An even better sign of spring than green grass and blooming flowers are the "Peacenik" rallies such as those staged the past week in New York and San Francisco.

To be groups advocating non-violence, the demonstrations at these two metropolitan centers may have just about equalled the action in Vietnam at the same time.

We wish there were something which could be done with or about such unruly mobs as those which gathered the past week. Too bad they can't be "appropriated" by the government and be frozen solid in freezers as an experiment to see if they'll still be alive when thawed out in about 100 years.

Seriously, we're appalled by the action of these groups, most of whose members probably don't even realize what they're involved in. For most of them, it's just another opportunity to engage in a little "hell-raising."

But it gets pretty bad when it involves such un-American acts as draft-card burning and the burning of an American flag.

You could understand the apparent placid attitude of law officials if this were happening on foreign soil -- but when it's right in downtown New York, we hang our head in shame.

We tend to agree with Texas congressman Joe Pool, a member of the House of Representatives' Committee on Un-American Activities.

Said Rep. Pool: "At the first sight of such a movement, Governor Nelson Rockefeller should call out the National Guard troops with fixed bayonets, machine guns and tanks to protect private citizens and their property from this communist-inspired attack on the streets of New York."

Seems to us that this type of demonstration is just as Anti-American as a bombing attack by an enemy. It should be handled with the same type of resistance.

Historians and political observers have said for many years that the greatest danger to America is that it will fall from "within", and such demonstrations as those the past week and that in Los Angeles in 1965 frankly scare us.

They just don't seem to be a part of Americana. Our American patriots would turn over in their graves to see some of the things which go on today.

And, as you've probably noticed, our "super patriot" of the colored race, Dr. Martin Luther King, has now turned his efforts and influence to the anti-Vietnam demonstrations, which indicates that we may be in for another long, bloody summer.

King's people should be proud of him for his record to date. Thanks to his big-mouthed influence, hundreds of his own race have died -- not in Vietnam, but right here at home.

With people like King and Cassius Clay (or Muhammed Ali, if you've forgotten) in the forefront, America is a less and less safe place in which to live all the time. To make matters worse, these riots get national TV and newspaper coverage, which is just what they want.

Maybe if we'd stop publicizing such events, the leaders, like ignored children, would shrink from the scene.

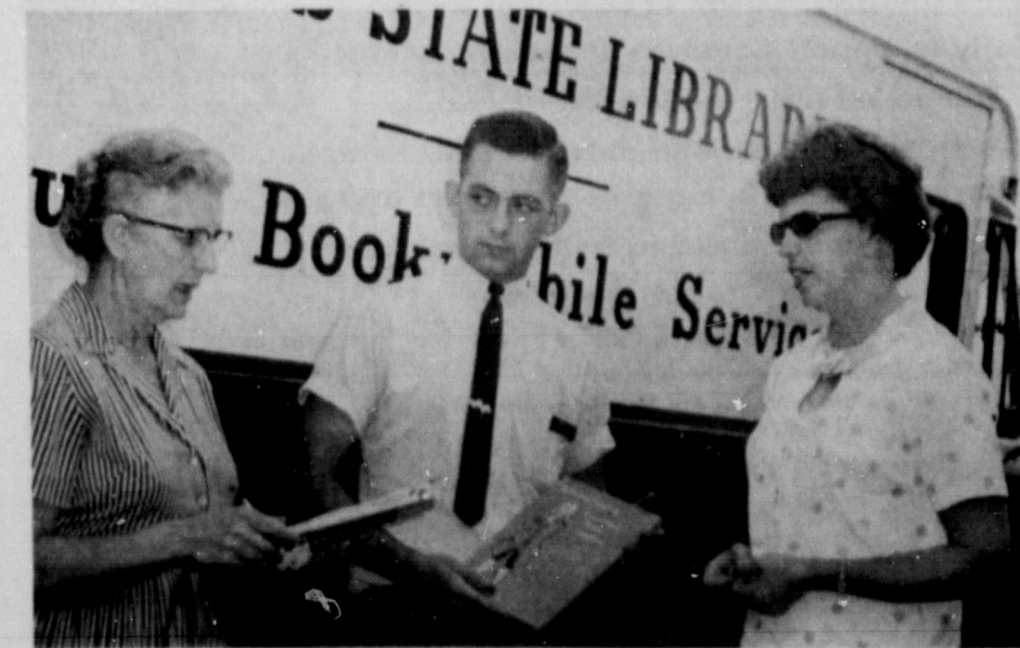

Some time back, an Amarillo resident wrote to sports columnist Frank Godsoe, asking him why he always had something derogatory to say about Cassius Clay, no matter what Clay had done.

