Brady's progress 'extraordinary'

Reagan governs from hospital bed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, in "exceptionally good condition" and "excellent spirits," resumed the duties of the presidency today from a hospital bed after an assailant's bullet was removed from his chest.

Less than 24 hours after he was shot outside a Washington hotel, Reagan, 70, was joking with nurses at George Washington University Hospital and impressing his doctors with his stamina.

At 7:15 a.m. EST top aides visited

Reagan's room and found him sitting up in bed, brushing his teeth after breakfast. Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan used his breakfast tray to sign a dairy price support bill the aides had given him.

"He could probably put in a full day today if he gets a nap this afternoon," said hospital spokesman Dr. Dennis O'Leary. "I would not be surprised to see him up walking around in a couple of days."

O'Leary said Reagan "is doing extremely well," could be discharged from the hospital in a week or two, "then a couple of months until he's back riding horses."

He said press secretary James Brady, shot in the forehead in the assassination attempt, was "much improved" after extensive exploratory surgery to determine the extent of damage to his brain. Brady's progress, he said, "has been extraordinary."

The doctor reported "fairly extensive damage" to the right side of Brady's brain but minimal damage to the left, which controls all speech and mental processes.

"We believe he is going to live," O'Leary said of Brady, "but we have no idea where he is going to end up." If there is paralysis, he said, "it probably will affect the left side of his body."

A suspect, identified as John Warnock Hinckley Jr., 25, of Evergreen, Colo., was arrested and held without bond on a charge of attempting to assassinate the president. FBI spokesman Roger Young said he knew of no motive for the attack.

Doctors at George Washington University Hospital said the 70-year-old Reagan — the oldest man ever elected president — was expected to have no complications and should be able to make presidential decisions today.

Suspect Hinckley was loner with troubled Texas roots

By the Associated Press

John Warnock Hinckley Jr. was a loner, a troubled young man and a college dropout who failed to leave a lasting impression on the people he encountered.

That obscurity was shattered Monday by the fusillade that wounded the president of the United States and left three others bleeding on a Washington street.

Classmates, neighbors and acquaintances of the former Texan said they found it hard to believe the man they saw wrestled to the ground by U.S. Secret Service agents on television news broadcasts was Hinckley.

But the 25-year-old loner with a history of psychiatric problems and trouble with guns was charged late Monday with trying to assassinate President Ronald Reagan.

"He just sort of blended into the crowd," said Tom Blackwell, who graduated with Hinckley from Highland Park High School in suburban Dallas in 1973. "He wasn't a flamboyant type or anything like that."

"None of us can remember a thing about him. He just kept to himself," said a former neighbor in Lubbock, where Hinckley sporadically attended

Texas Tech University.

FBI spokesman Roger Young in Washington confirmed late Monday that the weapon used in Monday's attack was one of two identical .22-caliber pistols Hinckley purchased from a Dallas pawn shop on Oct. 13.

That purchase came just four days after Hinckley — carrying three handguns, 50 rounds of ammunition and a pair of handcuffs — was arrested by airport police in Nashville, Tenn., the FBI said.

President Carter was visiting Nashville the day Hinckley was arrested, and then-candidate Reagan was scheduled to stop in Memphis on that day, but canceled his visit.

Isaac Goldstein, owner of Rocky's Pawn Shop in Dallas, said Hinckley used a Lubbock address in filling out the forms required to buy the weapons.

Records of the sale were seized by agents of the FBI and the Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms a few hours after Reagan was shot.

On March 11, Hinckley was in another pawn shop, according to Brent Morris, a clerk at G.I. Joe's in Denver. He said Hinckley, shabbily dressed and looking "like a man down on his luck," pawned his electric guitar and typewriter and said he was "going out of town."

Through attorney Jim Robinson, Hinckley's parents said in Evergreen, Colo., that their son had psychiatric treatment recently but his "evaluation did not alert anyone to the seriousness of his condition."

Robinson said the parents were "heartbroken" from Monday's events but would stand by their son.

Hinckley's father, Denver businessman J.W. "Jack" Hinckley, is president of Vanderbilt Energy Corp., an oil and gas exploration company.

81 ballots cast in council elections

On the morning of the last day of absentee voting, 81 ballots had been cast in the upcoming election for two places on the Big Spring City Council.

The deadline for voting absentee in person is 5 p.m. today at the office of City Secretary Tom Ferguson. Those voters who have already received mailed ballots, must return them before 10 a.m. Friday.

Voting at two locations in the city, the Northside Fire Station and the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum, will take place from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. Saturday.

Big Spring residents express shock, label suspect 'crazy'

By ANDREA COHEN

and CAROL HART

Feelings of shock and concern echoed throughout Big Spring Monday following the attempt on President Ronald Reagan's life and the shooting of three men standing near him when the incident occurred.

Winston Wrinkle, owner of radio station KBST, told the Herald, "I heard about it at 1:45 p.m. (Monday), about 15 minutes after it happened. I called the radio station and told them to drop all commercial programming, and stay with the story."

"I felt it was much more serious than first reported. I felt a terrible feeling in my gut that the president had been shot, because he had gone to the hospital. About 15 minutes later, they revealed that he had been shot."

Wrinkle said he monitored AP newswires following the shooting. "I'm told by Sherrill Farmer (of the Big Spring Police Department) that when a .22 caliber bullet goes into the body, the organs close behind it. It's difficult to find it. A larger caliber makes a bigger hole, you can find the lead."

"I'm praying for his recovery. I don't know what prompted the young man to shoot him. It's a tragedy that our country has to tolerate this type of thing. It should bring us all to a state of prayer for our president and our leaders."

Wrinkle also voiced his sadness at the shooting of Press Secretary James Brady. "James Brady worked for Sen. Roth in Delaware (prior to the Reagan appointment). He's well loved on Capitol Hill. He's a humorous guy."

Big Spring Police Chief Elwood Hoherz said "I think it's a disgrace that our country has gotten to a point where leaders cannot feel secure in making their talks to the people. Heavy security has to be with them all the time. Anyone who attempts something can probably carry it out."

Hoherz said his opinions on gun control have changed throughout the years. "We need to look at the availability of small Saturday night specials, and have increased prosecution when a man is found with one," he said.

Hoherz added that he believed in the right to bear arms for protection of property. "We need not to take away from that," he said. "It's a different situation when you have someone carrying a weapon on a public street."

"We're just shocked by the whole situation," said Wade Choate, former Mayor and past chairman of the Reagan-Bush committee in Howard County.

"There are so many of these people out on the street. There should be a penalty for crackpots like this."

"This is going to bring on gun control, though it wouldn't matter," he continued. "They're going to get the guns anyway."

"I think it's a sick symptom of our sick society," said District Attorney Rick Hamby. "It's an attitude by people in general. People are tired of violence. "It begins with each one of us standing up and saying, 'I'm sick of this.' We're not putting up with it. Each one of us has to say we're fed up with it and not put up with false compassion. We need compassion for society, not the criminal."

"It's a tragedy for the American people," said Elliot Mitchell, city attorney. "I'm completely shocked. It's sad. You can't be important anymore."

"This isn't in the interest of the American people or the country. The country is finally making a comeback after 20 years and then some crackpot tries to become famous. If you become famous, you have to look over your shoulder. It's a typical American tragedy."

Polly Mays, former city councilwoman, said "I feel people (like the man who shot Reagan) are not members of a group. They are very disturbed, crazy people."

Billy Mac Sheppard, Republican Party county chairman, said "I'm shocked, saddened and concerned. I don't think the fact that he was my choice (for president) makes my feelings special. He's everybody's president... There's no way to keep the president completely shielded, we've got so many nuts running loose. I don't think there's a solution."

