river! Mademoiselle, command me. I throw myself at your feet."

She rose and seated herself on the log in an effort to recover her dignity, but never allowing her frightened eyes to stray long from the grinning face of Six Fingers.

"Monsieur Narbonne was so good as to do me a service in la Nouvelle Orleans. His presence is always most welcome," she nervously assured the Frenchman.

"We go up the river to find the country of Acanibas, where the diamonds grow on rose-bushes, and the women are almost as beautiful as mademoiselle," prattled Narbonne with a smirk at the girl.

"And now we've picked you up we'll sail in convoy," grinned Six Fingers. And he broke into some of his horrible sea doggerel and began chanting:

Heave-ho! And the devil
He sits in the sun!
Hurrah, bulles, for the Spanish main!
Heave-ho! And the red blood
From white throats will run!
Hurrah!

Narbonne was nearest to him, and with a backhanded sweep he stilled the vicious lips and sent Six Fingers over backward.

Now, I had no desire for either of the two to be traveling ahead of me. Narbonne would not wittingly harm me, but he was eccentric, to say the least. His companion was capable of any infamy if left unwatched. So I affected the role of pacificator, and said:

"Let bygones be bygones. Six Fingers forgot his sea-ditties are not for young ears. He will not forget again. Come, come, man; you'll need stout hearts for your journey to the Acanibas."

Six Fingers pressed his fingers to his split lips and made animal noises. Narbonne was staring at him coldly, one hand on the hilt of his sword. The old villain essayed something intended for an affable smile, and croaked:

"Rough day, mate; but I'm used to rough living and rough ways. I was forgetting the lass. I'll stay for'ard after this. And there's a jug of brandy in the boat what I'll overhaul."

I signaled for Narbonne to let him go, for his departure would give me a chance to talk alone with the Frenchman. Once Six Fingers had disappeared toward the edge of the bluff I drew Narbonne farther apart from the girl and said:

"You know I am being hunted. Perhaps you do not know that there are those ahead whom I fear more than all those remaining behind. I do not know how far I can trust your companion, but to you I tell this: At Point Coupee, a day's journey from here, the river makes a big loop. My enemies will, I believe, follow the main channel. There is a small bayou, or canal, not more than six feet wide and usually choked with drift at the opening. If I can reach that unseen and cut across the loop I will save a day. It is at Point Coupee I plan to get ahead of my pursuers."

Narbonne stiffly answered:

"Monsieur, I have an equity in this cursed river. I am a landed proprietor. I have invested a hundred thousand livres in this country. I am responsible for law and order. I shall go with you to protect you."

He said it as if standing in the center of broad ancestral acres, as if an army of millions was ready to carry out his every wish. And his heart was as honest in its purpose as if he had commanded the obedience and servility paid to Louis XIV in his lifetime.

I tried to thank him for carrying my note to Mademoiselle Dahlgarde, but he would not permit, declaring:

"Nay, not so. The thanks are for me to utter. It gave me the rarest pleasure to speak with mademoiselle again. I am in your debt."

The girl now shyly advanced and extended a hand to Narbonne, saying: "I have the brave Frenchman to thank again."

The abstrud fellow was all but kneeling as he reverently kissed the slim hand, his cap gathering more grime from the forest-mold. And I was surprised to observe how calmly she accepted his homage. She retired to her log, pulling us along after her by the exquisite charm of her manner. It caused me grim amusement, and some chagrin, to realize she waited until Narbonne was present before exercising the height of her charm. With a glance to make sure Six Fingers was not within hearing she confessed:

"Messieurs, I am much afraid of that man."

Narbonne bowed and turned to leave us, but I seized his arm and detained him. He roughly shook off my grasp and whispered:

"Did you not hear? I have endured the little beast, but surely mademoiselle should not be annoyed."

She understood this hypocrisy and was between us. "If you have respect for the women of France you will dismiss such black thoughts from your mind," she murmured. "Of course I feel no fear when you two are with me."

To me her fear of Six Fingers was incomprehensible. He was only a senile old spider of a man, who could do no mischief beyond hurling a knife and guzzling brandy.

Narbonne surrendered his purpose of seeking Six Fingers and putting him to the sword, and said:

"The old thief goes with me to the land of Acanibas, where his pirate's soul can revel over hills of gold. He will not discomode mademoiselle. We two will push on ahead."

I feared for Six Fingers' treacherous old tongue if he fell in with Damaon. It was not my plan to have him ahead of me, spreading the news of our coming.

"Our ways, monsieur, are the same for many leagues," I said. "It is my wish that you and your companion travel in our company."

With a side-glance I directed the girl to second the invitation. She returned my look rather defiantly, but was warm and gracious in adding:

"I also ask it. You will not refuse me, monsieur?"