Godsoe's answer explained that Clay's Black Muslim angle, with the eventual overthrow of the whites as their goal.

Besides giving Clay and his movement all the free publicity he is allowed to continue in professional boxing, drawing million-dollar gates, a big percentage of which goes to the Black Muslim cause.

Clay also continues to show his disregard to the laws of the country, and his contempt for its leaders.

Sometimes I think we carry the freedom of individuals a little too far. As Representative Pool suggested, there should be something which could be done to thwart such individuals and groups.

This week being National Library Week, the Star photographer toured the city to get sample pictures of activity in various types of libraries in town. At the top is a scene at the Friona Library showing a school class visiting the library. Next, the high school librarian, Mrs. Truitt Johnson, is helping Virgil Widmier and James Noey with a couple of books. In the third picture, First Baptist Church secretary, Mrs. Ray Murphree, is shown looking up a reference in the church library. The fourth library shows Mrs. F.L. Spring seated with a book from her home library, which includes some rare first editions. Finally, Mrs. Bill Stewart is shown talking with officials of the High Plains Bookmobile about a loan of books for the local library.

HONORED. . . Mrs. Marie Carroll, left, was honored at the teacher appreciation night Monday at Friona High School. Mrs. Carroll has been school nurse for 11 years. She is shown being presented an 8 X 10 color portrait of herself by Mrs. Loyde Brewer.

Pulpit Exchange Set By Two Local Churches

Two Friona pastors will exchange pulpits next Sunday, April 23. The Rev. James Price pastor of the Friona Methodist Church will be in the pulpit of Union Congregational Church, and The Rev. Paul Mohr, of the Congregational Church, will be in the pulpit of the Methodist Church.

This is being done in observance of "Consultation of Church Union (COCU) Sunday. Pastors of various churches throughout the nation will be exchanging pulpits, in order for people of different denominations to know each other better.

For several years now, a number of denominations have been meeting to discuss the possibility of forming a more united Church. The denominations involved in these discussions are: The Methodist Church, The United Presbyterian Church, The United Church, (Congregational), The Episcopal Church, The Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ), The Evangelical United Brethren, The African Methodist Episcopal Church, and The Presbyterian Church (Southern).

When and if a more united church will be formed from this group is still a large question mark, but there is a great drive for these churches to

Washington Report

From Congress
BOB PRICE WITH DISTRICT, TEXAS
1322 LONGWORTH OFFICE BUILDING, WASHINGTON, D. C. • 205-3706

The House Judiciary Committee has just completed hearings on proposed legislation which would further restrict the sale, ownership and use of small firearms. I participated in those hearings because I do not believe additional laws are necessary.

The Secretary of the Treasury already has broad regulatory authority to control the sale of firearms through licenses under Federal statutes and the Federal government also has broad regulatory authority over import of weapons and munitions of war. It is not new laws we need, but enforcement of the ones already on the books, especially those dealing with known criminals.

In the State of South Carolina, where the manufacture and sale of hand guns is absolutely outlawed, the rate of homicides and assaults by firearms is among the highest in the country.

New York City, with one of the most restrictive laws dealing with pistols and revolvers has a crime rate which makes not only the streets, but the homes of its people unsafe from criminal attack.

In my statement to the Committee, I expressed the opinion that what we actually have in this country is a criminal problem rather than a gun problem. And more importantly we have a problem with strict enforcement of the laws that we have always had, both nationally and locally. If we fail to enforce laws we have had since the 1930's, how can we expect enforcement of new and more restrictive laws. Why would anyone planning to commit a crime pay one moment's notice to any law that says criminals can't own or buy firearms? And a firearm never committed any crime.