Sheppard's wife, Dene, said "We have a way of electing our officials. One can go through the proper process

LATE-BREAKING EVENTS — Like so many others, these four women were at work when President Reagan and three others were shot outside the Washington Hilton Hotel Monday. Those having a television available at work, as these employees of K-Mart did, could keep up

Laxalt says authorities have established motive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nevada, said today that authorities have established a motive in the attempted assassination of President Reagan, but the senator refused to divulge the details.

Laxalt, a close friend of the president's, spoke to reporters outside the White House after he and other congressional leaders were briefed by Vice President George Bush and several Cabinet members, including Attorney General William French Smith.

"It does not appear to be part of a plot," said Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn.

Baker and Laxalt both said Smith briefed the congressional delegation on the investigation into the shooting and the suspect, John Warnock Hinckley Jr., who has been charged in the attack.

Baker agreed Reagan would not become a "prisoner in the White House" and said the chief executive was unlikely to change his style of frequent trips outside the White House to give speeches, attend parties and travel to his ranch and elsewhere.

"I bet that he won't change his method of operation," Baker said.

And Laxalt said, that although he had not spoken to Reagan about the topic, he knows him well enough to be certain that Reagan would not become a White House recluse.

Laxalt, asked about the motive, said he was reluctant to divulge that information. But he added there was "no indication that there is anyone but the individual involved."

But the Nevada senator did say he believed Reagan should try to be more cautious in the future. As for presidential security, Laxalt said: "They are going to re-evaluate and look at the whole situation."

of getting something changed, rather than taking such a drastic action."
"There's definitely going to be less and less contact between the president and the people," said Wayne Burns, former county attorney. "That's bad, but apparently, it's necessary."
Delano Shaw, former delegate to the National Democratic Convention, said he felt the gunman was a sign of "a new, modern lobbyist. I'm sick (about the situation). It put the nation in shock. Whatever affects the president hits us locally. I have prayed for our country, and wish the whole nation would pray."

Cecil Riordan, County Democratic Chairman, said "I think it's a reflection on the country all over the world. I know very little about (Reagan's) condition. I hope it's not serious."
Jane Thomas, active in West Texas Republican Women's group, said "I'm horrified. I worked so hard for him. It's horrible that it (an assassination attempt) could happen in this country again."

Mack Underwood, president of the Howard County Democrats, said "I have the same reaction that most everyone has. It's a terrible shock that things like this can continue to happen in the United States. There's no way a man can get out (in public) that isn't dangerous. I'm just a little bit numb."
Melody Kennedy, a secretary to Wade Choate, said "I'm real shocked and it shows there are a lot of crazy people running around. He hasn't been in office very long. He hasn't had time to do anything."

Skyjacking ends with commando attack, four terrorists killed

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The hijacking of an Indonesian airliner has ended with a commando attack in which four of the Indonesian hijackers were killed, the fifth was captured and the 55 hostages were freed. Two Americans were among the hostages.
One of the commandos and the chief pilot of the plane were wounded during the three-minute attack early today on the Garuda Airlines DC-9. Hospital officials said both were in serious condition.

Thai government spokesman Trairong Suwankiri said the other 54 passengers and crew members were "saved" but would not say if any of them were injured.
However, officials said the four non-Indonesian hostages rescued — Americans Ralph D. Hunt, 28, of Houston, Texas, and Thomas Heischman, about 45, of Carmel, Calif., a Japanese and a Dutchman — were unharmed. They were taken over by their embassies.

A third American hostage, Karl S. Schneider, 44, a Texan stationed in Indonesia, was shot Sunday, the day after the plane was hijacked, while trying to escape. He was still in the intensive care unit of a local hospital but was reported in stable condition.
A Briton escaped earlier Sunday before Schneider made his attempt.
The hijackers were members of a right-wing Moslem terrorist movement called Komando Jihad, or Holy War Command, which has dedicated itself to turning mostly Moslem Indonesia into a fundamentalist Islamic country, on the order of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Iran or Col. Moammar Khadafy's Libya.

The attack on the plane was made after the Thai government had said it would not allow force to be used and a few hours after the Indonesian government said it would meet the demands of the hijackers for the release of 80 imprisoned Komando Jihad members and a ransom of $1.5 million.
Specially trained Indonesian anti-terrorist troops who had been flown to Bangkok from Jakarta on Sunday approached the plane quietly in two files about 2:40 a.m. with Thai troops behind them. Apparently the hijackers did not notice them.
Placing ladders against the sides of the aircraft, the troops scrambled up, forced open two doors and stormed in, shouting at the hostages in Indonesian to keep down and firing machine guns.
The first burst killed one of the hijackers. The other four fired back and a brief battle ensued as the commandos began herding the hostages

It was not just another day for Herald staffers

If your newspaper was late Monday, try to understand it was not an ordinary production day.
Over 4,000 copies of Monday's Big Spring Herald had been run off the presses and 2,400 were aboard the motor route trucks when word of an assassination attempt on President Reagan was received at approximately 1:40 p.m.
Minutes after the first Associated Press story was received at the Herald, the presses were stopped, the front page was pulled back and rebuilt. The newspaper went to press for the second time at approximately 3:30 p.m.
During that hour and 40 minutes, the front page was reconstructed under the direction of Publisher Tom Watson, Editor Tommy Hart and City Editor Walt Finley.
While the circulation department waited for the second run, the editorial and composing departments of the Herald went back to work, the whole time receiving up-to-the-minute reports from Washington.
To complicate the problem, the Herald was having trouble with its Associated Press wire machine. Since the stories could not be chosen on the basis of the typed stories that come directly off the machine, the computer tapes had to be developed and the stories type-set, before it could be decided what would appear.

If you did not receive one of the 2,400 first run copies, you missed a story on the continued demands of the five men who hijacked an Indonesian airliner, the halting of the body search under a collapsed condominium in Cocoa Beach, Fla., a crop-duster crash in Blackwell, Okla. and a story on whether Southwestern Bell will appeal a judge's decision halting preparations for Bell's Electronic Information Service experiment.
A large, local photograph by Big Spring Herald Photographer Bill Forshee on the annual Rattlesnake Roundup also graced the first edition.
The staff of the Big Spring Herald will continue to give its readers the latest news on the assassination attempt, along with all international, national, state and local news.

Police Beat Security box stolen

Burglars hit the home of Joe Doport, 708 N.W. 7th, sometime Monday night, and made off with a variety of items.
After kicking out a window in the home, the intruders loaded up with a fireproof security box containing a $50 savings bond, six silver dollars, personal papers and some loose change. Also stolen were two yellow-gold watches with diamond chips on the faces, two children's watches, a pocket watch, a knife, a belt buckle, a pair of binoculars and a commemorative pen with emeralds attached. Total loss has not been estimated.

W.B. Estep, 1502 W. 3rd, believes he knows who stole his 1967 Chevrolet motor, earlier this month. The motor was valued at $75.
Thieves climbed over a fence at the Bill Wilson Oil Company, 1501 E. 3rd, and stole a battery and cables from a company pickup, Monday night. Loss was estimated at $99.93.
Vandals smashed through the screen door at the home of Rolen B. Covington, 2405 Carleton, Monday afternoon. No entry was gained, but damage was estimated at $96.

Two mishaps were reported, Monday.
Vehicles driven by Mark Reeves, 2720 Larry, and Delfina Bailon, 4103 Dixon, collided at 1900 Birdwell, 3:29 p.m.
Vehicles driven by Ethel Ballard, 4117 Parkway, and Vince Coates, 4002 Parkway, collided on the 3700 block of Parkway, 8:13 a.m.

City council candidates will answer questions tonight

The six city council candidates for place three and four will speak at 7 p.m. today in the Goliad Middle School cafeteria and to answer citizen's questions. The event is being sponsored by the Eagle Forum.
The six school board trustee candidates will speak at 7 p.m. Thursday at Goliad.

