A surprise birthday dinner was on the table waiting for Mrs Will Winn of Gomez, when she returned home from church Sunday.

Her many friends had gathered in her home bringing with them dinner and many useful articles in remembrance of her birthday. The table fairly groaned under its load of good things to eat, everybody enjoying the dinner in this hospitable home with Mrs. Winn, who in her quiet manner expressed her gratitude to her many friends.

Those present were: Messrs. and Mesdames W. H. Black, W. R. Bridge, Charles Winn, J. F. Cook, J. S. Gaston, J. E. Lee, C. D. Moore, W. H. Key and family, Ross Black and family, W. T. Simmons and family, and

WNU Service.

CHAPTER I .- Kerry Young, a lad of even, is prepared to flee the burning lumber camp of his benefactor, Jack Snow, who took the youngster to live with him at the death of Kerry's mother. Tod West, camp foreman, has instructed Kerry to come a-running with a file containing the camp's funds should it be endangered. Flames at-tack the office, and Kerry hugging the precious file, and Tod race to town. Tod has acted queerly. At the bank the file is found empty and Kerry is blamed with taking the wrong one.

CHAPTER II .- Snow, his headquarters and money gone, is ruined and soon thereafter dies, leaving Kerry to the Commissioner. Kerry Tod and swears to even the score.

CHAPTER III .- In a St. Paul office Kerry, now grown to manhood, and an expert woodsman, learns of the whereabouts of West. Kerry rescues a lovely girl from a scoundrel, who proves to be West. Tod threatens to pauperize the girl. Nan Downer. She expresses her gratitude to Kerry and tells him of the robbery and murder of her father and of Tod's advances. She is operating a lumber mill and tract inherited from her father, who had purchased it on contract from West.

CHAPTER IV .- Kerry makes camp. Entering the general store at West's Landing, he observes Tod engaged in a poker game. Jim Hinkle, a timber employee, loses heavily to West. Kerry exposes Tod's cheating and disarms him on a bluff when Tod attempts to pull a gun. The crowd is unconvinced of Tod's duplicity. Kerry identifies himself to West, who denies knowing him and advises him to leave town,

CHAPTER V.—Nan tells Dr. Ezra dams of Kerry's rescue of her from Tod, and of West's threat. Ezra, who is coroner, visits Kerry, and after reviewing the murder story of Nan's fa-ther, enlists Kerry's aid by appointing him coroner's clerk. Suspicion of the murder had rested on Holt Stuart, employee of Downer, and upon Jim Hinkle, who was cleared by the word of Tod. The doctor has the fatal bullet and the serial numbers of the stolen bills, one of which has just been paid to Adams. It came out of the poker game. Tod orders Jim to run Kerry out of town

CHAPTER VI.-Kerry decides to ask covers he is being spied upon by a breed. Jim comes to Kerry with a warning to clear out, backing it with a threat. Kerry answers with a laugh. Nan hires Kerry as a draftsman. Kerry rescues Jim's daughter from drowning. While in the water, Frank Bluejay, the breed who had spied on Kerry, had tried to drown Kerry. Young settles with him. warning to clear out, backing it with CHAPTER VII.—Kerry sees that Holt loves Nan. Jim meets Kerry, and after thanking him for rescuing his child, confesses he knew Tod was crooked. He tells Kerry of the night Downer was slain. Earlier in the day he had had trouble with Downer and threatened him. Then Tod found him wan-dering, armed, near the murder scene, too drunk to know where he had been.

Tod had alibied for him and had since forced Jim to do his bidding.

CHAPTER VIII.-Kerry fakes a fire in Tod's house and in the excitement gets Tod's gun. Nan has several op-portunities to sell tracts of land but cannot deliver title until she has negowest. Kerry tells Ezra of the latest developments. The coroner sends Tod's gun and the murder bullet to a ballistic expert. Bluejay hears part of their con-versation and informs West, who plots CHAPTER IX.—Kerry is to make a cruise of Nan's holdings. The ballistic expert reports that the murder bullet was fired from West's pistol. West visits Nan and, when repulsed, attempts to take her by force. Holt rescues her. Nan tells Ezra of her fears for Hold's safety and speaks of love. Ezra tells Kerry Nan loves Holt. Kerry, realizing his own love for Nan, is miserable. Tod bargains with the 'breed to slay Kerry and frame Holt.

CHAPTER X .- Kerry camps at Townon by Bluejay and topples into the lake. His canoe upturns, The 'breed, certain Kerry is dead, leaves. Kerry, unhurt, had thrown himself into the water, coming up under his canoe.

