EASTERN STAR OFFICERS INSTALLED FRIDAY NIGHT

On the evening of June 1, at 8:30, the regular installation of officers of Chapter 136 O. E. S. was held at the Masonic Hall. Sister Eula Brown the associate district deputy Grand Matron making her official visit to the chapter acted as grand installing officer and appointed Sister Mora Cochrane to act as grand marshal. The following officers were installed:

Worthy Matron, Helen Duke; Worthy Patron, Sims Wilkinson; Secretary, Edna Mussey; Treasurer, Ida Bodkin; Conduress, Johnnie Williams; Associate Conduress, Rosa Parsons; Chaplain, Annie Nance; Marshal, Elsie Grigsby; Organist, Willie Dean Murray; Adah, Hattie Laurence; Ruth, Doris Stovell; Esther, Mary Mills; Martha, Annie Ware; Electra, Dollie Dyer; Warder, Frances Daggett, and Sentinel, S. S. Daggett.

Following the installation Mora Cochrane presented to the retiring matron, Willora Chastain, the past matron's jewel as a gift from the chapter. The gift to the retiring worthy patron, Sims Wilkinson, from the chapter was a leather bound ritual, which was presented by Dannie Robertson. Another gift to the retiring matron was a pen and ink stand from her officers, presented by Sydney McKee. The incoming matron, Helen Duke, received a beautiful leather hand bag as the gift of her husband.

Sister Willora Chastain, in behalf of her retiring officers, led by the marshal, put on a beautiful floral march in which she presented each officer with an arm bouquet of sweet peas and fern.

Sister Eula Brown, assistant district deputy grand matron, gave a very interesting talk and instructions to the chapter. As a gift from the chapter Willora Chastain presented Sister Brown with flowers and a door stop which was very attractive in the various colors.

At the conclusion of the business meeting a social hour was enjoyed in the reception room.

NOMA McDONALD.

Noma McDonald, one year and two months old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theo. McDonald, died Sunday, June 3, after a short illness from pneumonia. Funeral services were held at the cemetery Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock and were conducted by the Rev. V. L. Wunneburger of the church of Christ. A large crowd was out and many beautiful floral offerings were laid on the little mound. The Times joins with friends in extending sympathy to the bereaved parents.

The Sunbeams

The Sunbeams had an enjoyable meeting at which Mrs. Armstrong gave an interesting talk. 25 Sunbeams went on the picnic last week and all report a good time.

The women of the Presbyterian Church met Monday afternoon in the church for their regular Bible study. There were 13 members present. The Auxiliary will hold its regular monthly meeting Tuesday, June 12, in the home of Mrs. Joe F. Brown. This will be an all day meeting. All attending are requested to phone Mrs. D. A. Pollard.

Miss Mamie Reese of Gregory arrived in the city Saturday night to spend a month with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Sims.

Mr. and Mrs. Druse and son will leave soon on a vacation trip. They will be gone about two months and will visit relatives in New York, Ohio and other points in the East.

Why be all frustrated when giving your party? Consult Mrs. H. D. Johnson about your refreshments.

Saddle Horses for Sale.

I have 15 head of saddle horses for sale. For information see W. W. Cooper at Sanderson.

Mrs. Chas. Newberry is visiting relatives in the city.

COWBOYS DEFEATED

In a fast game of baseball played at the ball park here last Sunday the Sanderson Demons demonstrated their superiority over the Del Rio Cowboys by defeating them for a score of 10 to 1. The Demons show great improvement in their batting over last season; they are also strong in the in-field and out-field, however a change of Robertson to third base and M. White to short stop would strengthen both positions. With this change and a continuation of their present batting streak the Demons could go up against any team in South-west Texas with good chances of success. Maddox is in fine; itching form this season.

Bridge Party.

One of the most entertaining as well as delightful bridge parties in some time was given last Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Lewis Lemons with Mrs. Lemons and Mrs. Carlton White as hostesses.

The high score of the afternoon was made by Chester Foster, a luncheon set, while Mrs. Bogusch made second high, a pair of bath towels. Mrs. John Green drew cut prize, a pillow. Brick ice cream with assorted cakes were served to seven tables of players.

B. Y. P. U.

The B. Y. P. U. met Sunday, with Miss Arora Roberts as leader.

Music by Jack Stovell, Ruth Smith and Ruby Armstrong. Song "In the Garden" by Mr. Duke and Mrs. Knox.

Several interesting talks were given. Next Sunday's program will be under the leadership of Miss Dorothy Cgle.

W. M. U. MEET.

The W. M. U. met at the home of Mrs. Knox for social and mission program, with Mesdames Odell and Owens as joint hostess and Mrs. Knox as leader. A good program was rendered.

Piano solo—Mrs. Odell. Solo—Mrs. Sterrett. Duett—Mesdames Black and Johnson.

Delicious refreshments of cake and cream were served.

