Methodist Church Benevolence Offering

Last Sunday at 11 a. m. preaching service at the First Methodist Church a free will offering was received for "Benevolences," as budgeted by the church. This offering was received by W. D. O'Bryant, chairman of the Official Board of the church; Mrs. H. L. Stueckey, church treasurer, and Prof. B. J. Brannan, Charge Lay Leader. The free will offering amounted to $115.45 cash.

This offering goes for various relief works, such as charity hospital work, orphan children, foreign and home mission work, supernuated ministers' relief, Christian education, world Bible service and many other items which come under the one Annual Budget Benevolences of the Methodist Church.

Out of 88 lay leaders in this conference of the Methodist Church, Prof. B. J. Brannan, lay leader of the Sanderson Church is the first to report all benevolences budgeted paid in full.

Toys For the Kiddies

The matinee given by Mrs. Carlton White at the Princess Theatre last Friday afternoon for the benefit of the Parent Teachers Association's local Christmas community ministry brought in many beautiful toys, and several dollars.

The committee of distribution for the P. T. were able to bring cheer and gladness to many homes of the less fortunate, and the community is very grateful to Mrs. White for her commendable service in this manner.

Miss Alice Kilpatrick, left Wednesday of this week for Christoval, where she will spend Christmas with her mother, Mrs. M. C. Kilpatrick.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Nations and son, James Robert, left Tuesday of this week for Kerrville, where they will spend the holidays with Mrs. Nations' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elder.

Dr. A. L. Moore's Message Sunday

Dr. A. L. Moore preached to a full house last Sunday at the First Methodist Church in his sermon, "The restoration of the Divine image in man," drew a dark picture of worldly religion, or faith in merely the historical fact of Atonement, and the resurrection of the Lord, but he drew a glorious picture of Spiritual religion that abiding working faith in the present person of Christ.

He said, "Christ saves from Sin, and not in Sin—it is now what you were years ago for Angels by disobedience became Devils in darkness—what counts is what you are now. It takes both God and man to save a soul—man is made in the Divine image—'A Free Moral being'—and God will never violate this inborn creative right to achieve, develop and growth. There is limitless possibilities in the realm of Divine power when man is willing to be honest before God, and join hand and heart with Him in the development of character, possessing capacity for the enjoyment of Spiritual blessings at his hand."

Dr. Moore closed his sermon touching on the glimpse of the glory beyond for those who endure to the end.

Every person in the house came forward after the message to shake the hand of the new presiding elder of the El Paso District.

W. M. S. Meet

The Baptist W. M. S. met Saturday, December 20, at the home of Mrs. E. P. Halley for social day. The yuletide sentiment was expressed by a beautiful tree laden with gifts which were distributed by our pastor, Bro. Ira Harrison.

The hostesses, Mrs. Halley and Mrs. B. Davis, served a delicious salad course. The following program was given.

Song, Hark the Herald Angel Sing.

Devotional, Mrs. Ira Deaton. Peace on Earth, Mrs. G. Mussey.

The Wise Man's Story, Mrs. Sullivan.

Piano Solo, Miss Bess McAdams.

The Star Pointing to the East, Mrs. McAdams.

Song, Silent Night.

Prayer, Mrs. Wm. Druse.

The Star Leading to the West, Mrs. G. Mussey.

Prayer, Mrs. H. D. Johnson.

In the Land of the Southern Cross, Mrs. A. D. Brown.

Song, Joy to the World.

In W. M. U. Paths, by Mrs. H. D. Johnson.

Song, It Came Upon the Midnight Clear.

Closing Prayer, Rev. Ira Harrison.

Those present were, Mesdames O'Dell, Brown, Deaton, Mussey, Sheely, Black, Schupbach, Johnson, House, McAdams, Dishman, Halley, Burrows, Adams, Sullivan, Davis, Druse, O'Neal, Brown, Miss Bess McAdams and the Rev. Ira Harrison.

Highway Delegates Meet at Marfa

Voting to undertake a campaign of personal publicity along the route from California to Florida in an effort to draw more through tourist trade over the Border Highway, 32 members of the U. S. 90 association met in Marfa Monday afternoon with Clay Holland, their president, and transacted important business relative to plans for advertising the road from Van Horn to San Antonio by the Mexican border way. A representative group of men were in Marfa for the session, coming from El Paso, Del Rio, Uvalde, and other points between and all were enthusiastic in their support of the intensive program finally adopted.

E. H. Simon, manager of the chamber of commerce in El Paso, made a plea for more personal touches in the future advertising campaigns, stating that personal contacts with influential men along the route would send more traffic through this section than all the literature that could possibly be sent out. The idea of having a representative go through parts of New Mexico distributing data to hotels, tourist camps and automobile bureaus was considered and it was decided to try this plan of advertising in the near future. In line with this publicity the idea of sending a man from San Antonio to Jacksonville, Florida, to give out picture boards advertising this route was also discussed. A list of 50 towns and cities along the route has been made out and a schedule of visits worked out so that the man making the tour would have a committee to meet with him in each town visited to assist in working out his plans. All this traveling must be done on schedule, according to A. F. Robinson, secretary of the association, and if an accident should put him behind time he would skip all appointments until he caught up, he stated.

An added effort to get active construction work started on the bad stretch in Kinney county was decided on, also. The stretch from Sycamore creek to Cline is probably the greatest hindrance to travel along the whole route, according to advice and it has been reported that the entire distance is in the best shape it has been in for the past several years from the viewpoint of the driver. Presidio and Kinney counties have both voted their bonds for blacktopping the highway through their counties but as yet delays have kept actual construction work from getting started. As soon as this pavement is finished it is expected that this route from San Antonio to El Paso will be greatly improved.

Further discussion on the upkeep of the signs which are now along the borderway was had at this meeting and the members decided to contract with some reliable company to keep the boards in repair and in good shape. The next meeting of this group will be held in Del Rio unless one is called before that time, according to the secretary. The dates for the Del Rio gathering will be set later but they will come some time between July 4 and 15, it was stated.

Marfa led in attendance with eight, Alpine had seven members present; there were three from El Paso, two from Sanderson, two from Del Rio, four from Van Horn, one from Valentine and two from Uvalde.

The above is a clipping from the Alpine Avalanche of last week. The meeting above mentioned was held on Monday, December 15. We are sorry to have failed to make a mention of this in our last week's paper. Judge Henshaw and C. A. Morland attended this meeting but failed to report to the paper.