Slowly he pressed his cheek tight came down, wavering; found its object. The muzzle moved thrice, following the rise and fall of the canoe. The brown hand on the grip squeezed. . . . The lips loose, watching.

On the shot Young had pitched forward and sideways, across the rail. For an instant the canoe hung so, on its beam's end; then with a quick roll and a little splash, it went bottom up and began to drift with the seas. Tip, thrown into the waters, head held high, began circling swiftly. Around and around he went, crying out for the master who had disappeared.

With a sharp nod, Bluejay turned. He left the cedars, climbed the bank and pushed on through the hardwood. A little later a yearling doe leaped up before him. He shot quickly, and shot again; then he walked on toward camp, bearing the hindquarters. Unlawful, this . . . but the wardens winked at men of the country living from the country. No one would trouble him; he rather hoped he might be seen. The venison would explain his having the rifle along, and while Townline lake never gave up those who die in its depths ... well, a man can never be too safe!

Townline lake never gives up its dead. That was the thought which flashed through Kerry's mind as he went overboard. Once down in the channels . . .

But he was not going down in any channel! He was there, under his capsized canoe, still holding the shattered paddle in one hand.

The blow of the bullet had all but torn it from his grasp. Just as ne was dipping the blade that terrific impact had struck. Perhaps the smooth ash had deflected the missile; perhaps the aim of his assailant had not been good.

But the sound of the rifle a flat dull crash, had reached his ears he fore he could make a move in reaction to amazement. And then his first act was for self-preservation.

Someone had lain in wait to kill him. Someone had shot with reasonable accuracy . . . and to let them believe that a desired end had been achieved was at once smartness and caution.

So he went over the far side, his torso lolling in the water, the move throwing Tip out with a great scrambling. Kerry cautiously twisted his body so he would come up beneath the

In there, he could hear nothing but the slosh of water, the rustle of wind, the sharp, inquiring bark of the dog.

Young wanted to call out, to reassure the retriever that all was well, for Tip was in a great state of excitement and distress. But to do that, he feared, would set the animal diving for him and that, to a watcher, might betray the secret . . . that he was safe and in concealment.

The toss of the canoe grew more pronounced as they drifted into heavier seas. The chill of the water ate into his flesh, into his bones. His teeth commenced to chatter.

With great caution, he shoved himself downward and came up on the leeward side. With a shake of his head he cleared water from his eyes and, opening them, burst into laugh-

The dog had just rounded the bow again. His look was tense, almost agonized, but when he came thus face to face with his master, the ears pricked stiffly and then relaxed, the orange flare left the eyes and a pink tongue showed

"Okay!" Kerry choked. "All jake, chum! Hi! . . . All right, then!" And he turned his cheek to the frantic tongue for a moment.

"Listen, Tip," he said, holding the dog beside him with one hand while the other rested on the canoe. "I got to get out of this! Cold? D'you ever feel colder water in summer? Before we'd drift to shore I'd freeze."

He looked about. The waves were high. Straight down wind was his island, reed-fringed, with warm sunshine beating upon it. To one on shore, a swimming dog would scarcely be noticed. . . .

"You, Tip! . . . You get to camp! Savvy?" He reached for a hold on the and long about sundown swung past dog's tail. "Hie on, now! Camp! Hie Obediently the dog turned down that sounded like poundin' inside." wind. Kerry kept his hold on the tail, let go the canoe. He turned to his side and then to his back, and as his weight came on Tip the retriever slowed and looked backward.

"Camp!" gasped Kerry. "Hie on!" Tip settled down to swim, low in the water, making slow going of it, but nevertheless towing his master steadily. . . . And a watcher, from a distance, had he seen the dog, would never have guessed what dragged be-

Kerry wormed his way through the reeds, once they were reached, and stretched flat on his belly on the clean sand, letting the sun drive the chill from his bones.

He lay there a long time before he moved. Then he wriggled into the brush, got behind his tent, extricated his binoculars from the pack and for a long interval studied the point from which the bullet must have been fired. His canoe had followed him ashore but for a long time he made no move to secure it. At length, reassured, he re-embarked; his rifle at hand, Tip again in the bow, he set out for the mainland, following a course that would take him away from the point of ambush. There he cached the canoe in bushes and began circling the shore. He spent considerable time trying to determine the course of the bullet, and searched the shore for sign. But there was no sign. In a thick clump of cedars he found faint traces of movement: a trampled seedling, a bruised herb. But an animal might have done these. No footprints showed. He went on, to the cabin. He opened the door, peered in, then against the cool stock. The sight-head | stooped, frowning. A fine dusting of dry sand was on the floor. Sand? No, his fingers told him it was powdered clay. It went from the doorway across toward a far corner; just a light dustbreed stood there for a long moment, ing of it, a ragged stringer. He wondered what that might mean. Following, he found that it ended at two short sections of flooring. At some time-there was no way of determining when-these had been tampered with. Perhaps broken boards had been replaced. Still, why that dirt on the floor? It had not been here the other