Many Panhandle folks purchase firearms by mail and use them to kill livestock predators. Many are also hunters, skeet and trap shooters, rifle and pistol marksmen who have been national and world record holders. There are also some talented and expert gunsmiths in our area who order most of the high-grade actions for fine rifles and other parts by mail or express. The definition of "firearm" in the proposed bill would prohibit this.

There are provisions in the bill such as restrictions on the acquisition of bazookas, cannons and the like, which are desirable. But the National Firearms Act now regulates fully automatic weapons such as submachine guns and also sawed-off shotguns and could be amended to include large weapons. Such an amendment has already been proposed and I would be in favor of it.

The real problem is with the law prosecutors, lenient judges and faint-hearted probation officers, particularly in our larger cities, including the Nation's Capital, who turned hardened criminals loose to continue preying on innocent citizens.

The situation is so bad in Washington, D.C. that a business group has suggested organization of vigilante committees to protect their businesses. Banks, drug stores, and other businesses are hijacked daily here in broad daylight. Such acts, even the many involving needless murder and maiming no longer make the front page of the newspapers and many of them are not reported at all.

The problem has become so serious, that it now seems not only a duty but an obligation to have a pistol, rifle or shotgun, in the house for the protection of one's family. I don't believe we want such laws in the Panhandle, and I, for one, will continue to oppose further restrictions on the sale, ownership, or use of such firearms by law-abiding citizens for any legal use.

Bob Price
Member of Congress

Pause And Reflect

by Nelson Lewis

The concrete sidewalk was hot. So hot that the barefoot ten year old boy stood first on one foot and then on the other. His entire attention was concentrated on the activity beyond the big plate glass door. His eyes, almost burning a hole in the glass, beheld a wonderful sight. Inside the building a lady was placing armloads of books upon shelves.

The book lady became aware of the boy and opening the door asked, "What do you want, young man?"

"I want to get a book out of the library," answered the boy. "Well you will have to come back tomorrow afternoon. We won't be open until after the ceremonies at 10 o'clock in the morning," said the lady.

"Yes'um, thank you mam," said the boy but he did not move away from the door. His features must have reflected the degree of his disappointment. One look at the crest-fallen youth and the lady's heart melted. "Oh, come on in. I don't think one day makes that much difference. What kind of book do you want?"

"One about the Indians of the northwest," replied the boy. The lady made a note of his name and address and told him to scoot along home.

At 10 a.m. the following day, his honor, the mayor and other city dignitaries were so busy making speeches concerning the new library that they failed to notice a small figure standing at the rear of the crowd. It was that of a barefoot boy and under his arm he held a book on the Indians of the Northwest, and he wished the speakers would hurry and finish, he wanted to borrow another book.

About the year 1900 the city of Greenville S.C. received, as a gift, a small residence and a private collection of books. Named for the honor it became known as the Nesbit Library and for many years served the people at the area. Due to donations of books the library outgrew the small house and at the times of the above story was being moved into new quarters.

The building had been used as a bottling plant for flavoring extracts and until the library outgrew it every book, and the librarian's smelled of "sugar and spice and everything nice!" Can you imagine reading a love scented Edgar Rice Burroughs or a cinnamon Zane Grey?

(Note to the youthful -- Edgar Rice Burroughs originated the Tarzan stories. If you don't know who Zane Grey was -- skip it you're a hopeless case!) Within a very few years the library outgrew the new location and was then moved to a large two story former grammar school. (Yours truly had attended fifth grade there).

At the present time the city has a spacious modern building and a fleet of bookmobiles. How does this story affect us here in Friona? Just as "mighty oaks from little acorns grow," so grows the intellect of a community when its youth has access to a library.

We parents cannot hope to censor everything that our children will read. We can, by supporting our library, make

Mrs. Carroll Is Honored

Mrs. Marie Carroll, Friona school nurse for the past 11 years, was honored at the annual Parent-Teachers Organization's "appreciation night" program Monday, saluting teachers in the first four grades. Mrs. Carroll, who is retiring at the end of the current school term, stated that since she had no children of her own, she was indebted to the Friona parents for sharing their children with her.

Five other teachers in the system were honored with five-year service pins. They were Lois Miller, Mrs. D.L. Carmichael, Benny Pryor, Kenneth Pearson and Joy Morton.