Nelda Reagan, Eagle Forum president, said both forums will consist mainly of questions from the audience.
"We would like to encourage newcomers to Big Spring to meet the candidates this week, and to be involved in our local government by voting April 4," said Peggy Wennerlind, chairman of the open forum.

Lady Remington Ray-Zor will attend rites here

Friends of the late Mr. Ray-Zor will be in Big Spring for the 'funeral services' to be held Wednesday, in downtown Big Spring. Included among the group of friends will be Lady Remington Ray-Zor, Shick Ray-Zor, Gillette Ray-Zor, and Gem Ray-Zor.
Lady Remington Ray-Zor said that she was pleased to see so much interest in the burial of Mr. Ray-Zor. At the same time, she defended the life of the late Mr. Ray-Zor by saying that she realized that he had a tendency to be sharp with people from time to time, but said that "he was just made that way."
She went on to say that she had heard of many young men who had been waiting years to meet Mr. Ray-Zor and felt that his departure was untimely for those young people. Lady Remington Ray-Zor also said that the late Mr. Ray-Zor had also devoted a great deal of his time and efforts to helping improve the looks of the communities he lived in and felt that he would be greatly missed by the residents of Big Spring.
Schick, Gillette, and Gem Ray-Zor joined with Lady Remington Ray-Zor in her sentiments and said they were pleased that the residents of Big Spring and Howard County were providing the community-wide tribute to the life of their late friend and acquaintance.
The rites are being planned in conjunction with plans for observance of the Railroad Centennial Celebration scheduled here in late May, conducted to encourage the growth of beards and mustaches among men of the community.

Plant openings create 1,652 jobs in Texas

The Texas Industrial Commission has announced that nine companies have made plans to open new industrial plants in Texas, according to its February activity report.
Industrial locations have been on the rise during 1981 with a total of 17 new plant announcements for January and February, compared to only 10 plant announcements for the previous four months and 15 for the same period last year.
New plant announcements for February will create an estimated 1,652 new jobs in the state. Figures for the first six months of the fiscal year, beginning in September of 1980, show that 27 new plant announcements have been made creating 19,057 new jobs and generating almost $4 billion in new annual state taxes.
Bud Reed, director of the Economic Development Division of the Texas Industrial Commission, said the acceleration of plant locations is a good sign. "It appears that industry is not waiting for interest rates to come down," said Reed. "Instead, industry is committing itself to constructing the productive capacity needed to maintain its share of the market."

Members of both the Brothers of the Brush and the Centennial Belles are asked to attend, as well as all other interested individuals. Persons taking part in the funeral are asked to wear their turn-of-the-century clothing, or any other old clothes they may have. Individuals who do not wish to walk the entire route may join the procession enroute or assemble at 900 Main.
CONCESSION CUTOFF DATE: Groups and organizations who wish to provide either a food or drink concession during one of the centennial events are asked to contact either Harold

Suspect under psychiatric care

Hinckley held without bond

WASHINGTON (AP) — An emotionless John W. Hinckley Jr., described in court as "wandering, aimless and irresponsible" and under psychiatric care, was ordered held without bond today on a charge of attempting to assassinate President Reagan outside a Washington hotel.

Hinckley, 25, of Evergreen, Colo., was held at an undisclosed location and was scheduled to undergo psychiatric testing today to help determine his competency to stand trial, U.S. Attorney Charles F.C. Ruff said. A preliminary hearing was set for Thursday.

There was no immediate indication of a motive for Monday's shootings which wounded Reagan in the chest, left White House press secretary James S. Brady in grave condition with a bullet wound to the brain and injured a Secret Service officer and a Washington, D.C., policeman.

Both the White House and the FBI said there were no evidence of a conspiracy to assassinate the president.

"There's nothing at this point to indicate motive or conspiracy," FBI spokesman Roger Young told reporters.

But he added it would be "foolish if you etch that in stone at this point."

Wearing blue prison-type clothing, Hinckley appeared subdued throughout a 45-minute midnight hearing Monday at the federal courthouse two blocks from the Capitol as the U.S. attorney filed formal charges and a federal magistrate advised the defendant of his rights.

In addition to attempting to assassinate the president, Hinckley was charged with assaulting a Secret Service officer.

Attempting to kill the president carries a maximum sentence of life imprisonment, while the charge of assaulting a federal officer is punishable by up to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

At Thursday's hearing, the government must present enough evidence to convince the magistrate to send the case to a federal grand jury.

The sandy-haired Hinckley, represented by two court-appointed lawyers, often answered "Yes, sir" when Magistrate Arthur L. Burnett asked if he understood his constitutional rights.

Reporters waited more than nine hours for Hinckley to arrive at the heavily guarded courthouse, and then they were frisked by a U.S. marshal before being taken to court.

Ruff told Burnett over defense objections that the FBI interviewed several people who knew Hinckley, including his parents, who described their son as "wandering, aimless and irresponsible."

According to the prosecutor, Hinckley has never been employed, has enrolled and dropped out numerous times from Texas Tech University and has been under psychiatric care.

He was arrested last Oct. 9 in Nashville, Tenn., and charged with illegal possession of three weapons, and ended up forfeiting his bond in that case.

"When he was arrested Oct. 9, President Jimmy Carter was present in that city," Ruff said, adding that Hinckley purchased another weapon on Oct. 13.

The assassination attempt against Reagan came at 2:25 p.m. EST Monday as the presidential party left the Washington Hilton Hotel, where Reagan had delivered a speech seeking labor support for the economic program. The gunman fired six shots from 10 feet away, among a group of reporters.

Secret Service spokesman Jack Warner said it was "too early to have any statement on where we failed or what we are doing. The fact that we are working in a democracy has to be taken into consideration. We live literally in a free society."

The Secret Service said Hinckley was not listed among the 400 people it considered to be potential assassins or among the 25,000 less likely assailants whose names are stored in a Secret Service computer.

In Colorado, family attorney Jim Robinson confirmed that Hinckley was under psychiatric care.

How did it happen?

Presidential security investigated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Not in Dallas, not in Sacramento, not in San Francisco, but in Washington, D.C., where the Secret Service knows the territory, How could it happen here?

How could it happen that in the nation's capital, a mile from the White House, a gunman stationed himself in the midst of a group of reporters and, from 10 feet, fired six shots at the president of the United States?

"You can't react faster than a bullet," said Jack Warner of the Secret Service, which is charged with protecting presidents.

The question comes up every time someone attempts to kill a high public official. And from the president's bodyguards comes the same prosaic answer: "We live in a free society."

The Secret Service today is undergoing the same reconstruction of events as it did after John F. Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas and Gerald Ford escaped injury in Sacramento and San Francisco.

"It's too early to have any statement on where we failed or what went wrong," Warner said. "The fact that we live and work in a democracy has to be taken into consideration. We live literally in a free society."

The assassination attempt took place at the Washington Hilton, whose side entrance was designed for quick, safe, presidential access.

A concrete canopy protects the driveway from above. Inside the entrance is a holding room with a permanent White House telephone. Agents, who would be happiest if the president never left the safety of the White House, regard the Washington

Hilton as the best place for him to go if leave he must.

Secret Service agents acknowledge they feel more secure in Washington, where they know the buildings, roads and, in situations like Monday's, the location of hospitals. In other areas, a local officer is on hand for such information.

But that familiarity with the city is "offset by the frequency of the president's forays from the confines of the White House. Reagan has been especially visible, going to the theater, to dinner in popular restaurants, to private homes for parties and to hotels for speeches.

During his presidency — he was inaugurated 10 weeks ago today — Reagan has been at the Washington Hilton a number of times.