Pencil-Painting on Stamped Linen

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Yes, we agree with you that this lovely wall-hanger as illustrated looks as if it might be a rare bit of tapestry, woven, perhaps, from a collection of priceless art treasures or gracing the walls of a princely home. In appearance it is all that, but here is the amazing truth about this renaissance wall panel—it is merely a matter of stamped linen worked with aquarello water-color pencils. And the best part of it is that the amateur who does not know the first thing about art can work up these exquisite effects simply by following directions in the use of colored pencils which are sold

Vary the Way of Cooking Winter Vegetables

Winter vegetables need not become monotonous if one takes pains to vary the way they are cooked. Here's a combination of two good foods that can be found in every country store cellar and on any grocer's counter in the country. Yet, when put together they make a tasty dish that seems like something new. This is an excellent accompaniment to roast pork or roast beef—in fact, to any meat dish which gains savor by the addition of cooked apples. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture enumerates the ingredients needed:

- 6 medium-sized carrots
- 3 tart apples
- 1/2 lb. fat
- 1/2 lb. sugar
- 1/2 tsp. salt

Scrape the carrots and cut them lengthwise into thin slices. Pare the apples, core, and cut into slices about a fourth of an inch thick. Place a single layer of the apples and the carrots in a large skillet with the fat, cover tightly and cook until well browned, turn and brown the other side. Just before the cooking is finished sprinkle with the sugar and salt. Serve on a hot platter, first a layer of carrots, then a layer of apples, so the two can be lifted together.

Lemon Has Variety of Uses in Any Household

The lemon has a variety of uses in the household aside from that of food. A slice of lemon kept near the sink in the kitchen is useful for removing fruit and vegetable stains from the hands, and helps to keep them smooth and soft.

A half lemon placed in the washing machine makes the laundry beautifully white.

Lemon juice and salt rubbed on an iron-scorched spot on white garments, then placed in the sun, will remove the spot.

It is excellent as a dentifrice, and makes a refreshing mouth wash.

Used in the bath it softens the water and gives a delightful feeling of freshness and exhilaration.

Lemon juice is healing to small sores or cuts, even though the first sensation may not be so pleasant.

In most all fancy work departments for this type of work.

Besides wall hangers depicting various scenes, linen pictures can be had for framing, also pillow tops. However, now that interior decorators have in this day and age revived the vogue for wall hangers and are placing so much emphasis on their effectiveness, we selected this very pretty specimen as a most timely theme.

The idea in brief is that by moistening the linen and working with the colored pencils according to the printed chart which comes with each subject the tones and tints resolve themselves into a most exquisite water-color effect.

Materials for this work include a small brush, a box of colored pencils, the stamped linen piece (every pattern has a chart attached giving the color scheme) also material for lining.

The first step is to dip the brush in water and moisten a small portion of the design. Then work over with the pencils using the chart as a color guide. The little panel centered in the illustration indicates this chart in miniature. On the original, tiny letters are printed "B" for black, "Y" for yellow and letters in combination when two colors are to be blended. To make a stronger effect the pencil itself is dipped in water.

Puffs of Locomotive

For every revolution of its driving wheel a locomotive gives forth four separate puffs. These are made by the rapid sending out of waste steam from the smokestack. A locomotive with a wheel of average size going 50 miles an hour gives out 800 puffs a minute. When there are more than 18 per second the human ear can no longer distinguish them.

Teaching Children to Feed Themselves

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Several good results are obtained by teaching children, from the earliest age, to feed themselves and take part in such activities as laying their own plates and carrying food to and from the table. They soon learn, also, to help mother by setting the table for many meals and putting away silver and other clean utensils and dishes after meals.

The most important effect of encouraging self-help at meal times is of course on the child himself. He develops steadiness in his muscles and self-confidence as he gradually becomes able to manage a plate, or glass, or tray containing both, without spilling anything. The little boy in this picture from the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture is only three, and he has reached a point where he can safely carry his own lunch from the kitchen to his little table. He calls it "playing cafeteria."

The joy of accomplishment in doing this means far more to a little child than an adult often realizes. Sometimes mothers who are in a hurry to get work done, say "Here, I can do it quicker," or "I'm afraid you'll spill it—mother will carry it for you." What if he does spill a little food on a washable tray? He can learn not to with a little practice. Let him start by carrying one dish not easy to tip—a bowl of cereal, or a plate of vegetables. The first time he carries his entire lunch without spilling a drop, he needs a little praise; he will try to do it as well every time.

A child as young as fifteen months can be given his own spoon and fork to fit his small hands, and a chance to practice eating. Feeding himself will be slow, awkward, and spilly at first, and the mother is constantly tempted to save time and mess by taking the spoon away and feeding him herself. But this only postpones the child's independence. If his clothing is protected by a large bib, and the floor and table are washable, a few accidents do not matter.

In a very short time the second benefit from the child's new accomplishment will be evident—the mother's time will actually be saved many times over, while the little one progresses from the stage of learning to manage a spoon up to the point where he can carry a tray, pour out and carry a glass of milk, and finally, carry two things at once if they are not too heavy.

The lunch for the little boy in the picture consists of sandwiches—bread and butter with finely chopped lettuce as filling—creamed canned beans, and a pan-broiled meat ball; milk; and a simple dessert of rice and cooked fruit.

Some Good Things for the Table

By NELLIE MAXWELL

Burly, dosing humble bee,
Where thou art, is climate for me.
Let them sail for Porto Rique,
Far off heats through seas to seek;
I will follow thee alone,
Thou animated torrid zone.
Zigzag steerer, desert cheerer,
Let me chase thy waving lines;
Keep me nearer, me my hearer,
Singing over shrubs and vines.
—Emerson.

When making pastry prepare more than is needed and place in a cold place or ice chest, tightly covered with waxed paper. The thoroughly chilled mixture makes more flaky crust than that baked at once. From this pastry a few tarts may be made in a hurry, or cheese straws, a meat pie, using leftover meat.

Ice box rolls are another special that can be mixed and left in the ice chest for a week. Take off just the amount needed for rolls and put them to rise; when light, bake. A tin of delicious rolls are quickly served. An hour or two before baking make them into small rolls and keep very warm, tightly covered. It is better to grease them well with lard—that keeps the flour from drying out on top while rising. They should be more than double their bulk when put into the oven.

When baking potatoes prepare enough so that the next day a few will be available for cream potatoes. They are fully as good as those freshly cooked.

By keeping jars of chow chow, capers, olives, pickles as well as cheese, celery, anchovies and numerous other condiments and relishes, one has access to delightful fillings for sandwiches which need to be made in a hurry. A jar of mayonnaise and a bottle of french dressing should be made in such quantities that they are always available. It takes very little extra effort to double the amount when preparing a salad dressing, and then there is always a supply.

Wash the heads of lettuce and place in a cloth or covered dish in the ice chest, then the lettuce will always be ready for use. Parsley well washed, leaving the moisture clinging to the leaves, if put in a fruit jar tightly covered, will keep two weeks, fresh and green. Add a bit of water if it seems to dry out.

To make lime water take a piece of fresh lime the size of an egg, put in a fruit jar and cover with a quart of water. Let stand overnight, drain off the water, bottle and keep in a cool, dry place.

Cream to whip should be very cold and at least a day old.

Hard Sauce.—Cream one-fourth pound of butter, add gradually one cupful of powdered sugar. When light and white add one unbeaten egg white and beat five minutes. Add nutmeg.

