IMPORTANT NOTICE To Incubator Buyers.

Unquestionably the incubator that is exciting the greatest stir today among poultry raisers is the pay-for-itself

OLD TRUSTY

The incubator sold on 40 days trial under a 5 year guarantee at Johnson's rock-bottom, anti-combination price.

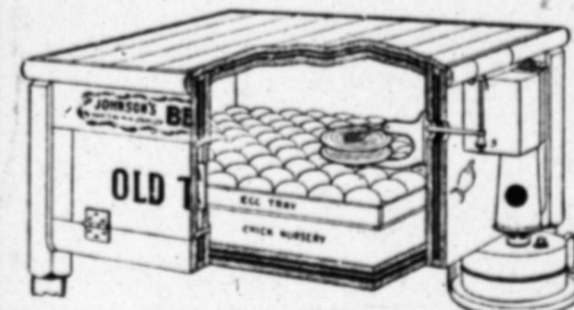

As a poultry raiser you owe it to yourself to investigate this proposition. It costs you nothing to try an Old Trusty and it beats the world as a hatcher and money-maker.

About Johnson.

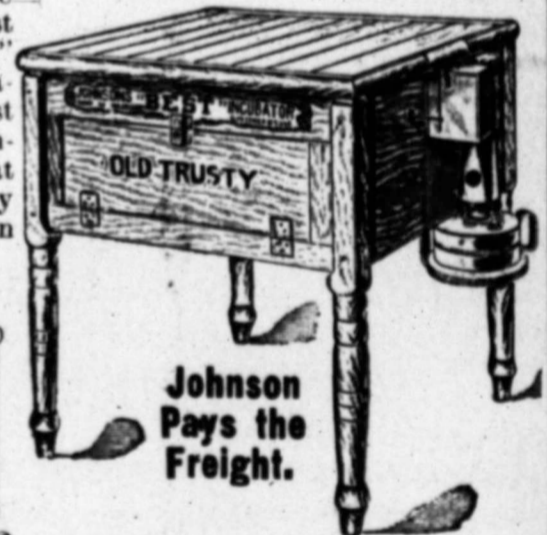

Johnson is the Clay Center Incubator man who has built thousands of incubators and sold them to satisfied users. He has had 12 years experience and knows how. He was a pioneer in selling incubators at low prices and on free trial. He has more personal friends scattered over the country than any man we know of. The preachers, the lawyers, the business men of Clay Center all say that he is an "upright business man, commanding the confidence of other business men and abundantly able and willing to make good all promises to his patrons." Last year, the first year that "Old Trusty" was on the market, he sold 13,000 machines—breaking all records for the first year. He did it because he has an unusually good machine, which he sells at a right price, and because the poultry raisers of America know that Johnson will give them a fair deal.

About Old Trusty.

Is made of selected California red wood and 12 oz. cold rolled copper; Miller safety lamp; Taylor Bros. guaranteed thermometer; double walls top, bottom and side; double doors; two dead air spaces, sides and bottom, automatic regulator and patent copper hot-water heating system. Boiler fitted with patent return hood which saves half the oil; draughts do not affect the lamp. Take a good look at the picture.

Here's a sectional view. Note position of regulator and three walls all round.

Johnson Pays the Freight.

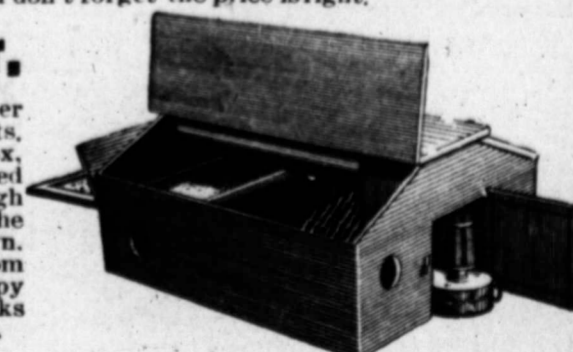

"Old Trusty" is built on Johnson's plans after 12 years experience. It is sold at a live-and-let-live price. It is guaranteed for five years and you get 40 DAYS FREE TRIAL.

Don't confuse "Old Trusty" with any other machine. Don't confuse our company with any other. Don't be fooled by mud-slinging. Get an "Old Trusty" on trial and see for yourself what it will do. It's the great pay-for-itself hatcher—with later improvements than any other incubator on the market. And don't forget the price is right.

Old Trusty Brooder.

Made of best California redwood, never shrinks, swells or pulls apart at joints. Miller Safety Lamp in solid iron lamp box, no gas can enter chick chamber. Inclined floor prevents chicks from piling up. Enough heat under floor to take chill off. Note the hinged cloth frame, partly withdrawn. Chicks hover under cloth warmed from above. Chick backs are warmed and sleepy nerves soothed the natural way. Chicks don't pile up, chill or become over-eated.

"The Patriot," Clay Center, Neb., says: "Here at home it is not necessary to speak a word of commendation for M. M. Johnson. The business men of his home town know that the cause of his success is to be found in his own sterling honesty and in the excellent quality of his machines."
The Homemaker, Des Moines, Iowa, says: "The people have found they can trust Johnson. He has the faculty for telling the truth."

THE SWINE Department

FEED FOR BREEDING SWINE

O. L. Kerr, Missouri.

Best sows should have plenty of room for forage and an abundance of good pasture. My sows have the run of 90 acres, 300 woods and the remainder of cloverless pasture. A month before time to farrow they are put in a separate lot, each lot containing clover and a shed 8x8 feet, with a shelf all around inside, 10 inches from the floor, which serves as a good protection to the young pigs when the sows lie down.

During the suckling period the sows were fed shorts and chopped feed and allowed as much clover as they want. For young stock over six months of age I provided chopped feed, bran and shorts, equal parts by measure. For those under six months, one-third chopped and two-thirds shorts, with a liberal supply of milk. As they become older they usually take a large per cent of chopped feed and will be benefited by more bran and shorts.