"The Secret Service agent always has to assume that he can prevent an attack (on the president) so he can work at peak efficiency," Warner said.

But, he added, "when an attempt on a president is made, the Secret Service shoulders the burden and we are not about to make excuses for untoward events."

Warner said he cannot explain how the assailant got so close, but that will be one of the priority questions in the followup investigation.

"It looked like the agents reacted very quick," he said. "You can't react faster than a bullet."

Nation reacts with shock, anger

Hollywood postponed its biggest party, churches stayed open late for the stricken faithful and world and national leaders decried the attack and updated medical bulletins from Washington.

"With our prayers for those who have been wounded must go our resolution to rid our society of violence and to commit ourselves to do everything that we possibly can to eliminate hatred and the causes which contribute to hatred in our society," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

Kennedy, whose brothers John and Robert were assassinated in the 1960s, was provided Secret Service protection in the wake of the attack which wounded

Reagan, presidential press secretary James Brady, a Washington policeman and a Secret Service officer.

"Violence and hatred are alien to everything that this country is about," Kennedy said. "They do not bring about a change in policy. They deny what is best in our nation."

Three former presidents took the news with sadness. In Tokyo, former President Gerald Ford, who escaped two assassination attempts, said, "This incident is very disturbing, but I don't believe it reflects the attitudes or actions of Americans as a whole. I don't want to condemn the entire population."

Richard Nixon, in New York, had "been in touch with Washington," and he and his wife, Pat, were "praying that we'll all be able to live in a safer world," said Tricia Nixon Cox, the Nixons' daughter.

And former President Jimmy Carter said he and his wife, Rosalynn, "join the entire nation in prayer for the wellbeing of those wounded and for their families."

Former Alabama Gov. George Wallace, crippled for life in a 1972 assassination attempt, said he was "thankful" that Reagan's life had been spared.

Vice President George

Bush said he was heartened by doctors' reports that Reagan would recover and added, "I can reassure this nation and a watching world that the American government is functioning fully and effectively."

Messages for Reagan were pouring into Washington from the watching world.

Shock, prayers and wishes for a speedy recovery were offered by British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang, Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and Israeli Premier Menachem Begin.

French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing sent a telegram expressing "my very warmest and friendliest wishes for your complete recovery and the pursuit of your activity in the leadership of the United States."

In Lima, Peru, President Fernando Belaunde Terry said it was "dignified" that Reagan walked into the hospital under his own power.

The Soviet new agency said only initial word was a (let two-paragraph statement reporting the shooting without comment.

Mesquite bean is making comeback

If there are two things West Texas is abundantly endowed with, they are tumbleweeds and mesquite trees.

Some time ago, an Arizona man revealed he had found a way to convert the lowly tumbleweed into fuel. Landowners didn't start hoarding their tumbleweeds after the story broke but the idea may catch on, when the cost of other fuels goes higher — as it is sure to do.

NOW, AN ALMOST forgotten food of the past — the mesquite bean and pod, found on approximately 70 million acres of land in the American Southwest — may be making a comeback.

Texas Tech University researchers, who are studying the mesquite, know the fruit, or bean, has one of the highest protein contents in any legume.

the pod contains twice as much sucrose sugar as a sugar beet or sugar cane.

Funded by Tech's Department of Agriculture, the mesquite bean research is being conducted in the Department of Food and Nutrition in the College of Home Economics.

"We are not trying to find a new food," Professor Margarette Harden, one of the people involved in the research, said, "but to see if the mesquite bean is another good alternative protein source." She said the project is also an attempt to make good use of the abundant mesquite.

If the bean is to become very useful to mankind, researchers are going to have to find a way to break down the fruit's hardness. Its hardness not only makes the beans difficult to study but also hinders digestion of the beans. Beans fed mice for study are first ground into a soft powder.

Food and nutritional doctoral student Reza Zolfaghari, who is also involved in the Tech study, says it is almost impossible to separate the bean from the pod at its immature stage, adding that microbiology may have to be used to accurately study it at this stage. The plant reaches its full maturity in late July or August.

HARDEN SAYS IF studies show the benefits cannot be obtained from the full bean, the bean may be useful as a food supplement in cereals and other products.

As most everyone knows who has lived here for any length of time, the mesquite grows well in arid and semiarid climates. It is, as a matter of fact, found in both South and North America. Some trees produce two crops a year.

For centuries, Mexicans boiled and ate the immature pods and ground the ripe pods into a meal called 'pintole,' which is made into a cake or mixed with water to make 'atole,' which could be fermented into a weak beer.

A hundred years ago, some Americans living on the frontier ground the bean pods into a meal to make cakes and boiled the beans and used the extract for jelly.

Roasting the beans produces a smell much like coffee and the beverage made from the roasted beans has the astringent quality of coffee. A San Antonio company once sold a staple it identified as mesquite coffee.

Each acre in mesquite produces about 100 bushels of fruit a year. If science can find a way to make full use of the protein in the bean, we may all be wealthier than we think.

Imaginative names

Around the rim

Richard Horn

Englishmen enjoy saying that Americans and Canadians have destroyed the English language. While it is true that we sometimes get lazy in our speaking and writing, there is one area where I will defend our use of the language; we are much better at naming towns.

One of my favorite pastimes is reading American road maps. I have an atlas with a huge index in the back containing all the names of towns with populations over 100. It's great to come across Chugwater, or Buzzards Beak, Chews Landing, Frying Pan, or Lizard Dick. I'm told that somewhere in Alaska is a town named Lizard Saliva, but it's not in the atlas. If it exists, I intend to find it someday.

HAVE YOU EVER wondered how some of these towns get their names? Neither have I. Still, it's fun to speculate. The first settlers of this country tried to give their towns names that would remind them of the Home Country. Hence you have Jamestown, New York, New Braunfels, and Fredricksburg. That tradition continues wherever a new frontier is explored and settled; there's a town in the Yukon above the Arctic Circle called New Chicago.

The most interesting names came from pioneers who headed west, usually to get away from being reminded of the Home Country. Nature was a major inspiration to settlers when it came time to name their new homes. Boise, Idaho is so named because it is situated in a lovely forest stuck in the middle of rugged mountains; Bois is the French word for tree. Moose Jaw, Sask, is named after a river which at one point curves in the shape of a moose's jaw. That sounds very strange, but it's what the people say.

It's a bit trickier to figure out where some of the more inventive names came from. Medicine Hat, Blind River, Wawa, Walla Walla, and Red Deer are all names that just seem to sound good, although I'm sure the locals have stories on the origins. Nacogdoches and Natchitoches were named after two Indian brothers. Fink is as good a name for a town as any other.

Illinois has an Arcola, a Tuscola, no Coca Cola, but Champagne is just down the road. Illinois also has Xenia, one of the six towns in the world that begin with the letter "X."

SOME TOWNS were named to make a statement. There is a group of people in the Northwest who want to change the name of their town to Nuclear Waste. The famous Truth-or-Consequences, N.M. was named so the game show would take notice and come visit.

Other towns were named to create an image. Take Aspen, Colo., for instance. It's a beautiful name, but it's being used to sell the town to the highest bidder. I agree with Hunter S. Thompson that it should be renamed Fat City so developers will look elsewhere.

You can tell your town has a good name if no other towns use it. I am proud to say that we live in the world's only Big Spring, at least according to my atlas. There are a couple of Big Springs, but there is only one Big Spring. I like the name. The spring is not that big, but finding natural water in this part of the country is quite a big deal.

We are surrounded by clones. There are six Odessas, seven Stantons, two Lamesas, 14 Midlands, and a Coahoma County buried somewhere in Mississippi.