Chicken Salad Is Popular for Lunch

Chicken Salad Is One of the Most Delicious Dishes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"Again she ordered chicken salad." The cartoonists have made chicken salad a national by-word, through poking fun at the inexperienced young girl who does not know exactly what to choose on the restaurant menu, with its French names for ordinary dishes and sauces she never heard of.

Nevertheless, to order chicken salad shows common sense in more ways than one. At its best chicken salad is one of the most delicious dishes one can get anywhere. Even in a restaurant of no special distinction it will be one of the most satisfactory orders, for the method of making it is widely understood and the chief ingredients—cooked chicken, celery, lettuce and salad dressing—are obtainable almost anywhere.

There are a few points about putting chicken salad together, however, that make all the difference between well-flavored and indifferently flavored results. One is the slight suggestion of onion flavor in the vinegar.

Chicken Salad.

- 1 fowl weighing about 3 pounds
- 3 bunches celery
- 1 cup mild vinegar
- 1 sliced onion
- 1 cup Mayonnaise dressing
- 1 lettuce

Simmer the chicken until tender in a small quantity of water. When about half done, add a teaspoonful of salt. Let the chicken cool in the broth. After it is cold remove the skin, strip the meat from the bones and cut it into small pieces of even size. In the meantime allow a few slices of onion to soak in a cupful of mild vinegar to give the vinegar a slight onion flavor. Remove a cupful of chicken fat from the cold broth and mix with this vinegar. Pour this mixture over the chicken, adding more salt and vinegar if needed to season it well. A few drops of tabasco improve it. Let this stand, or marinate, for several hours, or overnight. Cut the celery stalks and some of the tender leaves into small pieces and let stand in a cold place until crisp. Mix enough thick, well-seasoned mayonnaise dressing with the chicken to coat the pieces well. Shortly before the salad is to be served, add the celery and more mayonnaise if needed. Stir the mixture lightly so as not to break up the chicken. Add still more salt if needed. Pile the salad lightly on crisp lettuce and serve at once.

If desired, add one-quarter cupful of capers when the celery and chicken are combined. Hard-cooked eggs may be used as a garnish or cut in pieces and mixed with the chicken to make it go further.

Sweet Clover Is Great as Manure

Tests Show Crop of Big Value in Rotation to Be Plowed Under.

Rather astonishing results as to the value of sweet clover as a nitrogen-furnishing manure are announced by the Ohio agricultural experiment station. After three years' test it was found that not less than 100 pounds of nitrogen were contained in an acre of sweet clover on May 10 in any of the test years. An application of 30 pounds of any high analysis fertilizer, such as 3-12-4, would add less than nine pounds of nitrogen to the soil.

Plow Under Clover.

These figures were developed in tests to determine the best time of the year to plow under sweet clover. It was discovered that the plants had the greatest nitrogen content about the middle of May, May 10 being the peak accumulation in the experiments. The white sweet clover was used in the experiment stations. Since the value of sweet clover as a manure has been demonstrated seed houses are handling larger and larger quantities of the seed, carefully tested for germination quality and cleaned and re-cleaned to free it from weed seed and other foreign substances.

Time to Plow Under.

The outstanding practical lesson of the experiments is that for economic soil improvement it is best to plow under the growth of sweet clover from April 15 to May 10, so that the full growing season may be utilized by the crop of corn. Sweet clover left to stand over for the full second year produced more organic matter, it was found, but not much more nitrogen than when plowed under May 10.

The experiment demonstrated that an acre of sweet clover on May 10 contained sufficient nitrogen for the entire nitrogen requirement of 30 bushels of corn and the stalks to produce it and that the sweet clover was of extreme value as a rotation crop to be plowed under in the spring.

Salt Poisoning Among Chickens Not Common

It is a well known fact that the chicken, like other farm animals, has need of a certain amount of salt in its ration. The fact that there have been reported a great many instances in years gone by of chickens being killed by eating feed that contained a considerable amount of salt, seems to have led to a very general belief among poultrymen that chickens are very easily poisoned by common table salt.

Certain experiments have been carried out which indicate that under the right conditions chickens can tolerate a much larger amount of salt than has generally been supposed. It has been shown, for example, that chickens eight or nine weeks old could be restricted to a ration containing as high as 8 per cent of common salt without serious results.

Best Hatching Results From Fowls on Range

Eggs from birds in large pens in the house hatch best. Birds that have large yards or free range usually give better hatching results than those kept in small pens.

Feeding is important. Only clean, wholesome feeds should be used. The ration should consist of about equal parts of grain fed in the litter and mash not too rich in animal protein. While a good flow of eggs during the hatching season is desirable, it is better to have a smaller number of strongly fertile eggs than a larger number of less hatchable eggs.

The mash should contain not over 20 per cent of dry milk and meat scrap together. If one has plenty of liquid skim milk or buttermilk, it is equivalent approximately to 10 per cent of dry milk or meat scraps.

War on Tuberculosis

The United States Department of Agriculture has developed a means by which the location of the tissues and organs of a cow, a hog, or chicken affected with tuberculosis may be visualized, as also the tubercular lesions themselves. These are pictured in their natural color. The means by which this is done is by an ingenious mechanical outfit, the chief feature of which is a control of electric lights. It is designed to be used as an exhibit or display at public gatherings.

Crank Case Oil

Farmers planning on using crank case oil as a preservative on hay racks, eave rods, and so on, may find that this will help a little in keeping water from soaking into the lumber, but would hardly be worth the labor of putting it on.

Cresosote is excellent and a mixture of half cresosote and half gas house tar is good, but the used crank case oil has no value as a preservative and very little indeed as a paint.

Treatment for Lice

Powdered sabadilla seed and flowers of sulphur mixed together, half and half, is a very effective remedy for treating cattle for lice in the winter time. Sprinkle it well over their backs and around the base of the horns. This treatment might not succeed in ridding the cattle of lice directly but it will keep them free to such an extent that they will give the cattle but very little trouble.

Evening Fairy Tale for Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

You could have told from Letty's eyes that she was a very bright bird.

The eyes of the bird always show just how much wisdom and intelligence the bird has, and Letty proved that she had a great deal.

When any one spoke to her, her eyes looked very bright. They watched the person who was speaking to her, showing she was listening and paying attention.

If her eyes had wandered all about she would have shown she was stupid. A bird is very much like a person

It was a small piece but it was extremely good!

Letty learned to say almost everything after a while. My, what a talker she became.

And she wanted to show Alice how pleased she was with everything so she chatted pleasantly most of the time.

When callers would come they would ask if the parrot was ever still, and then Letty would say:

"Ever still? No, never still."

They always laughed then, and did not mind her chattering. For after they had been there a little while Letty muttered and said things in very low tones so as not to disturb any one.

It was night time and Letty had her head under her wing. Sometimes she slept this way, just as a canary would sleep.

But often she would huddle up on her perch and doze off with her head drooping down a little on her chest.