Several area residents were in attendance at the showing of Bobby Wied's paintings in Canyon Sunday afternoon. Wied's exhibit may be seen in the Formal Lounge of the Fine Arts Building at West Texas State University through Friday. They may be seen during performances of the WTSU musical, "Camelot," which began last night.

Landscapes in the Panhandle are favorite subjects for the graduate art student, although he also has some impressionist boat scenes in his collection.

A graduate of Texas Technological College, Wied studied under Bill Lockhart, Clarence Kincaid and John Queen. He has also studied under Tincio Heddins of San Angelo College.

Grain hybrids that boost your "per acre" income

Here are the two most profitable choices for planting where moisture and fertility make it possible to shoot for the highest grain yields.

Golden Acres brand TE 77 has proved outstanding among full-season hybrids. Yields of seven to nine thousand pounds per acre are frequently reported by those who plant it.

Golden Acres brand TE 88 matures a few days earlier than TE 77 and its yield records compare favorably with those of TE 77. You can depend on both varieties for standability and good combining.

Annual Meeting Set By Electric Co-op

Deaf Smith County Electric Cooperative is to hold its 29th annual membership meeting in Hereford on April 27.

The yearly event is expected to attract over 1500 co-op members and guests. A big program is planned for the enjoyment and information of those attending. The meeting will begin with registration at 10 a.m. in the Bull Barn.

Members who were receiving electrical service in 1956 will be able to pick up their patronage refund checks at the registration desk. Nearly $146,000 in capital credits will be returned to members this year.

A large number of the area appliance dealers will be on hand to display and explain their appliances between 10 a.m. and 12 noon. Most of the dealers plan to have door prize drawings for patrons who visit their display booths.

A barbeque lunch will be served at noon and will be catered by the Hereford Rotary Club. The Rotary has served the meal for several years and always does an excellent job.

The meeting will be called to order at 1 p.m. with business and entertainment to follow. The featured speaker will be Mr. Jim Morris, Information Director for Texas Electric Cooperatives in Austin. T.E.C. is the statewide association for electric cooperatives in Texas. Mr. Morris is to speak about the Supplemental Financing Bill that is now being considered in the House Agricultural Committee. This subject will be of prime interest to each electric co-op member.

The business session will include a recap of the past years' operation and the election of three directors. Directors whose terms expire this year are Sloan H. Osborn of Friona in Parmer County, Noel Gollehon of Dimmitt in Castro County, and Tom Draper of Deaf Smith County. Each of these directors are seeking re-election. Other nominees are Charles Packard for Deaf Smith County, George Bagwell for Castro County, and Carl Schlenker for Parmer County.

The 1967 Government-In-Action Youth Tour Oratorical Contest winners, Levenie Benefield of Hereford and David Harris of Dimmitt, will be honored with a plaque presentation.

There will be special entertainment for the kids as well as for the grownups. A cartoon movie will be provided for children during the business session.

An impressive list of door prizes await lucky winners of door prize drawings to be held throughout the meeting. Featured prizes this year will be a portable television set and a $100 bill.

Cotton's Past Is Rich, But What Of Its Future?

(Editor's Note: The current government stockpile of short-staple cotton is causing increasing concern to cotton growers on the High Plains. The following article by Gene Ellis, manager of Bruegel Brothers Gin southeast of Friona points up the rich history of cotton — and questions its future.)

By Gene Ellis
Some 1,800 years before the birth of Christ, people in the countries of Europe found a plant growing that had beautiful blossoms in the summer and later developed a white fiber that they could use to weave into clothing or blankets.

During this period, the main source of fiber for clothing was wool or animal skins. Much to the surprise of these ancestors or ours, this new fiber was very comfortable and did not scratch or itch. It was cool in summer and warm in winter.

We have no idea what this fiber was called at that time, but it was very useful and had a great trade value.

The next mentioned of this fiber was in 800 A.D., when China and Japan were producing it for market. We know from a study of history that the countries of western Europe carried on trade relations with China and Japan, so we can be almost positive that some of this cloth was brought back to western Europe.

The next mention of cotton was when America was discovered. This little white flower was taken back to Europe and cotton began to be planted there.