I can waste hours and even days enjoying American names. But I'm sure my atlas is fallible, so there are probably dozens of little towns with great names that I've not come across. One of the pleasures of this line of time-wasting is the unexpected discovery.

Baker beats Haig

Evans, Novak

WASHINGTON Not even the personal insults being hurled between the White House and Foggy Bottom by close aides of Ronald Reagan and Alexander Haig reveal the measure of the secretary of state's defeat at the hands of the White House and its high-ranking chief of staff James A. Baker III.

Haig's humiliation was embellished the evening of March 24 by how he first got word that the White House staff had persuaded Reagan to put Vice President George Bush in charge of national security crises. He learned it by a wire service ticker story handed to him as he was ending a half-hour visit from British Ambassador Nicholas Henderson.

By not immediately resigning, a step he has threatened repeatedly since Jan. 20 but never directly to the president, Haig accepted a public rebuke. That weakens his prestige abroad, his power in the bureaucratic wars here and his self-esteem. This potentially costly impairment of the secretary of state bodes ill for the Reagan administration in the future, despite frantic efforts to paper over the grievances.

THE ORIGIN OF Haig's problems with the White House dates to Inauguration Day, when he tried to gather all foreign policy-making in his hands. Baker and presidential counselor Edwin Meese III stepped in to block that move, setting off an increasingly bitter struggle based on personality and power, not issues and ideology. By the sad events of March 24, the president's senior aides seemed not to care how much they damaged the secretary of state, so eager were they to put him in his place.

Relations between Haig and the White House staff, particularly the cool, long-headed Baker, have been deteriorating for weeks. Haig, who had considered himself Reagan's foreign policy "vicar," resented statements and backgrounders by national security assistant Richard V. Allen and his subordinates, particularly Dr. Richard Pipes. Haig assistants at the State Department attacked the White House staff as "a mandarin's court." Haig himself complained to one aide that Reagan alone "is worth 10 times those staff people."

From the other side, the shafts were sharper: questions about Haig's health, his "temper tantrums" and his insistence on aggrandizing his power. Haig moved early the week of March 16, a week before he knew about the elevation of Bush, to establish regular, direct access to the president three days a week without "those staff people" monitoring him. His model was John Foster Dulles, President Eisenhower's secretary of state. On national security, Eisenhower listened only to Dulles.

The first of the three-a-week Oval Office tete-a-tetes was March 23. Only the day before Haig had first learned that Bush was in the picture as a possible national security crisis manager (although it was first reported on March 6). Wholly unaware, Haig was therefore incredulous when he read the page one headline in the March 22 Washington Post: "Bush to Run Crisis Management." So, Haig immediately counterattacked the morning of March 23 in Reagan's office.

HAIG MIGHT HAVE sold the Ike-Dulles model to Reagan if it were not for Baker and Allen. They had been converted by Haig into caustic critics.

Won't cause uterine prolapse

Dr. Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Could you explain uterine prolapse and methods other than hysterectomy to correct it? My problem started with my lively four-year-old bouncing on my lap and landing his whole weight on my abdomen. Can I get a second opinion on hysterectomy? — C.C.

The uterus is suspended in position by ligaments such as a hammock is suspended by supporting ropes. When ligaments loosen the uterus drops. I have never heard your explanation for a prolapsed (fallen) uterus. I suppose it is a remote possibility, but very remote. Most of the force of the bouncing would not have been transmitted to the uterine supports. Childbirth, however, is a common cause.

Whether action need be taken for a fallen uterus depends on how troublesome it is. For example, is the drop affecting the urinary bladder, which is attached to the front of the uterus?

You raise an interesting point. Why not just tighten up the supporting ligaments? It is a good idea, but it doesn't work. I am afraid we tend to think of organs too often as machine parts, much as I did with the hammock analogy. After all, you fix a sagging hammock with new ropes. It can't go done in the body. There is a delicacy to tissue that defines comparison to anything mechanical.

There are operations to try to re-establish uterine support, but they are seldom used and only in a few people for very special reasons. Further, they do not always work too well. Eventually, a hysterectomy (removal of the entire uterus) has to be done. This ends both the prolapse problem and any attendant pressure on the bladder.

If a woman cannot have the hysterectomy, then a pessary can be used. This is a donut-shaped device that fits onto the bottom of the uterus to keep it in place. Again, this is used only in special cases. Pessaries can be troublesome and require checks from time to time to avoid irritation to the vagina and uterus. All in all, a woman who has been given good reason for removal of a prolapsed uterus should seriously consider that advice. Second opinion? Sure, why not?

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have been told that my spitting up of blood occasionally may be due to my hiatal hernia, which I have known about for years. I also have severe acid heartburn and wonder if the hernia is causing that. When would surgery to repair the hernia be advisable? — N.V.

Bleeding from a hiatal hernia is a rare occurrence. In most instances, the bleeding is found to emanate from stomach ulcer or from erosion of the esophagus. Both conditions are frequently found in persons with H.H. You certainly need to be examined to determine just where the bleeding is coming from. I am not ruling out your hiatal hernia altogether.

It seems to me your first concern should be to control the acid symptoms (with antacids, for example). In the meanwhile, have your hernia area fully examined. If you are overweight, reducing will relieve extra pressure on the hernia area (where the esophagus passes through the diaphragm to the stomach).

Most hiatal hernias are treated with simple measures, i.e. control of acid reflux (splashing) and weight loss. The booklet "Hiatal Hernia and Eight Ways to Combat it" might help you to better understand this very common problem. I am sending along a copy. Other readers may obtain a copy by writing me in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I notice that it is very common for doctors to recommend hormones for women following removal of their ovaries, and it seems this is highly successful. I have never heard of doctors recommending hormones for men following removal of their prostate glands. Do doctors ever recommend such treatment for this? — J.R.E.

The prostate gland does not make any hormone that needs to be replaced when the gland is removed. Prostaglandins are, as the name implies, hormone-like substances, and they were first found in the prostate gland. However, they are made in many other places in the body, so there were first found in the prostate gland. However, they are made in many other places in the body, so there is no deficiency resulting from prostate removal. Ovaries, on the other hand, are the chief source of female hormones, and removal may produce a deficiency. Estrogen therapy is sometimes used as prostate cancer chemotherapy.

To learn about the major categories of prostate trouble — symptoms, treatment, how to speed recovery — read the booklet, "The Pesky Prostate." For a copy write to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Do you think the church or groups of Christians should get together and become involved in politics? — G.S.

DEAR G.S.: There certainly may be times when groups of Christians will feel led of God to take a definite public stand on some moral issue, and this will inevitably involve them in some type of political action. In the last century, for example, many Christians battled against the evil of slavery because they saw it was both a moral and political evil.

But in general I believe churches or groups of Christians must be very careful about becoming involved in politics. For one thing, many political issues are very complicated, and the Bible may not give us clear guidance on them. The Bible gives us many general principles which are to guide us in human society, but it was not intended by God to give a specific and direct answer to every possible political problem. Also, I am convinced the church (or groups of Christians who are involved in political matters) must be very careful about becoming identified with any one political viewpoint, as if it and it alone were God's will.

In addition, we must remember as Christians that God has given us a mission in this world. We are to serve him, and especially we are to tell others about Christ and strengthen God's people spiritually. We are to "declare the praises of him who called you out of darkness into his wonderful light" (I Peter 2:9). One of Satan's cleverest tricks is to divert us from the task God has given us, and he will do everything he can to accomplish that. While some Christians may certainly be called by God to be involved in politics and public service, the church as a whole must keep its spiritual mission as its number one priority.

The Bible reminds us that we are "aliens and strangers in the world" (I Peter 2:11), and that we are "longing for a better country — a heavenly one" (Hebrews 11:16). Yes, we are to be faithful citizens here, but let us never forget our greater responsibility is to be faithful citizens of the Kingdom of God.