But this night she was sound, sound asleep and her head was hidden away—while she was dreaming of seeds and cake and all the goodies that parrots love.

All of the family were asleep when Letty seemed to notice something strange.

She didn't like the smell that came to her. Now she was wide awake.

She didn't want to disturb the family. She was a good parrot, and never disturbed any one who might be sleeping.

But this she knew was not right. She was sure of it.

The smell became stronger and there was something rather frightful about it.

She got off her perch and went into the room where Alice's daddy slept.

Then she shrieked at the top of her parrot voice.

"Never, never still. Never still, never still."

Alice's daddy woke right up. So did the other members of the family.

And it was Letty who saved them all. She had smelt fire and if Alice's daddy hadn't noticed right away the spark that had come out of the fireplace, which hadn't been put out as carefully as usual, would have set fire to everything.

Vegetable Fritters With Cold Sliced Meat

Nothing like crisp vegetable fritters as an addition to a plate of cold sliced meat of any sort. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture tells how to make celery fritters:

- 1 1/2 cups sifted soft wheat flour
- 1/2 cup salt
- 1/2 tsp. baking powder
- 1 egg
- 1 cup milk
- 2 cups chopped celery
- 1 ts. melted fat

Sift together the flour, salt, and baking powder, add the beaten egg, milk, celery, and fat. Fry the celery fritters in deep fat or, if preferred, in a skillet in shallow fat. In either case drop the mixture by spoonfuls into the fat and fry rather slowly. The fritters need time to cook through to the center before the outside becomes too brown. Drain the fritters on absorbent paper and serve hot.

Never, Never Still.

In this way. When you speak to people and they let their eyes gaze on anything and don't pay attention to any one thing they're not so bright and keen.

Letty belonged to a little girl named Alice. Now Alice fed her parrot some very nice seeds and bits of corn. Letty thought she had fine food, and every day after lunch Letty would have a piece of cake.

THE STORY

Renewing a childhood attachment, Ernestine Briceland, of a wealthy family, is attracted by Will Todd, newspaper artist, son of a carpenter. Ernestine's sister, Lillian, knowing their father would disapprove, urges her to end the affair, but Ernestine refuses. They make a runaway marriage. Briceland is furious, but helpless. Lillian, in a fit of rage, Lillian's consent to be his wife. Will and Ernestine begin their married life in a single room in a humble neighborhood. John Poole, Will's best friend, gives a birthday party for Ernestine at Ruby Pastano's resort. Pastano irritates Ernestine by criticizing Will for bringing her to such a place. Ernestine is hurt because Will insists he must take Poole, who is drunk, home and leave her in care of his friend, Tucker. It brings their first quarrel.

CHAPTER V—Continued

"Undress and get in bed," said Will. "What do you mean, sitting here, without more clothes on, in this icy room? Do you wish to harm yourself?"

She laughed. "You are concerned about my welfare, aren't you?" she taunted him, and for answer he seized her shoulders and gave her a quick little shake.

"Ernestine," he demanded, "will you do as I say?"

She stood trembling, fighting down the stupid well of tears, reaching out after her departing anger.

"Will," her voice was as low, as vital as his own—"I'm in such a rage that I have got to talk to you. You can't treat me this way. You can't leave me to the courtesy of strangers. You can't take me to such places—where there's drunkenness and immorality. You have got to be a better husband to me than that. I have given up everything for you—everything—"

"When you are in bed, I'll talk to you," he answered, as he threw off his coat and went to the wardrobe and brought her her warm dressing gown, nightgown and fur-lined moccasins. He undid the fastening of her dress and before she could arm herself against him, he lifted it off over her head. The satin slip, the slithering underthings—her body was like cold marble. In a moment, it seemed, she was in nightgown and dressing gown, in bed, and he was drawing off her gossamer hose and chafing her feet in his own cold hands until the mottled skin showed red with blood. Then he tucked her under the covers and brought a chair and sat down beside her, not touching her. Ernestine laughed again.

"If you really cared," she said, her eyes dark with anger and pain, "whether I were warmly in bed you might have come with me to see."

He was silent. He was very pale. Small beads of perspiration stood upon his forehead in the cold room.

"I am not likely to be ill," she said scornfully. "Don't be afraid of that."

Still he did not speak, but looked at her as though he were trying to arrange some momentous decision in his mind. He took a cigarette from his pocket with hands trembling so that when he lighted it he burned himself, and flung the match away with an angry exclamation.

"Ernestine," he said, turning to her, "there is one thing that I will never take from you. You are hysterical now, but no matter how angry, how sick or upset you are, there is one thing that you must never say to me. Never again. I won't take it from you."

He drew the smoke into his lungs with an effort at self-control, while she stared up at the blur of him, her dark eyes swimming with tears.

"I didn't know that you gave up anything for me," he said. "I thought this marriage was on both sides the satisfying of a strong need. I never asked you to make a sacrifice for me. At least, that is not the way I thought of it, and I don't think you did either. But if you made one, I will never ask you to continue it. Any time you want what you left you have only to put on your hat and go back and get it. This must be understood between us. You are under no compulsion to stay with me. If you gave up other things, it was because this was something you wanted more. Either our marriage was a gain for both of us, or it was a mistake."

"Why don't you go ahead and remind me that I proposed to you?" she said, but helpless in her own emotions to be sensible.

"Did you?" he asked coolly. "I thought the matter was spontaneous. I thought it was inevitable. Don't cheapen yourself with such a thought. But however it happened, it was not a sacrifice. I will not be sacrificed for. I don't want anybody to give up anything for me. Understand?"

There was a moment of silence, and he went on swiftly:

"It may be that before we are through with this business of marriage it will be really hard for us. I don't know that I'll ever be what your family considers essential in a husband—a good provider. I may never make more than a small living for us. Sometimes, like now, I feel such power in me that I could go out and take life by the throat. I feel at times that there are big things in me, Ernestine. But perhaps all human beings feel that way. There are other moments when I'm not even sure that I can hold the job I have. What then? Maybe there is worse ahead of us, instead of better. What of that? Do we love each other, or don't we? Are we married, or are we simply having a lovely time and will go home when the party is over? You can do as you like. I will not interfere with your actions, but neither will I come home and account for my own. If Mr. Poole is drunk and it seems necessary to me to go home with him, you must allow me the exercise of my own judgment. I didn't leave you unprotected. In reality, you left me."

"It wasn't only that," she was actually defending herself. "It was everything. Lillian and Loring coming in on us, and Mr. Pastano—"

Half weeping, still partly in the hold of anger, she told him all that Mr. Pastano had said to her. He listened attentively, but made nothing of it.

"What do you care," he exclaimed, "what that bully says? It's only a compliment. It's only a denial of his whole code of morals. The fact that you could sit in his dirty place and still be so clean that even he could see it, gives the lie to all he says."

"I don't understand anything," wailed Ernestine. "Only I was so hurt—I had to go off alone with them. I was so happy, so thrilled, and then everything was spoiled without any warning. I can't adjust myself to things like you do—I don't understand. Of course I care what Mr. Pastano thinks. I don't want him to think you would take me out to associate with p-prostitutes!"