The aged breeding animals are fed on corn, bran and alfalfa or clover hay during the winter. Too much cannot be said in favor of clover as a pasture for breeding animals. It keeps them in excellent condition, is a clean healthy food and furnishes a well-balanced ration. While my specialty is raising animals for breeders, I frequently cull my herds and put off the least desirable individuals as fat hogs twice a year. I prefer to put them on the market in October and June and have seldom failed to top the market.

HOW TO SELL PIGS FOR BREEDERS.

First the seller must have something marketable to offer. Not only must the stock be in salable condition, but "up to date" in breeding in well-established blood lines. Breeding that has proved a success will, in the home of the purchasers, prove a good investment that will add value to any breeder's business. If a feeder for pork, the investment in a good sire means the shortening of the feeding period, an increase in the weight of pork for the feed consumed, a larger bank account that follows sales top the market.

Merit based upon such a reliable foundation will not only win but will give increased confidence to your customers and promote enthusiasm for the Berkshire business.

To sell Berkshire you must first advise the swine breeders that you are in the business to stay; and by the intelligent use of printer's ink in the live stock and agricultural journals tell the public what you have to sell. Advertise in the papers that circulate in the territory in which you wish to sell your Berkshires. Adopt the system of advertising by regularity exhibiting your Berkshire at your county and state fair, and show good representatives of your herd that will demonstrate your skill as a breeder.

THE HOG INCREASE.

There are no other class of farm animals that will make the progress in their numbers to compare with swine. The increase in the number of pigs in the United States, while that of cattle will run up to perhaps 40 or 50 per cent, while sheep will reach perhaps 80 per cent, hogs will reach an average of 500 per cent, and sometimes up to 700 per cent.

It is this excessive percentage of increase that has always made raising a favorite business with farmers. The parties who have properly handled them make the business one of the most profitable.

At the same time the alluring possibilities sometimes tempt experienced parties to go into the business who meet with loss instead of profits simply because they are not prepared and do not understand how to care for and handle them.

METHOD OF MARKING PIGS.

There is one thing that I must not forget to mention about marking your pigs. I think it is important that every breeder who is breeding hogs for breeding purposes to mark their pigs before they are thirty-six hours old, as I do not think there is any man has the ability to keep the record of all his pigs if not marked, even if he only has several litters. It is possible. I would not buy a pig of any man that did not mark all his pigs, and would advise others to do the same, as I think it very important that we should be very careful. The best way I have ever found to let one notch in right ear represent one, and each notch in left represent three, consequently you can keep track very nicely. For example, one notch in right ear represents first litter, two notches in right ear second litter, one notch in each ear fourth litter and so on, as three and one are four. If you will come to my place at Prossett, Ia., and I should not be at home, Mrs. Reese or the hired man can take my books and tell you what every little Chester White's mother is and what they are sired by. I always try to please all my customers by giving them the right kind at living prices. I believe in honest dealing. "Do up to others as you would have them do unto you."

At the close of this paper Dr. Hammer said: "This brings up the idea of marking pigs. We have a way of marking our pigs which we have tried for four or five years, and for the benefit of some who would like to understand a simple way of marking pigs I will give it. It can be done with only three marks in each ear. We do the marking with snippers. For the first litter out one mark in the upper part of the right ear; second litter, one mark in the middle of right ear; third litter, mark in lower part of right ear; fourth litter, upper part of left ear; fifth litter, middle part of left ear; and sixth litter, lower part of left ear. You want to cut as little as you can." Dr. Hammer continued the manner of marking up to the thirteenth litter, and said: "We can mark twenty litters so, with no more than three small cuts, and we have found it a very nice easy way."

RECIPROCITY AND OUR FOREIGN TRADE.

Conditions Now Confronting the Export Business of the United States Call for Serious Consideration at the Present Time.

In behalf of more than two hundred leading American agricultural and commercial organizations participating in the National Reciprocity Conference held at Chicago, Ill., Aug 16th and 17th last, and in behalf of many others who have since expressed their sympathy with the aims and objects of that conference, the undersigned, constituting the National Committee of the American Reciprocal Tariff League, organized in accordance with resolutions adopted by said National Reciprocity Conference respectfully invite attention to the following facts:

When in the year 1897 the Dingley tariff law was enacted by Congress and approved by the President, the business interests of the country generally and the producing interests of the West in particular, assumed that practical measures were at last to be taken to protect our foreign trade as well as home markets; that those interests producing a surplus that has to be sold abroad were to receive the same consideration from the Government that had been so generously extended for so many years to industries whose output is consumed at home. Sections 3 and 4 of this law provided for the establishment of reciprocal trade relations with such nations as would concede valuable trading privileges to ourselves. The law was supposedly designed to open the way to a comprehensive scheme of international reciprocity. The President was authorized to negotiate commercial treaties with foreign powers upon the basis of mutual concessions; the schedules being purposely set high enough to afford protection to home industries even where the full 20 per cent reduction authorized by the law might be conceded. Under this provision President McKinley concluded no less than twelve different treaties, the fate of which is well known. Requiring ratification by a two-thirds vote of the Senate they were deliberately "held up" until the time limit fixed by the law itself had been exhausted. In this way a rigid maximum range of duties amounting in some cases to downright exclusion, was established; the continued application of which now threatens to materially affect our European balance.

This condition it will be observed arises not by virtue of the deliberate intent of the framers of the Dingley law, for they made every provision for quite a different policy. It does not exist by virtue of any failure on the part of the executive because President McKinley and his successor undertook to give full force and effect to what they knew to be the desire of the masses of the people and of the majority of those who in Congress had voted for the bill believing that Section 4 was to be honestly and promptly administered. As enacted it possessed the vital element of elasticity so essential in dealing with the several governments now operating under the dual tariff plan; but as emasculated it is fairly forcing some of our best customers to retaliate against us. It is time therefore that we consider carefully the question of how we are to meet the difficulties now rapidly coming into view.