When the Spanish explorers began to travel over Mexico and the western part of the US we found more mention of this wonder plant growing wild, and also the Inca and Aztec Indians were raising it and making it into material for clothing. So man has traced this miracle fiber, this little white flower and wonder plant, for some 3,500 years.

After America was discovered and this wonder plant was taken back to England and produced in great quantities, it changed many lives. It produced more jobs by planting, cultivating, harvesting, and weaving. It created so much havoc that Parliament passed a law in 1682 to prohibit the free trade of cotton because it was taken the place of woolen materials. Why? Because of the comfortable feeling cotton has when made into clothing.

The next stride cotton made was the production for market in the new-found country, America.

Here our ancestors had freedom of speech, press, and the right to produce anything for market they wished, if it would enhance their living standards. Most of the cotton was produced in the part of the country we know as Georgia, Virginia, Alabama and Florida.

However, very little was raised because of the process of separating of seed from the lint. Then a fellow by the name of Eli Whitney changed this with the invention of the cotton gin. This process eliminated the tedious hours of hand separation of lint and seed. The principle of the first cotton gin and those we have today are primarily the same. The only difference is in speed of operation and the cleaning facilities that have been added.

Today in the United States we have cotton in a very extensive program. We are producing about 40 per cent of the cotton grown in all the world.

However, we have hit upon a trend to place our cotton in warehouses across the nation and are importing some 50 to 60 per cent of the cotton goods that on the shelves of our stores. The bad part of this is that this material is made from cotton with below one-inch fiber length (Note Dr. Harnes' speech at Lubbock Feb. 22, 1967.)

We are on a drive for longer staple cotton with a stronger micronaire rating to compete with this import cotton. Cost-wise it does not make sense. Quality always costs somebody money.

The cotton industry in the US is probably one of the largest businesses going when you break it down from seed to material and then to the customer. Let's look.

We first have the farmer and his acreage, then the seedman, fertilizer dealer, farm laborer, cotton chopper, insecticides, oil mill, food products from oil, cotton buyer, transportation, spinner, weaver, transportation of material, dyeing, clothing factory, wholesaler, and retail merchant.

When you line all of these different businesses up, you employ a lot of people.

We here in the US are fighting poverty with handouts — welfare and unemployment checks. But still we are cutting the acreage of a product that employs more people than any other known to mankind.

Something must be wrong, somewhere along the line if we cannot see the advantage of cotton production to the majority of the people of this nation.

We know there are many synthetics on the market, but they do not have the comforts of cotton, nor do they have the usefulness of cotton.

This is only a brief rundown of over 3,000 years of a commodity that is being forced into extinction, and these are the views of one person, being mostly adopted from substantial records.

Let's do something about cotton!

Agent Tells About Pruning

Pruning makes the difference between an expert gardener and an amateur, says Everett Janne, Extension horticulturist with Texas A&M University. Good pruning is essential to keep your property attractive and to keep ornamental plants healthy. However, you won't need to prune as much if you put plants in the best locations.

Early spring — before growth begins — is the best time to prune evergreens and late flowering shrubs. Early flowering plants, blooming in March, April, May and early June, should be pruned immediately after flowering. Avoid early fall pruning. It tends to produce late, immature growth, which is less tolerant to winter cold.

Prune or remove completely any dead, diseased, broken or injured branches, at any season. And prune all plants when you are transplanting.

Ornamental plants can be pruned several different ways. Shearing or clipping the ends results in a symmetrical shape which is usually very different from the plant's natural shape. These geometric outlines are usually undesirable, and shearing often results in a bushy plant with a brown or bare interior due to shading. Hedge plants are an exception; they lend themselves to this type of pruning.

Most ornamental plants are pruned to keep their natural shape as much as possible. This means thinning, removing old branches at ground level, cutting back some branches, and removing dead, diseased and broken wood. It's more difficult and time consuming than shearing, but it improves flowering, natural beauty and plant health.