He sat on the edge of the bed now and held her hand and smoked another cigarette and thought about this. But they had come back into a calmer place. He began to reason with her in his steady voice, looking down at her with his kindled, intelligent eyes.

"You see, Ernestine, he's got the old line on things, and we, I believe, want the new. Pastano's morality and virtue are only for women. I've been there often, and he's made me very welcome. How unreal it is. Virtue is a woman's prerogative, and a stone wall about her to insure it. A harem! You don't believe in walled gardens for wives, do you, Ernestine? After all, no man can protect his wife's virtue for her, if she is determined to throw it away."

"You think then that a husband has no responsibilities at all?"

"I didn't say that. Certainly he has responsibilities. He is to provide for her to the best of his ability. He is to share all his earnings and his honors with her. He is to shelter her and speak kindly to her and love her and not find fault. He is to be faithful in word and thought. He is to be natural in his relationship with her and avoid sentimentality. But also, she is to be a woman grown and unafraid, his equal, not a child for him to protect like a child."

"You are so hard," she wept, "so hard with me."

He bent and kissed her and pressed his face to hers. "It's life," he said. "We have to grow up. Life is hard."

Ernestine wakened next morning to find that the pain and confusion of the night before had vanished into a new and not unhappy perspective on her life.

Copper Mines of Chile Worked by the Incas?

What is now the world's largest known copper ore deposit was worked by the prehistoric Incas, judging by remains that have been found at and around the copper mines of Chuquibambilla, Chile. Within the mine, primitive tools have been found from time to time, such as stone hammers and wooden shovels, as well as mummified remains of early Indian miners, one of which is now at the American Museum of Natural History in New York.

The ruins of Pucaro, an ancient fortified city destroyed by the Spaniards during their first invasion of Chile, are 25 miles from Chuquibambilla. Ancient graves belonging to this prehistoric city have yielded bows and other utensils of copper as well as bead necklaces made from brochantite and atacamite, minerals characteristic of the Chuquibambilla deposits.

The Incas, reputed as pre-Columbian, America's best miners and metal workers, conquered this part of Chile about 1443, it is reliably estimated, and the old mines may, therefore, have been worked at least ninety years before the discovery of America.—Kansas City Star's Science Service.

Reason Enough

The Japanese have no swear words. Thus we know they never get out of a bathtub to hear an apologetic voice saying: "Wrong number."—Glasgow Republican.

For the first time she could see what a blow it had been to mamma and papa to have her living in Erie street, with no margin, no possessions, no possibility of restraint or economy. How difficult it was—perhaps for their sakes she ought to co-operate with mamma and papa to do something for them. Enough money for a decent flat—a small comfortable house—it would be so much easier for mamma.

But Ernestine felt again the cold wind on her cheeks, remembered vividly how she had wept, and how she had said, again and again, "I promise, Will—I promise." He had asked her for no such statement. She had done the bargaining. Whatever it cost—to her family or to herself—she would keep that promise to Will, and live on what he brought her until he himself told her to do otherwise.

Ernestine began to wonder if she would be as good a wife and mother as Elaine Briceland, when the time came that Will had made good.

She paused to consider this thought and smiled happily, for now she saw that for the first time she was entirely confident of Will's success. It had been as much longing as conviction before, but now she was sure. How hard he was! His hardness brought only admiration this morning, the practical respect of a practical person.

"If you want to go back, you've only to put on your hat and do it!" She wondered how many men had the courage to take a stand like that.

She did not regret the quarrel at all. Her marriage had attained a new reality. She knew that she was not simply having a good time. She knew that she could not go home when the party was over. They had advanced from the honeymoon period into permanence.

In what way, here and now, could she make this new feeling practical, make it effective?

How would they meet the obligation of childbirth? Would she go home to mamma or to some hospital? They would have to plan without mamma if they were to be consistent. She understood that babies were frightfully expensive. She had read articles in magazines about them. Yet thousands of women with no more money than she possessed had babies. She would have to find out how they managed.

She would have to see a doctor, ask questions, answer them. She would have to find out the rates at different hospitals, under different conditions. And after she had investigated the matter and decided on her own plan, she would have to begin to save a definite amount every week, out of Will's pay, so that they might meet the emergency. That would be fun—to have money in her hand, when her time came!

She decided to say nothing to Will about this, until she knew. Like her mother, she must exercise her virtue privately and let results speak for her. She had a few dollars with which to open a savings account. There was a bank nearby, a branch of a downtown bank. She would get a metal coin chest for herself and Will.

Her mental activity now became physical, and she rose and dressed, kissed Will lightly on the cheek, and left a note on the dresser for him, lest he think she had taken his advice and gone home. Downstairs she found a box full of roses for her, and a card in it with a few words written in an erect elaborate script:

"To beg forgiveness for my rudeness, and to express the hope that we may be real friends some day.—L. S. Pastano."

Ernestine gave the roses to Mrs. Bennett without comment and went out.

Last April she had been a school-girl. Now she was filled with the solemn importance of wifehood and motherhood. The sweet air filled her with happiness. Her husband's face fled before her mind's eye, down the long curve of boulevard, an indignant countenance, fiery, strong. Her heart contracted within her at the thought of him and his love.

The visit to the doctor's was prolonged, but she reached mamma's house in time for lunch, and found the two women so full of Lillian's plans that she kept her own secret.

Determined to make the day complete she left early and set out for the long tiresome street car ride to the Northwest side. She was ashamed to realize how few were the visits she and Will had made to the little house where his mother and father lived. She was at her mother's home two or three times a week, but they had not been to see Will's mother half a dozen times in the months of their marriage. It was not intentional neglect, but it always seemed to work out that way, and Will had been as lax as she about spending his one day a week on that long journey.

FIRST HAS NO CHANCE

A party of travelers were relating their experiences on sea and land. Only one man of the crowd sat silent in his corner. Presently some one addressed him.

"Have you traveled much, sir?"

"A little," was the meek reply. "I've been round the world seven times."

"Then you must have been through some exciting adventures. Perhaps you would tell us about some of them."

"Well," said the stranger, "probably my most remarkable experience was during my last voyage. At one time we found the heat so terrific that we used to take turns to go down into the stokehold to get cooled."

Then everybody decided it was time to go to bed.

ENTOMOLOGIST SHOCKED

"The great entomologist was terribly shocked today."

"How was that?"

"He was out after butterflies and somebody asked him if he was the dog catcher and used the little net to catch puppies with."

Revelations

If people always spoke the truth it wouldn't make us gladder. The world would wiser be, in sooth. But likewise vastly sadder.

Sharing Responsibilities

"What do you understand by coalition?"

"It's supposed to give the back-seat driver a chance," said Senator Sorghum. "You keep the wheels of legislation going without knowing exactly who is running the machine."—Washington Star.

