By the Fire. She sat and mused by the drift-wood fire As the losping flames flashed high and higher ing her she said to us pityingly,-And the phantoms of youth, as fair and bright, Grew for ber waze in the ruddy light ;

The blossoms she gathered in life's young days Wreathed and waved in the flickering blaze; And she laughed through a sunny mist of tears, That rose at the dream of her April years ; And over an i aye the sudden rain Plashed on the glittering window pane. Robered and saidened the pictures that showed. As the drift-wood logs to red core glowed.

And the fancled figures of older time Passed with the steadier step of their prime : The daisies and snowdrops bloomed and died. Red roses and lilies stood side by side. While richer and fuller, and deeper grew The lines of the pictures August drew; And ever and aye the falling rain streamed thick and fast on the window-pane. The drift-wood died down nto feathery ash, Where faintly and atfully shone toe flash : Slowly and sadly ber pulses beat, And soft was the fall, as of vanishing feet; And lush and green, as from guarded grave, She saw the grass of the valley wave; And like echoes in ruine seemed to sigb, The "wet west wind" that went wandering by. And caught the sweep of the sullen rain, And dashed it against the window-pane.