DR. HODGES IN TOWN

Dr. A. Hodges, the well known dentist, has arrived in our city and established his dental parlor in the rear of the Empress Confectionery. He will be here for a short time only and all persons who are in need of dental work should embrace the opportunity to call on him and have their wants attended to.

15 Dynamite Sticks Plaything of Boy, Six Syracuse, N. Y.—Fifteen sticks of dynamite—almost enough to blow up an entire section of the city—were the playthings of William J. Cook, Jr., six years old, and his companions for several days. They tossed the bright-colored packages about. They threw them at each other. Then when their play ceased for one day, they carefully hid the attractive "toys" under the porch of the Cook home. This was revealed when William J. Cook, Sr., father of the boy, discovered the packages and notified Capt. Jeffrey Malone. The boy picked up the dynamite in a field near his home. An investigation has been ordered.

HER HOME UNSAFE, WIFE GOES TO JAIL

Ready to Stay There if Protection Is Denied.

Hillsdale, Mich.—To protect herself from what she says is persecution designed to force her and her husband to leave Hillsdale county, Mrs. Mary Moross, wife of E. A. Moross, former Detroit and extensive property owner, is in the county jail here, where she says she will remain rather than put up $500 bond and return to her home in Mosherville. Moross and his wife declare a series of incidents, culminating in a threat against his life, is the result of activities of a gang to whom he has given considerable publicity of late. Mrs. Moross declares she will remain in jail until state or county authorities take steps to protect her home. She was arrested and placed in jail as the result of an attack on the Moross home when rocks were thrown through every window. Armed with a shotgun she ran out to investigate and followed being forms down the road. The next day she was arrested on a charge of carrying deadly weapons on the highway and endangering lives of residents of Mosherville. Meanwhile, Moross is attempting to identify persons who hanged an effigy on his property about a quarter of a mile from his house and threatened his life. The developments of the last few days are the culmination of a number of incidents perpetrated, Moross says, with the intention of forcing him to give up his property and leave the county. About a year ago Moross was arrested on a charge of assault with intent to kill when he went with a shotgun to investigate a light back of his barn after receiving several anonymous threats that his mill would be burned. The case is still pending in the Hillsdale Circuit court.

Nab New York Mounted Cop as Burglar De Luxe

New York.—Many thousand dollars worth of the loot stolen from about forty homes in Staten Island during the last eighteen months was recovered recently at the home of Mounted Policeman Stephen Keiper, twenty-nine years old, according to Deputy Police Inspector Ernest Van Wagner, in charge of the Staten Island detectives. Keiper, confessed committing the burglaries. Keiper's home was lavishly furnished, the deputy inspector said, largely with merchandise taken from the summer homes of wealthy persons in the Cedar Grove section of Staten Island, and among the articles which Keiper admitted stealing, was a furnace and complete heating outfit, which had been installed in his own home. All of the robberies, Deputy Inspector Van Wagner said, were committed in the New Drop precinct where Keiper was on duty as a mounted patrolman, and had been the source of considerable worry to the commanding officer and detectives. Virtually all of them were committed on Keiper's post and he had reported many of them to his senior officers.

Mamma Bear Saves Cubs, but They're in Zoo Now

Lock Haven, Pa.—When fire broke out in the western woods of Clinton county, a mother bear saved two of her cubs by placing them under a rocky ledge out of the path of the fire, but as she was carrying the third cub to a place of safety, the fire shifted and enveloped mother and cub. The cub was rescued by members of a section crew, but the mother bear had disappeared. The three baby bears are being brought up by hand, on modified milk, at a game refuge. They weigh four pounds apiece.

Priest Wins Mercy for Church Robber

Eau Claire, Wis.—Rev. John Pohlen of Altoona asked that justice be tempered with mercy in dealing with the man who desecrated his church and stole his vestments. Punishment of Otto Fletschoek, confessed participant in three attacks on the Holy Angel Catholic church at Brackett, was materially reduced by the pastor's intercession. He pleaded guilty to three counts. Two were dropped at Father Pohlen's request, Judge James Wickham said. Fletschoek was sentenced to three to four years at Green Bay reformatory.

STORY FROM THE START

On the verge of nervous collapse, due to overwork, Gay DeLane, successful New York artist, seeks rest at Idle Island. She rents a cottage, the "Lone Pine," from an island character, the "Captain," and his sister, Alice Andover, "administrators." Gay finds the cottage is tenanted by an elderly lady, "Auntalmiry," who consents to move to another abode, the "Apple Tree." On an exploration of the island Gay, standing on the seashore, is horrified by the appearance of the drifting body of a drowned man, which she nerves herself to bring to the shore. A bullet wound in the temple shows the man to have been murdered. Gay makes her way to the "Captain" with the story. Returning with him to the shore, they find no body there, and Gay's story of the incident is set down in an attack of "nervous" Gay, unable to convince her neighbors of the truth, draws a picture of the face of the dead man, intending to send it to the authorities. She meets a stranger, to whom she tells the story and shows the picture. He asks her to let him take it, but Gay refuses. Next day Gay finds the picture has been taken from the cottage. "Rand" Wallace, wanderer, and considered something of a "black sheep" by the islanders, surprises Gay at household tasks. Gay's acquaintance with Rand ripens into affection. Rand leaves the island on business. Gay determines to stay for the winter. The stranger whom Gay had met the day of her discovery of the body introduces himself as Ronald Ingram. "Auntalmiry" tells Gay of her son, "Buddy," who has been missing for years. Rand is suspicious of Ronald Ingram.