Quite So

"Pardon me, I'm sure I've seen you somewhere before. You're so much like Jones, the chauffeur."

"I am Jones."

"Ah, that accounts for the remarkable likeness."—Faul, Vienna.

EASY RUNABOUT

"Jack says he has a dandy little runabout."

"Yea, it'll run about two miles and then quit."

Rest in Pieces

Here lies what's left of Adolph McPharr. He bumped a mule with his midget car.

Payments Overdue

Servant—There's a man to see you, Mr. Master—Toll him to take a chair.

Servant—He has, sir. He's taken them all, and they're moving out the piano now. He's from the furniture store.

Fault of Chewing Gum

Barber—How did you get your mustache in this condition?

Customer—I tried to steal a kiss from a girl who was chewing gum.

An Expensive Curiosity

"You don't love me any more. When you see me crying now you don't ask why."

"I'm awfully sorry, my dear, but these questions have already cost me such a lot of money."

Loss and Gain

"Did your husband find that golf improved his health?"

"Yes. It improved his health. But unless he learns to play better, it will spoil his disposition."

Dockage Decreased by Cleaning Grain

One Big Help Is in Better Crop Rotation.

How can weeds and dockage be decreased? One approach is through better methods of plowing and seed bed preparation, and especially disking of stubble to prevent loss of moisture and the weeds going to seed. This means more power and better planning of work, but more power is now easily available. Another help is in better crop rotation, the use of row crops to allow of thorough cultivation, and of more extensive growing of alfalfa and sweet clover to enrich the soil and to smother out weeds. These changes will call for careful planning in the farm organization and management, and must be of rather slow development.

One very effective remedy immediately at hand is in the cleaning of grain at the threshing machine or before hauling to market, and the sowing only of carefully cleaned and graded grain. Surely no one can expect to sow foul seed and not have weeds and dockage, and yet that is what thousands of farmers are doing right along. Effective cleaning devices are now available at reasonable prices which will remove practically every trace of weed seed and defective kernels and leave only the clean marketable grain, with no loss in hauling, market price or freight. And the dockage removed, when ground fine, makes excellent stock food and with no danger of further fouling of the land.

Each Year People Are Buying Chicks Earlier

Practically every hatchery man in the Middle West that has been in business for several years reports that each year people are buying chicks earlier. An occasional year when the late winter and early spring are below normal in temperatures and snow is heavier than usual this trend towards earlier buying is interrupted, but in general the trend is there.

This is as it should be—if we are going to make poultry profitable with the prices that appear to be facing us during the next few years. Pulletts must be kept laying throughout the winter. Under Iowa conditions, with the American breeds being largely used, winter eggs from well-developed birds mean early chicks. February and even late January will be increasingly important in the hatchery business, and April and May decreasingly so within a very few years.

Treat Seed Oats

A dust treatment for seed oats said to be considerably superior to the standard formaldehyde method of oats disease control has been developed by Dr. Benjamin Koehler of the University of Illinois. The dust is an ethylmercury-chloride compound and in experiments has checked smut and other diseases which affect oats. Seed oats can be treated with this new method at a cost of about 10 cents per bushel for materials.

Wintering Dairy Cows

Dairy cows forced in winter to rustle a part of their feed in a cornstalk field cannot produce enough milk to make them profitable. Even though the major portion of the ration is comprised of highly concentrated grain feeds the cows that have to rustle for their dry roughage in the stalk field are up against a tremendous handicap. A potent reason is that there is very little in cornstalks from which a cow can make milk.

FARM FACTS

Good clover or alfalfa hay is most excellent sheep roughage.

Feed cost is about 60 per cent of the total expense of producing eggs.

It is best always to feed whole milk to a calf till it is at least two weeks old.

Use the formaldehyde seed treatment for oats, but do it where plenty of air is circulating.

The first thing to do in cleaning a chicken house is to sweep out all of the dust and dirt accumulations.

Grain and hay should be given to the calf as soon as it can be taught to eat. The sooner the better.

Small, cracked and dirty eggs have little market value but are valuable for human food if consumed on the farm.

The drinking supply of water in the laying house should always be clean and never below 50 degrees in the winter.

October is a favorable month for the setting out of fruit trees. Water and mulch are the prime essentials for successful autumn planting.

One of the most valuable deductions from the scientific studies of egg production is that it does not pay to keep old hens in the laying flock.

Records show that in the average the spring chick matures into a laying pullet around October. For the year immediately following she is at her best as an egg producer.

People just don't distinguish

It's utterly unfair, of course. But if a man will smoke an outrageously strong pipe, nobody is going to get close enough to him to appreciate his heart of gold. Don't keep potential friends at a distance. Sir Walter Raleigh's favorite blend is incomparably rich and fragrant—yet so mild as to be acceptable to the most fastidious pipe-smoker. Nor does Sir Walter lack body and real flavor. They're all there in Sir Walter Raleigh— as you'll discover when you try it.

IT'S 15¢—and milder

Small Boy in Luck

A passenger train stopped at Ocean City, Md., long enough for the trainmen to rescue eight-year-old Ernest Hastings from beneath the locomotive. The train, rounding a curve, plowed through a group of small boys playing on the track. All got out of danger except Hastings, who was seen to fall between the rails and disappear under the cowcatcher. It was found, however, that the lad had squeezed flat upon the ties as the lower section of the engine passed over him. Except for a small cut he was uninjured.

An Apology

"I'm self-made man," said the pug-nacious clubman, glaring around the room in the midst of an argument. "Sir," said one of the older members, "we accept your apology."—Sketch.

In a just cause it is right to be confident.—Sophocles.

Some one has stated that if a person were a true internationalist and showed it by joining in the celebration of the various holidays throughout the world, he would discover that he would have left only some 50-odd days during the whole 365 of the year in which to busy himself with his usual occupation. As Americans face a new year, they may be interested to know that 1931 holds for them nearly as many rest days as work days.

By similar state laws, Sunday is everywhere in the Union a legal holiday. There are New Year's day, Independence day, Washington's birthday and Labor day.

Now let us consider the possibility of a person set out to observe every holiday which is generally or locally observed in the United States. He would begin with January 1, which, of course, is New Year's day everywhere. A week later he should be in New Orleans where the anniversary of the battle of New Orleans is celebrated as a holiday. On January 17 he might join in the observance of the anniversary of Benjamin Franklin's birthday, which is not a holiday anywhere, but which is widely observed as the beginning of Thrift week.

Two days later, January 19, if he were in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina or Virginia, he could join in the celebration of the birthday anniversary of Gen. Robert E. Lee, and ten days later, January 29, he could honor the memory of President William McKinley.

