CAP to fly again?

Local air patrol making comeback

By CLIFF COAN
Staff Writer

The Civil Air Patrol in Big Spring is experiencing a rebirth.

When Webb Air Force Base closed its gates in 1977, the Civil Air Patrol left with the Air Force pilots and crews. In March, however, the CAP began reorganizing in the Big Spring area, according to Public Information Officer Tom Donaldson.

Donaldson said "about 25" members now compose the Dragonfly Composite Squadron, as the Big Spring group is called. Included in that group are both male and female senior members (those 21 years old and older) and cadets (those 13 to 21 years old). Major Ed Smith serves as squadron commander.

The CAP, a civilian auxiliary of the United States Air Force, fills a threefold slot, according to Donaldson.

Most who know of the CAP think of it first in connection with its volunteer search and rescue operations, disaster relief and other emergency service missions. In 1981 alone, almost 18,000 hours were flown by the CAP as it located 660 of its "search objectives," and in the process was credited with saving 77 lives, according to a Texas Aeronautics Commission bulletin.

However, the CAP is also involved in aerospace education, which attempts to create a public awareness of the impact of aviation and space activities on all facets of society, Donaldson said. Lynn Hise of Big Spring is in charge of the Dragonfly squadron's aerospace activities.

The third aspect of the CAP is the cadet program, a youth group designed to develop and motivate its members through interests in aviation and in serving the public. Donaldson said the Dragonflies hope to expand their cadet program during the end of August with the beginning of the school year.

The cadet program stresses five major points: aerospace education, physical fitness, moral leadership, leadership and activities. The activity segment of the cadet program includes "anything from model rocketry to electronics to flight lessons," according to the TAC bulletin, along with flight orientation paid for by the Air Force and encampments, which include academy-type training on military installations.

Donaldson said members of the CAP don't have to be licensed pilots or have military experience, and all expenses incurred by members in connection with CAP activities are tax-deductible.

The next meeting of the Dragonfly Composite Squadron will be Aug. 5 at 7 p.m. in the old Webb Terminal Building.

Appraisal notices drawing questions

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

The Howard County Tax Appraisal office was bombarded with an estimated 190 telephone calls yesterday as concerned Howard County citizens checked on what their new property values meant. According to Ruth Mitchell of the appraisal office, 123 persons had also registered to discuss valuations with the appraisers who placed the values on their property.

However, the bulk of the contacts with the appraisal office were not "yelling about values," Chief Appraiser Gene Pereira said, but "asking about their tax dollars." Pereira said most of the people he had talked with had been cordial yet worried about taxes. "The most thing they're talking about is taxes, but I don't control taxes; I don't have anything to do with taxes," Pereira said.

The current practice at the appraisal office is for people to telephone if they have questions about their values as indicated on the appraisal notices from the office, Pereira said. People need to come by the office to log an appointment if they wish to discuss their valuations with an appraiser, he added.

The appraisal notices may be scaring some people since they show possible taxes based on last year's tax rate. "The taxing entities are not bound by what (tax rate) I put down," said Pereira, who by law must show a tax rate and estimated taxes. The various taxing entities in the county have already indicated their intentions of lowering tax rates due to expected increases in property valuations.

Some taxpayers may ask why the tax rate doesn't go lower, Pereira said, but the question remains of what people expect from their governing districts. "If people want good services, they have to pay for it," Pereira said. The chief appraiser admitted the oil companies are "going to be winners" from the new appraisals and lowered tax rates as well as the utilities, but many other firms' taxes would be up three times.

"Somewhere we must have hit it right," Pereira said, noting the lack of complaints from companies and persons whose values shot up considerably.

The appraisal office is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. to handle questions on appraisals.

Suit filed over Amarillo flooding

AMARILLO (AP) — As the cleanup from weekend flooding continued, a group of businessmen and residents filed a $22.5 million suit claiming that the developer of a man-made lake was responsible for the disaster.

The suit, filed Monday in district court, claims the Paramount Development Corp. had given assurances that Lake Lawrence would not overflow and that the land surrounding the lake was safe for development.

A mile-square area in the southwest section of this Panhandle city was flooded when nearly five inches of rain fell Thursday and Friday, causing the lake to overflow.

Some of the 245 lakefront residents, mostly nursing home patients who were evacuated by National Guardsmen, returned home Monday, City Manager John Stiff said.

He said the level of Lake Lawrence receded enough to permit some residents to return, although he didn't know how many.

"This is the first day the water has really been down enough for them to go back in," Stiff said. "The water is being pumped out, and every day it gets lower."

He said that 17 apartment buildings, 81 homes and 71 businesses were caught when the heavy rains pushed the lake into a 13- by 16-block area around a shopping center.

City officials have no damage estimate as yet from the flooding, Stiff said, although police had earlier feared that costs could exceed the $21 million in flood damage last Labor Day.

Stiff predicted all residents of the stricken area would be able to return to their dwellings by Sunday.

Integration plan spells closure for Ector high school

ODESSA (AP) — A 12-year school desegregation battle between the U.S. Justice Department and the Ector County Independent School District has ended with approval of a plan to close one high school and shift its students to two others.

The law suit seeks $20 million in punitive damages, $1 million for violation of a warranty that the area was suitable for development, and $1.5 million in actual damages. It also asks that Paramount be ordered to take action to prevent further flooding.

Paramount president George Kenneth McNabb Jr. declined to comment on the suit. Lawyers said the suit could be expanded to include the city of Amarillo and other property developers.

The plan, proposed jointly by the school district and the government, will close a predominately minority high school and transfer its 435 students to two predominately white high schools.

approved the settlement Monday.

The new Chamber will be installed Dec. 1, the same day that de la Madrid takes office.

Doctors say Hinckley should stay in hospital

WASHINGTON (AP) — If a federal judge follows the advice of John W. Hinckley's doctors, the man who wounded President Reagan will remain hospitalized because he's a danger to himself and actress Jodie Foster.

Sources said a medical team from St. Elizabeths Hospital wrote U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker on Monday that Hinckley has serious personality disorders and should not be released.

Parker refused to make the report public immediately, but the sources, familiar with the two-page letter of findings and 200 pages of medical records, confirmed the contents. They spoke on condition that they not be identified.

The judge has scheduled a hearing Monday to determine whether Hinckley should be let out of St. Elizabeths, the federal mental facility he entered June 21 after a jury found him innocent by reason of insanity.

Hinckley has not asked for his freedom and could decide to waive the release hearing he's entitled to under the law. If he remains at St. Elizabeths, either voluntarily or because Parker orders it, Hinckley could return to court every six months to ask for his release.

To let Hinckley out Parker must find, by a preponderance of the evidence, that he is not likely to injure himself or other persons due to mental illness.

According to the sources, the St. Elizabeths doctors said Hinckley is afflicted with the depression and personality disorders described in detail at his trial for shooting Reagan, White House Press Secretary James Brady and two law enforcement officers.

According to that trial testimony, that means Hinckley has fantasies, exhibits odd behavior, has an exaggerated feeling of self-importance and is socially isolated.

One doctor said at his trial that Hinckley has a lonely person's disorder, like some cowboys and librarians.

Twice since he's been in custody, Hinckley has attempted suicide — once by taking an overdose of the painkiller Tylenol and another time by hanging himself. The St. Elizabeths doctors believe this danger still exists.

Hinckley, in an interview after his trial, spoke about his current feelings for Miss Foster, the actress who rejected him.

"I don't think I would go stalking after her...if we were in the same room there might be some problem," he told Washington Post reporter Laura Kiernan, who he telephoned a week after the trial.

Hinckley left love letters under Miss Foster's door at Yale University, where she was a student, and talked to her on the telephone. She told him, politely, to stop calling.

Hinckley also wrote a letter just before the March 30, 1981 shooting, saying he would get Reagan in order to impress her and win her love.

In the conversation with Miss Kiernan, Hinckley also said, "I certainly would not be a danger to myself and I honestly don't think I've been a danger to society. I certainly would not be a danger to the president. I'll say that for sure."

Hinckley went to trial on a 13-count indictment that charged him with attempting to kill the president and assaulting, with intent to kill, all four of his victims.

Defense psychiatrists said Hinckley suffered from severe schizophrenia and could not distinguish reality from fantasy. He believed, the defense said, that by shooting the president, he could form a magical union with Miss Foster.

The prosecution doctors contended that Hinckley had personality disorders, but they did not prevent him from appreciating the wrongfulness of his act or conforming his conduct to requirements of the law.

Rightists win seats in Mexico voting

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The rightist National Action Party won 51 of the 100 seats reserved for the opposition in the Chamber of Deputies, according to the Federal Election Commission.

Enrique Olivares Santana, commission president, said that according to results from the July 4 elections the other 49 seats will be divided among four leftist parties.

The chamber has a total of 400 seats and the ruling Revolutionary Institutional Party holds 299 of them. The 100 seats reserved for the opposition were stipulated in an electoral reform by President Jose Lopez Portillo.

The commission president said the United Socialist Party of Mexico, which includes the Communist Party, will hold 17; the Mexican Democratic Party, 12; the Socialist Workers Party, 11, and the Popular Socialist Party, 10.

Olivares Santana said two of the parties competing in the elections will lose their official registration because they didn't attract the necessary 1.5 percent of the popular vote.

They are the Authentic Party of the Mexican Revolution, which supported victorious RIP presidential candidate Miguel de la Madrid, and the Social Democratic Party, formed 10 months ago by a group of RIP dissidents.

The new Chamber will be installed Dec. 1, the same day that de la Madrid takes office.

