Israel rejects Reagan Mideast peace plans

THE LAST ONE — A smiling Palestinian guerrilla carried his child on his back as he joined his fellow fighters in being the last PLO members to leave Beirut yesterday.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan stood ready today to send Secretary of State George Shultz to pursue any encouraging response to his "fresh start" formula for giving self-government to the Palestinians and achieving peace in the Middle East.

The first formal response from Israel was far from encouraging. Prime Minister Menachem Begin's Cabinet, meeting in Jerusalem, unanimously rejected Reagan's proposals. Deputy Foreign Minister Yehuda Ben-Meir said the Israeli government "will not negotiate on the basis of these proposals."

Deputy Prime Minister David Levy called the president's plan "one-sided, anti-Israel and contradictory to the spirit of the Camp David accords."

A key element of the Reagan plan was his call for "self-government by the Palestinians of the West Bank and Gaza in association with Jordan," an arrangement he proposed to be negotiated by all parties.

The 1978 Camp David framework, which Reagan described as "the only way to proceed," called for self-determination by the Palestinians but made no mention of ultimate association with Jordan.

Reagan also called on Israel to freeze further settlements in the West Bank of the Jordan River.

But Levy, speaking at a dedication ceremony today for the West Bank settlement of Maale Adumim, said, "Settlement in the land of Israel will not stop."

In Washington, Shultz said he found it difficult to believe "that Israel would reject the idea of peace ... reject the idea that they should be recognized by their neighbors as a state ... reject the pledges of support for their security that the president gave."

The secretary's remarks came in an interview on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

Earlier, a senior administration official who insisted on anonymity said that while there are no immediate plans for Shultz to go to the Mideast, the secretary would do so if there were indications it would be "propitious and fruitful."

U.S. farm price index sags for 13th consecutive month

By DON KENDALL

AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON — For the 13th consecutive month, the government's farm price index has averaged below year-earlier levels, according to Agriculture Department records.

The department said Tuesday that prices farmers get for raw products declined 0.7 percent in August. That was down 2.2 percent from a year ago.

Lower prices were reported for corn, soybeans, lettuce, potatoes and rollers. The decline for those commodities was partly offset by higher prices for oranges, hogs, tobacco, cotton and milk, the department's Crop Reporting Board said.

Corn prices, at an average of $2.19 per bushel in August, were the lowest since they were $2.18 in early 1979, ac-ording to USDA records. Soybeans were $5.39 a bushel, the lowest in five years.

Revised figures for July showed the price index also dropped 0.7 percent from June, instead of holding steady as the preliminary figures showed a month ago.

The price index now has declined for three straight months after rising in four of the first five months of 1982; it held steady in March. In 1981, the index failed to show an overall gain in any month, the first time that had happened since the Depression year of 1933.

Record inventories of grain, led by huge harvests last year and prospects for another buildup in 1982, have helped depress crop prices. Also, foreign demand for some commodities has not been as strong as had been hoped.

The price decline has meant a further financial crunch on farmers. Nationally, net farm income in 1982 is expected to decline for the third straight year.

Chase Econometrics, of Bala Cynwyd, Pa., forecasts net farm income this year at around $16.4 billion, compared to $19.6 billion in 1981; $24.4 billion in 1980; and $26.7 billion in 1979. Moreover, the private forecast sees farm income increasing only moderately in 1983 to about $19.2 billion.

Meanwhile, prices farmers pay to meet expenses were unchanged from July but the index was up 3.3 percent from a year ago.

Depressed commodity prices, however unwelcome at the farm level, have helped cool retail food prices this year. Department economists estimated retail food prices will increase about 5 percent this year, compared to a gain of 7.9 percent in 1981. That would be the smallest annual gain since food prices rose 3.1 percent in 1976.

The preliminary price figures for August — which are based mostly on mid-month averages — showed that the index for feed grain and hay dropped 9 percent from July, averaging 18 percent below a year ago.