February is the shortest month in the year but there's only one other month which has more days in which to celebrate. If this hypothetical holiday-celebrating citizen doesn't think Ground Hog day is important enough to justify observance on February 2, he can make a quick trip to Arizona and there help the citizens of that state celebrate Arbor day. They do it on the first Monday in February and this year it's February 2. But he will have to hurry to get to Florida in time to help them celebrate their Arbor day on the first Friday in February which falls on February 6 this year. On February 12 he can help celebrate Georgia day in that state although most people think of that date as the occasion for honoring the memory of Abraham Lincoln on the anniversary of his birth. In order to join in that celebration it will be necessary for him to go north, for there are only 14 states, all in the North, which have made Lincoln's birthday a legal holiday. They are Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Washington, West Virginia and Wyoming. Curiously enough, Kentucky, the state which gave him birth, takes no official cognizance of the day. It is generally observed in some way, even though not officially, in most of the states, including some of those in the South.

February 14 is St. Valentine's day and February 15 is Maine ("Remember the Maine!") day, both of which he can observe if he chooses. This year February 17 will be celebrated as a legal holiday in Alabama, in parts of Florida and in five parishes in Louisiana. For it is Shrove Tuesday (the day before Ash Wednesday, both of which are determined by the changing date of Easter Sunday) which is celebrated as Mardi Gras day (in French slang, Mardi Gras or "Fat Tuesday," the day before Lent begins) and in Louisiana it ushers in the famous festival in New Orleans. Our holiday-observing traveler can spend February 18 in any state he pleases, for Washington's birthday is officially celebrated in every state in the Union, but when March comes in either like a lion or a lamb, he will have to head south again—Texas, where on March 2 he can help observe Sam Houston's birthday and Texas Independence day. Then there's nothing more for him to do, except to beware the Ides of March until March 17 when he can put on his green tie and go out to help celebrate St. Patrick's day.

But he will need the rest which he will get in March, for April is going to be a busy month, even busier than February. To start it off right in Alabama, Connecticut, Louisiana, Maine, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, Porto Rico, or Tennessee he can join in the celebration of Good Friday which comes on April 3 this year. Easter day is on April 5, but that's a Sunday and a holiday anyway. But April 12 should find him in North Carolina celebrating the anniversary of the Halifax Independence Resolutions (a reminder of pre-Revolutionary war days): April 13 he can honor the memory of Thomas Jefferson about anywhere he wishes (but in Virginia would be the most appropriate place); April 15 he should be out in Utah, helping celebrate Arbor day; then he can cross the state line on the east and on April 17 aid in observing Arbor day and School day in Colorado.

However, if he expects to help Maine or Massachusetts celebrate Patriot's day on April 19, he might start east and spend April 17 in one of the northern counties of Illinois celebrating Arbor day (the governor usually sets the third Friday in April for that observance). But if he does go to New England for Patriot's day, it's going to mean an airplane trip back west in order to be in Texas for San Jacinto day on April 21 or in Montana on the same day on the third Tuesday in April. Whether Texas or Montana, the next day, April 22, should find him in Nebraska for its Arbor day celebration, and the next day, April 23, in Illinois to help honor Stephen A. Douglas. Three days later, April 26, he should be in either Alabama, Georgia, Florida, or Mississippi to honor the Confederate dead on one of the two Confederate Memorial days.

After the busy month of April, May is comparatively restful. On May 8 he has his choice of Arbor day in Idaho (the first Friday after May 1) or the same celebration in Rhode Island (the second Friday in May). On May 10 he should be in either North Carolina or South Carolina for the second Confederate Memorial day. If the former, he might just as well stay until May 20 and help celebrate the anniversary of the Mecklenburg Independence Declaration, the predecessor of what took place in Philadelphia on July 4, 1776. And on May 30 anywhere in the United States he can bow his head reverently in memory of our soldier dead and help decorate their graves. For it is Memorial or Decoration day.

The three summer months, June, July, and August, will not keep the holiday-celebrator very busy staying away from work. On June 3 he can take cognizance of the anniversary of Jefferson Davis' birthday, a legal holiday in five southern states (incidentally, not including Kentucky, where he was born, and Mississippi, which gave him to the Confederacy for its president) and unofficially observed in others. June 14 is Flag day, observed in all states. June 17 is Bunker Hill day, commemorated in Massachusetts and June 20 is West Virginia day, when that state celebrates its admission to the Union. Wherever he is in the United States on July 4 he can celebrate Independence day, but on July 13 he will need to go to Tennessee to celebrate the birthday of Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest, the great Confederate cavalry leader, then speed out to Idaho for the Pioneer day celebration on July 15 and drop down into Utah for the Pioneer day celebration in that state on July 24. From Utah he should start east immediately if he is to take part in the celebration of Bennington day in Vermont on August 6, but that ends the summer's festivities. This, however gives him a good opportunity to take the customary two weeks' summer vacation.

The autumn months will keep him fairly busy. Beginning with the celebration of Labor day in North Carolina on September 4 (the first Thursday in September) he can go to some other state and celebrate it again on September 7 (the first Monday in September). Then there's Admission day to be celebrated in California September 9, Defense day on September 12 and American Indian day on the third Friday in September—September 18 this year. After taking part in the celebration of Fire Prevention day on October 9, he can go to Florida and celebrate Farmers' day on October 10. But he will have to leave there if he expects to celebrate October 12, Columbus day, legally for it's not a legal holiday in that state. But there are 23 states in which it is. On October 23 he should be in southern Illinois for its second Arbor day celebration (the fourth Friday in October for the southern part of the state) and then he himself out to Nevada to help observe Admission day in that state on October 31. And, of course, that evening he can get in an extra celebration by taking part in the Halloween festivities.

He must not linger long, however, for he's due in Louisiana for the celebration of the legal holiday of November 1, which is All Saints day. November 11, wherever he is, he should "face east" in honor of Armistice day and on the last Thursday in the month (November 26 in 1931) he should join with his fellow-Americans in being grateful on Thanksgiving day. December 4 should find him in Georgia celebrating Arbor day (the first Friday in December) and he might as well stay there for the celebration of Christmas on December 25 and then cross the state line over into South Carolina where December 26 and 27 are legal holidays as a part of the Christmas celebration. Thus the busy year of 1931 ends for the holiday-celebrator.

Lesson for December 28

REVIEW: THE PATTERN OF CHRISTIAN LIVING
GOLDEN TEXT—Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus.
PRIMARY TOPIC—How Jesus Wants Us to Live.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Some Examples of Christian Living.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Lessons from the Lives of Others.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Fellowship with Christ.

For senior and adult classes two good methods of review may be used: The first may be designated character study of the principal persons mentioned in the lessons of the quarter; namely, Zacharias and Elisabeth, Mary, Simeon and Anna, Peter, Thomas, Zacchaeus, Stephen, Saul, and Timothy. In using this method assignment should be made the week before. The second method may be designated the summary method in which the salient facts should be noted followed with the leading teaching. In this case also, assignment should be made a week ahead.

Lesson for October 5.
The parents of John the Baptist were noted for their godliness. Zacharias means "Jehovah hath remembered." Elisabeth means "covenant maker." Every indication is that this pious couple wrought together for God. John the Baptist was a great man. Much can be expected of a child born of such parents and brought up in such a home.