Reagan: U.S. to honor USSR grain contracts

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — President Reagan, courting farmers in the Midwest, says the United States must honor its grain contracts with the Soviet Union and re-establish its reliability as a supplier.

But even as Reagan was stressing the importance of honoring U.S. grain contracts, his aides were reacting coolly to Britain's decision to uphold its contracts to help build a Soviet natural gas pipeline.

The president made his point about U.S. grain agreements twice Monday as he addressed corn growers in Des Moines and then chatted with farmers under a broiling midsummer sun 41 miles from the Iowa capital in State Center, Iowa.

Today, he is flying to Hartford, Conn., to address the centennial convention of the Knights of Columbus. He also plans lunch with Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, the Vatican secretary of state, who came to the Connecticut capital for the meeting of the Roman Catholic organization.

While the president discussed grain with Iowa farmers, his aides were responding to Britain's decision to go along with other European allies who have promised to continue assistance for the proposed 3,500-mile pipeline.

Reagan has urged the allies to hold off pipeline-related trade with the Soviets until the Soviet-assisted martial law is relaxed in Poland. In June, he imposed sanctions against firms shipping U.S.-licensed technology to the Soviets for the pipeline.

Last Friday, Reagan said the United States, in response to developments in Poland, would continue to refrain from negotiating a long-term grain agreement with the Soviets.

But he acted to patch up relations with Midwest farmers by saying that the current grain agreement with the Soviet Union would be extended for one year and that there would be no limits on size of shipments.

At the 25th annual convention of the National Corn Growers Association, Reagan said that the one-year extension "would have the sanctity of a contract, ensuring U.S. farmers access to the Soviet market."

He said the importance of this was brought home by Gov. Charles Thone of Nebraska, who said, "There must be no question about our respect for contracts."

"We must restore confidence in U.S. reliability as a supplier," Reagan said.

Then, when he visited the 500-acre farm operated by Allan, Eric and Donald Dee, he said that grain embargo declared by the Carter administration in the wake of the Soviet's military move into Afghanistan in December, 1979, "has shaken faith in our neighbors throughout the world as to whether we're reliable or not as a supplier."

He told about 40 farmers seated at picnic tables that the United States must "restore that faith in us that if we've made a deal or a contract, it'll be a contract and we'll keep it."

In London meanwhile, the government said four British companies were told to ignore the U.S. opposition to the Soviet pipeline.

"The embargo and the terms in which it has been imposed is an attempt to interfere with existing contracts and is an unacceptable extension of American extrajurisdictional jurisdiction in a way which is repugnant in international law," British Trade Secretary Lord Cockfield told the House of Lords on Monday. He said the government had no wish to escalate the dispute with Washington, but British interests had to be defended.

The farmyard in State Center, Iowa, where Reagan spoke with farmers had been rigged with a sophisticated sound system to amplify the president's remarks for the audience and a small group of reporters.

Kenya rebels still hold out

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Rebel airmen here defied an ultimatum to surrender, seized houses in a Nairobi slum and told residents they were prepared to "fight to the death."

Scattered firing was reported in the Kibera shantytown and other areas around the capital. But most sources said the main force of the attempt Sunday to overthrow President Daniel Arap Moi had been crushed.

Other rebel airmen were seen discarding their camouflage jackets and blue uniform pants and fleeing into the bush.

Three truckloads of corpses were seen leaving Kibera, but witnesses could not give the number of bodies or say how many might be military personnel and how many civilians. The Nairobi mortuary said 90 bodies had been brought in since the attempted coup Sunday morning, but other sources put the death toll higher than 110.

A government spokesman said Monday that 71 air force personnel had been killed, including 30 at the Eastleigh base, and 300 had been arrested. The newspaper The Nation said government troops arrested more than 1,000 people in massive mop-up operations after the attempt by junior air force officers to overthrow Moi and the government.

Hospitals reported they treated more than 500 wounded, most of them civilians, and said more than 200 were in serious condition.

Moi's military commanders had given the rebels until noon Monday to surrender or be treated "ruthlessly." The government extended the deadline until noon today (4 a.m. CDT), but a clergyman with contacts at the Embakasi Air Force Base eight miles south of Nairobi said pro-government troops entered the base Monday pretending to join the revolt, then shot rebels still holding out there and secured the base.

There was no official confirmation of the report. Sporadic resistance was also reported at the Eastleigh base, the air force headquarters near Embakasi. But the holdouts did not appear to be a threat to the government.

The government continued a 6 p.m.-to-7 a.m. curfew in Nairobi and Nanyuki, the site of the country's third air base 120 miles north of the capital, for the second night Monday. There was no indication when it might be lifted.

The government also closed the University of Nairobi, charging that some students supported the rebellion and took part in the wholesale looting that devastated shopping areas of Nairobi Sunday.

U.S. says Soviets lead in arms sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union, not the United States, is by far the world's largest supplier of arms to the developing Third World, according to a State Department report.

The report, based on "conservative U.S. intelligence estimates," said over the last 10 years the Soviet Union delivered 74,000 tanks, aircraft, warships, missiles and other major weapons of war to nations in the Middle East, Asia, Latin America and Africa.

That compares with some 44,000 delivered by the United States, the report said.

It depicts the Soviet Union as escalating arms deliveries in the latter half of the decade from 1972 until now.

"In some weapons categories, Soviet deliveries have exceeded those of the United States for all or most of the decade," the State Department said.

"In the other categories, the Soviets surpassed U.S. deliveries by the mid-1970s," it said. "Today the Soviets exceed U.S. levels in most weapons categories considered in this report," with the exception of certain types of warships.

The report acknowledges that when arms sales to the Third World are measured by dollar values, the United States is ahead of the Soviet Union by a margin of roughly 2 to 1.

Navy ends routine discharge of pregnant sailors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy is ending its practice of automatically discharging women who are pregnant in an effort to keep more of its technically trained female sailors.

The new policy brings the Navy in line with the Army, Air Force and Marine Corps, which consider pregnancy discharge requests on a case-by-case basis.

In a circular released this week, the Navy listed several categories of enlisted and officer women who it said will have to demonstrate "overriding and compelling factors" to justify discharges because of pregnancy.

Among them are women who receive:

- Government-paid education entailing an obligation to remain in uniform for a minimum time.

- Extensive training in such areas as flight or medical residency.
- Special compensation such as enlistment or aviation bonuses.

Women with ratings or skills which "justify retention," must also comply with the new restrictions, according to the circular.

"This policy will help to ensure that the Navy retains women in whom it has a substantial investment or who possess skills required by the Navy," the circular said.

The Navy also ruled that uniformed women who become pregnant while at overseas stations lacking adequate housing and medical facilities will be transferred back to the United States until six months after giving birth.

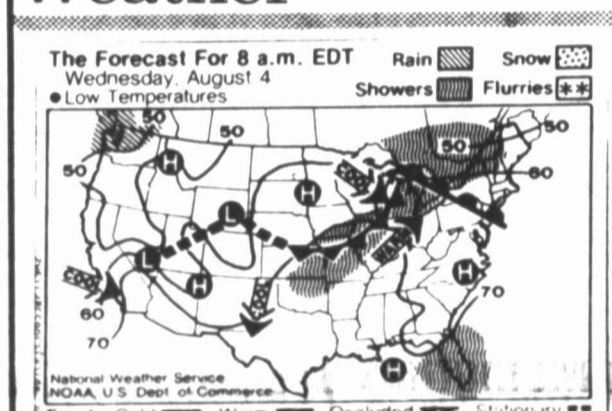

Then, the circular said, these women normally will return abroad to complete their overseas tours.

Most of the Navy's 37,000 enlisted women and 5,700 female officers serve ashore because Congress has barred them from assignment to combat ships.

Some of their overseas posts are remote. For example, 35 Navy women arrived in April at Diego Garcia, a key U.S. island base in the Indian Ocean.

Women serve in such jobs as radio operator, electronics technician, air traffic controller, storekeeper, hospital corpsman, postal and disbursing clerks.

Funeral for 44 French children held

CREPEY-EN-VALOIS, France (AP) — President Francois Mitterrand and Premier Pierre Mauroy lead the mourners today at the funeral of 44 children killed in the fiery bus wreck last weekend. But "their presence will not bring back the children," said the mother of four of the victims, her face swollen by tears and sleepless nights.

A fifth child of Monique and Jacy Syx, 13-year-old Eric, returned to his parents' arms at twilight Monday outside their rundown home in a housing project in this ancient town 40 miles north of Paris.

The bodies of his four younger brothers and sisters — Christian, 12, Valerie, 11, Patrick, 10, and Natalie, 9 — were with those of the other dead in plain pine coffins in a nearby gymnasium. Only six were identified, and the Syx children were not among them.

The Syxes were among 107 underprivileged children, 6 to 15 years old, from Crepey-en-Valois and five surrounding communities who boarded two buses Friday night for a summer camp in the Alps.

Some six hours later, a West German tour bus braked suddenly on a rain-slicked highway 200 miles south of Paris, setting off a chain-reaction collision in which the two camp-bus buses and seven other vehicles piled up. Fifty-three people were killed, including 44 children, two camp counselors and the two drivers aboard one of the camp buses.

That bus exploded, but another counselor and 15 children escaped through a rear emergency exit. The second camp bus caught fire, but no one aboard was hurt.

"I saw them all die, my brothers, my sisters, everybody," said Eric, sitting in his mother's lap in their small living room crowded with mourners, pictures of the children and religious statues.

"We were sleeping and suddenly there was a loud boom and there was fire all around us."