"I was nervous that night—anybody would be! At dusk I was all jumpy nerves, hearing noises, seeing shadows. So I went down and stayed all night with Auntalmiry. Rand, I was in bed, and when she raised the blinds on this side of the house, toward the hill, you know, she said, 'Oh, you left the lights on.' I didn't, because I went down before dark. So I went over and looked, and there was a light in the window; now it showed, now it faded, pale and misty, not bright. And Rand, I swear on my word of honor, that we saw—we both saw—a hand reach out from the darkness into the light, a hand long and slim, like his. And then the light went out, and the hand was gone."

Rand tapped his fingers thoughtfully upon her arm, his eyes dark, brows contracted. His lips were curiously pursed and rigid.

"And this is the strangest thing of all. When I came back the blinds were all down, though I was sure I had left them up. And Rand, the sketch I had made of the body in the cave was gone."

Rand stared at her a moment, incredulous.

"You innocent! You gullible! You New York!" he shouted. "All that laid right out before you like two and two, and you couldn't piece it together, and see what was going on."

Gay's lips parted wonderingly. It was curious of course, but she remained as she had been before, entirely puzzled.

Then his mood changed. He pulled her arm roughly. "What do you mean," he demanded hotly, "keeping all this from me? What do you mean, staying in this house alone, with that gang of murderers hanging around watching your every move, spying on you—"

"Rand!"

"Get your hat," he commanded, "get your hat and come with me. You'll have to stay with us. What do you mean, doing such things?"

Gay fell into his arms with choking laughter. "You darling," she said, "how adorable to have you order me about like that. But of course I shall do no such thing. I don't hold to obedience!"

Rand's implicit and troubled acceptance of her somewhat lurid story was sweet solace to Gay's sensitive nature, which had long grieved at the misunderstanding, levity and flagrant suspicions with which she was surrounded. But while she was pleased she laughed at his serious view of the matter. Whatever of intrigue, cause for fear, had been on the island, it was now buried in the past. The self-conscious flush that rose to her cheeks when Rand wondered at Ronald Ingram's repeated appearance was sufficient explanation.

You must keep out of the forest, Gay. I don't like that. Think yourself about it, and I'm going to find out what he is up to. You keep out of the forest, and keep your doors locked. Keep the baby in good shape. Don't be afraid to shoot. If you hear a noise, grab it and fire into the air. He opened the drawer, and took out the pistol, to emphasize what he said. "No man expects a woman to hit what she shoots at, but a nervous woman is apt to shoot anywhere. So shoot, every chance you get, at every shadow at every sound.—For heaven's sake, Gay, this is no protection to you if you don't keep it loaded."

"It is loaded," she said indignantly. "I always keep it loaded. I know an empty gun is—"

Rand broke open the barrel, and disclosed its empty chambers. Gay's lips parted, closed firmly, parted again.

Rand took cartridges from the box and filled it grimly. "I'll keep an eye on it for you," he said. "You shot them out weeks ago, the last time we went to the shore. And bragging about the protection of the baby!"

Gay closed her lips firmly and said nothing. But she knew she had not emptied that pistol at target practice. On the afternoon of the day just previous, she had affectionately cleaned and polished the baby, and loaded every chamber. Some other hand, not hers, had emptied that barrel.

CHAPTER VII

One day, toward the end of the month, when Rand had gone to the city by the early boat and was not present to witness the abjectness of her surrender to his love, Gay went bravely up to the Captain's door and told him she was still too ill and weak to return to the stress of the city; she felt it the part of wisdom to remain in the Lone Pine through October.

The Captain scratched the thin line of gray hair that outlined his furrowed brow.

"I allus put up the storm windows on the summer houses come October first," he said vaguely.

"Not the Lone Pine, not this year," she cried gayly. "You will have to wait until November. You wouldn't shut me up behind storm windows would you?"

"At Dusk I Was All Jumpy Nerves."

"But I allus do put them up come first of October," he persisted.

Then Alice Andover breezed in, smiling good cheer, a little out of breath.

"I saw you coming up the hill," she said. "I suppose you are off to Broad way, like all our summer thrills of Paradise. It is only we drab and somber native sparrows who brave the island winters."

When Gay explained that she wished to continue another month Alice Andover fairly radiated satisfaction. "You will love the island in October, my dear. The summer out-ony is nice, yes, but the island without them is a different place, a dearer place—not so gay, but finer. A little heaven, a little paradise. We settle down. We have time for things. We talk, we live, we have leisure for thought, for feeling; after the hectic summer we draw a deep breath." And smiling the action to the word, she breathed so deeply she quite choked upon her sentiment, and the Captain chuckled slyly before he took advantage of the moment to interpolate plaintively:

"But I allus do put up the storm windows on the summer houses come October first."