Oil-bearing crops, mainly soybeans, averaged 8.8 percent lower than in July and 25 percent below a year ago, the report said.

Fruit prices, overall, rose 11 percent from July and were 66 percent above a year ago.

Meat animal prices were up 1.9 percent from July and were 5.1 percent higher than the year-earlier average. Hog prices were a record $61.10 per 100 pounds, $2.50 more than the previous high set in Sept. 1975.

The August parity ratio was 57 percent, down one point from July. A year ago, it was 61 percent.

Haitians adjusting to U.S. life

By CLIFF COAN

Staff Writer

Due to new developments as many as four more Haitians could arrive in Big Spring Friday night, according to members of the Big Spring Ministerial Alliance.

Pierre Nocius originally had been the only Haitian scheduled to arrive here Friday from the La Tuna Federal Prison in El Paso, but complications in getting three other Haitians released from a prison in Puerto Rico moved the Alliance to ask for the release of three more Haitians from La Tuna.

The release could come as early as Friday, according to Alliance member Jerry Kelly.

Should they be released, Nocius, Jean Noblet, Pinchin At Noel and Jacques La Guerre would join Augustin Jean and Moises Lubin as Haitians relocated in Big Spring.

"I got a call this morning from Father Portland Moore, the archdiocese out of Dallas," said Kelly, "and he said these three (Noblet, At Noel and La Guerre) would be the last three out of La Tuna and they'd like to place them here."

Bill Henning apparently spoke for the entire Alliance when he said, "It sounds like our mission is to get six guys well situated (rather than 10)."

The Alliance had initially asked to sponsor 10 Haitians until the refugees' deportation cases could be heard by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. According to Rev. Guy White, seven of the original 10 will probably be sponsored by members of their own family who have already settled in the U.S.

Jean and Lubin have been in Big Spring since Aug. 22, and have been staying at the local Salvation Army until suitable quarters can be found. They are employed at Trinity Memorial Park as general laborers.

The Alliance had made arrangements to use several units of an old hotel at 206 Gregg to house the Haitians, but the advent of fewer Haitians scrapped that plan.

The Alliance is now looking at a couple of houses where the Haitians could be set up and begin to live independently.

WIPED OUT — This Ford pickup driven northbound on U.S. 87 South by Richard C. Reed of Sterling City Route skidded about 93 feet, turned over three or four times and landed upside down 194 feet from impact with a car near Driver Road at 7:33 a.m. today, witnesses said. The accident apparently occurred when a car driven by Carmena Farmer of 114 Cedar Road turned left toward Driver Road in front of the oncoming pickup. Police cited Ms. Farmer for failure to yield right-of-way and no driver's license in possession. Reed and Ms. Farmer were treated and released from Malone-Hogan emergency room.

Voter registration drive started

By MIKE DOWNEY

Staff Writer

The possibility exists that less than 1 million Texas voters will decide for 14.2 million Texans in the November general election if May and June voting trends continue.

Therefore, Governor Bill Clements is calling for a voter registration drive to beef up the 6.6 million voters currently registered in Texas to prevent this from happening. More than 3.3 million eligible voters still remain to be registered, according to the secretary of state's office. Getting those millions registered and to the polls in Nov. is the goal for Texans, Clements said.

The last day to register to vote in the Nov. 2 election is Oct. 2 — 30 days before the election according to state law.

In Howard County, the place to register to vote is Dorothy Moore's tax office on the first floor of the courthouse. Filling out the registration card only takes a few minutes, according to office personnel.

While the tax office will mail out voter registration cards on request, possible problems can be handled easily in the office if people come in to register.

Tax Assessor-Collector Dorothy Moore and County Clerk Margaret Ray warn voters who have moved within the county to check if they have changed precincts. If so, voters will need to transfer their registration in the tax office to avoid needless problems on election day.

Only the orange voter registration cards are valid, Mrs. Moore said. If a voter has any other color, he needs to register again.

Mrs. Ray said absentee voting would begin on Oct. 13.

