Cisco Loboes Given Big Welcome Home

OLD HOME TOWN

The First Industrial Arts club has undertaken a movement to have trees that overhang Cisco sidewalks properly pruned so as to afford protection to the public and greater beauty to the residence sections. At a meeting of the club held at the home of Mrs. L. D. Parks on I avenue, the club adopted the following resolution which it is hoped will result in action either by the city or private individuals:

"Whereas, there are many sidewalks in our city over hung by the lower branches of trees and shrubbery which is annoying to pedestrians; and

"Whereas, a pruning of such branches will add to the beauty of our city; therefore be it resolved by the First Industrial Arts club, of Cisco, that this condition be called to the attention of the city officials, with the request that the condition be remedied. Further, that a copy of this resolution be furnished the press."

PARADE HELD IN HONOR OF CONQUERORS

Cisco High Big Dam Fighting Loboes, some of them limping, others with peevish noses and still others bearing additional marks of a terrific battle, arrived home at 12:45 o'clock Monday noon and alighted into the midst of a great celebration in honor of their victory over El Paso high Saturday afternoon. Members of the team were immediately loaded on to two trucks of the Ever Ready Transfer & Storage company and were joined in a procession up Main street to the flag pole. Ahead of them marched the Lobo band, the pep squad, and members of the Lions club wearing their new trick hats. At the flag pole a banner, reading: "Cisco High Big Dam Fighting Loboes—The Pride of Cisco," was hoisted into the breeze as the pep squad sang the Lobo victory song.

Although the team arrived here an hour and a half ahead of the time originally planned, because the train was run back to Cisco as a special train instead of being joined to another train as on the trip to El Paso, a great crowd was at the union station to greet the returning boys and fans who accompanied. Word of the change in schedule had been received, and the parade arranged impromptu with Chief of Police G. E. Bedford acting as grand marshal. Periods at the high school were arranged so that more time was allowed at noon without interfering with class work, and so the entire high school student body and faculty were able to be present for the celebration.

In addition to those who marched in the parade, hundreds of others lined the sidewalks and looked on and cheered as the Loboes went by. Most of the fans returning from the trip brought with them Mexican curios, walking canes and other mementoes of the trip, secured in Juarez. Some El Paso newspapers were brought back, containing pictures taken on arrival of the Lobo special train.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 3.—Six men were dead and four seriously wounded today as the result of one of the bloodiest weeks in Kentucky in years. One includes A. F. Menifee, a pugilist of Paris, who was shot and instantly killed by his father-in-law, Len Graves, at Paris, following an argument over Menifee's wife, whom he is alleged to have mistreated. J. P. Gillen and Earl Maumbaugh, volunteer policemen, were killed near Louisville, when three youths they had started to conduct to jail shot them. Lawrence Falkner, a negro, was killed by policemen who answered a call to his home while he was reported beating his wife. Henry Brown and Morris Calloway, railroad detectives, were killed at Radanna, when they attempted to arrest P. Tomley as the latter left a train accompanied by his wife. Tomley shot and mortally wounded one of the officers who, firing at Tomley from where he lay dying, seriously wounded him and accidentally killed his brother officer when one of the shots went wild.

Physicians declared the girl pretty and greatly devoted to her home and family, had been assaulted. This Yarrow denied, however, although he is alleged to have admitted he murdered the girl because she resisted. Yarrow was charged with the murder.

INDIVIDUAL HEADS

Here is a new bobbed hair protest, from masters of the art. Hairdressers and specialists from 54 countries, meeting in Vienna in Emperor Franz Joseph's palace, voice their objections to "the present stereotyped style of bobbed hair, as worn by American and European women," and plead for "distinctive individuality" in hairdress. This, one of the masters declares, can be attained only by "restoring the artificial methods, such as curling, waving, undulating, dyeing and adding artificial locks and tresses harmonizing with the particular style of features, contour of face and mode of dress." Unquestionably it's a tremendous problem, and the would-be dictators may well sweat over it. The trouble is, the less hair a woman has on her head, the less individualizing she can do with it. Bobbing has made women far more alike than they like to look. The obvious remedy, a practical male might suggest, would be to let the hair grow, and then to the natural differences of color, curl, thickness, etc., add such distinctive dressing as each woman chose to give her own hair. But that is probably too radical a suggestion to have any effect. It would be as hard to get women to let their hair grow now as it was to get them to cut it off. Probably harder, for growing a head of hair is a longer process than cutting it, requiring a long period of steadfastness.

