Bluetongue in Sheep

The virus-caused disease of sheep commonly known as "bluetongue" was first described as occurring in the Union of South Africa, about 1900. The disease has been known some time in that country at that period as one of economic importance. An early description of the disease was by Sir Arnold Theiler, director of veterinary research at the Onderstepoort Station in the Union of South Africa.

During the summer of 1948, veterinarians at the Ranch Experiment Station, Sonora, Texas, investigated the disease occurring in sheep which given the name of "sore muzzle." This name was descriptive of the lesions and symptoms seen in the affected animals over a large part of the Edwards plateau sheep-raising area of West Texas. This particular outbreak started through July with the last sheep disappearing towards the end of August. No disease condition similar to the lesions exhibited by affected animals was found in the literature about sheep disease. While it was suspected that the disease was probably infectious, attempts at transmission of disease to healthy sheep were unsuccessful.

Several years after the discovery of the bluetongue virus in the Union of South Africa, Theiler was successful in developing an effective vaccine for prevention and control of this disease. From 1907 when Theiler's vaccine became available to the present, approximately 25,000,000 to 30,000,000 sheep were injected with the vaccine. In the late 1930's the type of vaccine which had been used until that time was changed. Some of the results obtained using use of this vaccine were a re-investigation of the problem of bluetongue was conducted at Onderstepoort, the production of an entirely different type of vaccine. This new vaccine has been routinely used since 1938 and has proved valuable both the prevention of control of this disease until the present.

Conducted at the Bureau of Animal Industry, Washington, D. C., blood samples from Texas California sheep affected with so-called "sore muzzle" were sent to bluetongue. The diagnosis of bluetongue was established. Until the occurrence of the "sore muzzle" in the summer of 1948 in Texas and California sheep, bluetongue was not known to exist in any country in the world outside of the Union of South Africa on the Island of Madagascar where it has existed for many years. There are many reasons to believe that the bluetongue infection had existed in Texas sheep for the past several years; the symptoms shown in infected animals have not been similar to those described in textbooks as being characteristic of bluetongue in sheep. The possibility that "sore muzzle" could be bluetongue was suspected by Texas investigators but not definitely established as such until the results of blood serum tests were known. The existence of this disease in Texas and California marks the first appearance of bluetongue in the Western Hemisphere, so far as any reliable reports are concerned. Active research looking towards the development of dependable vaccine for the prevention and control of bluetongue is being conducted at the Ranch Experiment Station near Sonora, Texas, and at the School of Veterinary Medicine, University of California, at Davis, California.

It is well to state that the bluetongue virus in South Africa is known to contain several different strains, some of which are immunologically distinct. This means that the animal suffering from an attack of bluetongue caused by one strain of virus is not subsequently immune to an attack by some other strain of the bluetongue virus. At the present time there is reason to suspect that at least three separate strains of bluetongue virus are present in the infection among Texas sheep. Whether these Texas strains are the same as the strains which have appeared among California sheep is not yet known. Until much further precise, painstaking, dependable research work can be completed with the bluetongue virus and disease, we will not be able to estimate just what the future economic importance of the bluetongue infection may mean annually to the sheep-raising industry in this state. It might be well to add that so far the highest average mortality occurring among sheep infected with this particular virus in any of the outbreaks which have occurred to date is about 10 per cent. It is of interest to note that the mortality among infected sheep in the Union of South Africa at some times has reached as high as 75-80 per cent. Obviously a disease which occasionally occurs in outbreak form and accounts for a death loss of such proportions is bound to be of tremendous economic importance to the sheep industry in the country where it occurs. There is every reason to believe that eventually a dependable vaccine for the prevention and control of this infection among sheep will be developed in this country. Just how long it will be before such a vaccine becomes available is problematical.

As stated above, a tremendous amount of painstaking, precise research work with bluetongue virus must be completed before we can expect to have a dependable vaccine ready for distribution in this country.

The connection between the condition which we have heretofore called "range stiffness" occurring among sheep in many parts of the West Texas sheep country and bluetongue infection is not definitely known. Whether further investigation will prove that range stiffness results from mild bluetongue virus infection is not known. At the present time there are reasons to believe that there may well be some definite connection between bluetongue infection and some cases of range stiffness. I would like to emphasize that much further investigation and the finding of many additional facts must be established before we can make the flat statement that the two conditions have the same cause.

Bluetongue is not contagious but is spread from animal to animal by the small gnat (the so-called sand fly of the genus Culicoides). Investigation of the disease and its transmission among sheep in the Union of South Africa has shown very definitely that this sand fly is the only means by which the disease is transmitted from sheep to sheep naturally. The Federal Bureau of Entomology is conducting a survey at present to determine the localities in the country where this genus can be found.