Bell offers reward for information about cut cables

In a rare policy move, Southwestern Bell is offering a $1,000 reward for information leading to the indictment of any individual responsible for intentional damage to telephone cables in Big Spring in the last three months.

According to Darlene Gifford, manager of Southwestern Bell in Big Spring, the company has experienced 10 cable cuts in recent months and company officials are looking to put a stop to the vandalism once and for all.

"The offer of a reward is an unusual step for Southwestern Bell and is done only in the case of serious crimes or a single major crime," Mrs. Gifford said. "It's been a successful tool in the past and for the sake of Big Spring telephone customers, we hope it does some good."

Mrs. Gifford said most of the cable cuts have occurred in the early morning hours and all have taken place within the city. She said almost all of the cuts happened at or near major intersections. The last cable cut was on Aug. 11.

"This type of sabotage can affect the telephone service of up to 300 customers. It normally takes us one full work day to have all customers back in service. In addition, we have to pull technicians off important jobs to repair the damaged cables," Mrs. Gifford said.

Persons with information regarding these crimes are urged to call the Big Spring Police Department. Persons interested in the details and limitations of the reward should contact Southwestern Bell Security collect at (512)-222-6693. The reward is good for information received on or before Oct. 31.

Mrs. Gifford said the cutting of telecommunication cables is a third degree felony and punishable by a term of two to 10 years in the state prison and/or a fine of $5,000.

Woman seeks damage suit

A damage suit seeking $21,650 in compensation has been filed in 118th District Court by a Big Spring woman. Melissa Diane Smith is suing Ural G. Scarbro and Billy Joe Scarbro for injuries she claims suffered in an automobile collision June 30, 1982.

The suit, filed by the Big Spring firm of Hamby, Thompson and Mouton states Ural Scarbro was negligent in his driving which resulted in the collision with a vehicle driven by Ms. Smith. The accident occurred at the intersection of Highway 87 and Farm Market Road 700, the suit states.

Mitchell County has farm tour

COLORADO CITY (SC) — The annual Mitchell County Farm and Ranch Tour began this morning with coffee and doughnuts in the Civic Center.

Following the initial get-together, buses left to give participants a chance to view herbicide results on the bermuda grass problem in cotton, see an irrigated sunflower plot, take a watermelon break, examine a four-pasture lovegrass plot, discuss brush control problems, look at grain sorghums, and see the potential cotton yields at a five-variety cotton result demonstration.

Doctor Don Newbury, president of Western Texas College, was speaker for the noon barbecue luncheon.

U.S. Field Station supervisor to travel to North Africa

Bill Fryrear, superintendent of the USDA Big Spring Wind Erosion and Moisture Conservation Unit, is traveling to northern Africa today to assist in a United Nations agriculture project.

The country of Tunisia shares many of the same wind erosion problems as this area, Fryrear said. The Big Spring field station built a wind tunnel for Tunisia and shipped it there, he said. The purpose of his trip is to help set up the tunnel and work with the farmers on dryland farming problems, Fryrear said.

The average rainfall in this area, located about five miles west of Libya, is six inches a year, Fryrear said.

The farmers there plant barley which is harvested by scythe or by pulling up the entire plant, Fryrear said. These practices promote erosion problems, he said. "We hope to introduce stubble mulch farming and possibly other crops to help control wind erosion," Fryrear said.

The work there was expected to conclude Sept. 18, he said.

Reagan reducing penalties for helping Soviet pipeline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Against a backdrop of rising protests from West European allies, the Reagan administration is reducing penalties against companies using U.S. technology to help construct the Soviet natural gas pipeline.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan told reporters Wednesday the administration will only bar the firms from receiving exports of U.S. oil and gas equipment and technology, rather than all U.S. exports as first ordered.

The Commerce Department last week slapped two French companies — Dresser-France, a subsidiary of the Dallas-based Dresser Industries, and Creusot-Loire — with a total export ban in retaliation against the shipment of pipeline compressors to the Soviet Union.