Valerie and Patrick and Christian were in the front of the bus and couldn't get out. There was a fire in the middle of the aisle.

"I was in the back of the bus and passed by little Natalie. She was on the floor behind me and I could not get her up and everyone was pushing and they were saying, 'Save yourself, move now, get off this bus.'"

"I brought this home for you," Eric added to an older sister and handed her an electronic game he had been given after the accident.

Conferees go to work on tax increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a last-minute blitz from business lobbyists, a House-Senate conference committee is beginning its work on a compromise version of the largest tax increase in the nation's history.

Eight House members and seven senators face the task of agreeing in an election year on how to boost taxes by at least $98 billion over the next three years in an effort to reduce federal borrowing and bring interest rates down.

The conference will be headed by Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., who, as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, is responsible for much of what went into the $98.5-billion tax increase passed by the Senate.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., whose House Ways and Means Committee decided against writing its own version for fear a tax increase will alienate voters this fall, heads the House delegation.

The Reagan administration supports the tax increase. The new taxes in the Senate-passed bill would be split about 50-50 between businesses and individuals. More than half the individual share would come from tighter enforcement of the tax laws, including imposition of a 10-percent withholding tax on interest and dividends.

More than 55 million smokers would face a doubled federal tax on cigarettes, 16 cents a pack; the tax on telephone service would triple, to 3 percent and the deductions allowed for medical expenses and casualty losses would be restricted.

But Dole and Rostenkowski were committed in advance to easing the medical-expense cutback, indicating the conference might allow a deduction for any expense exceeding 5 percent of adjusted gross income. The current threshold is 3 percent.

As the committee got its papers in order to start the conference, representatives of various business interests were busy spreading their messages on Capitol Hill:

LUFKIN (AP) — The body of an 8-year-old autistic boy who had been missing for three days was found floating in a pond about three hours after the formal search for the child was suspended.

A youngster spotted the body floating in the pond in his family's yard.

Studios sue cable TV firm

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Nine motion picture studios have filed a copyright infringement suit against a suburban Washington cable TV firm — in the first such court case and the first salvo in a nationwide crackdown on cable operators.

The suit, filed late Friday in the U.S. District Court here, alleges the Arlington Telecommunications Corp., known as ARTEC, has since 1979 repeatedly violated federal laws governing the re-transmission of so-called distant television stations.

ARTEC owns and operates a cable TV system serving Arlington County, Va., across the Potomac River from the District of Columbia.

The suit alleges that the firm violated the Copyright Act of 1976, which requires cable operators to pay a certain percentage of their annual gross revenues for a

Oil doom not here yet

Recently, there has been a lot of worried speculation about the effect the world oil glut is having on Texas and the Permian Basin.

"The recession has come to Texas!" state officials are saying. The state whose economy was leading the nation is feeling the economic pains other areas are feeling.

Yesterday the Associated Press ran a story about economic problems facing Midland-Odessa. A catch-phrase in the article was "oil boom to oil gloom."

According to the article, unemployment in both cities has increased dramatically and many of the Northerners who came down in search of jobs are leaving the area — many of them returning North.

One quote from a Midland independent driller and producer was a shocker. He said: "If something unexpected happens — if the Saudis start pumping lots of oils — we won't see any drilling here and all these silver buildings will have to be made into grain silos."

WE THINK it is a little bit early to start talking about the economic collapse of the Permian Basin. Certainly the area is experiencing an economic slowdown, but there are visible reasons for it.

Many of the oil producing and service firms are facing a critical time, but others are digging in determined to weather the storm.

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association blames uncertainty in Washington about taxes and the instability of the Middle East situation. They also point out the urgent need for a national energy policy to deal with this problem and problems in the future.

But they for one are optimistic about the area's ability to bounce back. The Texas economy is still in strong shape compared with other parts of the nation. That overall good condition will help the state deal with the recession's invasion here.

Soul searching in Washington

The latest publicity concerning rumors of congressional shenanigans with Capitol Hill pages and drugs has caused some serious soul searching in Washington. There has been an outcry for greater supervision of young pages in their off hours. Right now these 15- and 16-year-olds are more or less on their own, when they are not working, and nobody seems responsible for them. They live where they want to and do what they want, which can get them in all kinds of trouble.

While Congress is prepared to change the rules concerning supervision of the pages, no one has gotten to the real root of the problem — and that is who will supervise the legislators? It's quite clear that if you transplant 535 middle-aged congressmen and women to a big city like Washington, and give them $60,000 a year to spend, and don't oversee their leisure time, some of them are bound to get into trouble.

THESE ARE several solutions to the problem that will guarantee that these people will not be left to their own devices after work hours.

One suggestion is that Congress build male and female dormitories on the mall where they would have to live while they are in session. The dormitories would provide television, game rooms, lectures and other recreational activities to keep the congressmen's and women's minds busy during their off hours. Housemothers would be hired to run the dorms and make sure they made their beds and did their homework.

Dating would be permitted, but only in the public rooms downstairs.

On weekdays all legislators would have to be in bed by 10 o'clock with lights out by 10:30, except during filibusters and special occasions such as the State of the Union Address by the President.

Those missing a bed check would have to appear in front of the House Ethics Committee, who would have the authority to hand out punishment which could be anything from forbidding them to go on "Meet the Press" for a month, to not allowing them to fly home on weekends to campaign for re-election.

Anyone caught having alcohol or pot in the dorms could lose his free mail privileges for a month. If the offense is repeated he would be suspended from Congress, until he brought a note from his constituents saying he would never do it again.

SO LIFE will not get boring in Washington, chaperoned dances in the House dining room will be held on Saturday evenings with dates from the National Organization of Women's Rights based in from the Maryland and Virginia chapters.

If we are to have congressmen and congresswomen (and there is some question whether they provide services that others couldn't do much more cheaply), we have to see that while away from home, they live in a healthy, supervised environment.

They may squawk at the restrictions in the beginning. But in the long run they'll be grateful that we kept them from all the temptations Washington dangles in front of those who make the laws of the land.

Advice for drug addict

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Will you pray for me? I am addicted to drugs and lots of other things that are destroying me. I would like to give my life to Christ but something keeps holding me back. — S.S.F.

DEAR S.S.F.: When I read your letter I asked myself what it might be that would be holding you back from giving your life to Christ. Ultimately, I believe it is Satan, who has you in his grip and does not want you to come to Christ. But Satan may be using various reasons to hold you back.

For example, you may be afraid that if you give your life to Christ, you will still not be able to fight your habits and nothing will be different. Or you may secretly wonder if you really want to give up your habits and become a more responsible person. Or you may fear what God will want to do with you if you decide to follow him. Or there may be many other reasons.

Whatever they are, I want you to realize that the problem is not with God! Jesus said, "Come to me, all you who are weary and burdened, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn from me, for I am gentle and humble in heart, and you will find rest for your souls" (Matthew 11:28-29). God loves you, and Christ wants to help you get free of the grip of your habits. Don't let anything — whatever it might be — keep you from him. Right now I pray that you will get by yourself, get on your knees, and tell God that you need him and you want Christ to come into your heart. Jesus promised to come into your heart, and he does not lie.

Then when you come to Christ, seek out other Christians who can help you. In many cities there are Christian groups that especially can help someone with your problem — often consisting of people who have had the same sort of habits you have had. You need their spiritual and practical support. God bless you as you turn to Christ and find in him the help and hope you need.

Thoughts on 'born again'

Dear Editor: I wish to convey my thoughts on born again.

In John 3:3 Jesus told Nicodemus "Except a man be born again he cannot see the Kingdom of God." This is a spiritual birth. For by sin we are spiritually dead to God.

In Matt 19:17 when Jesus said "If thou wilt enter into life keep the commandments," we must understand that Jesus is not talking to us, but to someone that was still under the Law. We are not under the law anymore. Roman 10:4 says Jesus is the end of the Law. We are now under grace.

Ephesians 2:8-9 "For by grace are ye saved, through faith. And that not of yourselves, it is a gift of God: Not of works lest any man should boast."

As for Nahum 1:19 there is no Nahum 1:19 Mr. Stevens must have been confused when he jotted that scripture down. I do agree however that there will be a new heaven and earth.

Revelation 21:1 "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. The passed away does not mean this earth will be remodeled, but that it will be destroyed and a new earth will come in its stead.

II Peter 3:12 "Looking for and hastening unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with a ferment heat."

We should not look lightly upon the scriptures, but take them for what they say.

Oh yes! The Bible is not a book of prophecy. Only a part of it is prophecy.

The first five books of the old Testament are law.

Joshua through Esther are history. Job through Song of Solomon are poetry.

Isiah through Malachi are prophecy.

AThere is some prophecy in the gospels and Revelation is a book of prophecy. But it is misleading to say the Bible is a book of prophecy.

Around the Rim

By RICHARD HORN

So long, moose

Watch me pull a rabbit outta my hat!

— Bullwinkle

Not long ago, Big Spring pulled off a similar magic trick by getting Dallas TV station WFAA back on the local cable system. Is it worth suggesting that we try to keep NBC from canceling the "Bullwinkle" show from its schedule?

Probably not. Most people are probably thinking, "I didn't know it was still on the air." It is considered a rather dated cartoon since it has been on the air longer than just about anything else on Saturday mornings. For me, that was one of the best things about it.

To be honest, I haven't watched it regularly in years. Maybe if I, and others who are equally unhappy about NBC's plans, had tuned in it wouldn't have been placed under the ax. I did to try to watch recently after hearing about he cancellation. It's still enjoyable after all these years.