THE RECIPROCITY CONFERENCE RESOLUTIONS.

That the duties thus fastened upon the country, by indirection are sooner or later to lead us into serious trouble is the firm belief of those whom we represent. The nullification of Section 4 not only defeated the intent of a majority of those who voted for the existing law, but is building up monopolies at the expense of important interests now seriously menaced and is rapidly leading us to trade complications threatening the continued prosperity of our people. Hence the demand of the business interests represented at the late Chicago convention as voiced in the following declarations:

Their Advantages, etc.

Our readers will notice an advertisement of the Hart Pioneer Nurseries, of Ft. Scott, Kas., running in this paper regarding an improved Veneered "Tree Protector."

We have seen a sample of these Protectors, and judging from the high class of testimonials that this firm furnishes, they evidently are a good thing, and will do all that they claim of them, such as protecting trees from mice, borers, rabbits, hot winds, sun scald, etc.

We notice testimonials from some of the largest orchardists in the country, who are using them, also from leading horticulturists and secretaries of many horticultural societies, advocating the Protectors.

If any of our readers have trees or shrubs to protect, they will do well to correspond with the above firm, and get their circulars and samples.

THE LIVE STOCK INSPECTOR.

Whereas, The agriculture, manufactures and other industries of this country have expanded to such an extent that they can no longer depend upon the home market for the consumption of their entire product; and

Whereas, The export trade has become a vital support to many of our industries; and

Whereas, The present commercial attitude of the United States, largely owing to our failure to carry into effect the reciprocal trade provisions of Section IV of the Dingley law, is antagonizing foreign nations, whose good will we desire and on whom we have hitherto depended as purchasers of our surplus products; therefore be it

Resolved, First, That this convention recognizing the principle of protection as the established policy of our country advocates reciprocal concessions by means of a dual or maximum and minimum tariff, as the only practical method of relieving at this time the strained situation with which we are now confronted.

Second, That eventually the question of the schedules and items to be considered in reciprocal concessions preferably be suggested by a permanent tariff commission, to be created by Congress and appointed by the President, which shall consist of economic, industrial and commercial experts.

Third, That it is the sense of this convention that our present tariff affords abundant opportunity for such concessions without injury to industry, trade, or the wages of labor.

REPRISALS AT EXPENSE OF AGRICULTURE.

This convention was pre-eminently and at base an agrarian demonstration. The farmers and stockmen of the corn belt and the range are not sharing in any fair degree in the undoubted prosperity that has come to the chief beneficiaries of the law as mutilated by a Senatorial minority. They are being robbed of markets for their surplus products which could be opened to them through the medium of reciprocal tariff concessions. For example:

Germany is the second largest buyer of food products in the world. She would probably take from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000 worth of American farm products annually under any fair scheme of reciprocity. France would buy perhaps one half as much under reasonable trading arrangements. The American farmer has a 4,500,000,000 crop of cereals this year. The application of scientific methods is vastly enlarging our soil production. There is ordinarily an enormous surplus of farm products in excess of domestic wants. Heavy buying by Germany in anticipation of the closing of the ports of the empire against us March 1st, 1906, is helping our grain markets some just now, but what of the future? Let us quote from the Department of Commerce and Labor on the conditions to be met after the date mentioned:

"A series of notable increases affects agricultural products. Thus, wheat, the duty of which until now constituted the highest ad valorem rate, viz, 35 per cent., is advanced 100 per cent (i. e., to about 70 per cent ad valorem) under the new general tariff and 43 per cent under the conventional. The specific duty on wheat, equivalent to 27 per cent ad valorem in 1903, is advanced 114 per cent under the new general and 57 per cent under the new conventional tariffs. The specific rate on wheat flour, which amounted to 35 per cent ad valorem in 1903, is raised 157 per cent in the new general (i. e., to about 89 per cent ad valorem) and 40 per cent in the conventional tariff (i. e., to about 48 per cent ad valorem). The duty of 1.60 marks on corn, which constituted 17 per cent ad valorem in 1903, is raised 212 per cent in the general tariff and 87 per cent in the conventional. The duty on dried fruit, which formed 9 per cent ad valorem in 1903, has been raised 150 per cent under the new general and left unchanged under the conventional tariff.

The rates on provisions have also been greatly advanced. Bacon, which hitherto paid the highest ad valorem in the list of provisions coming from the United States, viz, 23 per cent, is advanced 80 per cent, in the new general tariff, while no rate is provided for in the conventional tariff. The duty on pork, which amounted to 21 per cent ad valorem in 1903, is advanced 176 per cent.

Indian corn is king in the agriculture of the middle west. It can be best marketed in the form of meats; in the production of which we lead the world. Receipts of cattle at Chicago this fall have run from 10,000 to 30,000 head weekly in excess of the known home requirements; the result being heavy losses to growers. With train-loads of bullocks selling as low as $3.50 per cwt. in Chicago and with dressed beef wholesaled there at 6c per lb., live cattle and swine are worth in Germany 15c per lb. Surely there is something out of joint economically when such a state of affairs exists.

LET US BE WISE IN TIME.

Why cannot our producers and manufacturers enjoy the natural outlets for their wares in continental Europe and elsewhere? The answer can be plainly read in the schedules of the present tariff. The ceaseless expansion of the output of our farms and factories is soon to feel a steady contraction of our foreign vents unless action is had to forestall such a result. There ebb, as well as floods in the tides of business. The country has been lavish in its protection to industries now gigantic; some of them world-dominating in their power. It will probably do no good to remind them that the farmers of the middle west have stood steadfastly for all this protection all these years and that these same farmers could annually sell $100,000,000 worth more of breadstuffs and provisions in continental Europe alone if these same well-fattened industries would now consent to a "square deal."