WHEAT CROP FORECAST AT 60 MILLION BUSHELS

According to the Texas Crop Reporting Service, Texas Wheat production, based on April 1 prospects, is forecast at 60,423,000 bushels, 27 per cent below the 82,395,000 bushels estimated in December. If the present production is realized, it will be 17 per cent below 1966 production of 72,652,000 bushels. Acreage seeded for this year's crop at 5,493,000 acres is 29 per cent above acreage planted for the previous year. High Plains wheat, which had adequate moisture at planting, has steadily declined in condition due to the lack of moisture. The Northern High Plains the major growing area, is critically short of moisture. Reports of heavy abandonment on dryland acreage is reported. Greenbug damage is also heavy, but appears to be diminishing. Cattle have been moved off wheat where a grain crop is expected.

Wheat on the Low Plains and the Blacklands is temporarily improved with recent showers, and is entering the boot stage. More moisture is needed in these areas before heads can be expected to fill properly.

ATTENTION HORSE OWNERS!

There appears to be some evidence that Sorghum-Sudan-grass type forage hybrids used extensively for cattle grazing and greenchop may be injurious to horses, warns B.F. Yeates, Extension Animal Husbandman, Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

These widely used grazing and feed crops appear to be a factor in causing cystitis syndrome in horses, a little known disease of equines which is characterized by incoordination of the rear quarters, uncontrolled urination, and possible abortions by mares. Death sometimes occurs in chronic cases. To date, there is no known cure for this ailment, but it is not contagious. In addition, to the Sorghum-Sudan-grass type hybrids, cystitis has been found in horses grazing Johnsongrass, Common Sudan-grass, and Sweet Sudan-grass in a few isolated cases.

The cystitis syndrome and possible dietary connections was first reported by Dr. William M. Romane, D.V.M., Texas A&M University and his team of researchers in an article in "Southwestern Veterinarian" (Vol. 19, Winter, 1966). The report described symptoms and indicates it may be connected with feeding of the forages as greenchop or by grazing the horses on the forage. Dr. Romane's research team adds, "Only when the plant is in the growing state does this syndrome develop. To our knowledge, cured hay will not connect the syndrome."

The cystitis syndrome of horses has been noted mostly in Texas and a few isolated areas of the Southwest, according to reports from veterinary colleges. Incidence of the cystitis syndrome was reported by veterinarians in Georgia, Alabama, Oklahoma, Washington, and Iowa, but there appeared to be no association with any particular forages. Other areas have not reported cases of the syndrome.

Exact cause of the ailment has not been pinpointed, and, Yeates says, thousands of horses have probably grazed these forage crops with no ill effects; however, horsemen should be warned of the danger involved in using the forages in their horse program, and they should be very cautious until continuing research can establish the exact cause of the syndrome. A&M SCIENTISTS SAY THAT THERE IS NO REASON FOR CATTLEMEN TO BECOME ALARMED AS NO INJURIES HAVE BEEN REPORTED FROM GRAZING OR FEEDING THESE FORAGES TO RUMINANTS.

The seed industry is cooperating with the Texas Agricultural Station of Texas A&M University to help support continued research in an attempt

Catch Crabgrass Napping Before It Strangles Good Grass

If allowed to go unchecked, crabgrass spreads out every year like an octopus, choking back and shading good grass. That's why it is called the Number One Lawn Pest.

In fact, right now crabgrass seeds are sleeping just under the soil surface waiting to sprout as soon as temperature and moisture conditions are right. And, there are so many seeds everywhere that some will keep right on germinating until weather conditions are too hot. Some will even stay dormant and germinate next year, along with all the new ones that are released by this year's plants. So, the struggle to keep lawns free of crabgrass is never-ending.

But it doesn't have to be any longer. The real secret is to never let the crabgrass seeds germinate and to never let the hard-to-kill crabgrass get a start. Apply a pre-emerge herbicide while the crab grass seeds are still asleep, and the plants will never reach the soil surface. With no competition from crabgrass, the grass gets all the soil nutrients and can grow thicker and greener.

There are several good pre-emerge crabgrass herbicides on the market. A good one should have all the properties of "Azak," manufactured by Hercules Powder Company. Azak is economical to use, can be applied in any mechanical spreader, gives full season control, works all over the country, is safe to use on most established lawns, and is low in toxicity to humans, pets, and other warm-blooded animals.