AIR MAIL PASSENGERS

When the air mail line between New York and Chicago went into private hands on September 1, the company operating it announced that it would take, along with the mail, whatever passengers it was able to accommodate. That has meant, so far, one passenger each way every day. Two passengers a day, on such a populous route between two great terminals, is not much. Its importance is shown, however, by the fact that every day there are several applicants turned away. It is evident that if there were accommodations for them, many times as many passengers would go by air. There is opportunity for a great and rapid development of this sort on all the air mail routes. People are ready now to patronize air transportation, and they naturally prefer to travel if possible in mail planes because they have faith in the planes and pilots. Air mail lines, in developing this pioneer passenger business, will be the natural forerunners of regular and adequate passenger lines.

Charlie Chaplin is said to be his old self again, doing fine work on a new picture. That fellow would get along all right if women would just stop marrying him.

TOY-BALLOONING

Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., which boasts of being the home of aviator Chamberlin, has another claim—a rubber balloon sent up identifying card attached. Senior Antonio Quintero at that is one of the most apparently surpassing any loon with a human passenger. A new and fascinating sport. There might be competitions in flying toy balloons, of standard types, to see how far they would go and how many countries they could cover. It would be a fine international game for children—perhaps for grown-ups too. It might result in as much information about air currents as is gained by flying balloonists, at slight cost and without any danger.

NAVAL ECONOMY

Rear Admiral Magruder, writing on naval economy in the Saturday Evening Post, makes these criticisms of the United States navy as it stands today. That it is greatly over-organized; That demobilization since the war has not gone far enough; That thriftless methods, possibly inevitable during the war, are still used; That superfluous navy yards and stations are kept up, at great expense; That ships useless for war purposes are kept in commission. These are questions for experts to determine. It is a serious thing when they are raised by a naval officer of Admiral Magruder's knowledge and position. Nobody, in public life or private life, wants to spend a lot of money on the navy without getting anything for it. The United States wants naval restriction. Possibly here is an opportunity for some thrifty disarmament that can be attended to without an international conference.

CARS IN 1935

One car to every 2.8 persons in 1935 is the prediction of the United States bureau of public roads, in its transport survey of Ohio. There is one car to every 4.7 persons in Ohio right now. A police view of the liquor situation reveals the fact that Cleveland is rapidly going dry, and it is the police view that lots of people who used to spend their money on drink are now spending it for automobiles. One newspaper remarks that with one car for every two and eight-tenths persons, the eight-tenths person will have to ride in the rumble seat. Perhaps, for a few weeks. But the eight-tenths is probably going to be very busy about that time saving money enough on its homebrew to make the first payment on its flivver, while the two who drove on the front seat back in the dark ages before they were married are counting the weeks until they can take the baby from certified down to plain milk and put the difference on the small extra car in which to do the marketing.

Maybe Jack and Gene will make it an annual affair.

WRITING FOR A LIVING

Not long ago a literary man was arrested for attempted blackmail, and his defense was that he was so hard up that the situation had temporarily unhinged his mind. What moral does that combination of circumstances teach? Perhaps it teaches that a man should not attempt to make a living by writing. The judge before whom the case was tried must have had some insight into the troubles of the scribes, for although the man was convicted, His Honor turned him loose. Punks who are not on the inside have the impression that the individual in the writing business makes money in huge lumps. If they but knew the average price paid for literary efforts they'd get a shock. One popular author told me that a certain publication asked him for a story. He accepted the assignment and sent in the story, into which he had put about a week's work. His manuscript was accepted and he got a check—for $20.

But that periodical could not afford to pay more than $20 for a story. There are some publications that cannot give more than a dollar apiece for contributions—and they can get all they want at that price and less.

Many persons would be delighted to get their writings in print without a cent of remuneration; and some would be willing to pay for the privilege of seeing their names on the "By" line.

So alluringly remunerative does the writing game appear to the majority of folks that the thoughts of the average down-and-outer turn instinctively to writing as a means of quick profit.

Writing like banking, medicine or law, or making soap is a business—a business that has to be learned and built up by long, slow, tedious processes of inexhaustible, indefatigable application.

A fellow who is broke and says to himself, "I'm going to take up writing," might as well say that he is going to take up chemistry; or anything else that must be developed before anything comes of it. The writing game is slower and pays less in proportion, even though one succeeds, than almost any other enterprise.

And success through literary effort is only here and there; occasionally; now and then. You'd be surprised if you knew how many "wonderful books"—which no publisher will publish—have been put into print at the expense of the authors, and are piled up in garrets getting yellow and brittle. And you'd also be surprised if you could see the tons of manuscripts which are mailed every day to the editors and which—if sufficient postage has been enclosed—come back.

There is more money in blackmailing than in writing because should the blackmailer fail and the cops get him he will have a place in which to "stay and something to eat, unless some kind hearted judge turns him loose to perish.