And on the morning of October first, Gay, wakening early, was conscious of a confusion of sounds upon her hilltop, a sound of trundling, a sound of thudding, muffled swearing in a high-pitched, gentle, unprofane little voice. She wrapped herself in a heavy robe and ran down. The Captain stood by the piazza carefully unloading from his rickety wheelbarrow the huge wooden frames to protect the windows from the winter storms, a difficult matter for the little frail old man, so that he accompanied his efforts with panting gusts of breathlessness, and much gentle profanity.

"Captain— Why—what in the world—"

"First of October, Gay. I allus put the storm windows up come October first. Looks some like a big nor'easter headin' in. Think?"

He looked persistently away from her, down the peaceful smiling little valley, its profusion of harvest apples festooned with silver cobwebs. A seagull!

She flew into her clothes, down the hill and up the lane to Mrs. Andover's.

"See here," she shouted; "come quickly. He's putting up the storm windows."

"My dear! He's not! He wouldn't dare!"

"You just tell him I said—"

"I shall tell him nothing. You're the administrator. You must come yourself."

Alice Andover sighed resignedly. "Well, I'll come then. If anybody thinks it's any pleasure to be the administrator for an old fool that tries to run good tenants out of his own houses— Well, come on, then."

Not one word passed between them as they made their way swiftly down the lane and up the hill slope.

"John," Alice Andover began with icy coldness, "will you kindly tell me who is the administrator of this estate?"

John removed a rusty nail from his mouth. "You are, Alice," he said, fitting it carefully into a hole in the frame, "but I'm the one that puts up the storm windows." Bang, bang, went the hammer as he spoke.

Alice Andover wavered uncertainly, flushed with anger, but clung to the shreds of her dignity. "John—John Christian Wallace—do you hear me?"

John banged another nail into the frame. "Yes, Alice, God help me, I hear you," he answered gently.

Gay looked around her, far and wide—at the shivery little forest of spruce and birch, whispering hope, at the orchard in its autumn gold below, at the little cottage on its rocky perch a lookout over land and sea. She looked, and thought of Rand. A little thrill tugged at her heart. She could not go away.

"Isn't the cottage for sale? How much do you want for it? Perhaps I'll buy it."

"My dear! How lovely that is. The dear little cottage. How happy you are going to be—John," severely, "do you hear? She is going to buy the cottage."

The Captain smiled amiably, dropping his nails back into the bag. "Reckon you won't want these storm windows up then, will ye? Shall I store 'em in the cellar for ye?"

When Gay swung up the hill slope that afternoon, loyous in complete ownership, she saw Rand sitting on the piazza step. Her eyes were shining as she told him of her acquirement.

"You do love me," he said in a low voice, and kissed her.

Gay in her triumph, she led him, proudly, all over the cottage, exulting in its charms. It was hers, the home of her love, her cleft in the rocks, her bit of bare ocean, her rift of forest. Hers, all hers, and for love. She belonged to it, it belonged to her, and both alike for Rand.

"But don't you realize, Gay," he said soberly, when they sat quiet, side by side, at last, "that you will not be happy here for long? It is because it is temporary that it is dear to you. You love me, and you love this place, because you can get away from us whenever you like. Tying you down to it will be the end of everything."

"That is the beauty of it, Rand. I shall not be tied down. This is my home, but I shall lock my door and run away to the city whenever my mood, or my work, suggests it. I shall stay away as long as I like, and then come home again with joy."

"But when you cease to love me, you will cease to love this."

"But as long as I am free in my love, I shall never cease. It is only when love ties people down, restricts them, rules them, that they chafe at the chains.—Leave me free, Rand, as I shall leave you, and we shall go on and on all our lives, in love and happy."

Auntalmiry's pleasure in Gay's remaining was unalloyed, for she loved the girl, and Alice Andover had already asked her to remain in the Apple Tree during the winter, so she felt no disappointment on that score.

"It will be nice to have my little neighbor on top of the hill," she said pleasantly. "I like the Apple Tree better anyway. It was only for the Christmas party that I came up here. —I always have a Christmas party for the island," she explained to Gay.

Gay offered the use of the Lone Pine for the event, but Aunt Almiry shook her head. She said it would not seem like her party, if she had it anywhere else. She wanted it all hers. It was her only festivity during the year. "Who knows but this may be my last," she finished cheerfully.

When she had gone, Alice Andover asked Gay why she had not, as she requested, told her she could have no Christmas party.

"Why didn't you tell her yourself?" Gay retorted.

"Well," said the administrator cravenly, "I'd rather have you tell her. I think she would take it better from a stranger. I know her too well. You tell her, first chance you get. But tell her when I'm not there."