We are told that we should seek to have tariff evils remedied now because we are for the most part prosperous. All hands admit that gross injustice exists. Naturally certain powerful interests want no change. But in the midst of all this extraordinary activity, even while the furnace furiously let us profit by the warning of one who helped to bring this all about.

DUAL TARIFF NOW SEEMS DESIRABLE.

The dual tariff seems to be in general favor as the most scientific way of applying the protective principle to international trade. The maximum rates of the new German tariff will enable that country to successfully exclude American breadstuffs, provisions, live animals, etc., and still draw food supplies under a minimum scale from countries that do not exclude German products. It was this fact that was primarily responsible for the assembling of the National Reciprocity Conference.

The Dingley law should be effectively amended to meet existing conditions of a new bill passed modelled on reasonable protective lines that shall have for its object the fostering of foreign markets as well as the protection of home industries. Vitalizing, reviving and modifying the reciprocity features of the existing law might afford a basis for some temporary relief, but a carefully constructed maximum and minimum tariff with sufficient power placed in the hands of the executive, would certainly lead us rapidly forward in our quest for world commerce. Further delay in facing this matter squarely means retrogression.

The NEWS charges only two dollars for publishing land notices. The settler who makes final proof is as much in need of the extra two dollars charged by the Woodward Bulletin as that paper and for the sake of decency, if for no other reason, the settlers whose land lies nearest Woodward should be allowed to save this much in making final proof. In the outside-of-county seat papers, where the publishers have a struggle to exist, the rate of $4.00 is not too much for their service, but here in Woodward, with the advantage of larger circulation, more job work, county and city printing, it is vastly different and the claim holder endeavoring by hard labor to make proof on his land should not be charged over $2.00 for notice by publication; and more than this, at this time, is pure robbery in the interest of political piracy. We hope Mr. Morgan, who has so far proven himself worthy of the trust reposed in him as register of the U. S. Land Office here, will give due consideration to this matter and allow settlers to name their choice of newspapers to make notice of proof for final entry. The Bulletin is not an object of charity that it should be given this work at any higher rate than offered by this paper, which stands ready to publish these notices for only $2.00, including affidavit of publication.—Woodward News.

Farm Telephones a necessity.

The utility of the telephone to the farmer is becoming more pronounced every year. The endless satisfaction of being in close touch with neighbors, the railroad station, creamery, and city, appeals not only to the farmer but his family, as well. The Andrae & Sons Co., 855 W. Water St., Milwaukee, Wis., specialize in supplying farmers and independent lines with everything pertaining to telephone systems. The Andrae people, who have been very successful in establishing telephone systems throughout the entire country, make a special telephone for farmer's use. Their instruments are constructed in such a manner as to enable them to be subjected to extra hard usage. We would advise our subscribers to write for the large book that is being given away free by the Andrae Co.

A Far Reaching Decision.

Kingman Journal.

On the 30th day of October the United States supreme court handed down a decision whose effect will be perceptible all down the line of bond giving corporations, banks, railways and semi-public institutions. The decision was in the case of Guthrie vs. Harkness, and was to the effect that every stockholder or owner of a share in an incorporated institution has a legal right at all times to review and examine the books and records of such corporation, whether the officers allow it or not. This virtually gives to every stockholder a chance to step in and put a stumbling-block in the way of shady methods or underhanded schemes, if he so chooses, and puts him in a better position to guard his own interests. It will mean much less grafting, less underhanded control and more light on the private affairs of a semi-public business in which the people have an interest.

With eggs at 25 cents a dozen, every farmer in Woodward county is figuring on raising more hens.

The manhood of the average voter is being developed and very little adhesion will hereafter be shown to party lines. America for Americans and not party bosses!

It will be a battle royal next year, with the political tax robber office holders on one side and the honest hard working farmer on the other. It is easy to guess the result, in advance.

The politicians of Woodward county are already busy dividing the pie, but we would like to give a guess from outside the tent that the farmers of this same county will have something to say in this matter about election time, if not sooner.

If ever a man merited a re-appointment for a second term, that man is E. S. Wiggins, Receiver of the U. S. Land Office at this place. Always courteous, competent and obliging, he has been faithful and true and deserves a second term.

And now they say that C. A. Alexander wants to be made "Judge" of our District Court! Heaven forefend! Alec has certainly been about as heavy a burden as the people could stand,—a political accident—for years past. God pity the taxpayers if Alec gets there!

"Socialism, the Hope of the Working Class," is the topic of lecture announced for Wednesday, Dec. 13 and Thursday, 14 by G. W. Davis, place of meeting not stated.

The Telephone Cards given out by Manager Collins this week are so badly printed that it is almost impossible to decipher names and numbers. Such service invites competition.

"The Pueblo, Oklahoma and New Orleans R. R. will be running trains into Woodward inside of fourteen months, if Woodward furnishes the bonus," said Huse H. pkins this week. This is good news all right, lets have the road.

Jno. Talbert and family and Ira Foster were in from near Chaney Saturday visiting Miss Mary E. Talbert of this office. They returned home Sunday.

Oklahoma leads the world! Surrounding states have conceded its superiority in climate and fertility of soil and here we come knocking the spots off the big Lone Star state on religion. Last year with an expense appropriated of only 11 per cent, there were taken into the churches 35 per cent more members than Texas. Whether it be in art, science, commerce, productiveness or a herd drive to heaven, Oklahoma has all others skinned to a finish!

Jeff Warren has installed a dandy 2-H. P. gasolene engine in his Bottling works in West Woodward and will be prepared to double his trade next season.

The tax payers are sweating blood these days. Joe Black of Persimmon came in Tuesday and told his tale of woe to the tune of $35. 'Tis ever thus, when farmers are led around with political rings in their noses and are fools enough to "vote the ticket," thieves and all!