"God pity a madness which would permit me to refuse you, mademoiselle," he plausibly exclaimed. "Now we will take the creature from the brandy, or the king of Acanibas will go with a dry throat. It is incredible, monsieur, the amount of drink that withered old man can hold."

"Of course you do not really believe there is any land called Acanibas?"

"No Acanibas? Impossible."

"There is no such land, monsieur. I have been through the region—the Falls of St. Anthony—where he located the fairyland. It was not there. It never was there."

"Mon Dieu!" he muttered, wiping his forehead. "Is there anything true about this country?"

"All you have seen is true. It continues the same to the Great Lakes in the north. Wild waters. Wild woods. Wild men and beasts. No diamonds. No gold or silver as yet found. No giants nor dwarfs. No place where the Indians are anything but Indians. No land of plenty until you clear the ground, plant and reap."

Nothing but disaster can come to such an ill-assorted party. What will the disaster be?

Centenarian Gets Permanent Wave

Mrs. Margaret Waggoner Mitchell, who on her next birthday, October 14, will be 100 years old, is sensitive about her beauty. And when she became bored with her straight silver gray locks she went to a Kansas City (Mo.) beauty shop and went through the torture of a permanent wave operation just as any seventeen-year-old flapper might do. "Thank goodness I won't have to wear a cap any more," she said.

SHOULD HUSBANDS DO HOUSE WORK?

How Mrs. Dyer Solved the Problem.

Mrs. Mildred Dyer was lucky. She had a good natured husband who helped her with much of her housework. Because she was in ill health for five years, it was often necessary for him to do this. But it bothered Mrs. Dyer. She felt that he had to work hard enough anyway. The time he spent in doing her work was needed for his own. She determined to find the road to better health.

She writes: "I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is simply wonderful. My health is better than it has ever been. I am getting stronger and gaining in weight." She has solved her problem and her household is happier. The Dyers live at Redlands, Calif., Route A, Box 183. How often does your husband have to do your housework? No matter how willing he is, no woman feels comfortable about it. Perhaps you, too, will find better health through the faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

SMART TAILORED MILLINERY; OUTFITTING LITTLE FOLKS

PARIS sends to us, in terms of these five fascinating, new street hats, the latest word of five world-famous modistes as to tailored millinery. They are gossamer messages, all of them emphasizing the disappearance of the mannish note in headwear and the return of dignified types in street clothes.

One glance at this little galaxy of stars in the millinery sky, reveals that the combination of straw braids and millinery fabrics makes a strong appeal to French designers. Every one of these models is an example of fabrics used in the body of the hat, and quick and economical production, high-speed power machines and expert operators. Mothers cannot compete with this quantity production of little garments that are well made and of sturdy materials. The fields of hand-made clothes and tailored things are different and thereby hangs another story.

There are few style changes in little tots' clothes from season to season. Designers vary the patterns in materials used and the decorations, or promote certain colors and fabrics, but the same dependable cottons, linens and silks reappear every season. In

In three out of five, fabric and straw are combined to make the shape. The group pictured, leads off with a black satin hat faced with milan straw. The shape is in line with the big majority of others intended for street wear and turns up at the back. Rose foliage is arranged about the crown and a few leaves extend to the crown on the right side, where a single rose is posed on the brim. Rose foliage is used in flat collars also, with the leaves regular in arrangement (the tip of one overlapping the base of another) and finished with two small, flat roses. Velvet ribbon with silk accents for the hat with draped crown at the left and satin, in three shades, makes the interesting model at the right. The upturned brim with wings at the side, is covered with fine folds of satin, shading cottons this year there are new patterns in the English prints, in voiles and crepes. Plain broadcloth, chambray, poplin, linene and ginghams appear in popular colors; batiste and dimity are woven in dainty stripes and cross-hairs and percales are shown in quiet colors, and inconspicuous stripes or figures. The keynote of the styles in this season's children's clothes is daintiness and neatness. The simplest needlework is used for decorative touches, as feather stitching, scallops, tiny embroidered flowers and outline stitch for sketching amusing figures on pockets. Little from light to darker tone and small blossoms almost cover the side pieces. The most original and spirited hat in the group has a high crown of milan straw and an eccentric tafeta-covered brim that makes the most of the fashionable upward turn at the back. Crisp tafeta ribbon is used in the buoyant bow and drapery. The plainest hat in the group is similar in shape. It is a milan with a brim that folds in a plait at the back and has a collar and facing of satin.