Every day after that, Auntalmiry talked of her Christmas party, made her plans, and it was not in Gay's kind heart to crush her hope with the sad word. So at last Alice Andover herself was driven to it, as they sat, all three, in Gay's living room before her cheery fire.

"Auntalmiry, John and I decided that you can't have any Christmas party this year."

"Auntalmiry did not understand, answered with a vaguely troubled smile.

"What say, Alice? What say?"

"Auntalmiry, you hear what I say. You can't have a Christmas party. It costs too much, and it's too much work. Last year you nearly worked yourself into pneumonia, and nearly died, giving that Christmas party. And those little rascals don't need a party; they—"

"But I need it," the small voice was suddenly protesting plaintive. "Alice, I need it. Seems like I just live for that Christmas party, from year to year. It's the only recreation I have—"

"Recreation, nonsense. Call it recreation working yourself to skin and bone to give half the island indigestion eating candy and nuts! Recreation to make bags, make presents, clutter up the house with trash.—You hear me now, you can't have it."

Auntalmiry was silenced. The little frozen smile settled more grimly upon her face, her little birdlike fingers twisted nervously together. Very soon she said she must go now, and went out, stumbling a little. She was very old. Gay and Alice Andover watched in silence as she made her way down the slope to the Apple Tree.

"Afford it," Alice Andover repeated bitterly, when the door closed behind her. "Afford it. Who do you suppose pays for her Christmas party? John does, I do, both of us pay, but mostly me, for I am the administrator. She hasn't any money for twenty-five years. Afford it.—But it's not the money, it's the work. She begins three months ahead—Oh, she's at it already, working her fingers to the raw bone, getting ready for Christmas—I know her Sewing. Making things. Planning jokes, and presents.—And last year she was in bed three weeks afterward, and nearly died with pneumonia. She's too old. She works like a slave for it, gets thin, gets pale.—Why, the way she works for that Christmas party, she could almost earn her own living.—If she had to," she added apologetically. "Nobody wants her to earn a living, of course."

Much to Gay's surprise, she found that Rand was not always available. For one so indolent, on an island so idle, he found an inconceivable number of things with which to busy himself.

Moliere Unhappy in His Choice of Mate

Moliere, the great French dramatist, was for a long time in love with Madeleine Bejart, who had accompanied him on his provincial tours, but when he married his bride was Armande, a younger sister of Madeleine.

Armande was twenty years old and Moliere was forty. She was an actress like her sister, and while she was fascinating she was not exactly beautiful. Though it is difficult to get at the truth of Moliere's married life, it is known that Moliere was not very happy. Undoubtedly his wife aroused his jealousy by her eagerness for admiration and her enjoyment of flirtations.

But whether he had deep reason for jealousy, it is impossible to be sure, though many biographers have attacked Armande's character. Three children were born, but Moliere and his wife failed to get on well together and

Predicts Earth Will Stop

If the earth continues to slow up in its rotation, Doctor Crommelin English astronomer, says it will cease to rotate in a "few millions of years," owing to the friction of the tides according to Capper's Weekly. When that happens one-half of the world will be in sunshine and the other half in perpetual darkness—anything but a pleasant situation. But that needn't bother us now. Besides, there is a bare possibility the doctor may be a few million years off in his calculations.

Frozen Eye Glasses

Optical glasses cannot be cut unless fixed immovably. To this end they are glued to iron frames of different sizes and various shapes. Until recently, when finished the plates of glass have been knocked from the frames with a light mallet, cautiously struck upon the edges of the plates. The work was hard and as the least shiver of the edge, though imperceptible, disqualified the lens, the workman needed a very light, skillful hand. The discovery was made by an expert optician that the blocks of crystal separated more easily when they had been exposed to the cold during the night. This discovery has effected a revolution in the manufacture of special glasses.

The Story of Old Glory

"THE STARS AND STRIPES FOREVER."

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ALL the Star-Spangled Banner, Old Glory, the Stars and Stripes, or the Red, White and Blue. Call it the National Standard, the Starry Flag, the Flag of the Free, the Banner of Freedom, the Rainbow of Hope, or the "Colors," they all mean the same, for they all refer to the flag, the symbol of the United States of America, and June 14 of each year is Flag day, a day for honoring the flag.

How did it get all those names? They are a part of the story of Old Glory, the story of one of the oldest national standards of the world with its century and a half of thrilling incident and history-making events. On June 14, 1777, the Second Continental Congress in session at Philadelphia passed a resolution which stated that the flag of the United States should be "thirteen stripes, alternate red and white, that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation." And that is why we call the flag the Stars and Stripes or the Red, White and Blue.

On the night of September 12, 1814, Francis Scott Key, a young lawyer, was detained upon board a British man-of-war, which was bombarding Fort Mifflin, the principal defense of Baltimore and the national capital, Washington, D. C. All night long the guns of the British fleet roared, and all night long the fort answered with such artillery as could reach the enemy. As the dawn of September 13 broke, Key strained his eyes to see if the fort still held out or if its guns had been silenced. When he saw that "our flag was still there," he sat down and on the back of an old envelope expressed in a poem his great joy that "the Star-Spangled Banner" doth wave, "O'er the Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave." His poem, set to music, became the national anthem, and the Stars and Stripes became the Star-Spangled Banner.