"Tip," he sald, as he stuffed tobacco into his pipe, "I'm getting good and hot under the collar! Shot at from ambush! Now, who the devil-" He lighted his pipe and stood frowning, debating. "Let's go to town," he said to the dog, "and see who's surprised to see

That was about noon; he had fourteen miles to go. . . . He could cut off five, he remembered, if he took an old road, long disused, which Nan had pointed out to him when they had traveled this way together. Beaver phone. . . ." had flooded it years back, she had said. This spring the abandoned dam had gone out. With a little work the cut-off might be made passable.

So he went that way, walking intently, with the space-eating stride of the woodsman, rifle in the crook of his arm, seeing but little of what he passed. He dld stop once, to watch bees working in fireweed.

CHAPTER XI

Now Nat Bridger, the sheriff, though heart and soul. There were those in the country who called him a boot-

He was alone in his office when West entered the corridor. Tod glanced around at the barred door to the bullpen straight ahead with a man standing against it, holding one bandaged hand in the other gingerly.

"Hullo, Dick!" West said to the prisoner. "Heard you drank too much of your own hooch! What ails the hand?"

"Blood poison'," the man growled. "Most drives me crazy! Doc Adams says it's better, but it don't seem so to me."

The voices had attracted the sheriff who came to the doorway.

"Oh, hul-lo, Tod!" he cried and went on to remark how well this sight of an old friend pleased him and shook hands and went through a performance of greeting which, to an understanding person, would have explained clearly just why he was considered a boot-licker. "Lord, what happened to you!" he demanded as West followed him in to where the light was better. "Why, Tod, you're all swoll up!" He was, in truth, badly swollen. His face was lop-sided and even the left eye slightly puffed.

"Dam' hornets got me yesterday," he said. "Was fishin' up Big Beaver and kicked 'em out of a stump. They sure are good at their job!"

"I'll say so! But what brings you here?" he asked. "Anything I can do for you, Tod?" West sat down and crossed his legs and put his hat on one knee.

"Well, not for me, mebby," he said. "but I heard somethin' the other night that I kind of figure you ought to know. Likely nothin' to it but you never can tell." "Yeah?"

"Yes." You know Bluejay, don't you? Thought so, Kind of scum, Frank is. He's worked for me off and on 'nd I don't trust him much, but there's things about him . . . For instance, he's always snoopin', always sees things.

"He's been camped out north of us pickin' berries and comes in most every night. Well, night before last he came to me to get a little he had comin', and I got visiting and he told me something kind of suspicious.

"He says he'd been lookin' for berries north of Townline lake Thursday that Downer cabin on his way back to camp. He says he heard something

"Now, you or me, we'd 've walked right up to the door, but we ain't 'breeds. There's no explainin' 'em and mebby it's a good thing for Frank and for you and for the county itself that he didn't. . . . Leastwise, if there's anything to his story" He was leaning forward, now, and nodded seriously. A little draft through the open transom above fluttered his graying hair and the lone prisoner in the bull-pen leaned closer against the bars, straining to listen.

"He peeked through the window and, Nat, he says he saw young Holt Stuart on his knees in a corner takin' money out of a tin box he's got buried under

His voice had dropped to a whisper on this last.

He watched the look of amazement spread swiftly over the sheriff's face. "Stuart?" he asked in surprise. "Stuart, takin' money out of a tin box buried under the floor? . . . My God, Tod! . . . Why . . . 'Nd he was in that cabin the night Cash was shot!"

"Of course, Nat, you're not dumb!" He narrowed his eyes and nodded wisely. "You and I, we'd 've had the young lad in for a talkin' to, anyhow, if it hadn't been for Ezra.

"Ezra was so damned sure that that ankle had been sprained the night Cash was killed and that the kid couldn't 've gotten out . . . Oh, well! The best of us'll make mistakes."

Bridger's face was gray with excite-

"We won't overlook this bet!" he snapped. "By God, Tod, if I can just clean up this Downer mystery, then I guess these other birds that've been threatenin' to run for this office, come fall. 'Il crawl back into their holes!" "Yes. . . . But if you don't . . . Some of the boys are gatherin' up a lot of support !"

"Now, let's see. Butch 's away out south, servin' some papers. He'd ought to be back a little after noon. Nobody else knows this?"

