WOODWORK
BY DALTON

AT LEAST once a month we receive a sheet of cartoons, filler materials and "canned" editorials from an organization called "Industrial Press Service", a branch of the National Assn. of Manufacturers. It is a highly conservation Republican group which attempts to get its views on federal spending into print. At least that appears to be its primary objective.

It reminds one of the H. L. Hunt program, "Lifeline", which does the same sort of thing on radio. But in both cases, although the material is strongly designed to overthrow the Democrats, there quite often is some thought-provoking material.

For example, the March 15 sheet said the Dept. of Agriculture has estimated that farmers' incomes for 1965 will total about $12.6 billion, and adds that the USDA's own budget is more than half that amount. It even makes me wonder if it wouldn't do more good to eliminate the department altogether and just divide that six billion bucks among the farmers.

Or maybe it would be better to give the munny to newspaper people whose last names start with W.

Also, I was interested in the claim that for every dollar in federal income taxes paid by an individual, he also pays $1.29 in other federal taxes, most of which are hidden. The formula reportedly was arrived at by the Tax Foundation (whoever that is) "after months of careful computations."

Thus, it was pointed out, if you pay $15 a week in income tax deductions, you pay another $18 a week in other federal taxes, or a total of $33 a week.

Since this doesn't include all the other taxes which aren't federal, it does make the mystery of where all the money goes a little less mysterious.

I READ SOMETHING about smiling the other day. It said a smile can do many things, and that many persons have been cheered, encouraged or spurred on to new efforts by a smile.

I always favored people being cheerful, myself, but you can overdo it. Some people just go around grinning like an idiot all time, even when the situation isn't funny a bit (like when they've been beating you at cards.) And it ought to be against the law for anyone to be cheerful before 10 o'clock in the morning.

Unless he didn't have to get up until 9:45.

THE ANSWER?

Are you almost hopeless, and about ready to say with Faust, "The end of everything is nothing?"

In your search for --? life have you remembered that God's Word says "Come now, and let us reason together; though your sin be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow..." (Isaiah 1: 18), and remembered that God's seeking you?

Why does God seek you? Because He made you and He loves you. I can prove by His Word that He loves you and wants you Read John 3:16.

"You who are weary of it all-- the changing world, the beating of the turmoil and strife, the strain of trying to survive, make enough money, keep up with society, find a solution to your problems, to the nation and world problems -- you are weary of it all -- where can you go for an anchor in the storm of life, or for rest and hope and joy and assurance and peace? I can tell you where to find them: directions for this way to find all these are in God's Word--read John 6: 35-37; 14:5-6; and Matthew 11: 28-30.

"Whoever believed" --Christ said that; "Whoever" is my name--your name", Robert Moy-or add work to that effect, and my poster will from the page "To believe" means "To live by".

So, in all this, what is the answer? The answer is "To live by" Christ Jesus! For, you can, whoever will, and Not in our goodness or strength, but in His goodness and forgiveness and mercy and by His power.

Have you failed in your plan Of your storm-tossed life?

Place your hand in the Nail-scarred hand;

Are you weary and worn With its toll and strife?

Place your hand in the Nail-scarred hand.

What a Friend we have in Jesus!

STRENGTH FOR THESE DAYS

Son, be of good cheer; thy sins are forgiven. --(Matt. 9:2).

When we have feelings of guilt we should recognize our past mistakes and humbly beg for God's forgiveness. We can rest-assured that God, in His infinite mercy, is always ready to grant forgiveness to sinners.

As legislators prepare for and take up discussion of cotton legislation and other agricultural programs during this session of Congress, writers and broadcasters will again redouble their efforts to build attention-getting stories around the term "subsidy".

And, if we are to judge the future by the past, we can expect that in a majority of cases the word "subsidy", when used in connection with farm programs and farmwork, will carry a derogatory (if not downright defamatory) implication. The misunderstanding that exists in the public mind with regard to this "one term" is probably responsible for the biggest and ugliest pile-up on the much-misnamed complexion of agriculture's public image.

Looking at the works of some writers and speakers, particularly those who operate from "big-city" bases, one gets the impression that the word "subsidy" was placed in the English language solely for the benefit of agriculture. These people seem irresistibly drawn to such threadbare phrases as "feeding at the public trough" and "dipping collective cups into the public till." They imply that farmers are the only recipients of subsidies from government, and that such subsidies are purely for the benefit of farmers.