That order, banning the firms from receiving "all U.S. products, services and technology," may need "a little redefinition ... a clarification of what was meant," Regan said.

Last Thursday's Commerce Department order "was, perhaps, misinterpreted or, perhaps, in its original, pristine form, was a little too sweeping without giving a precise definition of what was meant," Regan said.

The treasury secretary said revisions in the order will limit penalties only to a ban on "purchases and use of oil and gas equipment and technological information from U.S. sources."

The "redefined" penalties are expected to be imposed soon on the John Brown Engineering Co. of Glasgow, Scotland, which is preparing to ship turbine parts, produced with American technology, to the Soviet Union.

Earlier this week, a Soviet freighter in the port of Glasgow began loading 500 crates of turbine parts produced by John Brown for use in the 3,500-mile long trans-Siberian gas pipeline to Western Europe.

Regan said the sanctions likely will be ordered after the ship actually sails for the Soviet Union.

In Scotland, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said she had told Regan that Britain would fulfill its pipeline contracts, "especially since you in the United States are delivering wheat" to the Soviet Union.

"I now feel particularly deeply wounded by a friend," said Mrs. Thatcher.

Despite his remarks indicating that the original U.S. penalties were too sweeping, Regan rejected suggestions that the United States was backing off them.

"Our sanctions have to do with oil and gas," he said. "They certainly wouldn't involve, let's say, IBM typewriters versus Olivetti typewriters being purchased by Dresser of France."

Asked today about Israel's refusal to halt its West Bank settlement program, Shultz said that "if what is wanted is a chance for peace ... there has to be some statement of intention to negotiate about what is going to happen in those territories."

The secretary said King Hussein of Jordan "has taken the president's proposals and is taking them seriously and is studying them."

Shultz said the king has not committed himself to joining the peace talks, but that, if he does, "presumably, he would speak, at least initially, for the Palestinians. And there are Palestinians on the West Bank that should be represented and that's something that has to be worked out."

Shultz also predicted that those Palestinians would never agree to be governed by Israel.

"Whenever you have someone represent you, you want that person to be legitimately your person. It isn't reasonable to expect the Palestinians to go along with representation of them by someone picked by the Israelis. That won't work."

Ben-Meir, interviewed separately on "Good Morning America," said the Camp David accords did provide for

"full autonomy for the inhabitants" of the West Bank, but "nowhere does it say that the land will belong to them."

Former President Carter, who negotiated the accords with Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, said today that Reagan's proposals were "absolutely compatible with the Camp David agreements."

As for Israeli settlements on the West Bank, Carter said "my understanding of what Prime Minister Begin promised was very clear: that there would be no new settlements on the West Bank and in Gaza until after the negotiating process was completed."

offered two houses to the Alliance as possible housing for the Haitians. He is currently acting as manager of the houses for an out-of-town owner, he said.

One house is a two-bedroom located on Dixie, one block off Washington, he said. The other is a three-bedroom house at 1601 Main.

The Alliance decided that the larger house would be more suitable for the six Haitians, and Sedinger said if the current tenants don't come up with the rent by Tuesday, it would be available for $350 per month.

Any moving, however, would be delayed until "all six are on board," said White.

Jean and Lubin are apparently adjusting very well to American life after their flight from Haiti, according to reports made to the Alliance.

White said both men received $154 checks for their week's work, and after cashing the checks, placed $150 in savings accounts and kept $4 for themselves.

Both men were tailors in Haiti, Kelly said, and an interview at Walls Industries resulted in the management agreeing to hire the transplanted Haitians as spaces become available. "They both said they would rather work in a factory," said Kelly.

Nancy Kroger, who has been serving as interpreter for the Haitians, has acquainted them with the ins and outs of U.S. life: taking them to the doctor, the Walls Industries interview, to a social security office and shopping.

Farm price supports could double next year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite congressional efforts to rein in government farm price supports, budget analysts now predict the programs will cost nearly twice as much next year as they originally expected.