On August 10, 1831, Capt. William Driver of the brig Charles Doggett, ready to sail his ship to the South Seas, was presented with a fine new American flag, a magnificent banner containing 110 yards of bunting. As it was hoisted over the ship, the captain named it "Old Glory," and Old Glory, the American flag has been ever since. The reason for the other names

The Golden Dominion

Old Custom Kept Up

The Indian mother in Waterton Lakes national park of the Canadian Rockies, just north of Glacier park, Montana, still draws her papoose upon the travois when she goes for firewood. The firewood is tied onto the lower part of the travois for the return journey, leaving the papoose undisturbed.

Reproduction of the famous painting by Henry Mosler. The British, evacuating New York after the Yorktown surrender, nailed the British flag to the flagstaff at the Battery and then gazed the pole. A barefoot sailor boy volunteered to climb up, take down the enemy flag and nail the American flag to the pole.—From "The Winning of Freedom," in the "Pageant of America," Yale University Press.

There are at least two of those upon which it has been claimed that the Stars and Stripes carried into battle, and "first faced the enemy." The statement is that this first of the Battle of Brandywine on September 11, 1777. But this is the citizens of Delaware who that this took place at the stationary engagement fought state, and that was eight days Brandywine. A monument to that "The Stars and Stripes" unfurled in battle at Coates September 3, 1777, was erected in 1901 as proof of their claim.

Delaware are not the only ones which claim that honor. So claims it and apparently the strongest evidence has been brought forth to support claim. Researches made by Spargo, president of the Vermont society, have revealed that when John Stark defeated the British and Hessians at the Battle of Bennington on September 17, 1777, his men fought under a plain flag that was made of red-and-white stripes and a blue upon which appeared white stars arranged in the circle. That flag is preserved in Bennington battle museum. Evidence in support of the "The Stars and Stripes first enemy" and that "Old Glory" its first baptism of fire" at Bennington on August 16, 1777, more than a year before the Bridge or Brandywine, seems able. But, at that Vermont, New York of the honor that the Fort Schuyler banner, a true Stars and Stripes, its honor will the Empire of the so-called Battle of Bennington not fought at Bennington was fought six miles from Bennington at Wallonsacre, and Wallonsacre the soil of New York!

For the flag listed above are too obvious to need explanation.

Due to the fragmentary records in the early history of the flag, there have been a number of disputed points in regard to the matter of "historical firsts." Did Betsey Ross of Philadelphia or Francis Hopkinson of New Jersey design the first Stars and Stripes? No one can say for certain.

Within the last year a new story about the first Stars and Stripes has come to light. Among the effects of Capt. John Hulbert, who commanded a Long Island company which went to Ticonderoga at the outbreak of the war and returned with British prisoners to show to congress in Philadelphia on November 20, 1775, has been found a flag, believed to have been the company flag of Captain Hulbert's organization, which has thirteen red and white stripes and thirteen six-pointed stars which are arranged in a sort of a cross. This flag was found in the attic of an old Long Island home and is now in the possession of William D. Halber of Bridgehampton, N. Y. He has seen the flag and the documents found with it, believe it possible that this flag, carried by Captain Hulbert's men, made such an impression upon the members of congress that, when they came to adopt a national ensign, they simply asked a local seamstress, (Betsey Ross), to make a similar flag. Or Hopkinson may have seen it, made a design after it and submitted to congress that design which was accepted and which led to the historic resolution of June 14, 1777.

Just as there is a dispute over the origin of the Stars and Stripes, so there is a dispute over the question of when the new flag, after its adoption by congress, received its first baptism of fire. The usual view is that this occurred at Fort Schuyler (or Fort Stanwix) near Rome, N. Y., on August 3, 1777. However, it has been pointed out by historians, who have in-

How Much Water Should Baby Get? A Famous Authority's Rule

Baby specialists agree nowadays, that during the first six months, babies must have three ounces of fluid per pound of body weight daily. An eight-pound baby, for instance, needs twenty-four ounces of fluid. Later on the scale is two ounces of fluid per pound absorbed by a breast-fed baby; best determined by weighing him before and after feeding for the whole day; and it is easily calculated for the bottle-fed one. Then make up any deficiency with water. Giving baby sufficient water often relieves his feverish, crying, upset and restless spells. If it doesn't, give him a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. For these and other ills of babies and children such as colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, sour stomach, loss of sleep, underweight, etc., leading physicians say there's nothing so effective. It is purely vegetable—the recipe is on the wrapper—and millions of mothers have depended on it in over thirty years of ever increasing use. It regulates baby's bowels, makes him sleep and eat right, enables him to get full nourishment from his food, so he increases in weight as he should. With each package you get a book on Motherhood worth its weight in gold. Just a word of caution. Look for the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on the package so you'll be sure to get the genuine. The forty-cent bottles contain thirty-five doses.