Fights chance

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON — Loeb Julie is a 60-year-old inventor and businessman, the son of Polish immigrants. His given name means "lion," and right now he is roaring with outrage at the U.S. Army.

The thorn in Loeb Julie's paw is the Army's stubborn refusal to purchase the high-technology, low-cost calibrators his company makes, sticking instead to more expensive, less efficient calibrators — including even outmoded manually operated models.

Calibrators, it should be explained, are vital to the efficient operation of military equipment. Even your neighborhood grocer's scales must be calibrated regularly to insure honest measure for your money.

IN THE MILITARY, improper calibration is far more costly than an ounce or two of pastrami or cheese. Poorly calibrated torque wrenches used to tighten bolts in Army helicopters, for example, were a cause of crashes in the Vietnam War.

What has infuriated Julie is that the Army deliberately rejected his improved calibration equipment in favor of inferior machines, and then justified its decision with a runaround that reads like a combination of Franz Kafka and "Catch-22."

As part of my continuing series on waste in the Pentagon, here's Loeb Julie's story:

Julie grew up in The Bronx, where his father owned a small bakery. He earned an engineering degree, turned to inventing and sank the family's entire savings — $19,000 — into starting his own technology firm, Julie Research Laboratories.

His super-calibration unit is easily portable, does better work than the Army's present models and could save $200 million over a 10-year period, Julie claims.

Julie is not the only one who's impressed with his brainchild. One of the government's top intelligence experts told my associates Indy Badhwar and Charles Berman: "The Julie equipment is a technological breakthrough."

PRIVATE PURCHASERS like Grumman Aircraft have used Julie's calibrator and have praised it. Officials of the Army's own Harry Diamond Laboratory and the White Sands Missile Range have attested to the Julie system's greater competence. A months-long investigation by the General Accounting Office turned up not a single error in Julie's books.

And the Russians want Julie's calibrator. While he was running into bureaucratic brick walls at the Pentagon, Soviet representatives invited him to Moscow, where in 1977 he met with several high-level scientists. The Russians placed an order. But when he got home, Julie decided he didn't want to sell his marvelous machine to the Kremlin, and tore up the order.

"The Julie technology would help the Russians improve the accuracy of Soviet missiles by 10 percent to 15 percent, which is enough to knock out our land-based Minuteman missiles," an intelligence source told us.

Only the Pentagon generals remained unimpressed. They juggled cost figures and test results to prove that Julie's equipment couldn't possibly be as good as claimed. At one point, he says, they arbitrarily tripled his offering price to make their current calibrators look better.

In desperation, Julie turned to a secret weapon: ridicule. He hired a cartoonist, Dick Hafer, to produce a comic book telling the JRL story. It is factual, funny — and devastating in its caricatures of Pentagon brass.

The comic book may have hardened the Army generals' hearts, but it succeeded in catching the attention of several influential members of Congress, including Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wisc., and Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y. Their investigators are now looking into Julie's charges of Army waste and misconduct.

Last week, Julie acknowledged ruefully that maybe all his troubles with the Pentagon can be traced to the name of his calibrator. It's called "LOCUST."

Footnote: A government spokesman insisted the Army's calibration system "is the best anyone has going today... We just didn't have a requirement for what Julie offered."

SILVER THREADS: If past performance is any guide, President Reagan's proposal to sell 50 million ounces of silver from the nation's strategic stockpile will be opposed by a group of congressional conservatives led by Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga.

A true believer in stockpiling silver ingots, McDonald successfully torpedoed a similar sale proposal in 1979. But while he was doing it, McDonald accepted a $2,000 campaign contribution from a Dallas silver trader. The Justice Department told my office that the circumstances of the contribution made it illegal.

Here's what happened: In November 1979, McDonald held a hearing on a bill he introduced that called for the purchase of $500 million in silver for the national stockpile. Among the witnesses who supported the bill was Scott Dial, a 29-year-old silver trader. Any government purchases would have jacked up the price of silver.

After testifying on Nov. 28, Dial said he dropped by McDonald's House office and delivered two $1,000 checks. He says he can't remember if he gave them to McDonald or the congressman's secretary. In either case, according to the Justice Department, it was illegal to accept money inside a federal building.

McDonald's office refused to comment. Meanwhile, he has introduced another bill calling for the purchase of silver.

Dear Abby

Options Available for Mastectomy Patients

DEAR ABBY: I have a message for MISSING SOMETHING who said she felt like "half a woman" because she lost both breasts following a bout with cancer.

I went through exactly the same thing, and I can honestly say that I still feel very much like a woman even though I no longer have breasts. (I no longer have cancer either, which is much more important!)

It sounds as though your attitude toward meaningful relationships is based entirely on your "boobs." If so, you need a complete reassessment. If you are so shallow as to feel that your desirability and worth as a woman flew out of the operating-room window, then the malignancy in your head is far more devastating!

BOOBLESS AND ALL WOMAN

DEAR ABBY: May I say something to MISSING SOMETHING? It may comfort her. I just lost a wonderful wife to whom I was married for 3 1/2 years. It was a second marriage for both of us.

When I started dating this lady, she told me that she had had a double mastectomy 24 years before. She wasn't sure how this would affect our relationship, but she felt it best that I knew.

I assure you, I loved her and accepted her as she was, and we had a beautiful and fulfilling relationship. Never did I allow her to feel like "half a woman." I miss her terribly. She died at 72. I just turned 69.

NOTHING WAS MISSING

DEAR ABBY: Four years ago I, too, had a double mastectomy and, like MISSING SOMETHING, I also felt like half a woman. I was only 28 and thought my life was over. Thank God, three months after my surgery my wonderful physician referred me to a fine reconstructive plastic surgeon. Abby, that plastic surgeon performed a miracle! I now have a beautiful figure — much more beautiful than before.

I met a woman in the hospital who had had a double mastectomy 20 years before, and she only recently knew that this type of operation was available. Please let your readers know about it, Abby. Some physicians don't even mention it.

BORN AGAIN IN MONTANA

DEAR ABBY: Six weeks ago I had a left mastectomy. Thank God that the cancer did not spread. I was barely out of recovery when my doctor started urging me to seek reconstructive surgery. (He doesn't do it, but referred me to a surgeon who does.)

The 12-inch scar is not a very pretty sight! My kind and loving husband of 28 years is not repulsed by it, but I would not want to expose a "new man" in my life to the trauma. Abby, please do your readers a favor and make them aware of the modern miracle of reconstructive surgery. I suppose we "survivors" should be grateful we're alive, but we shouldn't be made to feel that all we're entitled to is survival.

BEEN THERE

DEAR READERS: If you are interested in this type of surgery, contact the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons, or the American Medical Association, in order to obtain the names of board-certified surgeons. I should add that this type of surgery is not for every woman, but it has done wonders for many.

Booklet records child's medical history from birth to 18 years

Mothers, in an emergency situation, could you promptly tell a doctor or a paramedic your child's blood type? The date of the last tetanus shot? Sensitivity to a drug such as penicillin?

In an emergency, such information can be of vital help to medical personnel, but few parents have this data at home or on out-of-town trips when emergencies often occur.

A Memphis, Tenn. mother has made documenting such information a simple task by creating a 16-page booklet in which a child's medical history can be recorded from birth to 18. Called a Child's Medical Record, the booklet enables parents to have the often-needed information instantly available should an emergency occur at home or when traveling. The data also is helpful to a new doctor, should the family move to another city.

Mrs. Elizabeth Baker designed the Child's Medical Record after her five-year-old son lost 50 percent of his hearing.

An ear, nose and throat specialist, determining the boy was a victim of nerve deafness, was suspicious of the deafness was caused by one of the mycin drugs.