E. W. Waddle accepted a position as manager and foreman of the Supply Republican this week and left this office Tuesday noon to begin work. Foreman W. A. Pyne has been in bed all week with rheumatism, therefore this issue is gotten up with only part of our regular force.

The Woodward Team of the M. W. A. are loud in their praise of the treatment accorded them by the camp at Curtis on their visit to that city last Saturday night. All expenses of the visitors were paid and a royal midnight banquet given them. Curtis will always stand high in the estimation of our Woodward boys.

Fred C. Wyand from Hillsboro, Indiana is here on a visit to his brother Clyde H. Wyand and while waiting for the latter to return has been doing janitor work and practicing law in Clyde's office. He came unannounced to surprise his brother and was more surprised to learn on arrival that his brother was swiping oranges and skinning alligators in Florida.

Mrs. Carrie Nation was in Woodward this week and lectured Tuesday and Wednesday nights at the M. E. church. On the day of her arrival she passed Dave Irwin standing in front of Collins' saloon. She stopped and said: "Are'nt you ashamed to be standing here?" "Well", drawled Dave, who never had heard of her, "if I was I reckon I'd not be standing here."

ANNOUNCEMENT: Rev. T. H. Dabney of Liberty, Mo., assisted by his wife will begin a revival meeting at the Baptist church on Sunday, Jan. 7th, 1906. Rev. Dabney is a powerful speaker and has been very successful in winning souls for Christ wherever he has labored having recently closed a two weeks' meeting at South Persimmon church with 33 additions. Everybody is invited to come and help to make this the greatest revival in the history of Woodward.

The INSPECTOR office was honored by a brief call of Mrs. Carrie Nation accompanied by Miss Virgil Geer and her mother, Wednesday morning. Mrs. Nation expressed herself much pleased in the substantial growth of Woodward since her one time residence a few miles south of here. She noted with considerable enthusiasm the absence of so many "hell-holes," compared to former number here and expressed the belief that Woodward, on account of its location in the most fertile and healthful county in the world, would some day in the near future be counted as one of the leading cities of Oklahoma.

Call for Farmers Delegate Convention

Woodward, O. T., Nov 27, 1905.— A Delegate Convention is hereby called to meet in the District Court room, at the court house, in Woodward, on the 27th day of December, 1905, for the purpose of considering the proposition of how to make farming pay in Woodward county, and for such other purposes as the convention may determine when assembled.

Three delegates to be chosen from each school district in the county, select your most active, up-to-date men; men who have well established industrial habits, and nerve power, men who will act as well as talk. You have plenty of them in every school district. Let us meet as a band of industrial brothers, or let us meet in the spirit of our Revolutionary ancestry. There is a great and glorious work before you, demanding the best talents, and the best elementary manly make up known to American citizenship; and the purest patriotic devotion to home and fatherland, and the same love of liberty as that entertained by Patrick Henry, when he, in his great oration, declared "Sink or swim, survive or perish, live or die, I give my heart and hands to the cause."

and let us make the 27th memorable in the history of Woodward county and her people, the birthday of the farmers' independence; let no man falter, all be on hands promptly with your credentials properly signed at 10 o'clock a. m. Dec. 27. Be in this great farmers' counsel, let all farmers organizations be present by representations; feed the pony an extra ear of corn by day light on that day, and ere the sun kisses the roof of your cottage, pull for Woodward, and unborn generations will call you blessed. The redemption of your industry from the iron grip of monopoly is at hand; there are no greater heroes than the man who defends his home. The hour has indeed come; the morning star of your industrial liberty is dawning. Come one, come all.

J. R. DEAN, Chairman.

All county papers please copy. P. S. There will be no imported article with stale anecdotes and stiff conventional formalities to chill the spirit of liberty. It is a home counsel. We meet to do business.

Col W. A. Harris on the Educational Value of the International Live Stock Exposition to the Stockmen of America
Dec. 16 to 22

Anyone who knows Shorthorn history knows how closely the name of Col. W. A. Harris of Linwood, Kansas, is coupled with it, therefore his views on the educational value of expositions in general and the International in particular, will be read with great interest. Col. Harris expresses it in the following interview:

"From the mystery of birth to the mystery of death life is a school. After passing through the normal school days we enter the great University of life where on every hand facts thrust themselves upon us for observation, comparison and deduction. Those who most successfully cultivate these qualities and embrace the advantage offered are labeled successful. Man does not know even whether he is tall or short except by comparison. The manufacturer by comparison of his products with those of his competitor observes his rank in the competitive world. He does not hesitate to seek every opportunity of making comparisons and thus ascertaining his relative rank. When he finds that he is being surpassed he does not hesitate to discard his obsolete machinery and consign it to the scrap heap and install the newest and most approved machinery and methods, and if possible surpass his neighbor in the quality and economy of his product.

"The stockman is slower to learn but inexorable necessity is pressing more and compelling him to observe, to compare and to deduce proper lines of procedure.

"In the University of life there are many special schools established and brought about for the purpose of making more easy the cultivation of these qualities; not least among them is the International Live Stock Show. Here the producer, great can see what has been done by others, can ascertain the value of new and better methods and can gain a stronger and more capable opinion of his particular line. The comparison of this school is to be held under circumstances which give it marked advantages over any held heretofore. In the manner in which the object lessons will be displayed and comparison facilitated it will be ahead of anything of the kind that we have seen. The exhibits promise to surpass in every respect any heretofore given and the comfort and convenience under which the whole may be seen will certainly appeal to the comfort and pleasure of every intelligent live stock man. I sincerely hope for the good of the live stock interests that the attendance may be of a character commensurate with the effort which has been put forth under your management and from every hand I hear nothing but the most encouraging speculations as to the result."

"Ethics of the Dust."

BY MARY ANNABLE FANTON.