Outfitting little folks has become a simple matter, thanks to the manufacturers of clothes for little tots. Ready-made things for little tots are so excellent and so low-priced that there is no economy in making their ordinary everyday garments at home. This is accounted for by the stupendous quantities turned out by the factories and by their methods of Japanese figures are popular—lanterns, parasols and people—and so are birds, bunnies, chickens and puppies—done in outline or cross-stitch. For wear on the bench there are coats and capes of cotton toweling or cotton chenille; cut-out flowers or figures in the same fabrics but contrasting colors make amusing decorations for them or pictures representing bench sports are sketched on them with gay-colored cotton floss. Some little beach coats are entirely covered with cut-out applique figures. Bathing suits are knitted in one piece and made usually in bright colors. Sweaters are important items in little folks' outfits, and are shown in all colors, but peach, tan and yellow tones are featured, and overalls are never omitted from the equipment of happy youngsters.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BACON'S ADVENTURE

Brother Bacon had not been successful when he had suggested having birthday parties for himself.

Miss Ham and the other pigs had always objected. His fussy old Grandfather Porky had objected, too. In fact, he had never had a birthday party such as he desired.

But one day he decided to have an adventure. This was before he grew to be as big as he now is, for now he is a very fully matured and grown-up pig.

He was tired of the stream where some of the pigs had been wading each day—much to the annoyance of Porky Pig who thought the only kind of wading worth while was wading in mud.

Brother Bacon thought the same about this, too, but there were some of the modern young pigs who had new ideas and who wanted to do things their own way.

Of course Brother Bacon had been given his name by his fond mother long long before.

She had thought of it as a very fine name, and hadn't had the least idea or thought about its being the name of pig when all ready for a person's breakfast.

Well, when Brother Bacon wanted an adventure his mother said to him: "Don't go into the woods. There are many, many dangers there."

"Take a walk if you will and try to grow thin if you think that's nice—but don't, don't go in the woods."

A grunt or two came from Brother Bacon which meant both a good-by and that he'd do as he pleased. For Brother Bacon was far from being always an obedient son.

When his mother said there were dangers in the woods he at once wanted to find them out for himself.

"I'll go to the woods and show them how brave I am and how much I know."

No sooner had he finished saying this than he heard the most awful sound.

Then he shook with fear and started to run—for not far off he saw a great, enormous wild animal.

"Hello, Brother Bacon," said the wild animal, "I've been waiting to make friends with you. I'm sorry you're no plumper, though."

"However, my wolf appetite will be all right."

"You'll do for Mrs. W. for breakfast. Just a tasty breakfast."

"What's that you say?" asked Brother Bacon. "I'd make a nice breakfast for you? Oh, please, save my life."

And poor Brother Bacon squealed for all he was worth.

Well, off he ran and the wolf after him and oh dear, he didn't think his legs would carry any further.

He knew the wolf would catch him. And then he reached safety.

"Oh dear, I'm all in a tremble. That wolf almost got me."

He looked around and saw that he had been asleep and dreaming.

But he had had enough of an adventure.

From now on the pig pen would be the place for him. Oh yes, he would not want to wander off for adventures.

Some adventures were too dangerous for that. They were too adventurous for his liking!

The nice, cozy, comforting, comfortable, friendly slow old pig pen for him.

He could give up adventures for comfort and safety any day.

Oh yes, yes indeed!

War on Smallpox in China

Peking's great park-like Temple of Heaven enclosure, where emperors worshipped, is now the scene of a free vaccination clinic. In an effort to stamp out smallpox, the scourge of China, the central plague prevention bureau is establishing free vaccination points at various places. A special police order to physicians forbids old-fashioned Chinese vaccination and insists that more sanitary modern methods must be adhered to under penalty of heavy fine.

courthouse in Sanderson, Texas, the second Monday in July A. D. 1926, same being the 12th day of July A. D. 1926, then and there to answer the Plaintiff's Petition, filed in a suit in said court on the 9th day of June A. D. 1926, wherein J. H. Snell is plaintiff and A. T. Folsom, Julian M. Bassett, J. D. Nichols, Arthur Earles and the Southwest Texas Oil & Gas Company are defendants, file number of said suit being No. 1683.

The nature of plaintiff's demand is as follows, to-wit:

Suit to foreclose Vendor's Lien on Section No. 62, Certificate No. 35-898, Block A1, Grantee G. H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (H. T. Dodson), the notes being sued on being Notes Numbered 9, 10, 11 and 12, of a series of Twelve Notes dated July 15, 1915, each in the sum of $100.00 respectively, and each bearing interest at the rate of 8 per cent per annum from date until paid, executed by A. T. Folsom, payable on or before July 15, 1924, 1925, 1926 and 1927, respectively, each providing for an additional ten per cent on the principal and interest if placed in the hands of an attorney for collection or collected by legal proceedings, as attorney fees.