But the search for the type of mycin drug the youth had received was fruitless. Mrs. Baker had no record at home, and the records of her son's pediatrician, who had died, had been destroyed in a fire.

The booklet Mrs. Baker created enables parents to record their children's Rh factor, blood type, immunizations, sensitivity to drugs, allergies, surgical operations and dental examinations.

The booklets are available from Child's Medical Record, 2544 Inverary Drive, Memphis, Tenn. 38119. The cost is $1.50, or two medical records for $2.75.

Ms. Brady presents program

The Business & Professional Women's Club met for their monthly program-dinner meeting, March 24, at 7 p.m. at K-Bob's Restaurant, with Louise Nuckolls, president, presiding. The Young Careerist Committee, Mamie Roberts, chairman, was in charge of the program. Other committee members were Marie Affleck, Edwina Welch and Pyrie Bradshaw.

Mrs. Affleck introduced Tracy Brady, Director of Medical Records at Bennett Memorial Hospital, as representative of the young careerists.

Miss Brady completed four-years of college in this field (three years at Texas State University, Canyon and one year at U.T. Medical School, Galveston. Explaining that her job was "behind the scene," the purpose of medical records is to provide better patient care, and a better communication between the physician and other professionals contributing to the care of the patient.

Without patient records, it would almost be impossible to operate a hospital successfully.

In closing, Miss Brady said she loved her work, and felt that she was able to contribute to the care of the sick even though she was not directly associated with patient care.

Mrs. Leona Ebersole was welcomed as a guest.

Mamie Roberts, president of the Centennial Box Car Belles, gave a report on the club's centennial parade plans. She also urged participation in the daily activities and mode of dress during the centennial celebration.

The April business meeting will be held in the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce conference room April 14, at 7 p.m.

Education and television is Modern Forum's program

The GFWC Modern Woman's Forum met March 27 at K-Bob's Restaurant, with Mrs. W.E. Singleton as hostess.

Mrs. C.R. Moad, vice president, conducted the business and led in the opening pledges. Each member answered roll call with her assigned subject. Mrs. S.R. Nobles, Veterans Administration Volunteer Service chairman, displayed a pieced laprobe as an example for the members to make and give it to the patients at the VA Hospital.

Mrs. B.M. Keese presented the program "Educational Opportunities and Television Impact." She stated that there are more advantages for persons of all ages to become educated, and statistics show that a greater number are getting college educations. There is more versatility in today's pattern of educating the child to adjust to social environment and teach them how to accept their role as a useful citizen. The use of visual aids in the schools has been one of the greatest helps in education, since a person remembers more of what he sees than what he hears.

Television has had a great impact on education, even though most people watch TV for entertainment rather than education. But, there is often education along with the entertainment on shows of nature and animal life, and views of the beautiful scenery and cities.

There are many favorable and educational elements of television, but there are also some adverse effects when young children are allowed to watch shows which depict sex and crime. Also, many children are losing their interest in reading, and become lazy in doing research, which has probably added a great deal to our nation of poor readers and spellers.

The next meeting will be April 10 in the home of Mrs. B.F. Yandell, with a craft demonstration by Penny Hollar. Members were reminded that they should bring a handmade article for display.

Thrills and chills: a devilish delight

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Ever wonder why some people love to sit through a spine-tingling horror movie? Or why others get a thrill from a chilling roller coaster ride?

"A person tends to tremble when danger is inevitable," says Michael Kaplan, editor of "Cinefastastique," a magazine about horror, fantasy, and science fiction movies.

But why do we like to shake and quake? Dr. Paulina F. Kernberg, associate professor of psychiatry at Cornell, offers a few reasons in a recent issue of "Seventeen."

It's exhilarating. "Everyone gets pleasure out of doing something very frightening and surviving," Dr. Kernberg said. People frequently need to test themselves, to prove that they can sit through "Alien" or go on the scariest ride.

It's safe. Deep in your fast-beating heart, you know that the blood is fake and the enemy can't hurt you. "A movie permits you to tolerate danger because it's confined to the screen," Dr. Kernberg observes.

Michigan workers seek jobs in sun

DETROIT (AP) — The promise of jobs in the Sun Belt is beckoning to Michigan residents, and hundreds of unemployed factory workers are forsaking the Great Lake state for warmer climes, particularly Texas. While no statistics on migration to the South are available, Houston real estate agents say they're finding homes for Michigan families every week. Shops in metropolitan Detroit advertise Sun Belt newspapers and newsstands sell out stacks of Houston and Dallas papers to people who want the "help wanted" ads. "Anybody who can't find a job here just isn't looking," said Dale Crumbaugh, a Texas Employment Commission labor analyst in Houston. The Detroit Public Library has become a popular place to scour Sun Belt newspapers for jobs. "We've even had guys get in a fistfight over the papers," Jeff Tong, a library spokesman, said Monday. The Detroit Free Press and Detroit News each carried barely a page of help wanted ads on March 19. But on the same day, the Houston Chronicle and Houston Post each had listed about 15 pages of job vacancies. More than 2,000 copies of the Houston Sunday Chronicle are sold each week in southeastern Michigan alone, says Bill Bynum, the newspaper's state circulation manager. "That's in the last six months," Bynum said. "We used to sell about 300."

families out of Michigan in 1980, and a third of those went to Florida, California and Texas in that order. "There's a job for anybody who wants one," says Ron Landwehr, 25, a journeyman carpenter from Chelsea, Mich., 50 miles west of Detroit, who went to work building houses almost immediately after he and three friends moved to Houston in February. But when Michigan residents find jobs in their trek to the sun, they also find some surprises. Inflation in Dallas, for example, is 18.5 percent compared with the Detroit area's 12.4 percent, and the cost of electricity to heat and cool homes is high by comparison. One Texas company seeking Detroit-area workers is Bell Helicopter Textron in Fort Worth.

A FIST FOR BOBBY — Unidentified NCAA referee shakes his fist at Indiana University coach Bobby Knight during Monday's final game in Philadelphia. Knight was arguing about an assessed technical foul but later ended up winning the game by a score of 63-50.

Tar Heels proud after title loss

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Coach Dean Smith led North Carolina to the Final Four for the sixth time in 20 years, and for the sixth time in 20 years the Tar Heels went home without a national championship.

"I guess we can be like Penn State football. They're No. 2 every so often," said Smith after Indiana, led by Isiah Thomas' 19 second-half points, roared to a 63-50 victory Monday night for the NCAA title.

For Smith, it was his third second-place finish in the tournament in a career marked by eight Atlantic Coast Conference championships and seven consecutive appearances in the NCAA tournament.

Only former UCLA Coach John Wooden, with 12, has been to the Final Four more often.

"At least we get here," Smith answered in response to questions he earlier said he hoped he would never again. "There are a lot of teams who never see the Final Four."

"We really wanted to get the ball inside," said All-American Forward Al Wood, who led the Tar Heels with 18 points. "That's what got us here, but tonight it just wasn't meant to be."

"I love the game and I'm happy I had the opportunity to play in the Final Four. It's not the end of the world — there's worse problems than losing basketball games."

North Carolina guard Jimmy Black stole the ball from Thomas and directed a picture-perfect fast break to give the Tar Heels a 7-2 lead in the opening minutes of the first half.

Thomas made two quick steals from Black for layups as Indiana made an 8-2 run for a 37-30 to open the second half and was never again headed.

"It just goes to show how quickly the game of basketball turns," said Black, who matched Thomas with four steals. "They got a couple quick baskets that turned the momentum and carried them to the end."

"Those uncontested layups — it was like we spotted them points," said Wood. "They just snatched the momentum away, and we just could not stick the ball in the hole at the other end."