We're talking about a lot more than just a dense moose and a flying squirrel here. If "Bullwinkle" is canceled, wave bye-bye to Dudley Do-Right, "Fractured Fairy Tales" and the adventures of Mr. Peabody and his boy, Sherman.

SO THE NBC Peacock is going to commit bloody murder on these characters from our childhood. Where are Jerry Falwell and his television watchdogs when you really need them?

Sleeping late on Saturdays it seems. The animation wasn't what you would call prize-winning, but the content of "Bullwinkle" is heads and tales over "Thundarr the Barbarian," "Super Friends," "Goldie Gold and Action Jack" and "The Kid Super Power Hour."

"Bullwinkle" was built on puns. Like all puns, the were stupid and did nothing but make you groan. You can't consider something like the Bumbling Bros. Circus (owned by Hugo and Igo Bumbling) great comedy, but Saturday morning is not a comedy showcase. The circus featured lion-tamer Borsi Badenov who's act consisted of taming a toothless lion — the lion of least resistance, as Bullwinkle put it.

Ah, Boris and Natasha. How will we live without them. They showed up everywhere in every conceivable disguise. Recently, Boris could be seen as an Indian chief — Chief Skunk-Who-Walk-Like-A-Man.

In that episode, the Indians looked to be ready to boil Rocky and Bullwinkle alive for dinner, but one little indian said that the networks didn't permit even the mention of cannibalism. Rocky, in his little voice, corrected the indian by pointing out that you can talk about cannibalism, just not show it.

The indian replied, "That's the network for you. All talk and no do."

And how will we get along without William Conrad, the narrator of the Rocky and Bullwinkle segment who told us that the next adventure would take place at the Panama Canal and be titled "I'm Dreaming of a Wide Isthmus."

THE DALLAS TIMES Herald reported that NBC was canceling the show because, according to a network official, "Today's kids haven't really caught on to the show."

Apparently, "Bullwinkle" is to be replaced with more episodes of "The Jetsons." Talk about your dated cartoons! But it's a show that kids can watch with half an eye open. I think that's the way TV networks want all their shows to be viewed.

It would be exciting going to head-to-head with the NBC Peacock. Exciting, but probably a losing battle. Come to think of it, Bullwinkle never really got that rabbit out of his hat, did he?

THE ICA BRIEFING paper lays out

Jack Anderson

Spending for VOA

WASHINGTON — Two weeks ago, President Reagan announced plans to modernize the "old and deteriorating" equipment with which the Voice of American beams news and commentary to much of the world, particularly to countries in the Soviet orbit.

The upgrading is necessary to overcome Soviet jamming of VOA broadcasts, which are often the only source of objective information in those lands.

The White House declined to reveal how much this modernization program will cost. But my associate Andy Badwar has seen an internal briefing paper prepared for the president, giving details of the proposed expenditures.

The confidential document, sent to the White House by the International Communication Agency, puts the situation in stark terms: Unless VOA gets about $300 million for construction and land acquisition, it will be a bush-league operation compared to Radio Moscow's high-powered propaganda operations.

Quoting from an eyes-only memo from ICA Director Charles Wick to White House aides Ed Meese and James Baker, the briefing paper states:

"Without assurances that VOA will be able to operate with state-of-the-art equipment from sites in Germany, the United Kingdom, Morocco and Sri Lanka, we will no longer be a principal competitor in the international broadcast business, a field already dominated by the Soviet Union."

The Soviets now have at least 39 500-kilowatt transmitters on the air, the paper explains. "In addition to booming their broadcasts wherever they please, their power is beginning to crowd weaker signals such as our own from nearby facilities," the document warns.

several suggestions for overcoming "critical gaps in our coverage" around the world. Here are some of them:

— VOA is negotiating for a site on Grand Cayman Island in the Caribbean, from which it could send medium-wave broadcasts to Central America.

— Negotiations are also under way for transmitter sites in Sri Lanka, from which VOA broadcasts could reach all of China, large parts of southern and western Asia and Soviet Central Asia.

— The relay station in Tangier would be upgraded by the installation of 10 500-kw and three 250-kw transmitters, antennas and a power plant, at a cost of $150 million. Tangier beams to Eastern Russia, the Caucasus, the Persian Gulf area and central Africa.

— The Munich relay station would get eight 500-kw transmitters with antennas, at a cost of $45 million. The present equipment, "manufactured before World War II, operates with vacuum tubes," the briefing paper notes, adding with understatement: "It is no longer reliable."

The proposed modernization of the Munich facility "would assure VOA of a strong signal as far as Soviet Central Asia and Western Siberia in the U.S.S.R.; it would reach Pakistan and Afghanistan, to which Pushtu language broadcasts will soon be initiated, and Iran in Southwest Asia, the entire Saudi peninsula including Oman and the two Yemens, and Iran in Southwest Asia, the entire Saudi peninsula including Oman and the two Yemens, and the strategic Horn of Africa."

Negotiations with West Germany may be tricky, the document warns, because the proposal would involve allocation of new frequencies in an already crowded broadcast band, and would also draw fire from leftists. But the briefing paper concludes that "Bonn's response would probably be positive."

FALSE ECONOMY: Voluntary compliance is the pillar of the American tax system. But it will begin crumbling under the weight of severe reductions in the Internal Revenue Service's free taxpayer-assistance program, according to an unpublished report of a Senate Governmental Affairs subcommittee.

The report, reviewed by my reporter Michael Binstein, warns that the budget cuts will result in "huge revenue loss" to the Treasury. The proposed cut of 10.2 percent in the assistance program's funding would actually reduce by 60 percent the number of taxpayers who get help with their returns.

Though the taxpayers who need assistance are mainly low-income Americans, the potential revenue loss from improperly filed tax returns would be significant.

Interestingly, IRS Commissioner Roscoe Egger is the source of the Senate committee's conclusion that it would be penny-wise and pound-foolish to cripple the assistance program. A mere 1 percent reduction in compliance costs the government $4 billion a year, Egger estimated in a memo only last October. Yet by March of this year, Egger had changed his tune. He told the subcommittee the budget cuts could be absorbed without adverse impact.

EXECUTIVE MEMO: As head of the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control, J. Peter Grace is charged with responsibility for streamlining government's operations in 35 areas. Among these is the Environmental Protection Agency's operation. Grace's group will suggest ways the EPA can work more efficiently, thus saving the taxpayers money. Meanwhile, W.R. Grace & Co., of which J. Peter is chief executive officer, is being sued in Massachusetts by families of four persons who died of leukemia which the families charge was contracted from drinking water contaminated by Grace's company. The firm has denied the accusations.

Expatriate Lebanese seek their relatives

An AP News Special
By SAMUEL KOO
Associated Press Writer

Damascus and Beirut demanded "presents." "The Lebanese people leaving Damascus for home are routinely told by taxi or bus drivers to take cartons of foreign cigarettes or $10 bills for these boys," he said. With Beirut closed to air traffic, many travel through Syria. But Lebanese Christians prefer the sea route via Cyprus because the ferries land them in Christian territory.

'We have sent telegram after telegram, and heard nothing.'

A Lebanese businesswoman from Marseille, France, said she paid $2,000 to a broker to get a visa for another Arab country for a sister in Beirut.

"A lot of other people have done it through these brokers who hang around the consulates," she said, asking not to be identified. "You just have to pick a right one with right connections."