"There is just one thing in life I can't get the best of, and that is dust." It is the complaint of half the housekeepers you know.

"They can cope with inadequate funds, uncongenial surroundings, can hold captive domestic bliss, and train children for useful careers, but dust, that vicious will of the wisp of the household, they cannot subdue.

"Why, I have known women to go into nervous prostration after a long dry summer's battle with this hereditary foe of womankind.

It can become fetish in a home. There are women whose eyes are trained to dust searching; who are, as it were, dust detectives. They are looking for it all the while they feel it float in on the wings of a delicious summer breeze. They see it in folds of the garments of a visitor. It is on the foot of a stranger, on the face of a friend.

And dust once entering the soul of a woman, she will not let it go. Either you must govern it, or take it as a matter of course, or systematize the battle against it.

Dust is a foe without a conscience, not devoid of ethics. If you meet it on its own ground and fight fair, it is not inconceivable that you will win out. But it is a lifetime fight even when you know the rules and the weapons for the dust tournament.

First of all, don't try to fight it with its own weapons. Don't go blowing it about with broom and cloths. It is too used to such measures not to get the best of you. If you disturb and inconvenience it by creating a commotion in the air, it will just float away serenely to a fresh resting place. It knows the ways of the wind.

You must use newer and cleverer methods. You must be ingratiating and insinuating, and deal with it so as not to arouse suspicion. Three defensive weapons are a carpet sweeper, a damp cloth and borax.

TAKE UP the dust. DON'T STIR it up. Run a sweeper over your carpets and rugs, then prepare a basin of borax water, teaspoonful of borax to a basin of warm water. Wipe the carpet briskly but thoroughly with a cloth that has no lint, dipped in this solution. It will not only take out the dust, but will bring back lost and faded colors and mark death and destruction to all microbes.

It is a simple inexpensive method of warfare, and one that appeals to the ethics of the dust because it is not flaunting disgrace in its face.

The same methods hold with the cleaning of woodwork, of upholstered furniture, of draperies, of picture frames and curios not the use of the carpet sweeper, of course, but the careful wiping with a solution of borax.

It is even a good way to freshen up a wool or silk frock or to clean men's clothes. Make the solution as already suggested brush the clothes thoroughly, spread over an ironing board, and sponge the surface with a cloth but faintly damp, always making sure that the cloth has no lint or ravelings to shed. The borax destroys the moths, restores the color and brings back the original lustre in goods so often wholly destroyed in the cleaning, and above all is the relentless enemy of dust, wherever entrenched.

"The McMillan Fur & Wool Co., of Minneapolis, have mailed us their new circular, which we have on file for reference. This house has been established some twenty-eight years and on account of their extensive business, which minimizes the proportion of fixed expenses, are in a position to pay high prices. They make a specialty of receiving goods through shipments, and shippers find returns very satisfactory."

MOISTURE CONTENT OF BUTTER—HOW TO CONTROL IT.

The following is a summary from Bulletin 76 of Iowa State College: In order to avoid leaky butter and to incorporate moisture in an apparently dry condition the results of the experiments herein reported have proven satisfactorily that water could be incorporated during the churning or washing process. If attempts are made to incorporate moisture during working it will nearly always appear leaky. As was mentioned before, the butter should not appear in small round granules at the time of salting, as the salt tends to attract to the outside and dislocate the minute particles of water in these granules. When these small granules, their surfaces covered with moisture will be caught in the crevices or holes in the larger lumps of butter. If the butter is of medium firmness the moisture is present in such a form that when butter is worked this moisture will escape. This lessens the overrun, and what moisture there is left in these crevices will cause the butter to appear leaky. If it better to stop the churn while these granules are small; then continue the churning in not to cold wash water, and not too much of it. This will cause the particles to unite. If the salting is attempted while the butter is in this shape, and the butter worked immediately with the drain hole in the churn open, the butter will retain its moisture and there will be no loose moisture in it, causing it to appear leaky. In that way leaky butter can be overcome without decreasing the quality of moisture in the butter.

A Step in the Right Direction.

Mr. F. S. Kirk of Enid, Oklahoma has been working for the last few years to get all the local breeders of fine stock to work together and hold an annual stock sale. By doing this the attention of the breeders and buyers from a distance can be had, and enough stock offered so that any buyer wanting a car load could buy a load of any class of stock. On December 15 and 16th, Mr. Kirk will hold what in all likelihood will be the largest combination sale ever held in Oklahoma.

A total of 200 head of hogs, Horses and Cattle will be sold. The well known breeders, Taggart Brothers are closing out their fine herd of Shorthorn and no better bred stock was ever offered for sale. J. S. Evans of Douglass Anthony Edwards of Waukomis F. P. Sylvester of Hennessy and The Oklahoma Stock Farm have also consigned Shorthorn Cattle, while Hodgon Bros. and Frank Rogers furnish the bulk of Hereford stock consigned.

Those two are royal bred stock. The Hodgon Bros. have a World's Fair Blue ribbon winner at the head of their herd.

If horses, the offering is not so large, but every animal sold will be a bargain for the buyer as the breeding in the stock offered will be in advance of the country. These will be colts by Council Chinese 2:07½ The Airship 2:11-Mt. Airy 2:19 etc., also grandly bred mares in fold two: Gambriel 2:10½ Council Chinese 2:10 etc. There are two things absolutely essential to holding a good sale: the first is to get the stock consigned, and the second is to get the buyers. Mr. Kirk has made a grand success of the first but we doubt, if he can get buyers enough to buy all this stock. In our judgement it will pay the breeders from a distance to attend this sale as we think they can buy stock at bargains.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN.

Say Something good.

Pick out the folks you like the least
and watch 'em for awhile;
They never waste a kindly word, they never waste a smile;
They criticise their fellow man at every chance they get,
They never found a human just to suit their fancy yet.