"Not a soul, far's I know. I told Bluejay to keep his mouth shut." Bridger began to pace the floor in

"It won't do to go alone. Takin' a man as a murder suspect ain't a simple matter. As a matter of duty, I'd ought to have my deputy with me."

"Yes, and then some, maybe," "Would you go along, Tod?"

"Anything I can do I'd feel it my duty to do." He rose. "Tell you what: I've got to drag along home. I might hear somethin' there. I'll be waitin' when you and Butch show up."

"And that'll be as quick as I can get hold of him. I'll try it by tele-

So it was that when Ezra Adams, rusty black bag in his hand, mounted the jail steps to make a call on his patient there, he heard the story the prisoner had heard; and learned that Bridger and his deputy had started north a few moments before and went down the steps in a fine flutter of excitement!

Kerry Young, dog at his heels, swung into the men's shanty behind Nan Downer's headquarters, set his a man large in stature, was small in | rifle carefully in a corner and immediately went out.

When Christ arose.

THY is it that there are usually when sinister associations about the word Easter when we find it on the map? It doesn't seem quite in keeping, states a writer in London Answers Magazine.

The classic example is Easter is land, in the Pacific. It got its name in quite straightforward fashion, when a Dutch admiral discovered it one Easter Sunday, over 200 years ago.

But the place itself has a forbidding, desolate air. There are few trees, and even birds, usually plentiful in these islands, seem strangely scarce. But there are great volcanic rocks and craters, and strange relics of a vanished civilization-huge platforms and mysterious statues, with features that are grim masks of cruelty and defiance, staring eerily into nothing-

Not a pleasant place, Easter Island, apart from its famous statues, but they give it the final touch that makes it wholly sinister, a place of mystery

None of the other "Easters" quite come up to this standard, but there is a touch of the creepy about the great | garden in. cavern in South Patagonia which has been named Easter Hole. Most caves have a slightly sinister air, and this is a particularly large and awe-inspiring example. And Easter Sunday canyon, in Arizona, has something of the same forbidding character. It's a relief to come to our own Easand you find that it has specialized in

It's only some 60 years ago that some of the villagers threw an old woman into a pond because she was suspected of being a witch, and the "ordeal by swimming" was one of the favorite methods of the old witch-finders. If a woman was a witch she floated; if she wasn't, she sank. More recently even than that, Good Easter still had its "witches," or believed that it had them. One man, who died some years ago, had this reputation because his cabbages were always better than anyone else's, so people believed that he "bewitched" their gardens.

A strange story, too, was told about this man's wife. It was said that, meeting another woman with a handsome baby girl, she exclaimed: "What a beautiful child! But it will never get any bigger!" And soon afterwards the baby died. Good Easter seems a healthy enough place, and its people live to a ripe old age. So far as it is concerned, the sinister element belongs to the past,

not to the present.

THE custom of having hot cross buns on Good Friday is very old. The buns originally were supposedly made of a dough kneaded for the host and accordingly marked with a cross. They were said to keep for 12 months without being moldy, and were often hung up in houses as charms against evil.

Mr. O. Lambeth, of Lamesa, who has the agency for the Paranay Oil in Terry county, was a caller at the Herald office Wed. Notice his ad

In the dark, superstitious days prior to modern medicine, to these curious loaves were attributed the healing powers of the family doctor of modern times.

Whenever an illness fell upon them, these devout peasants of long ago would dissolve small bits of the bread in water, and drink it with as much faith in its curative qualities as we would have in the scientifically prescribed medicine or tonic of today!

The Egg Is Pagan

Not many people realize that the word Easter, although the name of a Christian festival, is a survival of paganism, says Tit-Bits Magazine. It takes its name from Eostre, the pagan goddess, who was identified with the Aurora Borealis, the "rising light of day and spring." Norsemen welcomed her annually in a festival of celebration featuring an egg and a rabbit as symbols of fecundity. The survival of this custom is our present Easter egg, tinted in imitation of the quivering beams of the Aurora Borealis.

As the Christian festival coincides with the period of the pagan one, and there is a certain beautiful similarity between them, the name has naturally

GRANDMA HOWARD PASSES

Everybody try to come.

Grandma Howard, 89, wife of the late Wm. Howard, who passed on some four years ago, died Tuesday night. Funeral was to be held at the local Baptist church Wed. afternoon. She passed away at the family home six miles north of town.

Grandma, as everyone called her, has been in very poor health for several years, and for the past year her reason had been gone. But she was loved by every old timer and many of the new people of Terry county; her home was always open, and she nearly always had company for a short visit or as long as they wished to stay. A number of children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren survive, a list of which will appear in