The Congressional Budget Office reported Wednesday that its estimate of less than $6.5 billion for 1983 price supports made earlier this year has been negated by the flagging rural economy. Instead, they will probably cost the government more than $12.1 billion.

That's just about what the administration expects to spend on price supports this year, meaning that government efforts to reduce the cost could effectively amount to nothing.

Analysts said the revised cost projection would have been even higher if Congress had not exceeded by about $500 million the 1983 spending cutbacks that were originally proposed.

Under most price support programs, farmers faced with market prices they feel are too low can get government loans on their crops from the Commodity Credit Corp. If the market price rises before the loan is due, they can repay the government, usually with interest, and redeem the crop for sale on the commercial market. But if the loan comes due and the price is still too low, the government keeps the crop and the farmer pays nothing.

Farmers also get direct payments from the government for idling set amounts of land and when the national average market price falls below a preset level.

New city's legality challenged

LAMESA (SC) — The newly-declared town of Los Ybanez met with its first legal challenge this week.

Two Dawson County residents, John Dell Barron and Milton Earnest, are filing a petition challenging the incorporation of the new city, which is located just outside of Lamesa.

The two filed a citation challenging the procedures to incorporate the city did not meet legal requirements. The citation also alleges that the effort to incorporate is a "scheme" by the mayor of the city, Israel Ybanez, and the two city commissioners, Mary Ibanez and Francisco Rodriguez, claiming they are only looking a local option election so they can sell alcoholic beverages.

Israel Ybanez, who was served with the citation earlier this week, says he feels the action is "silly" and that he will go along being the mayor of the new city and attend business as usual.

MEXICO'S ECONOMY

Dollars can't be spent inside Mexico...

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Americans entering Mexico must convert their dollars into pesos beginning today under a tough new policy to stop capital from leaving the country during the worst economic crisis in 70 years.

All banks were closed through Friday following President Jose Lopez Portillo's nationalization of private Mexican banks.

Regulations issued shortly after Lopez Portillo's state of the union address Wednesday said the government will control all currency exchange transactions.

All unauthorized currency transactions will be illegal and considered the same as trafficking in contraband, the government said.

Mexicans leaving the country will be forced to apply for permission to buy dollars, while people entering the country will have to declare how much money they are bringing with them and convert that currency into pesos.

That means Americans will have to convert their dollars into pesos at the port of entry. They will get a receipt and can change leftover pesos back into dollars when they leave Mexico, the government said.

The peso is the only legal tender in Mexico now and only banks can cash in dollars.

In his last state of the union message before leaving office Dec. 1, Lopez Portillo said the hardline measures were intended to prevent the flight of dollars by investors who own up to $25 billion in U.S. real estate. He said Mexicans have opened as much as $14 billion in foreign bank accounts recently.

Foreign banks are not affected by the nationalization order.

The presidential decree came as Mexico, strapped for cash because of falling oil revenues, faced its worst economic crisis since the 1910-1920 revolution.

The economic trouble includes 60 percent inflation, an $81 billion foreign debt — largest in the Third World — and a recession that is feeding chronic unemployment and underemployment now gripping 40 percent of the nation's work force.

The nationalization will halt the free flow of money from Mexico, in part caused by banks "that are sacking us," the president said in his speech delivered before a joint session of Congress.

...steps taken to keep pesos inside border

By Associated Press
Some border businesses, already reeling from the devaluation of the peso, received another jolt when the Mexican government announced it would nationalize privately owned banks and take steps to prevent money from leaving the country.

President Jose Lopez Portillo announced the nationalization Wednesday in his final State of the Nation address before leaving office Dec. 1. The action was the latest in a series of moves designed to halt Mexico's runaway economic crisis, the worst in 50 years.

"It's a black day for banking, a black day for Mexico," said Fernando Barrechea, president of Banco Ganadero in Nuevo Laredo. He said the nationalization was "a complete surprise" to Mexican bankers.