This gnat or sand fly is known to exist in the West Texas sheep producing region. In fact, research at the Ranch Experiment Station has proven that wild sand flies captured on that Station carry the virus of bluetongue.

The transmission of the disease by the sand fly means that outbreaks of the disease will probably be seasonal and confined to the warmer months of the year. Cold weather is known to render the sand fly inactive. This seasonal limitation will probably play a very important part as to the future economic significance of the disease to the Texas sheep industry.

COMMENTARY ON COMMUNISM

Apparently the most welcome thing that has happened in Russia in a long time is Malenkov's promise that the output of consumer goods will be greatly increased, and that quality, which has been miserably low in many cases, will be improved. The New York communist paper, the Daily Worker, recently published a story from a correspondent who had just toured Russia in which he said, "I heard a vast and varied tide of conversation flowing around one subject—the swift expansion of food production and consumers' goods in two or three years."

The communists and their fellow travelers don't seem to realize that this provides an ironic commentary on a system in which the state decides everything and bosses everyone—and has a large assortment of prisons and forced-labor camps to take care of dissenters.

The Russian people—except for the elite, who live on a regal scale—have been lucky if they could buy enough in the government-run retail stores to keep body and soul together. Now, it seems the store stocks are to be bettered a bit—but at any time in the future, if the Kremlin so decides, the gains could be wiped out over-night by an order.

In this country a factory or a store that does not please the people goes broke—because in this country business is competitive and must earn public favor. As a matter of fact, the American system of production and distribution of goods is the best practical answer to communism ever devised.

PRICES CAN BE TOO LOW

One fundamental goal of any business, whether it be a corner shoeshine stand of a gigantic corporation, is to make a profit. And it is directly in the interest of the whole country and everyone in it that business operates at a profit.

Only profitable enterprise can attract new capital as it is needed. Only profitable enterprise can offer maximum opportunity to people who own it, manage it, and are employed by it. Only profitable enterprise can spend the money on growth and development that enable it to offer more and better services and products to its customers.

When a basic industry finds itself in a profitless or near-profitless state, the problem takes on national significance. At the present time, coal is in that position. There are various reasons for it—extremely high labor and other operating costs, competition from other fuels, changing markets, and so on. And one unfortunate factor is that some coal has to be sold at prices which are ridiculously low, and which, by any economic standard, are destructive to the industry.

Under these circumstances, the consumer who buys coal at "distress" prices is getting no real bargain. For in the long run, such practices cannot help but seriously impair coal's ability to properly serve the country—and such industries as steel and power which are dependent on a growing coal supply. The point is that selling too cheaply can put a business out of business. Then we all are hurt.

Rankin Girl Scouts Make Good New Years Resolutions

Intermediate Girl Scout Troop No. 2 met Monday afternoon of Jan. 4 at the Methodist Educational Building. This being the first meeting of the new year, the Scouts took turns naming some of their New Year Resolutions, some of which were to be better Scouts, to attend church services regularly, to be more considerate of other people, to do their part of the home, to be more polite to the members of the family, to study more and to do homework promptly, to not misrepresent or tell falsehoods, and to be better citizens of the community.

The girls repeated their Motto, Slogan, Promise and Laws, after which they reviewed the different phases of their group badge work, "First Aid." A summary of the following were given: Burns, nose-bleed, snake bite, insect stings, bandaging cuts and common accidents.

Evelyn Howard displayed a letter which she received from Paris, France, after writing there to acquire a pen pal from that country. This pen pal from another country would complete a badge on international friendship.

The leader, Mrs. Ross Wheeler, presented each girl with an official Girl Scout Memo tablet for the purpose of keeping a record of badges completed. In closing, the girls sang two songs, "Girl Scouts Together" and "Quack, Quack, Quannie." A prayer was given by the leader.

Darlene Workman served refreshments of ice cream cups and chocolate covered cookies to the ten members present.

Dorothy Abernathy is to be the hostess at the next meeting on Jan. 11.

BANK WORK STARTED

Workmen were busy this week on the remodeling of the outside of the bank. Present plans call for addition of a brick siding to be added to the present structure to a height of approximately one story.

MISCELLANEOUS

Oil leasing is on the move again with activity reported from several sources. The lease of six lots on the north part of town was completed this week and the possibility of drilling just out of the city limits is being talked.

Remodeling work is being done on the cage to the west of the Phillips Service Station and it will open shortly under new management.

According to Superintendent of Schools, J. L. Alderdice, the move to the new high school will take place within the next two weeks.

CITY SLICKER?

 And one is for butter
 And one is for cream;