From them I guess you'd learn some things if they were pointed out—Some things that every one of us should know a lot about.

When someone "knocks" a brother, pass around the loving up—
Say something good about him if you have to make it up.

It's safe to say that every man God made holds some trace of good That he would fain exhibit to his fellows if he could;

The kindly deeds in many a soul are hibernating there, Awaiting the encouragement of other souls that dare

To show the best that's in them; and a universal move
Would start the whole world running in a more helpful groove.

Say something sweet to paralyze the "knocker" on the spot—
Speak kindly of his victim if you know the man or not.

The eyes that peck and peer to find the worst a brother holds,
The tongue that speaks in bitterness, that frets and fumes and scolds;
The hands that brute the fall, through their strength was means to raise The weaklings who had stumbled at the parting of the ways—
All these should be forgiven, for they "know not what they do;"

Their hindrance makes a greater work for wiser ones like you.
So, when they scourge a wretched one who's drained sin's bitter cup,
Say something good about him if you
have to make it up.

Real happiness oftener looks out of the window of an humble home than through the opera-glass in the gilded box of a theatre.

If your path through life had always been smooth, you would have depended upon your own surefootedness;
but one wiser than you roughened that path, so you have to take hold of His hand.

A happy home, whether it consists of two or twelve members, is one where love presides at the board and watches over the couches; where each person loves himself last and considers the other first; where the irritable word is restrained and the affectionate thought given utterance, and where each is glad in laboring for the others comforts and relieving the other cares.

The grandest luxury God ever gave man is health. He who trades that off for all the palaces of the earth is cheated. Many have envied Napoleon but he would gladly have given all his honors to have been freed from the gout. A dinner of herbs tastes better to the appetite sharpened on a woodman's ax or a cythe, than wealthy indigestion experiences seated at a table covered with venison and all the luxuries of the season. With good health, we can sleep sweetly on a straw mattress, while fashionable invalids get but little rest on a couch of eagle's down. Let us remember Paul's advice to the Hebrews and if we have health in all other respect "Be content with such things as ye have."

There is a great deal of sentimental cant, one must allow, in the common talk about the beauty and glory of motherhood, but very little practical appreciation of the beauty and glory among the talkers. The accepted formulas would lead one to believe that the whole thing was a mere exhibition and enjoyment of loveliness and tenderness without responsibility, or work or weariness; without a moment of terror, or agony, or despair. Ari has so far taken up the fancy and helped it forward that its perpetual presentation of the motherhood is either the blissful young being aureoled with happiness, and holding her young babe in her arms, or else the saintly old woman who, with her silver hair and serene smile, sits down for a placid breathing spell at the end of her journey. But with the intermediate mother, the real mother, the mother of many cares, of constant effort, of daily and nightly anxieties, neither art nor poetry occupies itself; and though her children may some day rise up and call her blessed, yet for long and weary years her virtue is her own reward.

Let us lay aside discontent, petu-lance and moroseness. These are the worst enemies that can dwell within a home. If we can reach philosophy in no other way; let us do so by contemplating the ill fortunes of those who are more afflicted than we, and so we may acquire a certain negative content that will suffice until we can cultivate a more positive virtue. Discontent saps the strength and is an enemy to progress. Petulance accomplishes nothing. It injures the influence of those who indulge in it, alienating those about us.

A word of encouragement at the right time is of more real worth than an ounce of gold. It is more nourishing to the soul than meat and drink to the hungry. It is a better stimu-

'What Think Ye, Masters, of These Things?'

[A Poem read on Oklahoma Day, September 6th, 1904, at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, by Freeman E. Miller, of Stillwater, Oklahoma]

O, ye who frame the sovereign law,
And heal the hurts of ocean isles
Till hid are savage tooth and claw
And Peace above the battle smiles,—
If Justice reigns and Mercy clings,
What think ye, Masters, of these things?

The Father of the Waters greets
Imperial sisters proud and great,
And nation mighty nation meets.
At festal boards of lordly state;
But one—one only,—maketh moan:
Denied the Star, she weeps alone!

The cycles fly on eagled wings;
A hundred years have run their quest
Since he who bought and sold with kings
An empire added to the west,
And all his regions rulers are Save her alone who mourns the Star.

The wildness in a moment died;
A garden bloomed and fruited full
Across the plains and valleys wide
At touch of hands invincible;
But mute she stands where deserts were:
The banner holds no star for her!

The race heaps high its conquered spoil;
The braggart heirs of all men do,
Assemble where the Triumphs toil
In marshaled columns for review;
And she, the Starless, at your call Bring trophies that surpass them all!

Are not her laurels rich and rare?
Her apt attainments great with grace?
You crown her here and everywhere
Save where she pleads for power and place;
The world amazed her praises rings:
What think ye, Masters, of these things?

She wonders wrought with wondrous hands;
Her cities crowd the teeming plains,
And church and school exalt the lands
With all mankind's greater gains
The last of all the waste, she brings
The triumphs of her million kings!

A million white and black and red,
Whose treble toils misunderstood
Build happy homes and fondly wed
The desert place with joyous good,
And at your feet, uncrowned, unblest,
Kneel for the knighthood of their quest!

Thrilled in her chains, this fairest one
Of all the realms that greatly found Rich largess on the barrens dun,
Pleads from her fetters, vassal-bound;
And still the star before her swings:
What think ye, Masters, of these things?

CAR-SUL CATTLE DIP

FEAR NOT THE FUTURE.

MRS. E. E. ORCUTT.

Fear not to pass to the unknown,
Since He who sitteth on its throne,
As King, is friend and brother, too,
'Tis He with whom we have to do.

We cannot go beyond His care
His love we cannot cease to share,
We are the creatures of His power
In lowly hut or lofty tower.

And He who spared not His own son,
Will cease not till His work is done,
Whatever His will, it must be best,
In that all souls may safely rest.