While Mexican bankers bemoaned the announcement, others in Mexico and the United States had cautious praise for it.

"It's absolutely positive," said Luis Vidal Quinones, a Ciudad Juarez union leader.

Wayne McClintock, El Paso publisher of the Mexico Report, said that although the action may hurt U.S. border businesses, it probably is the best thing for Mexico in the long run.

In his address, Lopez Portillo blamed Mexicans who invested their money outside the country for the economic crisis. He said $22 billion had been invested in foreign banks and real estate, most of it in the United States at spots like South Padre Island and the Ruidoso, N.M., ski resort.

The flow of money out of the country reduced reserves needed to pay Mexico's foreign debt of nearly $80 billion, the largest among developing countries, he said.

Lopez Portillo said he would initiate currency exchange controls designed to prevent more money from leaving the country. Under the new rules, border-area Mexicans would have special rights to obtain dollars on a quota system. Other Mexicans would have to apply for permission to receive dollars for foreign travel or to pay foreign debts.

McClintock said Lopez Portillo also might enact sanctions against businessmen who have been shown to invest north of the border.

"I expect to see a lot of Mexican businessmen coming out of the country," he said.

McClintock said the damage to retailers and other businessmen who depend on Mexican trade probably would not be known until it is determined how the Mexican public reacts to the announcements.

Dennis Franke of Franke Realty on South Padre Island said the action could hurt wealthy Mexicans who own about 35 percent of the property at the Gulf Coast retreat. The currency controls could force Mexicans to sneak money out of the country in order to meet mortgage payments, he said.

He wants to be the first to circle world with a helicopter

DALLAS (AP) — In the Perot family, they take one-upmanship seriously.

The 23-year-old son of Dallas entrepreneur H. Ross Perot took off Wednesday in a modified, million-dollar helicopter on a quest to be the first person to circle the globe in a chopper.

"This is something I've always wanted to do," said Ross Perot Jr. on the eve of his departure from Dallas Love Field. "But the hardest part was convincing my father to let me."

The elder Perot is no stranger to adventure. In 1978, the 52-year-old multimillionaire successfully organized the 1979 jailbreak of 11,000 prisoners in Iran. In 1970, he unsuccessfully tried to get supplies to American POWs in Vietnam.

Perot Jr. said he only began planning the 26-nation, 26,000-mile trip three weeks ago when he heard about Australian storeowner Dick Smith leaving Fort Worth on a year-long around-the-world helicopter tour.

Smith has already crossed the Atlantic and was greeted in England by Prince Charles. The Perot team expects to overtake him within the first week of their 30-day trip.

"Since America has always been the leader in aviation, I thought it was a shame for someone not a citizen of the United States to set the world record," Perot said.

Perot and Jay Coburn, a 35-year-old pilot from his father's Dallas-based Electronic Data Systems computer firm, are traveling in a two-seat Bell 206 Long-Ranger helicopter with extra fuel tanks that make its maximum range 1,000 miles.

Far-off storm Beryl said to be weakening

MIAMI (AP) — Forecasters kept an eye on three new tropical disturbances in the Caribbean today, while a weakened tropical storm Beryl continued to move across the eastern Atlantic Ocean.

Beryl, the second storm of the 1982 hurricane season, weakened Wednesday and early today, with maximum winds of 70 mph decreasing to 55 mph.

It was located almost 2,400 miles east of Miami and 1,450 miles southeast of Bermuda. Still many days from land, it was expected to maintain its strength through the day.