Great Need of Church Is Increased Sense of Authority in the Ministry

By BISHOP FREEMAN (Protestant Episcopal).

A CHURCH without problems is undesirable. But it is miraculous that the church should persistently outlive the faults and follies of its exponents and yet hold the affection of men over the world. More aggressiveness is needed because of increased opposition from without and a development of supineness within the church. The thing that is conspicuously lacking in the ministry is its sense of authority. Affirmations and pronouncements based on certain words of Christ which once had incisive authority now are yielding to speculation and negation.

That there have been, within recent years, disclosures of inefficiency in the church, must give any thoughtful man pause. There is serious need for statesmanship and the employment of the best strategy in the present situation. There may be need for a new alignment of the forces, and possibly for a change in the personnel of our leaders. That there is need of consolidating the ranks and a simultaneous and aggressive forward movement is conspicuously evident.

The church needs authority and conviction. A day where every man indulges in personal liberty to such an extent that he does that which is right in his own eyes, independent of what its effect may be upon others, will mark the beginnings of disorder, and the break-up of those things that, by long experience, have proved indispensable to the orderly ways of decent and profitable living.

Men are groping for the truth, they are yearning for a new manifestation of spiritual power, they are insisting that speculation and negation shall give place to deep conviction born of experience. They will heed only him whose message and whose ministry bear the unmistakable evidences of a divine imprimatur.

Judaism Positive, Christianity Negative, in Their Attitude Toward Life

By RABBI NORMAN SALIT, New York.

The Hindu dreams of Nirvana, the world-soul, in which he hopes one day to lose himself forever in escape from this world of evil flesh and desire. The ascetic Christian believes this life to be preparation for another world, better and purer.

Nietzsche and Schopenhauer preached the futility and sadness of life as we know it. Not so Judaism. Recognizing "the world to come," it nevertheless insists on the value of "this world."

There is pain here, but there are also blessings, for which we must thank God, and which we must endeavor to use rightly. There is vanity here, but there are also great tasks to be performed, which we must do in strength of soul and sanctity of spirit.

The entire elaborated complex of Jewish law, designed to cover almost every hour of the Jew's waking and sleeping, can be explained on no other basis than that a life worth so much legislation must certainly be worth living.

These other attitudes toward life, then, are negative. That of Judaism is positive. Perhaps that explains why the Jew has been able to live under persecution and oppression such as no other people has ever seen, and why in spite of everything he flourishes and is vital today.

Conflict of Interests Producing Dangerous Rift Between England and America

By DR. MINOT SIMONS, New York (Unitarian).

England and America are drifting into serious and definite opposition over the issue of the freedom of the seas, and war is more than probable unless an agreement is reached between the two countries.

It is Lincoln's spirit of frankness and sincerity which speaks both to England and to America the needed word of the hour, "Come out into the open with the issue and settle it now while there is yet time."

The conflict between America's insistence upon the free and undisturbed right to navigate the sea in time of war and the British policy of controlling neutral commerce with its opponent has been the underlying cause for the practical nullification of the Washington conference, the failure of the Geneva conference, the launching of this country's huge naval program and the serious difficulties with England in 1915 and 1916.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler's recent suggestion that the United States agree to recognize a blockade as punishment for an aggressor nation is the most constructive suggestion yet made in an effort to settle the problem.

Actions Refute Charges That Americans Are a Nation of "Dollar Chasers"

By DR. GUSTAV HESS, Mayor of Wiesbaden, Germany.

"Jingoism" and international jealousies are the foundation of the charges that the United States is a nation of "dollar chasers." I know America, for in the dark days that followed November 11, 1918, we had your officers and soldiers among us, as a part of the army of occupation. In such a position, conquerors and conquered, we could not help but come to know each other.

Dollar chasers? In Germany it is gold, in England it is sterling, in France it is franc. It is the same wherever you go, but it is in America that we find a great heart, which lights and forgives, which forgives and forgets.

You poured out your wealth to the needy and oppressed, and we in Germany benefited. It is so vastly different from what we expected that it was almost beyond our understanding. Your reception of our Bremen flyers was a fine display of friendship.

Education, of Itself, Does Not Necessarily Mean a Greater Humanity

By REV. MORGAN PHELPS, Brooklyn (Presbyterian).

Modern America has a passion for education. The rapid multiplication of universities in Brooklyn is typical of the trend throughout the country. That is a cause for gratitude. But we are rushing into a blind alley if we suppose that just any sort of education will of itself mean a greater humanity.

Let us recognize that any education is worse than futile which does not create an appreciation of the goodness and truth and beauty which, when made flesh in human life, bear the most convincing testimony that we ever hear to the reality of God.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By Mary Graham Bonner

HOLDING UP BOOKS

The peacocks were on the library table. Now, you may think that is a funny place for peacocks to be until I tell you that those peacocks were not real ones and that they were book racks which held up books.

