Shady Oaks seems to become more attractive each day, as more hard work is put into the grounds around the clubhouse. Small scrub oaks, weeds and briars are being cleared from under the larger oak trees along the fairways on the golf course. This brings on a real clean look and with the sprinkling of those beautiful autumn colors of yellow orange and brown in the trees that border the property and along the fairways, it is a real attractive place.

Ruling On Land Uncertain

Forty-one veterans who bid on a 97-acre farm in Callahan County will not learn for sure whether they got the land or not, because the majority of Veterans Land Board agreed to ask Attorney General Crawford Martin whether it is too late for the former purchaser to reclaim the land.

Lew L. Wallace was high-bidder among the 41, offering $20.-037.29 for the land on FM 880 north of Cross Plains.

Lesile Hargrave, who lives on Lesile Hargrave, who lives on the picture once he has failed to make his payments and the track has been declared forsale.

Martin whether it is too late for the former purchaser to reclaim the land.

Lew L. Wallace was high-bidder among the 41, offering $20.037.29 for the land on FM 830 north of Cross Plains.

Leslie Hargrave, who lives on the farm, had bought it through the Veterans Land Board six years ago. But it was forfeited with none of the semi-annual payments made. When it was advertised for bids, Hargrave came to Austin and enlisted the help of veterans' organizations and others.

Board members John Burns of Austin and Ted Connell of Killen of the the should have been dealth and the should have been saved on the land. Action on the award was delayed until Martin can rule on the status of the purchased who missed his payments for six years, and now wants to pay them all at once.

WINIFRED BELL CLOUTIER

1996-1968

Those who were able to share some hours with my mother before her surgery know the special and beautiful glow she radiated. Others who could not be there will, I think, recognize her in the following lines. Her own children, her kids at school, her co-workers, her vitally nurturing associates in the A. A., her lifelong and remembered friends and relatives, and especially her il grandchildren who knew "Sugar" as dispenser of special attention. affection, and sugarless gum — all of us will remember and cherish a quality of life that grew, in later years particularly, in earthly beauty and open giving. Whether you knew her as Mother, as Winnie, as Sugar, or as Mrs. Cloutier, I hope the following lines convey something of the feeling she leaves, and all of us in the family want you to know how we appreciated your continuing well wishes as she fought to regain consciousness. The receptionist told us no one in ght to regain consciousness. The receptionist told us no one in her memory had received so many calls and such anxious concern from so many as my mother. Thank you so very much.

She lay, aware of ending pillowed and flat peering down-nose, bespectacled a full-throated laugh at some lived memory.

Awake Now, forgetting only in the walking death; Waking, stirring to bestir; Me, alive in me. She taught that, simply.

and wonderously fidgeting and elbowing. Self-pitying, with guilt our fare.

Not her in me, precisely.

More a circle which is its own continuity. Sensing a beginning in movement Arching to tender return.
