Through their spokesman, John Potts, the Levellanders explained the need for a junior college to give educational aid to three gro ups of people: (1) those who would not otherwise get any formal collega training because of lack of funds, or because they cannot ge to a school far away from home; (2) those students who can't make the transition from high school to a larger university until they have additional training or until they are more capable to cope with the change in society from their usthose adults who have finished formal training some time ago but

They went on to give a complete picture of why the establishment of a junior college would benefit the counties. These extended and projected reasons ared by the Hockley countians, and some of which are available at the Tribune office. All of this will be covered later, if the petition is successful, and the district okayed by the State Board.

Anyone interested in signing one of the petitions, or wanting more information, is urged to contact a Jayeee or call the Tribune office immediately - that means this morning. The meeting is this afternoon, and the signed petitions must be presented at that time.

Should they fail to get enough interest in Cochran County, the Hockley Countians will submit a proposal at Austin, asking for a Junior College District consisting solely of their county, or their county and portions of another county where enough interest is shown.