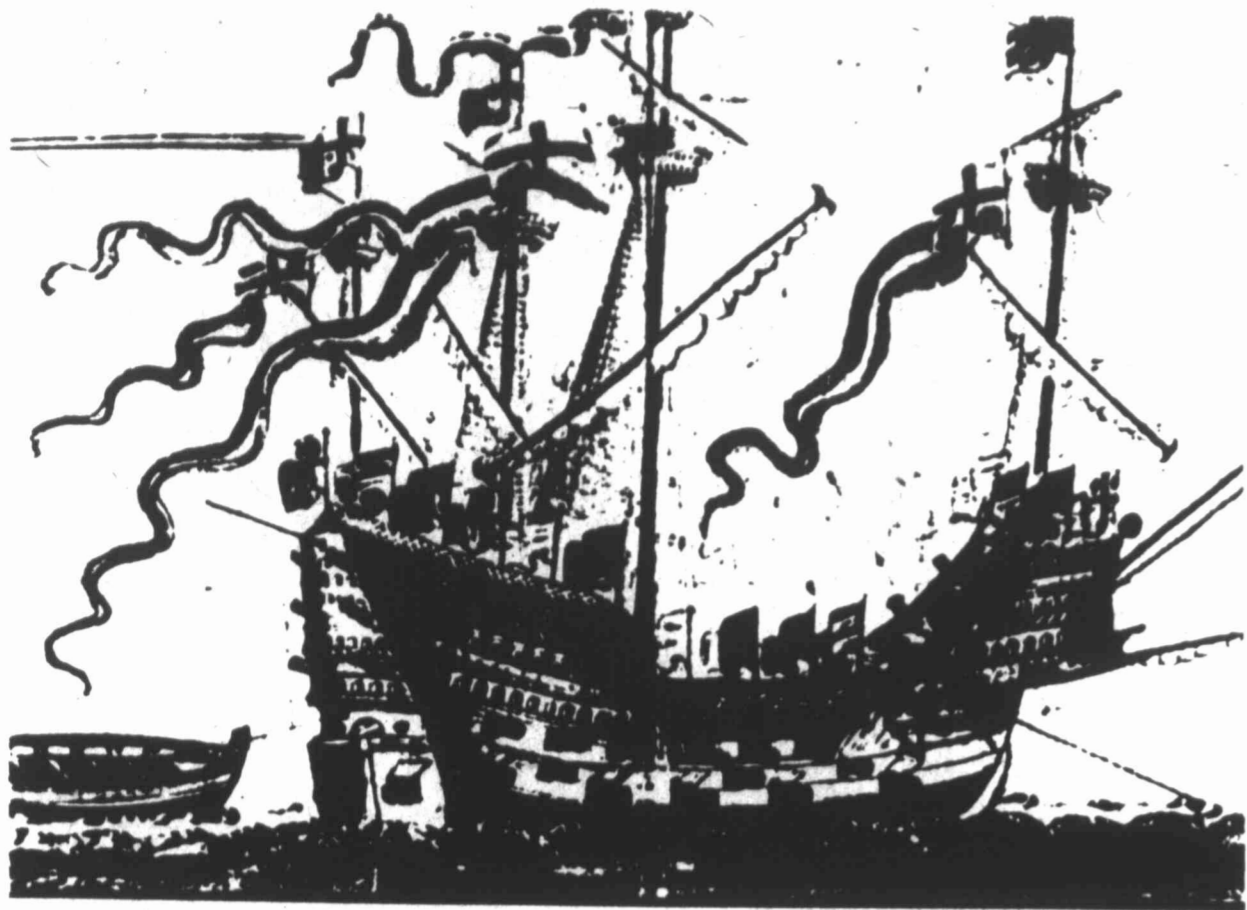

As the artillery and naval bombardment continued, a group of Moslems knelt to pray at one corner of the sun-baked steel deck of the 225-ton converted military landing ship.

"I had to come back to see my parents...they phoned me to say bombs and rockets were falling all over the place," said Artine Tachdjian, a 56-year-old electrical engineer who emigrated to Toronto, Canada, four years ago.

"Because of people like Mr. Kissinger who think of the interest of only the big powers at the expense of small countries like Lebanon, I had to use a year's saving for this trip."

Karin Kabalan, the ferry's 29-year-old captain, said he felt "genuinely sorry" for the Liban's poor accommodations and the increased fare.

"I asked for several military-type movable toilets because we have only one aboard for 200 people, but my superiors turned me down," he said.

UP SHE COMES — This 16th-century drawing depicts the Mary Rose, flagship of King Henry VIII, sunk in 1545. Since the wreck was discovered 17 years ago, more than 25,000 dives have been made to retrieve parts of the ship. This fall, divers hope to raise the ship's hull.

Efforts under way to raise sunken 16th-century flagship

PORTSMOUTH, England — Henry VIII's 16th-century flagship, the Mary Rose, a time capsule of Tudor life lying under 40 feet of murky water off Portsmouth Harbor, comes home from battle this fall — 437 years late.

Seventeen years after the wreck of the Mary Rose was located, Prince Charles last month launched the final stage of what is one of the most ambitious underwater archaeological projects ever undertaken.

After more than 25,000 dives that have produced 14,000 artifacts — including such items as a rare 16th-century musical instrument called a shawm — preliminary work has begun on raising the hull of the 130-foot warship.

"This is a moment of history," Margaret Rule, archaeological director of the Mary Rose Trust, said at a recent briefing. "We have taken out all the contents and what we shall be bringing ashore is the empty hull."

Financial problems remain, but Mrs. Rule said if all goes according to plan the wreck will be towed into Portsmouth Harbor this fall, possibly as early as mid-October.

In the most surgical aspect of the mission, divers are attaching a giant heavy-lifting frame to the delicate, waterlogged wood.

Taking care not to cause unnecessary damage, the divers are drilling holes in the hull for the 80 cables, which will lift the ship underwater onto a steel cradle. It will be transferred to shore by tug.

"She will be thoroughly corseted internally and externally," said Mrs. Rule.

Once raised, the hull will lie in a specially constructed drydock alongside another great warship, Lord Nelson's HMS Victory, for conservation and reconstruction.

The Mary Rose, 91-gun pride of King Henry's fleet, sank in 1545 during a battle with the French off Portsmouth Harbor. Historians still don't know whether the ship was hit by enemy cannon-fire or sank because of overcrowding.

Fewer than 40 of the 700 crewmen are believed to have survived, and Henry is said to have heard the cries of his drowning men as he watched the disaster from behind the harbor walls.

After decades of futile attempts to find the wreckage, it was finally located in 1965 by Alexander McKee, a Portsmouth author and amateur diver.

The same year, the Mary Rose Trust was set up with Prince Charles as its president. The prince has himself made nine dives to the wreckage.

Twelve professional divers, assisted over the years by some 500 volunteers, lifted artifacts from the Mary Rose, sometimes working in poor visibility of no more than two yards on the silt-filled seabed. One diver has been killed during the 12-year operation.

Some of the artifacts have been put on exhibit, but most are kept in an old warehouse in suburban Portsmouth. Each item is washed, waxed or freeze-dried, numbered, labeled and placed in a clear, waterproof plastic bag.

Among the 16th-century artifacts are bows and arrows, guns, pocket sundials, spoons, razor handles, game boards, cooking pots, books, clothing and an ominous-looking 15-inch syringe used in the treatment of venereal disease.

Perhaps the most valuable item — although no price has been placed on it — is the shawm, a double-reed wind instrument resembling an oboe. Experts believe only two other examples of the wooden instrument exist in Europe.

One of the last items recovered was a bronze bell, dated 1510, the year Mary Rose is believed to have been commissioned.

"The Mary Rose represents a day in the life of Tudor England," said site founder Alexander McKee. "You cannot get that sort of information from libraries."

Although confident the technical difficulties of raising the hull can be overcome — the ship is lying on its side at an angle of 60 degrees — the trust says it is still $1.75 million short of the $7 million needed to complete the project.

The project's development director, Ian Dahl, said the coming months would be crucial.

"We are coming to the most expensive part of the operation," he said.

The ship will form the centerpiece of a new, 12-acre maritime museum scheduled to open next spring. "But conservation work on the timbers will go into the 21st century," Mrs. Rule said.

Gold prices are up; dollar is depressed

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar declined against most major currencies in early European trading today, but not as sharply as it did Monday when American banks announced a half-percent cut in the prime rate. Gold prices opened sharply higher, boosted by the cut in interest rates.

The cut to 15 percent in major U.S. banks' prime lending rate, the interest charged a bank's best customers, helped boost gold prices in New York by up to $11 dollars an ounce Monday. It also depressed the dollar because lower U.S. interests rates make it cheaper to borrow money elsewhere.

The dollar's retreat began in Tokyo, where trading ends before it starts in Europe. Weakening for the second straight day, the dollar closed at 255.25 yen, slightly down from 255.75 yen on Monday.

Market sources in Tokyo said there was demand for dollars from Japanese oil refineries and trading houses, but foreign and Japanese banks sold to adjust surpluses.

In London, the dollar's decline eased against the British pound, which cost $1.7580 in early trading, compared with $1.7525 at the close Monday.

Early dollar rates against other key currencies compared with late rates Monday:

- 2.4213 West German marks, down from 2.4350.
- 2.0624 Swiss francs, down from 2.0682.
- 6.7387 French francs, down from 6.7692.
- 2.6745 Dutch guilders, down from 2.6945.
- 1.358.50 Italian lire, down from 1,364.60.
- 1.2487 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2483.

Gold opened in London at $356.375 an ounce, nearly $7 higher than Monday's closing price of $349.625. In Zurich, gold opened at $355.625, jumping from $351.875 at the close Monday.

Prices held steady around the new higher levels in later deals, with gold trading in the $355 to $355.50 range.

"I can't see prices going any higher during the day unless we get some further fresh news," commented one London dealer. "But I think they are going to stay very steady at these levels."

London's five main bullion houses set the mid-morning "fixing" at $355.50.

Gold closed in Hong Kong at $357.18 an ounce, up $11.13 from last Saturday. Markets there were closed Monday for a holiday.

Salvadoran parties eye unity pact

SAN SALVADOR (AP) — Leaders of two rightist political parties and the moderate Christian Democrats are ready to sign a document that creates a unified stand within El Salvador's ruling coalition on such issues as land reform and human rights, says presidential spokesman Alfonso Salazar.

The pact includes a call for "consolidation and perfecting of the agrarian reform," a joint declaration aimed at reducing human rights abuses, a statement on the parties' commitment to defeating leftist rebels and guidelines for general elections in the country, Salazar said Monday night.

He said the agreement does not set an election date, however.

President Alvaro Magana, referring recently to the pact, said it would be a "minimum platform" of agreement among the parties that make up the U.S.-backed government.

The United States has demanded continuation of El Salvador's land reform program and improvement in human rights as conditions for continuing economic and military aid. In a bid to continue this aid, the Reagan administration certified to Congress last week that progress had been made on both points.

The pact to be signed today is aimed at healing deep divisions in the four-month-old Salvadoran government — between Christian Democrats and the country's rightist parties, notably the far-right Nationalist Republican Alliance and the Party of National Reconciliation.

The five right-wing groups won a plurality in the March elections, which were boycotted by leftist guerrillas and their supporters, and argue that this entitles them to control all government posts.

The Christian Democrats, who shared power in the civilian-military junta replaced by the National Assembly, have charged the rightist parties with sabotaging land reforms.

The rightist parties criticize the Christian Democrats for maintaining a close relationship with the U.S. Embassy, which they say is engaging in economic blackmail by demanding that Christian Democrats remain in the government.

Human rights groups say at least 35,000 people have been killed during the 33-month-old civil war between the army and leftist guerrillas.