Nothing could be farther from the truth, and anyone who will take the time and effort to seek an honest definition of "subsidy" will find that out.

The part of our Webster's definition which applies to government subsidies is under 3-b: "A government grant to assist a private enterprise deemed advantageous to the public". For our purpose here, the key phrase is "deemed advantageous to the public" -- a phrase too often overlooked by the sensation seekers. All government subsidies, presumably, are meant to be in the interest of the general public, not just the individual or industry in question. In the case of agricultural subsidies, the public benefits by an abundance of food and fiber, and by the maintenance of a strong agricultural economy, without which there is general agreement that our entire economic structure might well tumble about our ears.

In a report, subsidies are cited as: Grants to business firms and corporations (shipbuilding and ship-operating differential subsidies, Subsidies for carrying mail, etc.); Tax benefits to specific economic groups (depletion allowances to producers of minerals and other extractive industries, accelerated amortization of defense facilities, concessions to small business under the Technical Assistance Act, reduction of income taxes to particular groups and individuals, etc.); Railroad subsidies to specific economic groups (financing of highway and airport construction, protective tariffs, purchase restrictions under the Buy American Act etc.); Free services or services below cost (postal system, FCC, FTC, ICC, IBC, Bureau of Labor Statistics and many more); Lending and Loan Guarantee programs; Federal aid payments to states and local units (school lunch fund, forestry services, state marine schools, etc.); Insurance programs undertaken by government at sub-normal premiums, and a host of others.

Even a cursory glance at this grossly incomplete list of subsidy and subsidylike government programs is sufficient to show that every single citizen of the U. S. is receiving government aid in one form or another. And it should be sufficient to convince those who constantly throw thoughtless rocks at farm programs that they, too, live in glass houses.

New Ruling Seen On Castor Beans

Farmers who participate in the 1965 feed grains program on plant and harvest castor beans on their diverted acres and still collect $9 per cent of their feed grain diverted acreage payments.

U.S. Rep. Conroy Minton said Tuesday the U.S. Department of Agriculture has agreed to leave regulations relating to the planting of castor beans on diverted feed grain crops the same as last year.

The USDA had announced earlier that cooperating farmers who planted castor beans on diverted feed grain acres this year could get only 20 per cent of the feed grain diverted acreage payments applicable to their farms.

Minton had worked with U.S. Rep. Bob Pugh of White, Oklahoma and other members of the House to get the ruling changed to the 1965 status.

There's no way of telling exactly what the legislation will mean to dollars and cents to castor bean growers this year, because of the tremendous fluctuations in feed grain diverted acreage payments.

Crop Yields $6 Million But it's assumed to a partial of growing attractiveness of castor beans as a cash crop of considerable importance. Castor beans also, of course, can be planted on non-irrigated land.

Agricultural observers here say High Plains farmers last year produced castor beans on approximately 20,000 acres and harvested a crop worth a gross of around $2.5 million.

Yields were down somewhat last year because of a combination of dry soil and lack of sufficient irrigation water on many farms to adequately irrigate all cash crops.

Dr. Raymond Brigham, leader of castor bean investigations at the South Plains Research and Extension Center here, says castor beans averaged about a ton per acre in the two years preceding 1964.

He figures the area-wide average last year dropped to approximately 1,700 pounds of though yields up to 2,700 pounds were recorded in parts of the area.

Over $200 Per Acre Some growers in the past have topped 2,000 pounds per acre. Brigham says a good castor bean year on the Plains would see the gross value of the crop topping $5 million.

Many castor bean growers in the past have produced around $200 per acre off a crop averaging about a ton an acre.

Production costs over the heart of the castor bean area north of Lubbock generally range from about $40 to $60 per acre, depending upon the yield individual growers set as their goal.

Castor bean production has been expanding over the southern half of the area where costs perhaps are somewhat lower because of more limited application of irrigation water on many farms.

Area Crop Leads Nation The High Plains, where acreage devoted to castor beans, have doubled in the last five years, it is by far the nation's leading castor bean producing area.

Castor beans on the Plains have moved steadily up from 25,000 acres in 1955. They're now being planted on more of the "low land" brought into cultivation to meet years which castor neither took quite as castor allotments. Brigham points out that this country still imports about three-fourths of its domestic consumption of castor oil, which goes into a wide array of products.

A $14 million castor bean processing plant is being completed at Ploverview by the Plains Cooperative Oil Mill of Lubbock and Baker, Charles O. Co. has announced tentative plans to build a plant there costing more than $4 million.