WORLD-WIDE INCREASE IN COST OF FOOTWEAR SEEN BY BRITISH SHOE MAN

NORTHAMPTON, Oct. 1. — A world-wide increase in the cost of footwear seems inevitable. The Federation of Boot and Shoe Manufacturers of Great Britain have decided on a general revision of costings, in an upward direction. A. H. Hollister, president of the Northamptonshire Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' association, states that the increase will be from 25 to 30 cents per pair. The shortage of hides, he says, has increased the price of leather. The shortage of hides is due to the demand for leather for automobiles and so many purposes other than footwear. Another factor is the decline in the consumption of meat, especially in the United States, caused by the growing demand for cereals. This means that fewer cattle are being raised.

One interesting feature of the Northampton manufacturers report is that there is a growing demand for British footwear in the United States and the British export trade is prospering accordingly.

West Texas Utilities Co. Announces Charter Changes Which Will Unify Operation of Various Properties

Changes and amendments to the charter of the West Texas Utilities company have been made and filed with the secretary of state at Austin, it was announced in Abilene by G. W. Fry, president of the corporation, who said the changes were made necessary to unify the various properties of the company which had been operating under different names in West Texas. Several changes in personnel were made.

Mr. Fry's statement follows:

Through changes and amendments to the corporate set up of the West Texas Utilities company filed in the office of the secretary of state at Austin Saturday the various operating properties that have been under control of the West Texas Utilities company under other names and some properties in West Texas that have been under control of Central Power & Light company and Texas Plains Public Service company, both affiliated organizations have been placed in the West Texas Utilities company under the name of that company.

This change greatly enlarges the company and simplifies its operations, and accounting, through consolidation of all operating properties of the system in West Texas into the West Texas Utilities company.

In addition to the properties of the West Texas Utilities company as they existed prior to the change just made, the company acquired the Cisco Ice company, the Abilene Ice company, the West Texas Ice company and the San Angelo Water, Light and Power company, all of which have been under contract of the West Texas Utilities company in the past. Other properties acquired by the company are the Quannah Light and Ice company and a number of electric and ice properties heretofore operated by the Central Power and Light company, among them being systems at Clarendon, Memphis, Childress, Vernon, Wellington, Shamrock, Estelline, Kerland and several other smaller towns.

Properties of the West Texas Ice company are at Haskell, Crowell, Matador, Menard, Stamford, Hamlin, Santa Anna, Coleman, Ballinger, San Angelo, McCamey and Big Lake.

These charter changes were made in part to simplify the corporate structure and in part for the purpose of enlarging the company by acquiring properties in the West Texas territory that have heretofore been operated and owned by affiliated companies.

The considerably enlarged West

Texas Utilities company, under the rearrangement, will continue to operate with Abilene as the location of its general office. Reassignments in the executive positions of the company, made necessary by the consolidation, are announced as follows: Price Campbell, for many years chief operating officer of the company, becomes vice president and general manager. R. M. Wolfe, former treasurer, becomes secretary and assistant to the president. G. W. Fry, C. C. Sellers becomes treasurer; H. A. Lepper auditor; L. P. Cook general secretary and R. R. St. John general storekeeper.

Offices to be Enlarged

Enlargement of the operating offices of the company will be done by temporarily leasing one floor of the new Mims building, just across the street from the Utilities building, and which will be occupied as soon as the building is completed. It is planned eventually to add several stories to the Utilities building to take care of the expected growth of the company.

RANGER MEETS T. C. U. FROSH ON FRIDAY

RANGER Oct. 3.—The Ranger Bulldogs will have their hardest game so far this year Friday, Oct. 7, and possibly the hardest game they will have all season, for 49 freshmen from T. C. U. will come out to Ranger to do battle with the Bulldogs.

These 49 men are what one might call the cream of Texas football players from 1926 high school squads. It does not necessarily follow that all of the best men from high schools chose T. C. U. for their college, but it is true that as a general thing the star men on various teams are lost each year through graduation and when they enter college they have had from two to four years advantage in experience over the average high school player, and T. C. U. would naturally have her share of these men.

There are three men from the Oak Cliff squad from 1926 and Les Swofford from Ranger, Earl Blackburn from Breckenridge, John Simmons from Eastland as well as a number of other good men from Texas teams.

"Lawson" Gas Heaters

No name in the gas appliance industry is more favorable known than that of LAWSON.

Under this trade mark, the first copper coil gas water heater was built over twenty-five years ago. The scientific development of Lawson gas burner is the result of many years of research and engineering study. All Lawson radiant gas heaters are supplied with clay backwalls. The radiants found in Lawson heaters are made unusually large; each constituting a complete combustion chamber in itself. There is a constant free circulation of air throughout the radiant, making gas consumption complete and thus preventing gas odor. The wide range of models and finishes in LAWSON Radiant heaters makes it easy to choose one.