In another development, the Defense Ministry denied government troops had detained an American woman who was reported taken away by uniformed men on a city street last week, or her father, who also has been missing for a week.

Patty Cuellar, 24, and Mauricio Cuellar, 55, both were active at one time in a Salvadoran human rights organization.

A U.S. Embassy official said he had confirmed reports that men dressed in olive green uniforms seized Miss Cuellar in western San Salvador, but the Defense Ministry said authorities were searching for the woman and her father "to clarify the situation."

Mediator is divorce specialist

Dear Abby

Witchcraft rumors are still flying

The frustration and animosity leading up to a divorce is often increased by the procedure in which each partner selects a lawyer whose purpose is to get the best terms possible for his or her client. "This is an antagonistic rather than a cooperative method," according to a panel of divorce specialists at the recent meeting of the American Psychiatric Association.

An alternate procedure was presented by moderator, Richard G. Abell, MD of New York City and a panel of six specialists. With the help of a mediator, the divorcing couple cooperatively formulates their own separation contract and submits it separately for approval to his or her own lawyer before filing it with the court.

A comprehensive divorce program replaces "the adversary procedure" with mediation, combining legal remedies with mental health counseling to resolve key issues concerning division of personal and real property, support, custody, and plans for the future.

The mediator role requires the skill of a counselor combined with an understanding of the dynamics of mediation plus enough knowledge of the law to cooperate appropriately with members of the legal profession, according to the experts.

Daughters of alcoholics suffer also

Alcoholism is a family disease, according to Matilda M. Rice, MD who presented information on "Mothers and Daughters in the Alcoholic Family" at the recent meeting of the American Psychiatric Association.

Dr. Rice, a Westbury, Long Island, New York psychiatrist, has found that daughters of alcoholic women often lack confidence and self-esteem as much as their mothers did, and become alcoholics because they introject mother's image.

Dr. Rice also reports that when the father is the alcoholic member of the family, daughters often prefer him to their non-drinking mothers, and frequently take on the responsibility of caring for him.

Brienne's maternal grandparents are Mr and Mrs. Clifton Reed of Sterling City Rt. Her paternal grandparents are Mr and Mrs. J.W. Fryar of Knott.

DEAR ABBY: I just received a mimeographed letter in the mail telling me not to buy products made by Procter & Gamble. It was signed, "A Good Christian." It said the Procter & Gamble Co. supports a religious cult dedicated to witchcraft and the devil. As proof they sent a picture of the P&G trademark insignia — a man's face in a half-moon with 13 stars, a symbol of Satan.

The letter stated that the owner of Procter & Gamble appeared on "The Merv Griffin Show" and also on "Donahue," saying he owed his success to "Satan!"

Abby, can you find out if the Procter & Gamble Co. has any connection with Satan and witchcraft, because if it has, I am not buying any more of its products.

NEEDS TO KNOW IN OHIO
DEAR NEEDS: Letters such as the one you received have been circulated through the U.S. for the last two years, and there is not a shred of truth in the rumor that P&G is connected with Satan, witchcraft or the devil!

Furthermore, neither Merv Griffin nor Phil Donahue has had anyone from Procter & Gamble on their shows, but this rumor has been so widespread that both Griffin and Donahue have had to send out form letters to deny this false accusation.

Some of the nation's most respected Christian religious leaders have issued public statements in an effort to put an end to this vicious campaign. They include the Rev. Jerry Falwell, the Rev. Jimmy Draper, president of the Southern Baptist Convention, the Rev. Donald E. Wild-

Dr. Donohue

Thyroid gland and medications

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have been doctoring with an overactive thyroid gland for the past five years. I underwent the radioactive iodine drink treatment. How safe is it? How effective is it? — Mrs. S.P.

Radioactive iodine treatment of an overactive thyroid gland is both safe and effective. There is no increased risk of cancer from its use, if that is your concern. It has been used for many years and patients treated with it do not show any ill effects. The reason for using the treatment varies, but it is often used to put the gland completely at rest. Then the person has to take thyroid hormone orally. It has the same effect of actually removing the gland. It's surgery without surgery.

I am also asked to comment on bulging and swelling of eyes and surrounding eye tissues that may occur with Graves' disease — overactive thyroid.

There are times when an overactive thyroid gland causes eye problems. There may be a fixed stare, as the blinking mechanism of the eye is lost. Sometimes the eyes bulge (from swelling of the skull socket containing the eye). The swelling is actually a gelatinous substance that forms there.

When the overactive gland is treated, these problems usually subside with time. Patients are advised to elevate the head of the bed to lessen some of the swelling.

There are times when treatment of the overactive thyroid (such as with Mrs. S.P.) does not correct the eye problem. Then, other measures are explored. Steroids may be given. Or there is even a surgical procedure to relieve swelling.

When thyroid disease is associated with an eye problem, it is best to be advised both by a gland specialist and an eye doctor. Read the booklet "Your Thyroid: How It Works For You." Other readers may obtain a copy by writing me in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope and 50 cents for printing and handling.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Would you like to explain what the heart disease called "M.V.P.S." means? I believe one of the valves fails to close in the heart properly. My granddaughter has this problem, and she tells me it is nothing to worry about. — D.D.

M.V.P.S. stands for mitral valve prolapse syndrome. The mitral valve is the one that opens and closes to permit blood to flow to the lower left chamber of the heart from the upper chamber. It opens between heartbeats. When the lower chamber has filled with blood, the valve closes to prevent backup, and the heart beats again. Meanwhile the blood in the lower chamber is pumped out to the body. That's the scenario.

In mitral valve protapse, the valve I just described balloons upward a bit in closing off the upper chamber from the lower one. Generally, it is nothing to worry about. Doctors know it's there because they hear a slightly different sound from it than from a perfectly normal valve.

Your daughter has probably already been given the word that she has to take antibiotics when she has her teeth worked on. That's because this particular kind of valve is more likely to become infected from mouth germs that may get into her blood circulation during dental bleeding.

In rare cases, a prolapsed mitral valve might cause a

DEAR ABBY: I met a very attractive young woman at a wedding. Since we were both unattached and seemed to have a lot in common, you might say we hit it off well from the moment we met. I invited her to dinner at the best restaurant in town for the following night, and she accepted on the spot.

Well, she spent the whole evening talking about her boyfriend — what a great guy he is and how much she missed him because he traveled for a living and was gone for two and three weeks at a time.

Every time I started to talk about something else, she would bring the conversation back to her boyfriend, quoting him and raving about his good points.

What I would like to know is this, Abby, if this boyfriend of hers is so terrific, why did she accept a dinner date with me?

GOING TO WORK — Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Tony Hill gets down to serious work during a practice session at the Cowboys summer camp Monday in Thousand Oaks, Calif. Hill, along with the rest of the veterans, started two-a-day workouts in preparation for the upcoming football season.

Dorsett working hard

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Tony Dorsett's marriage is on the rocks, but he says he can handle the emotional strain and give the Dallas Cowboys another All-Pro year in 1982.

His wife, Julie, filed for divorce in June, but the domestic problems haven't kept Dorsett from working perhaps even harder than he did prior to the 1981 season in which he gained 1,674 yards.

"I've always been the type of guy that no matter what was happening on the outside I could keep it in perspective as far as my football was concerned," Dorsett said. "I'll be OK."

Indeed, Dorsett reported to training camp heavier than he has ever been in his six-year National Football League career — 192 pounds.

However, the weight is well distributed. "Coach (Al) Lavan looked at me and thought I weighed the same as I did last year (185) because the weight looked good," Dorsett said. "It's amazing that I'm carrying that kind of weight and not feel sluggish."

He said the additional weight is an experiment. "I used to think I was fat if I weighed 190 pounds," Dorsett said. "But I feel good ... I can still move. Maybe I can break more tackles and stay healthier."

Dorsett has looked extremely fast in the early two-a-day Dallas practices.

Watching from the sidelines, scout John Wooten watched a Dorsett explosion up the middle, shook his head and joked: "He'd really be great wouldn't he, if he just had some quickness."

"I feel physically strong and mentally strong," said Dorsett, who finished just 28 yards behind New Orleans' George Rogers for the NFL rushing title.

Dorsett said he still is having trouble getting over the one-point loss to the San Francisco 49ers in the National Conference title game.

"It's probably the biggest disappointment I've had" he said. "The Philadelphia loss lingered on the season before because of personal reasons (Dorsett's fumble contributed to the winning points for the Eagles) but I hated to lose that won to the 49ers. We had it won and lost it."

Dorsett said he doesn't expect his ball-carrying load, which reached an average of just over 20 attempts per game last year, will increase by Coach Tom Landry this season.

"We might throw it a little more," said Dorsett. "Anyway, I don't want to become the Earl Campbell of Dallas and carry the thing 35 to 40 times per game. That's when the defense starts cheating on you."

Statistics show that as Dorsett runs, so go the Cowboys.

Dallas is 28-1 in games in which he has rushed for 100 yards or more.

Free agent running back Donnie Williams scored on a 6-yard run Monday during a training camp scrimmage for rookie members of the Dallas Cowboys.

Williams, of Southwest Texas State, also broke for an additional 22-yard gain during the scrimmage.

Wide receiver Pete Harvey, a free agent from North Texas, caught two passes for 31 yards.

Veterans and rookies went through two practices, but linebacker Mike Hegman missed the afternoon practice because of tightness in his lower back.

Cornerback Ron Fellows was sidelined with inflammation of the lymph vessel and wide receiver Doug Donley was slowed by a tightened groin.