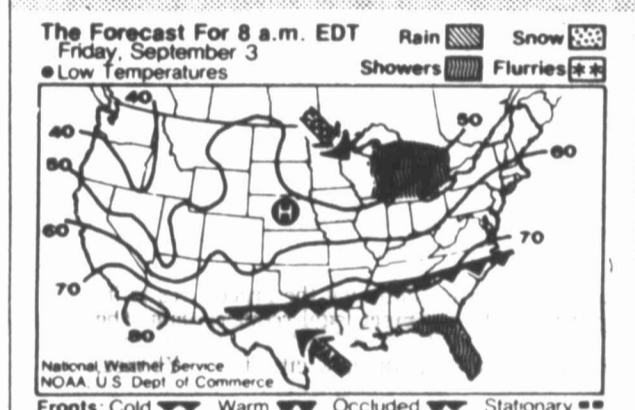

"Further slow strengthening is likely," hurricane forecaster Frank Sheets said, adding that it could still grow into a hurricane if conditions remain favorable. Tropical cyclones become hurricanes when their winds reach 74 mph.

At 6 a.m. EDT, Beryl was moving northwest at 10 mph, with little change in course expected. The storm was centered near latitude 19.7 north, longitude 45.6 west.

Another area of disturbed weather was approaching the lower Windward Islands, while yet another disturbed weather area 400 miles off the coast of Africa was becoming better organized, forecasters said.

1 union settles, but 6,000 teachers remain on strike

By Associated Press
Teachers in Michigan's second-largest school district ended a three-day strike and cleared the way for classes to begin today, but nearly 6,000 teachers remained on strike in four states, affecting about 113,000 students.

However, most schools around the nation don't open until after the Labor Day weekend and national teachers union officials said they don't expect a massive wave of strikes this year.

In Flint, Mich., the 1,800-member teacher's union reached a tentative contract agreement and members voted Wednesday night to return to work after walking off the job Monday.

Administrators expected classes for 31,000 students to begin today, although a ratification vote on the contract — which calls for raises of 6 percent each year for three years — has not been scheduled. Current salaries range from $14,759 to $27,065.

In Butte, Mont., a week-long strike by 500 teachers ended early today with a tentative one-year agreement for a 3 percent wage increase over current salaries of $10,000 to $26,000, and a new seniority clause. Classes for 6,800 students will begin Tuesday, officials said.

Meanwhile, 2,700 teachers remained on strike in Illinois, 1,900 in Pennsylvania, 350 in Ohio and 920 in Michigan, where a new strike began Wednesday in a suburban Detroit system.

Poles warned of crackdown

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's military rulers have urged a swift crackdown on dissidents and blamed Western subversion for this week's riots, which appear to have claimed at least three lives.

Official reports said police opened fire during protests on Tuesday in Lubin, a copper-mining town in southwest Poland, killing two demonstrators and wounding 12, three seriously.

The government said late Wednesday that a body had been found "in the area of disturbances" in Gdansk, the Baltic port that is the birthplace of Solidarity. The government did not say whether the 22-year-old man was a victim of the riot there.

Witnesses arriving in Warsaw said a man fitting the description of the victim was seen lying on the ground in a pool of blood after being hit on the back, but the reports could not immediately be checked.

The ruling military council, meeting in emergency session on the day after the riots, called for "prompt" actions on probes of dissidents from the Committee for Social Self-defense, or KOR, an intellectuals' group that was a key adviser to Solidarity.

Jacek Kuron and Adam Michnik, KOR's founders, are among hundreds of unionists and activists and their advisers who remain interned.

Another key dissident leader and organizer of the clandestine "Radio Solidarity," Zbigniew Romaszewski, was arrested by the authorities Tuesday. The arrest is a major blow to the underground, and comes amid an intense campaign against illegal print shops and groups banned by martial law.

Some western diplomatic observers said the call for a crackdown on dissidents could mean political trials for those already held will begin soon.

The headline army daily Zolnierz Wolnosci said Radio Free Europe, the U.S. station broadcasting to the Soviet bloc, should bear the blame for sparking the protests this week, which marked the second anniversary of Solidarity.

"One lacks words of condemnation," the paper said in a bitter commentary on the deaths in Lubin.

There was no new information on the Lubin deaths, as local officials refused comment and telephone lines to the city in southwestern Poland were still blocked.

The lay Catholic paper Slowo Powszechnie, meanwhile, condemned American policies of "international confrontation," saying they could lead "straight to civil war, to extreme tragedy."