One evening a fairy came to call on them and to hear their story. The peacocks could not look at each other, as one was at one end of the books and the other one at the other end.

The fairy noticed this at once, and said: "You might begin, peacock, at this end, and then when you pause, the other peacock will talk."

So that settled the difficulty and made it comfortable for all at once. "The story we want to tell you," said the first peacock, "is this: 'We want to let you know what an honor has been paid to peacocks. 'We thought you might tell the fairies about us, and that would please us so much.

"We get rather tired staying so still, but we're happy because of our story." The second peacock began to speak, as the fairy hopped over nearer that end of the book rack.

"We're so delighted because for years we've been considered very vain. 'We have beautiful trains and we love to spread them out and strut about and show them off.

"We know our trains are lovely, and the colors of our feathers very wonderful. 'No wonder, then, that we want to show them to the whole world. We think the world enjoys beautiful things, and so we show off our trains. 'I've not a doubt of that, but instead of thanking us for giving them so many opportunities of seeing our trains, they call us vain."

"We are vain, to be sure," said the first peacock, "but we like to give pleasure with our beauty. 'And so they should appreciate the pleasure we give as well.

"Of course, it's no wonder they chose us for lovely book racks. But more than that—we make lovely decorations—but we hold up books, and so they must think we're wise, and it's something we've never been thought before."

Both the peacocks looked very happy, and the fairy promised to tell the other fairies about them, but she laughed to herself for she didn't think it was any sign of wisdom to simply hold up books!

Strange Home

Tame mice at the London zoo are living in a home that is edible.

It is not as in the fairy story, made of cake, with chocolate tiles, toffee doors, and mint-drop windows—but just an old brown loaf.

Nor was it brought by fairies. The keeper coming upon that loaf, very stale, in his store, cut a small hole in the crust at the bottom of the loaf, and handed it over to the mice.

They did the rest for themselves. It is now converted into a very presentable dwelling which they prefer to their sleeping box.

They have made a back and a front entrance, but in their enthusiasm they went a little too far and ate away the whole of the "door."

Still, the "walls" and the "roof" stand, and should you suddenly approach the cage they will all skip "in-doors."

Not Much Help

Little Robert was anxious to learn to read, and looked forward to the time when he could go to school. After he had been attending school a few weeks he declared one day that he might as well stay home.

"But, Robert," protested his mother, "I thought you liked to go to school." "What's the use?" said the youngster. "I've been in school a whole month, and Miss S— hasn't taught me to read yet."

Capital's "Inner Shrine"
There is a set in Washington more exclusive even than the circle which numbers foreign diplomats, wealthy winter residents, federal officials and their families. The capital's real "inner shrine" is composed of the few people who can truthfully call themselves natives of Washington. They are members of families which have made the capital their home for generations. Jewels and fashionable dress are confined to social functions of the other group; the native Washingtonians are content to keep on living in old houses that seem quiet beside the palace-like abodes of "society" so called. Old Washingtonians delight to give the cold shoulder to office holders and the new rich. Some of the oldest inhabitants continue to drive about the street in carriages which served their forebears.

By gosh—when I say a thing is permissus it's permissus, whether it is or not!"—Kansas City Times.

The best selling mystery adventure novel of this generation. With all the strength and tenderness of a beautiful romance. Greatest moment any story ever had. 40 men against 4000. Glorified thrills, color and sweeping action. Mysterious disappearance of the famous blue-water sapphire. Devotion, sacrifice and the greater love. The beauty of a rural countryside and the wastes of an ocean-wide desert. "BEAU GESTE" is beyond the imagination to conceive. It must be seen to be appreciated. 25c and 50c.

THE STATE OF TEXAS.

To the Sheriff or any Constable of Terrell County, Greeting:—

You are hereby commanded to summon Joel R. Ware by making publication of this Citation once in each week for four consecutive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then in the nearest county where a newspaper is published, to appear at the next regular term of the District Court of Terrell County, to be holden at the Courthouse thereof, in Sanderson, Texas, on the second Monday in July, A. D. 1928, the same being the 9th day of July, A. D. 1928, then and there to answer a petition filed in said court on the 28th day of May, A. D. 1928, in a suit, numbered on the docket of said Court as No. 1716, wherein Annie Ware is plaintiff, and Joel R. Ware is defendant, and said petition alleging that on or about the 3rd day of May, 1896, plaintiff was lawfully married to said defendant; that they continued to live together as husband and wife until on or about the 1st day of February, 1925, when said defendant, with intention of abandonment, left plaintiff and has remained away from her for more than three years, since which last named date they have not lived together as husband and wife.

Plaintiff prays the Court that defendant be cited to appear and answer therein, for judgment dissolving the marriage relations, for costs of suit, and for such other and further relief, special and general, in law and in equity that she may be justly entitled to.

Herein fail not, and have you before said Court, at its aforesaid next regular term, this writ with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand and the seal of said Court, at its aforesaid next regular term, this writ with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.