Stanton wins San Angelo Relays

Big second half outburst dominates North Carolina

Isiah-led Indiana wears NCAA crown

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bobby Knight can be arrogant and rude, haughty and unyielding, scrupulously honest and principled to a fault. He is also, indisputably, a basketball coach.

On a day marred by the shock and sadness of the shooting of President Reagan, when serious consideration was given to postponing the game in deference to the tragedy, Knight guided the Indiana Hoosiers to the NCAA basketball championship with a marvelously orchestrated 63-50 victory over North Carolina Monday night.

Isiah Thomas, the Hoosiers' gifted sophomore point guard, was voted the outstanding player of the tournament after scoring 19 of his 23 points in the second half. But although Thomas wore the ceremonial net around his neck after the game, Knight was the star of the show.

After North Carolina jumped in front 16-8 in the first 10 minutes, Knight made the key strategic move of the game. He switched 6-foot-6 swingman Randy Wittman from guard to forward to replace the fouled-up Ted Kitchel and brought guard Jim Thomas off the bench, going with a three-guard offense and putting Jim Thomas on North Carolina scoring star Al Wood.

"We had trouble getting our game started," explained Knight. "I really thought the crucial point came when it was 16-8. Carolina had a chance to take us out of the game, but our kids did a heck of a job hanging in."

"Maybe it was a bad thing to get Kitchel in foul trouble," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith, who has reached the Final Four six times and the championship game three times in his 20 years at Chapel Hill, N.C. "In comes Jim Thomas and he plays like he should be on the all-tournament team."

Told that both Thomases had been voted to the squad, along with Wood, Landon Turner of Indiana and Jeff Lamp of Virginia (which beat Louisiana State 78-74 in the consolation game), Smith joked, "Gee, you sports writers are smart."

North Carolina led for 19:59 of the first half, but Indiana regrouped behind its three-guard offense and grabbed 11 rebounds and Jim Thomas handed out eight assists.

North Carolina shot 50 percent in the first half to 38 percent by Indiana, but trailed by one because it committed five more turnovers than the Hoosiers. In the second half, Indiana's shooters began finding the mark. The Hoosiers connected on a sizzling 63 percent and held the Tar Heels to 36 percent.

"Indiana's second half was as well as anyone's played against us all year," said Smith. "I think Isiah's two last 22 games, including their final 10 in a row. Ranked ninth in The Associated Press' final poll, the Hoosiers beat Maryland, Alabama-Birmingham, St. Joseph's and Louisiana State to earn the spot in the final.

There they ran into North Carolina, which finished 29-8 but had won 11 of its last 12 before being shut down by Indiana's tenacious man-to-man defense.

"Indiana was more aggressive defensively than in our first game," said Smith, referring to a 65-56 North Carolina victory over

Indiana back in December. "We would have liked to get Wood the ball more, but Jim Thomas did a great job of overplaying him."

Wood, who had scored a career-high 39 points in North Carolina's 78-65 semifinal triumph over Virginia, was limited to 18 points this time — and 10 of them came after Indiana had broken the game open.

Center Sam Perkins was North Carolina's only other double-figure scorer with 11. For Indiana, Wittman scored 16 and Landon Turner had 12. In addition, Ray Tolbert grabbed 11 rebounds and Jim Thomas handed out eight assists.

Wood, who had scored a career-high 39 points in North Carolina's 78-65 semifinal triumph over Virginia, was limited to 18 points this time — and 10 of them came after Indiana had broken the game open.

Center Sam Perkins was North Carolina's only other double-figure scorer with 11. For Indiana, Wittman scored 16 and Landon Turner had 12. In addition, Ray Tolbert grabbed 11 rebounds and Jim Thomas handed out eight assists.

North Carolina shot 50 percent in the first half to 38 percent by Indiana, but trailed by one because it committed five more turnovers than the Hoosiers. In the second half, Indiana's shooters began finding the mark. The Hoosiers connected on a sizzling 63 percent and held the Tar Heels to 36 percent.

There they ran into North Carolina, which finished 29-8 but had won 11 of its last 12 before being shut down by Indiana's tenacious man-to-man defense.

IU players give formula for success

Knight, the center of controversy when he became involved in a run-in with an LSU fan over the weekend, described his battle plan in terms similar to those used by his players.

"Ours is a game of doing what we can do for the entire game," said Knight, who has compiled a 231-68 record in 10 years at Indiana. "If we can do that — apply pressure on defense — and maintain patience on offense — we can break a team down over 40 minutes."

"To see the way these kids developed over the course of the season was extremely gratifying," said Knight. "Coaching basketball in general is very satisfying to me personally. I coach basketball the way I think the game should be played."

But this was a game that almost wasn't played. The NCAA's Division I Basketball Committee met twice during the consolation game, and it wasn't until President Reagan came out of surgery and was pronounced in stable condition that the decision was made to play the game.

Down in Washington, 2½ hours after successful surgery to remove a bullet from his lung, President Reagan was joking with doctors. According to a White House statement, the president gave his doctors a note which read, "All in all, I'd rather be in Philadelphia."

Knight knows the feeling. The last time the tournament was held here was in 1976 — and Indiana won.

76ers must forget loss to Celtics

their guards, particularly Ray Williams and Michael Ray Richardson, and the series will pit their finesse against the height and strength of the Bulls.

"We have to be aggressive from the beginning," said New York veteran Campy Russell. "If our guards control the game, they'll be in trouble."

"But if we let Reggie Theus and Bob Wilkerson (the Bulls' backcourt) control our guards, and get the ball inside to Artis, we could be in trouble. We've got to control the tempo, speed things up."

The Knicks will have a definite home-court advantage in the best-of-three series against the Bulls. They were 28-13 at Madison Square Garden during the regular season and beat the Bulls 127-117 there in their last meeting March 13 to even the season series at 3-3.

"I know it's awfully hard to beat them there," said Chicago Coach Jerry Sloan. "But our guys will be ready to play. They have a lot of confidence in their game and a lot of confidence in themselves."

GOOD FOOD, FUN ATMOSPHERE
...at the Gold Mine in College Park

The Gold Mine offers unique atmosphere

When you want to go out for a quick bite to eat, what do you look for? Most likely you look for a place that offers good food and pleasant surroundings. Most places offer one or the other, but a new restaurant, The Gold Mine, in College Park Shopping Center, offers both: good food at reasonable prices and surroundings that have a character all their own.

Owners Steve and Amy Lewis, who also own and operate the Rainbarrel Gift Shop in College Park wanted to provide Big Spring with an eating place that offered more than just good food.

The Lewises have found a host of unusual furnishings and have given the Gold Mine an old-fashioned-type atmosphere.

As far as food goes, The Gold Mine offers plenty of it, and at a price that will suit you. Sandwiches on the menu include hamburgers, cheeseburgers, roast beef (thin sliced for added tenderness), plus pastrami, corned beef, grilled cheese, hot dogs, barbeque sandwiches and steak sandwiches.

If an afternoon snack is what you're interested in, check out The Gold Mine for hand-dipped ice cream (16 flavors), banana splits, and a variety of soft drinks.

Whatever your tastes, The Gold Mine has something for you. They're open Monday thru Saturday from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m., and located in the College Park Shopping Center.

Hearing rated 'R'

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you're under 18, don't bother showing up at Sen. Jeremiah Denton's hearing Tuesday without a parent or guardian. The hearing is rated "R" because of a film "that uses nudity, profanity and explicit sexual language," the senator says.

The Alabama Republican will take the chair of the full Labor Committee session on materials used in family planning clinics because of his work on what Chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said last week was the apparent use of federal funds "to support a series of activities designed to manipulate and change the moral attitudes of America's teenagers with the help of federal money."

Parents of teenagers having children, consulting parents and establishing families.
