SALT MINE under metropolitan Detroit, Michigan, offers a unique civil defense opportunity for a large target city to provide both blast and fallout shelter for a substantial number of its citizens with a minimum amount of additional excavation. The mine—second largest rock salt mine in the world—is 1,137 feet under the surface. It would need more equipment and access ramps or elevators to serve

New Civil Defense Shelter Designs Offer Survival to Many Families

and within the means of many American families

For $1,000 to $1,500, depending on the part of the country and the construction season, families living outside target cities may now have an excellent underground fallout shelter equipped with adequate radiation shielding, ventilation and other necessities. It was designed by the Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization.

FOR FAMILIES who cannot afford such an elaborate shelter, OCDM has designed other less expensive shelters which would be built in basements—some of them by "do-it-yourselfers." They would not offer as complete fallout protection as the underground shelter, but would be adequate in all but the more dangerous fallout zones.

The shelter designs are a key part of the President's new five-point civil defense fallout shelter policy announced by OCDM Director Leo A. Hoegh:

• Provide the public with the facts on failout effects. This includes Information on how people can protect themselves by building shel-ters and decontaminating anything exposed to fallout, and how they can protect supplies of food and water from radiation

Survey existing structures for fallout shelter, such as mines, subways, tunnels and basements

· Speed up fallout shelter research to develop new designs adaptz bie to many situations

Build a number of new "demonstrator" shelter facilities in places such as underground parking garages, subways, schools, hospitals, factories and apartment buildings.

. Incorporate fallout shelters in new Federal buildings