Placed on waivers Monday were Utah State punter Guy McClure, Toledo guard David Menefee, The Citadel running back Dan Miller and Newberry, N.C., wide receiver Mat Deveaux.

The Cowboys now have 104 players on the roster.

Oiler offense views recharge

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — The statistics tell the grisly truth and Houston Oiler offensive coordinator Jim Shofner didn't try to sweep them under a rug.

"We were definitely too predictable last year," Shofner said as he pondered last year's 7-9 fizzle.

"After the fourth game last year we felt we had to draw back and give the ball to Earl (Campbell). We decided we had one superstar so let's use him."

It didn't work. The Oiler total offense ranked fourth in the National Football League in 1980 when Coach Bum Phillips took them to the playoffs for the third straight year.

Last season, the rank dropped to 27th, a plunge aided largely by an unsettled quarterback situation.

New Coach Ed Biles had gone to his first camp a year ago with grand plans to open up the Oiler offense. He would use a multiple scheme, give Campbell an occasional rest, get him into the passing patterns and expand on the passing game.

It all started to come apart before camp even started when Ken Stabler announced his retirement. Shortly after training camp started, quarterback Gifford Nielsen departed for the third year of a shoulder injury and Stabler tried to come to the rescue.

"You hate to put it on one position (quarterback), but that's what it was," Shofner said. "Kenny came back and he was not in shape and because of that we went into the fourth game against the (New York) Jets in the I formation. We didn't line up in anything else for eight or nine games."

Stabler has been waived to make room for promising rookies Oliver Luck of West Virginia and Ron Reeves of Texas Tech and Nielsen returned in the final three games last season to claim the starting job.

Now Shofner is starting all over in training camp, putting in the offense he wanted to use a year ago.

"But we're farther ahead than we were at this time last year because Gifford came back the last three games and proved he was ready to play," Shofner said. "This year we've got to stay on the field longer and we've got to convert more third downs."

The question that remains about Nielsen is his durability. He has never made it through a season uninjured. Shofner, former an assistant coach with the Cleveland Browns, says Nielsen could be like Browns quarterback Brian Sipe.

NFL talks on again Thursday?

Sessions could be held at Eagles training camp

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League Players Association is proposing that its contract talks with the National Football League resume on Thursday in West Chester, Pa.

But the league opposes holding the talks at the site of the Philadelphia Eagles' training camp. Management Council spokesman Jim Miller said such a locale would be a "disruptive force."

"How would you like to be a coach and have the league's negotiating sessions going on two doors down the hall," Miller asked.

NFLPA Executive Director Ed Garvey said that holding the talks in West Chester would allow the participation of John Bunting, the Eagles' player representative. Bunting is a member of the union's negotiating team.

"It is imperative that the players on the negotiating committee be included in the talks," Garvey said in a message sent Monday to the owners' bargaining agent, the NFL Management Council.

Union officials say members of the negotiating team must stay close to a practice facility to stay in shape as the regular season draws near.

Jack Donlan, executive director of the management council, was unavailable for comment on the proposal.

The talks, alternating between

Washington, site of the union's headquarters, and New York, where the league's offices are located, have been in recess for 10 days as both parties have failed to agree to a site for the next round of negotiations.

Earlier Monday, Donlan had suggested negotiators meet Thursday and Friday in Washington to be followed by a session next week in New York.

The collective bargaining agreement between the union and the league expired July 15.

Major stumbling blocks to a solution remain the union's demand players be paid a percentage of each team's gross revenues and management's insistence the new contract include a provision for drug testing.

Gribble misses world swim record

Monday night, but he recovered to record his second meet record of the day. He was timed in 53.88 seconds, 07 over the world record, after he went 54.09 in the preliminaries.

Prado, who will enter Southern Methodist University in Dallas this fall, was not disappointed, however, as he splashed to a time of 4:19.78 in the 400 individual medley, breaking American Jesse Vassallo's four-year-old world mark of 4:20.05.

The U.S. won another gold medal in the men's 800 freestyle relay with a team of Rich Saeger, Jeff Float, Kyle Miller and Rowdy Gaines that came within .27 seconds of the world record set by the U.S. team in 1978.

Physical exam news

With football season fast approaching and two-a-days just days away, it's important to get those physical exams.

It's expensive being a natty cowboy today

By TOM LACEKY
Associated Press Writer

HELENA, Mont. — The Urban Cowboy is riding his clothes horse into the sunset, satin pants and buckskin jacket fringe a-swish, but the bloated clothing prices he triggered in those high-fashion days of yesteryear are not going with him.

The price of Western apparel — the real article as well as the faddish — went up like a sky-busting bronc in recent years as millions of big-city dudes developed a zest for cowboy duds.

"We could feel an abnormal increase (in Montana), but nothing like the East and Midwest," said Art Keeler, owner of Capital Sports and Western in Helena. "Those people just boomed — and they're going out of business today."

The biggest impact in Montana, besides the soaring prices, was that Western wear dealers found their orders back-logged for months, sometimes a year or more. But business was good.

"I don't think we'll ever see a year like that again," said Barbara Lindquist, manager of the Western Sportsman in Missoula.

"It was good while it lasted — it's kinda hard to beat those figures — but we're going back to normal now. We're back to regular business with ranchers and true Western styles. It isn't as flashy. The fringes and the satins, that's all gone."

But not the high prices. "Prices are not down a bit — hats, boots, nothing," said Tat Cain of Miles City Saddlery. "I think it's the interest rates."

The dealers have theories about the cause — the Urban Cowboy craze, the economy in general, inflation — but all agree that a working cowboy well may be donning $300 to $300 worth of clothes merely to do his duties among the dogs.

Most of it goes on his head and his feet. "A typical ranchhand will pay about $100 to $125 for a better pair of boots, but we sell cheaper brands," Cain said. He and Keeler both estimated $70 for a hat. Other dealers estimated higher costs.

A "plain old boot" that sold for $85 before the Urban Cowboy sashayed into town now costs about $130, said Larry Emmons, owner of Pay's Horseman's Supply in Billings.

"When that craze took off, not only boots and hats, but every part of the industry, as far as clothes go," increased in cost, Emmons said.

That typical ranchhand is "going to buy a good boot, hand-lasted," Keeler said. "He expects a lot of service, and he may resolve them two or three times, so he's going to buy a pair that costs him between $125 and $165."

"Most guys would expect to get a year out of a pair of work boots. If you take care of them you can expect a year's service."

28th SEASON — Bob Keeshan, better known to kids around the country as Captain Kangaroo, cuddles a six-month-old lion cub with Hugh Brannum (Mr. Green-jeans), left, as the pair tape a Captain Kangaroo segment for September. The show will mark the Captain's 28th season with CBS.

It's a joke, being Carson's boss

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — As a Hollywood director, he worked with Errol Flynn, Tony Curtis and the star of "Bedtime for Bonzo," Ronald Reagan. In television, he was the man behind Jack Benny, George Burns and, for the past 12 years, Johnny Carson.

Carson tells jokes about Fred de Cordova, but De Cordova still is not well known. The public recognizes his back more than his face, since the camera only sees him shaking hands with Carson's guests after the "Tonight" show.

If Carson is the captain of NBC's midnight vessel, De Cordova is the navigator, steering the show into its 20th season this fall. And, all the while, the good ship "Tonight" has been chugging straight and steady for middle America and its mainstream values and comedy sense.

"The show has matured the same way the country has," says De Cordova. "When Jack Paar was doing 'Tonight,' he got into trouble for doing a joke about a W.C. (bathroom). In those days, you couldn't say 'pregnant.' When shows did venture into the bedroom, there were separate beds or creases in between them."

De Cordova, 72, producer of NBC's "Tonight," oversees the popular late-night program. He checks the material going into Carson's daily monologue, monitors rehearsals for the song-and-dance numbers, chooses the program's guests and gently gives them the hook when the conversation gets dead.

"I judge by Johnny's interest in the guest and the audience, which almost always is the same," says De Cordova. "I try for an amalgam of guests. I don't want to see it become too Las Vegas showbizzy, or too pretentious and intellectual, either."

"Now that we do a 60-minute show (it used to be 90 minutes), we're essentially a two-guest show, so we have less leeway."

De Cordova stresses that "Tonight," which is being challenged for viewers by ABC's "Nightline," is an entertainment program. It's never gone for political guests, although Carson uses his topical monologue as a semi-whimsical check and balance on government.

Carson's rule of nose-thumbing is to attack the tangents, not the issues themselves. Nancy Reagan's china policy or the president's cheese program are fair game. "Nothing is taboo if you do it in good taste and fun," says De Cordova. "When Nixon was down and out, Johnny felt that wasn't the time to zing him."

"The nights that Reagan and Sadat were shot, Johnny said he couldn't do comedy-humor programs. So he didn't do the show. The network wasn't happy, but it went along with the decision."

De Cordova's background in the entertainment business goes back to 1933, when a school friend, Johnny Shubert, got him a gopher job in his family's theatrical empire. He worked his way up until he was directing shows in Louisville, Nashville, Memphis, and, finally, New York.

The last show he directed on Broadway was the "Ziegfeld Follies" in 1943 with Milton Berle and Arthur Treacher. His career moved to Hollywood and "B" films, including "Bedtime for Bonzo," "Little Egypt" and "I'll Take Sweden," before he tackled the new medium of television, directing the "Burns and Allen Show." Later, he produced "The Jack Benny Show."

"Jack pretended to be a tightwad and George pretended to be defeated by Grace. They all played characters," says De Cordova. "But Johnny is the character. He's the person he presents. He's playing himself. That's why middle America is so comfortable with him."

