Sunny Cairo, the capital of Egypt, is wrapped in an afterglow from the base of some elegant column or the top of some graceful

Looking from the mighty Citadel-which dates from the days when Sultan Saladin went forth from the gate of Cairo to meet King Richard the Lion Hearted and the Crusaders—all Cairo lies before us. That point commands not only a view in space, but also a full panorama of the procession of civilization.

Cairo was built in 969 A.D. Much of it has changed-for the better—but its picturesque identity still remains. The traces of romantic yesterday are hovering about the city—the shady, scented, winding bazaar district: the narrow partly-roofed lanes with quaint little shops stocked with inlaid work, engraved silver and copper ware, perfumes, ivory and spices. All the senses are touched by the thousand and one discoveries of sounds, smells and textures which combine into a mosaic unknown anywhere else in the world.

Most Cairo streets are living museums basking in the sunshine or blazing neon lights. Apart from the statues and monuments that embellish them, the streets of the poetic city are a colorful kaleidoscope of the east and the west, the old and the new, the medieval and the twentieth century And above all, the Nile, which has witnessed the rise and fall of empires and which has nursed one of the oldest civilizations known to history, fills the air in many of Cairo's corners with the sweet melody of its rippling waters, with love and fragrence and magical charm.

Yet in the midst of the brilliance, warmth and gaiety, one can always find a haven of quiet and incense and mysticism in this city roofed by so many byzantine flat domes and a forest of minarets pointing erect to the sky over a sea of cupolas and terraces Quiet meditation is inspired by the majestic mosques both ancient and modern and the venerable churches and monasteries almost as old as Christianity itself.

In this historic setting the mysterious sphinx and the familiar peasant girl take on a deep significance. The sphinx, symbol of Egyptian civilization that lay buried under the sands of time, is rising from an age of foreign occupation and social serfdom. And the girl, mother of all the generations who built the civilization, is removing the veil which kept her in the dark for centuries past to look forward to the future of her country, and the city with a

Binghamton Evacuates 1,500 People in Pace-Setting Test

In a Sunday "outing" with a serious purpose, 1,500 residents of Binghamton, N. Y., traveled 28 miles from their homes to tiny Deposit, N. Y., in one of the largest civil defense evacuation exercises ever held.

The test, involving 372 autos and a special train, was symbolic of the survival effort which millions of Americans would make in a real emergency to put miles between themselves and threatened nuclear attack.

12th ward—included two sets of motorists in the four-hour test. When the alarm sounded, the first group of 500 persons simulated panic by driving on to the evacuation highway helter-skelter in uncontrolled movement.

Shortly afterward, the first of some 250 cars began moving out of a checkpoint on Route 17 in controlled groups of 14 cars each for the trip to Deposit.

Lt. Gen. Clarence R. Huebner, who observed the test along with New York's Lt. Gov. George B. DeLuca, said that "probably for safety's sake under disaster conditions, we would do better with the small, controlled grouping of cars."

Aboard the special train were 64 simulated patients of an emergency hospital, and 46 youngsters "displaced" or "lost" in the confusion of potential attack.

Evacuees were assigned for visits to the homes of Deposit residents when they arrived, just as might be necessary on a longer-term basis after a real attack.

After a dinner, served under improvised conditions, they returned home with a "well done" from pleased civil defense officials and the knowledge that they were better prepared for the real thing if it ever comes.

CONGRATULATIONS to the more than 1,000 workers in "Evac 12, CONGRATULATIONS to the more than 1,000 workers in "Evac 12," Binghamton, N. Y.'s recent evacuation exercise, were given by Lt. Gov. George B. DeLuca (right), and New York State Civil Defense Director Lt. Gen. Clarence R. Huebner at a press conference following the huge test. Crediting three local civil defense directors for execution of the state-devised plan, General Huebner concluded from the favorable and serious public response to the test that "Its value will be immense not only to the 16,000,000 people of New York State but to the entire nation."

The thought this committee has in mind is just to find out how important t is to the phone users. We have no idea what, if any, rate increase is to be demanded, and we have no idhow the extra rate will be paid. Your City Council will have to face that issue later. But at least, let us know if you are interested and on what conditions - in having the toll rates dropped on calls to and from Morton, Lehman, Maple and possibly Bula.

WE HAVE FOUND out in a reent door to door check of a lot of Bula area phone users is that they don't seem to be interested in the plan at all. Only a couple of the folks out there expressed any in-terest. They, in a lot of instances, closer to Littlefield, so they would like to see the tolls abandoned to Littlefield. That, of course is a problem they would have to work out. We cant spearhead that battle for them. But, if Morton merchants are willing to push the project which would help them reduce tolls to Morton, we would have thought they would be interested.