Plaintiff alleges that Notes Numbered 9 and 10 are past due and unpaid; that the interest on all four said notes Numbered 9, 10, 11 and 12 is due and unpaid from July 15, 1923, and that by reason of such default in the payment of said principal and interest, plaintiff has declared all of said notes matured due and payable, together with all unpaid interest.

That plaintiff has turned said notes over to G. J. Henshaw, an attorney, for collection and has agreed to pay him the said ten per cent as attorney's fees, which is a reasonable attorney's fee.

The amount of said notes sued on, including interest, attorney's fees and charges which plaintiff has been forced to pay by reason of defendants' default in the payment of said notes, interest and interests due to the State of Texas on said lands, amounts in the aggregate of the sum of $677.82, for which amount the plaintiff prays judgment of the court, for costs of suit, general and special relief in law and in equity that he may be justly entitled and etc.

Herein fail not, but have you before said court, on the said first day of the next term thereof, this writ, with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

GUM-DIPPING

the Extra Process for Extra Miles!

Breaks all Tire Records

The 500 Mile Speed Classic at Indianapolis has always been a Battle of Tires. In 1911, Firestone won with fabric tires at 74.59 miles per hour. In 1920, Firestone won with cord tires at 88.55 miles per hour. In 1925, Firestone won with Full-Size Gum-Dipped Balloons at the record breaking average speed of 101.13 miles per hour.

In 1926, Firestone again won with Full Size Gum-Dipped Balloons. The ten cars to finish "in the money" were all Firestone-equipped. They went the distance without a single blowout and with but two tire failures—one due to a puncture and the other to a leaky valve.

This performance is even more remarkable when you consider the terrific speeds at which the cars traveled over this fifteen-year-old, rough brick track.

Experienced race drivers will not risk their lives or chances of victory on any other tires. And in the commercial field, large truck, motorbus and taxicab fleet operators, who keep careful cost records are among the big users of Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires.

The City Transportation Co., of Tacoma, Wash., writes: "One of our 12 buses on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires has gone over 40,600 miles and still looks good for many miles of extra service. For all around tire safety and mileage, Firestone cannot be beat."

From Calumet Motor Coach Co., Hammond, Ind., the following: "We operate 43 buses all equipped with Gum-Dipped Tires. The very low cost per mile on which these tires operate is considerably less than that of any other make." Hayes Bus Lines, Columbia, S. C., says: "We operate 19 buses equipped with Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. A number of these tires have run over 45,000 miles without ever having been removed from the rim."

The largest taxicab companies in the world standardize on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. W. R. Rothwell, taxicab operator, Detroit, Mich., writes: "Two of my Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires have run 76,000 miles."

Hundreds of thousands of car owners voluntarily testify to the safety, comfort and economy of Full-Size Gum Dipped Balloons. W. H. Peacock, Birmingham, Ala., testifies: "I have had Firestone Balloons for thirteen months and they have delivered in that time 24,469 miles." H. C. Stehle, Minneapolis, Minn., says: "My Firestone Balloons have gone 49,900 miles and are still in good condition."

These records of endurance, speed, safety and mileage could only have been made because of Firestone development of the Gum-Dipping process which insulates and saturates every fiber of every cord with rubber, reducing friction and heat and building greater strength and endurance in the cords—assuring you at all times—

READ THE TRUTH ABOUT KILLING INSECT PESTS

In the first place—
don't pay a Big Price for an insecticide

WHY pay a big price for an insecticide or buy expensive spraying apparatus when so little as 25c buys a generous size of Bee Brand Insect Powder—sufficient to rid your home of insects, or to prevent insects invading it for a long time to come. Bee Brand Insect Powder is not only a most effective insecticide, but it is also the least expensive.

Bee Brand Won't Explode
You can use Bee Brand Insect Powder anywhere, near an open fire or flame of any sort, without danger. It will not explode nor is it easily inflammable. An insecticide that is explosive, or highly inflammable is a menace—a fire risk.

What of the Plants?
Dare you apply your present insecticide to plants? If you wish to remove insects from plants or flowers, or if you wish to use Bee Brand in a room where plants and flowers are, have no fear. It will not harm them. Bee Brand is non-poisonous. Dust it or sprinkle it on your pets and domestic animals. It will not harm them. Eat it if you wish—it will not hurt you.

How Much Apparatus
None is necessary. If you prefer to use the little puffer gun, the cost is only 10c. Blow Bee Brand Insect Powder from a piece of paper. It floats in the air and its fine particles kill Flies, Mosquitoes, and Moths. Dust it in cracks and crevices, or about the furniture, it kills Roaches, Water Bugs, Fleas, Lice and Bedbugs.

Settle It Once and for All
You know what kind of scap saves you best. Modern sanitation has made insect powder as necessary as soap. If you have never used Bee Brand you have not yet found the most effective and least expensive insecticide. Order it by name and insist on getting it.