Author close to filming of her book

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Rona Jaffe put her first novel, "The Best of Everything," in someone else's hands for adaptation to the screen, and the experience was not altogether satisfying.

"I was just a kid," she says today, "and they did what they wanted to the story."

The book, published in 1958, was a best-seller, and the 20th Century-Fox film, starring Joan Crawford and Hope Lange, was not a bad one — though it wasn't wholly Ms. Jaffe's creation.

The Brooklyn-born novelist is at work now on a TV movie based on "Mazes and Monsters," her latest book, and she's taking a more active part in the translation from the printed page.

"I didn't write the script," she says. "When you're so close to the book, it's difficult to make the kinds of cuts you have to make for a two-hour movie."

"The writer who's doing the script can see the high points in the novel," she says. "When you've written the 400-page book yourself, you consider everything a high point."

Ms. Jaffe, 49, is an associate producer of "Mazes and Monsters," which CBS plans to broadcast sometime in the coming season. Casting is under way — the novelist has a hand in that — and filming will begin early next month.

"They want a college campus that looks like it's in the East, and where they can film before the kids arrive from summer vacation, and after they get there," the novelist says.

Ms. Jaffe's novel is a thriller about four college students who take medieval roles to play a game called Mazes and Monsters — not unlike the current campus craze Dungeons and Dragons — as a way of suppressing their own adolescent problems. The game soon threatens the lives of its participants.

"The thing that's been very gratifying," she says, "is that everybody wants the movie to be as close to the book as possible. Usually, it seems they want to be as far away from the book as they can."

"As a novelist," Ms. Jaffe says, "when you see something totally different from what you've written, you get mad, because these are your children they're fooling with, your characters."

That's one reason she's been involved in the early stages of casting. "I don't expect to find a J.J. like the one I wrote about. It's not that easy."

"He doesn't necessarily have to be blond like my J.J. was in the book, but he has to have J.J.'s qualities. I want him to be appealing, and young, and noticeably intelligent."

Pop star Carole King gets married

STANLEY, Idaho (AP) — Rock music star Carole King announced Monday that she has married Rick Sorenson, foreman of Ms. King's Robinson Bar Ranch on the Salmon River near Stanley.

Ms. King said in a telephone call to a Boise television station that the marriage occurred at a sunrise ceremony Sunday at the ranch.

The singer has written and recorded songs including "Tapestry."

Miss King is involved here in a lawsuit over the closing of a mountain road through her ranch.

Miss King announced the wedding Monday in a telephone call to a Boise television station, KIVI, while she was in town for a deposition for the lawsuit, which is scheduled to be heard this fall in federal court here. KIVI reporter Bill Silcock, who has been covering action on the suit, said Miss King told him of the wedding when she called him in reply to a letter he had written to her asking for an interview.

The singer was married three times before, to Gerry Goffin, Charles Larkey and Rick Evers. The first two marriages ended in divorce and Evers, an Idahoan, died a few months after their marriage. She has three children, Louise, Sherry and Molly.

Actress Cathleen Nesbitt dies

LONDON (AP) — Cathleen Nesbitt, the British character actress whose career spanned 70 years and who played Mrs. Higgins in the original 1957 New York production of "My Fair Lady," has died at the age of 93, her family announced today.

She died peacefully at home on Monday.

Her roles on stage ranged from Perdita in "The Winter's Tale" to Honor Brady in "The Playboy of the Western World" and Julia in "The Cocktail Party."

Her film appearances included "An Affair to Remember," "Three Coins in the Fountain," "Separate Tables" and Alfred Hitchcock's "Family Plot."

In the book "Who's Who in the Theater," the list of her roles covers four columns.

Even in her 90s she was in demand, appearing in "The Aspern Papers" in a Chichester Theater production two years ago.

The London Daily Telegraph wrote of Miss Nesbitt: "As a supporting actress she was an asset to any cast that she was called upon to join; she had a great gift of versatility, and her skill was such that the appearance of her name on the program was a guarantee that a part would be carefully studied and imaginatively played."

In 1921 she married the actor Cecil Ramage. She leaves one son and one daughter.

Uncle Sam can offer low-cost vacations

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

If your spirit says it's ready for a vacation, but your budget says it's not ready for the price, it may be time to look at the National Park System for a low-cost, close-to-home summer holiday.

Most Americans tend to think of national parks in terms of remote wilderness regions. But the park system actually includes 333 recreational areas, many of which you can reach without a lot of expensive driving or time away from home. There are 48 full-fledged national parks included in the system; other places maintained by the park system range from historic houses and monuments to small, natural areas suitable for a single day's outing.

Admission to most of the national park sites is free; only 62 areas have an entrance fee, ranging from 50 cents to $3. The entrance charge does not include user fees for things like campsites; nor does it include fees imposed by concessionaires for food, equipment rentals, etc.

Duncan Morrow, a park service spokesman, said there were almost 238.5 million visits to the national park system in 1981 and this year's total is running about 4 percent ahead of last year's. (Note: The park service counts "visits" rather than individuals because it has no way of keeping track of the actual number of people involved. It also counts visits in two ways: People who stop and use the facilities — camping, touring monuments or battlefield, etc. — and those who simply drive through; there were 329 million "drive-through" visits in 1981.)

The park service has been trying to promote some of the lesser-known areas in its system and Morrow says it has had some success, particularly with Cumberland Gap National Historic Park, which extends over parts of Kentucky, Virginia and Tennessee, is less than 100 miles from the better-known and more-crowded Great Smoky Mountains of North Carolina and Tennessee, and offers some equal attractions, including a wilderness trail cut by Daniel Boone.

At the same time, Morrow said, some of the famous attractions are unique — and nothing else will do. "Obviously, there's only one place in the world where you can see 'Old Faithful,'" he said. (The geyser is in Yellowstone National Park which spreads over parts of Wyoming, Montana and Idaho.)

There are several ways to cut costs at national parks with special passes.

The Golden Eagle Passport costs $10 and is an annual entrance permit to all parks, monuments and recreation areas administered by the federal government. It is good only for the calendar year in which it is issued. The passport admits the holder, plus anyone accompanying him or her in a single, private, non-commercial vehicle. In places where entry is not by car, the passport admits the holder and immediate family group — parents, children and spouse. It covers entrance fees only. You can get it through the mail or in person from the headquarters offices of either the National Park Service, Room 1013, U.S.

Department of the Interior, 18th and C Sts. N.W., Washington, D.C., 20240, or the Forest Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C., 20250, or from regional offices of either agency.

The Golden Age Passport is free and is available to people 62 and over. It covers admission fees and entitles the holder to a 50 percent discount on user fees charged by the federal government. You do not have to renew it annually. You must get a Golden Age Passport in person and must show proof of age. The passports are available at most federally operated recreational areas, as well as at park and forest service offices.

The Golden Access Passport is similar to the Golden Age Passport, but is available to anyone who is eligible to receive disability assistance from any federal program. You do not actually have to be receiving benefits to qualify; you simply must be eligible for those benefits. Like the Golden Age Passport, the Golden Access Passport does not have to be renewed.

Braniff claims disputed

DALLAS (AP) — An airport board attorney disputes Braniff Airways' claim that it has met a federal bankruptcy judge's order to lease 50 percent of its sprawling terminal at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport.

Attorney Robert Hoffman of Dallas said Sunday said the claim made by Braniff officials last week was "ridiculous."

"Our figures show that last Wednesday, of 544 flights leaving D-FW Airport, just 21 originated at the Braniff terminal," Hoffman, who has represented the airport in its effort to evict the failed airline from its terminal, said.

Meanwhile, airport officials trying to rent out another airline facility, Braniff Place, said they will seek four separate tenants for the immense world headquarters complex.

The bankrupt airline had been unable to find a single tenant in the past year who would be willing to rent the $75 million complex. Braniff's inability to pay its $500,000 monthly rent has forced airport officials to begin finding other ways to pay off the bonds issued on the facility.

Braniff officials said last week they met the judge's requirement when they concluded an agreement to sublease three gates to United Airlines, which began three daily flights from D-FW to both Denver and Chicago.

Airport officials said that the United lease means that 11 of the 26 gates in the terminal formerly used by Braniff would be subleased. But the carriers there fly no more than three flights daily from any one gate, and some carriers do not use the gates every day, officials said.

Braniff officials have said they are trying to find another airline which would contract for the use of the failed company's equipment and terminal space because such an arrangement would aid in their reorganization.

Board members said that Braniff's occupancy of the terminal is draining revenues from the airport and threatens bondholders' security, despite the subleasings.

"The airport's efforts to attract an airline into the terminal in a big way are seriously hampered by the fact that Braniff is attempting to hang onto its space," Hoffman said.

"There is no way the airport board could promise long-term space to another airline as long as this matter is unresolved."

Judge John Flowers' ruling in June has been appealed by the airport board. The ruling provided that if the 50-percent requirement was not met, the board could return to court with its own plan to fill the terminal.

But Flowers said the board's plan would have to be "consistent with Braniff's attempts to reorganize."

Companies now using the terminal include Eagle Airways, USAir, Pan American Airlines, Air Canada, Northwest Orient Airlines, Mexicana, British Caledonian and Thai Airways.

The airport is facing a similar problem in trying to rent the lavish Braniff headquarters, which includes a hotel, three other buildings and a man-made lake.

"It would be easier for us to find one operator to take the whole complex," said James Alderson, airport properties and facilities director.

Airport officials say they will be unable, without renters, to continue paying off the complex after a reserve fund runs out late next year.