Now is the time to apply such a herbicide. It will not leach away and will be in the topsoil ready to keep the crabgrass seeds from sprouting.

OTOGENARIAN PLUS FOUR . . . E.D. Matlock and his wife of more than 60 years are pictured here following an informal coffee in their home Monday morning. He was observing his eighty-fourth birthday and several members of his family met for coffee and cake at 9:30 a.m. The Matlocks are pioneer residents of the Valley View Community in Hale County and moved to Friona from Plainview in 1964. Children of the couple are Mrs. L.M. Bostick, Mineola, Texas; Mrs. Tom Lewellen, Friona; Mrs. J.B. Ratliff, Hico, Texas; Frank Matlock, Friona; Mrs. W.D. Skipworth, Tom Bean, Texas; Mrs. Henry N. White, Friona; Mrs. Forrest Osborn, Friona; and Tom Matlock, Lubbock. The couple has seventeen grandchildren and eighteen great-grandchildren.

Many times you hear parents voice opinions as to the advantage of living in a smaller community and being better acquainted with those with whom your children associate. I am one of those who feels we live in one of the nicest communities any where and am grateful for the opportunities our community has to offer. Residents of any community are generally the "makings" of the community.

In spite of this, I feel that too many times we hear and read about unfortunate things which happen to you people, as well as adults, in other communities and feel nothing more than "I'm glad we live in a community where these things just don't happen."

Often the same thing is happening in our community and we are just not aware of it even though we are pretty acquainted with the people and activities going on around us.

A recent issue of Reader's Digest contained an article, which was written by Earl Selby and condensed from the Christian Herald. If you haven't read this article, secure an April issue of the magazine and read "Youthful Shoplifting: A National Epidemic." Everyone who is capable of reading could be benefited by its contents.

About one year ago several high school students from what we generally term, "fine families" were caught shoplifting jewelry, cosmetics and articles of clothing from local merchants. They were from families with good homes, above-average incomes and law-abiding parents.

At the time local merchants were most cooperative with officials and parents and the events were not publicized. Had this been an isolated instance, perhaps it would have had less significance, but it wasn't.

At the present time the same things are being done by different under twenty-one year age group feel shoplifting is a trend of the day rather than a crime for which they will be punished. Perhaps it is time for those of us who are older to re-consider the laws we have made, and determine whether or not they are doing the job which we intended them to do.

Are we doing juveniles a favor by protecting them from unfavorable publicity and at the same time encouraging them to participate in practices which will eventually lead them into those which we call "big time crime."

Mr. Selby listed seven steps parents and guardians should take to help the shoplifting problem on a nationwide basis. If I were making a list, I would start with this rule: From the time a child is born teach it to be an honest law-abiding citizen by the way you live in front of it from day to day.

If your child has heard you tell about . . . that time the entire group attending a meeting in another city and came home with salt and pepper shakers, sugar bowls or other inexpensive items . . . in such a way as to indicate that it was all a part of the sport or group activity in which you were participating, any lectures you might give on the subject of honesty will have very little effect.

The seven he listed under the caption "Lessons For Parents" went like this:

"Professional security experts offer this advice in the fight against youthful shoplifting:

1. Talk to the youngsters. Explain that shoplifting is a crime, and that a criminal record is a lifelong shadow.
2. Emphasize that going along with the crowd for fear of being "chicken" is the coward's way out.
3. When youngsters go on group shopping expeditions, know how much money your child has, where the group is going, what they expect to buy.
4. If a child comes home with more merchandise than he or she had money to buy, ask about it. And don't take easy answers about where it came from.
5. Be wary if a daughter goes shopping with an oversized purse. Purse are favorite "drops" for concealing pilfered goods.
6. Outlaw all clothes swapping unless the parents on both sides know what is being exchanged.
7. Practice what you preach

As this is being written, the sound of rain water running off the building makes a very pleasant sound. It has been dry so long here we appreciate every little bit of moisture which falls.

Advertising doesn't jerk... IT PULLS

"If there is one enterprise on earth that the quitter should let alone, it is advertising. Advertising does not jerk—it pulls. It begins gently at first, but the pull is steady. It increases day by day, year after year, until it exerts an irresistible power."