For we are daily taught to pray,
"Thy will be done, O Lord," we say,
As much as daily bread we need,
On this petition daily feed.

When in the heart we give a place,
Jesus reveals a smiling face,
He did all right for us,
Doing His heavenly Father's will:

And He will not himself deny,
Or pass repentant sinners by,
When we forgive we are forgiven, Christ's presence, peace and love are heaven.—Baptist Record.

WHAT MEN LIKE IN WOMEN.

T. P. O'CONNOR IN CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Nature is too niggardly ever to make a perfect being. If there be even huge gifts in man or a woman, there is certain to be likewise equally great defects. The man is conscious of certain deficiencies in his makeup; and he seeks in a woman the qualities in which he is lacking. The timid man loves the woman of high spirit; the clinging and genuine woman adores the strong-willed, arrogant man who knows his own mind; and insists on the satisfaction of his own ambitions and desires. Often you see a dull man adore a woman simply because he recognizes in her the intelligence of which he feels the lack in himself; and often you see a dull woman adore a man simply because she is dazzled by his superior intelligence.

Beauty has often less influence than one would suppose; and this is especially the case with men and women who themselves are dowered with beauty. The handsomest man I ever knew—he was like a Greek god—married twice; in both cases he married plain women; and I never knew him to be in the least influenced by a woman who was not ugly. Similarly, he often sees beautiful women attracted by ill-favored, ungainly and even ugly men.

Similarly, I have rarely known a highly intellectual man who cared one brass farthing for the intelligence of women; that is to say, when it came not to respect or co-operation in work, but to love. The history of the world abounds in proofs of this. Is there a great intellectual man who is recorded as having married a great intellectual woman, with just a few exceptions here and there, such as Browning and Mrs. Browning; or if there be any such marriages, is there one of them that has turned out a great success? Carlyle's wife was in some respects almost as remarkable intellectually as he was himself; but their marriage is a terrible warning to all time against the marriage of two highly intellectual persons. Talleyrand married a beautiful but a stupid woman, and when some one asked how he could have chosen such a dull companion, he made the historic answer, "Elle me repose." Napoleon never could endure an intelligent woman; he told Mme. de Staël, who was a woman of genius, that his ideal woman was some Italian lady, and her claim to fame was, if I remember rightly, that she had brought some twenty-two children into the world. Josephine, Napoleon's first wife, was quite frivolous, and probably never read anything but novels and fashion articles; and Marie Louise, his second wife, was an extremely empty person. And so one might go on. What does all this mean, then, but that nature ordains that as a rule the great thing which attracts the sexes to each other is their contrast one to the other, and that this is due to the wise provision of nature, which is always seeking her main object, namely, the perpetuation and improvement of the race. If small people loved small people, then we would have a race of small people; if the dull only loved the dull, then there would be a great retrogression in the intellectual development of the race.

The second of the qualities in which women are different from men is unselfishness. From their earliest years and by a law of their being, mental and physical, women are taught the great doctrine and practice of self-restraint. They have not the voracious and merciless appetites of men; they are not brought up in the idea that they should be a law unto themselves. On the contrary, everywhere both nature and training bid them bear with patience a great yoke of submission and self-control. And thus it is that when it comes to the sacrifice of self woman always rises superior to man.

The third distinguishing quality of woman over man is her gentleness. It is again a law of nature that the male, who is the breadwinner—who has to go out into the primitive world to hunt for game, in the more complex world of civilization, to hunt for money—is a law of nature that the male should have some of the force and also the cruelty of the beast of prey. The woman seated at home with her children, has the gentlest arts of life to practice and to learn. These, then, are the three qualities which I most admire in women: beauty, unselfishness, gentleness.

Beets with vinegar sauce—Cook young beets until tender. Remove the skin and dice. Marinate with the following dressing: 1 cup moderately strong vinegar, 1 tablespoonful butter, 1 tablespoonful flour, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon sugar. Melt the butter, add the flour and seasonings and blend thoroughly. Add the vinegar gradually and boil 10 minutes. This is sufficient for 2 cups diced beets.

Cantaloupes for sweet pickle.—Cantaloupes make fine sweet pickles. Pare, slice and remove all seeds. Make a syrup of 3 cupfuls of vinegar to 1 of sugar. Put in the melon and cook until tender; seal in jars. Watermelons and peaches may be pickled in the same way.

DRINK PLENTY OF WATER.

Very few people drink water enough. There are few things that contribute as much to health, and to beauty, too, as plenty of pure water taken through the day. A good many authorities put the daily amount necessary to the best results at from three pints to two quarts, but comparatively little of this should be taken at the table with the food, as it interferes with digestion.

Unfortunately, in a great many towns and cities, the water supply is not what it should be, and to drink plentifully of impure water endangers the health. But there are none of you who are obliged to drink water which lant than the richest wine, and the strongest lever to lift from the rats of despondency. Many a poor overworked wife is pining for a word of sympathy from her husband. Just one word, one look, to show that the toil of weary hours are appreciated.

and the light reflected would more than recompense the giver. What is it that sends the miner into the darkened pit? into the mills and factories upon the farms and oceans?—not the love of gain, not to live for self; it is that when the days of toil are past, he can fly to some sympathetic arm for praise and encouragement.

CHEERFULNESS

Cultivate a cheerful disposition. Do not wrap up all your interest, all your thoughts and ambitions in self. Seek to please those with whom you associate, and above all strive to lighten the burdens and hours of the ones at home who call you husband, father or brother. Whatever be your disappointment or how heavy the cross you bear, do not go over the threshold of your home with a sullen, cheerless countenance. A cheerful word or a smile will fill your fireside with pleasantness, rekindle the fires of love in your wife's bosom and brighten the hopes and aspirations of your children. Cheerfulness is better than a doctor's medicine, and a cheerful home is an earthly heaven.