Lesson for October 12.
God chose Mary to receive the greatest honor ever conferred upon a human being. To fill this place of honor meant exposure to suspicion as well as much suffering and hardship.

Lesson for October 19.
The ability of Simeon and Anna to discern the Messiah was due to a special revelation of the indwelling Holy Spirit, not merely because they were pure in heart. The grace which they possessed is available to every believer.

Lesson for October 26.
The believer experiences a vital conflict going on within. This conflict is due to the fact that he was once born of the flesh and afterward born of the Spirit. Victory over the flesh is to be obtained through the power of the indwelling Holy Spirit.

Lesson for November 2.
Peter through over-weening confidence fell, even denying his Lord. The occasion of his denial was the sifting to which Satan subjected him. Through the prayer of Jesus Christ he was restored.

Lesson for November 9.
Thomas is everywhere presented in the Scriptures as of a skeptical mind, but he was an honest doubter. The Lord is pleased to be put to the test. No honest skeptic has ever remained in darkness.

Lesson for November 16.
The centurion's faith in Christ brought healing to a very dear servant. Genuine faith links man with Omnipotence.

Lesson for November 23.
A noble young ruler failed to get eternal life because his heart rested on earthly riches. Christ demands man's whole heart.

Lesson for November 30.
Zacchaeus did not allow difficulties to keep him from seeing the Lord. The sight of the Lord moved him to repentance. This is always true. He proved the genuineness of his repentance by making restitution.

Lesson for December 7.
Stephen, while called to minister in the temporalities of the church, witnessed of Christ in the energy of the Holy Spirit. He sealed his testimony with his blood. To those who are faithful unto death a crown of life shall be given.

Lesson for December 14.
The sight of Jesus Christ transformed Saul, the savage persecutor, into the most ardent witness for Christ.

Lesson for December 21.
Through the faith of a godly mother and grandmother, Timothy was nurtured for God. Careful home training is rewarded with pious children.

In Communion With God
As long as we dare to think that the secular life must be a separate existence from the spiritual, that earthly engagements cannot be fulfilled in uninterrupted communion with God, just so long are we living outside the purposes of God, contradicting the majesty of our true nature, and denying the efficacy of the gospel of the Lord Jesus.—Prebendary H. W. Webb-Peppoe.

The Faith in God's Elect
Neither fear, nor danger, neither yet doubting, nor backsliding can utterly destroy and quench the faith of God's elect, but that always there remaineth with them some root and spark of faith, howbeit in their anguish they neither feel nor can discern the same.—John Knox.

Victory
Victory over sleep in the morning watch may mean victory all day.—Lee.

Oddities of "Rain" Not in Any Way Miraculous

Many instances have been recorded of storms of "ink." During a recent eruption of Vesuvius a torrential downpour of inky black rain fell, to the great consternation of the superstitious peasantry; while in Spain a year or so ago a carnival was interrupted by a raging storm, and the costumes of the revelers were dyed black by the rain.

Even more extraordinary and disturbing were the storms of "blood" which have swept the country in the past. On one occasion country folk in Ireland were terrified by a down-pour of blood-red rain, which, in their superstitious minds, assumed the form of a portent.

What use would it be to tell them that it was merely a shower of microscopic water organisms caught up by the wind and held in rain-drops? The term "raining cats and dogs" may not be strictly accurate, but it has been known to rain fish! This extraordinary phenomenon occurred in Scotland a couple of years ago, when cottagers in a remote district on the northeast coast were astounded to find small live fish pelting from the sky in a torrent of rain.

But even this astounding occurrence was capped a short time later, when a hail of live lobsters, picked up by the wind, fell on the same district.

Among other strange storms one must chronicle a hail of bananas which occurred four years ago in the Canary Islands, countless falls of large and small stones caught up by the wind, and, on one momentous occasion in Japan, a downpour of pearl oysters which, piled up ready for opening, were swept away by the high wind and dropped on the delighted heads of villagers some miles away.

Europe Can No Longer Sneer at American Art

Architect Whitney Warren said at a dinner in New York the other day: "Europe sneered once at American art, but the tables are turned now."

"An American architect disembarked at Southampton, and on the train ride to Waterloo he fell asleep. But the whistle of the engine awakened him as the train passed through Woking, and he stared out at the town's architectural horrors and said: "Good heavens, what is this?" "This is Woking," said an Englishman.

"The American leaned back and shut his eyes again. He muttered: "If this is Woking, let me dream again."

Processed Waste

The bureau of the census announces that, according to a preliminary tabulation of the data collected in the census of manufacturers taken in 1930, the total value of processed waste shipped or delivered in 1929 by establishments engaged primarily in the production of such waste amounted to $30,716,204, a decrease of 4.5 per cent as compared with $32,130,213 reported for 1927, the last preceding census year. The total for 1929 is made up as follows: Cotton waste, 244,857,696 pounds, valued at $15,825,816; wool waste, 18,931,784 pounds, $3,990,498; other waste, $2,317,072 pounds, $3,728,462; wiping rags, $8,001,428.

Traveling Barber Shop

The newest example of the mountain coming to Mahomet is a traveling barber shop. The shop is in the front compartment of a truck, the rear part being fitted up as a home for the barber and his wife during their travels. The shop on wheels, which operates through the rural sections of a Middle West state, is equipped with a modern barber's chair, hot water and electrical current, while magazines and newspapers give the interior the proper professional touch.

"After the Stork came I never was the same woman. I was underweight, always ailing and terribly run-down. At the advice of an old friend, I began taking G. F. P. and it helped me right from the start. I gained in weight, my ailments left and now I feel stronger and healthier than I have in years."

Motor Supplanting Steam
The world's tonnage of motor vessels is increasing nearly ten times as fast as steam tonnage, according to ship-building statistics just published in the new edition of the Register book, issued by Lloyds. Lloyds' tables reveal that during the last 12 months the world's steam vessel tonnage has increased by only 148,176 tons, while in the same period motor vessel tonnage increased by 1,468,235 tons.

SCHOOL CHILDREN TO HONOR BYRD

The Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association will meet this year in Detroit, the week of February 23, 1931. Norman R. Crozier, president of the Department of Superintendence, has just announced that Rear-Admiral Richard E. Byrd is to be a guest of the department, and is to address the general session, Monday evening, February 23. A tribute to the intrepid explorer from the school children of America is to be presented in the form of letters written to him by the children.

Mr. Crozier says that he hopes to have letters addressed to Admiral Byrd from children in every state. Such letters, he suggests, should be written on paper 8 1/2 by 11 inches, with a left hand margin of 1 1/4 inch. In giving further directions for writing these letters he states that no letter is to cover more than one sheet of paper. Not more than one letter should be sent from any one school building.

Such letters should be sent to the Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association, 1201 Sixteenth Street, Northwest Washington, D. C., and should be mailed in time to reach Washington by Saturday, January 31.

The writing of these letters will give opportunity for teachers to direct study to the polar exploration which study so far has received very little attention in the average school curriculum.