"We believe that the majority of society understands that and that is why workers didn't respond to the calls of the underground," the paper said.

Chinese hope to quadruple their GNP

PEKING (AP) — China's Communist Party chairman has called for quadrupling the country's gross national product by the year 2000, placing China "in the front ranks of the world."

Chairman Hu Yaobang, in the major economic address Wednesday to the 12th Communist Party Congress, said economic modernization is China's top priority for the rest of this century.

Delegates to the congress broke into groups today to begin study of Hu's speech and the keynote address delivered by Hu's mentor, Deng Xiaoping. Foreign reporters were not allowed to attend the congress and obtained excerpts of Hu's speech from Xinhua, the government news agency.

Hu said that while the Chinese economy would remain socialist, the market mechanism and foreign technology imported from the capitalist world would play a role.

His speech was almost a complete reversal of the one delivered at the last, leftist-dominated congress in 1976 by the now-demoted Chairman Hua Guofeng. Hua at that time called for continuing "class struggle."

Hu said China would strive to quadruple its gross annual industrial and agricultural output from $364 billion to $1.4 trillion by the end of the century. By comparison, the 1980 U.S. gross national product was more than $2.6 trillion.

Hu affirmed China's open door policy and the need for judiciously imported foreign technology. He called for rational, readjusted growth, not blind production.

Market forces and the individual and collective economy are essential, although secondary to China's socialist economy, he said. The fundamental aim of economic modernization, he said, is to serve the people and meet their growing material and cultural needs.

Hu said quadrupling output would place China "in the front ranks of the world in terms of gross national product" and increase the people's income "several times over." Per capita income still will be relatively low, he said, but economic muscle and defense will have increased considerably.

The new responsibility system in the countryside must be continued because it represents the will of the masses, he said.

Social Security: it needs fixing

The congressional session is winding down. Unfortunately, one of the crucial items on the agenda will not be dealt with.

Social Security is political hot potato. It is an issue with no easy answers and no popular solutions.

It is also a matter of great importance to many older Americans.

SINCE THE MIDDLE of the 1970s, Social Security has had massive deficits ranging from $5 billion to $9 billion. This year it is expected to reach $10 billion. Congress has been warned repeatedly that the fund is dangerously close to bankruptcy.

One of the main problems is that the number of people supporting retirees is declining. Quite simply, more people are receiving from the system than are paying into it.

Solutions are simple to suggest, but nearly impossible to implement. More tax money can be put into the fund, but will require a large tax increase — never popular around election time.

IT PERHAPS makes more sense to raise the retirement age. That would make more people pay into the fund and less take from it. But if you do that you are telling a lot of people that they can not have what they were earlier told they were entitled to.

Election time is not the time for that either, it seems.

Most of all, the "Social Security System" needs to be redefined. Too much falls under its title and everyone expects something different from it.

But whatever is done, it needs to be done quickly. Social Security is too important an issue to be stuck on the political back-burner.

Around the Rim

By GREG JAKLEWICZ

The apartment

In today's never-ending struggle to keep high prices from eating the last bite of our sandwiches, wire editor Richard Horn and I decided to share an apartment. What is inflation's loss is now insanity's gain.

If you're an avid reader of this column or have a good memory, you may recall that it was Little Richard and I that rewrote the books on "cool" when we cruised the Sonic one spring night long ago. Now when we stop in, the place clears out. All that's left are the families of eight in station wagons.

WE HAVE a great apartment. First of all, we live right above the boss. Not the boss of the apartments but Managing Editor Linda Adams of this very newspaper. We were jokingly warned that loud music might be detrimental to our paychecks by Linda, but husband Billy okayed a turning up of the volume during the afternoon Rock & roll, he said, cleared the cobwebs from his head.

We had all the furniture we needed except for a dining room set. Since we rarely eat at home, or in front of the stereo when we do, it wasn't a necessity. But still we have a dining area with nothing but carpet and a fancy lighting arrangement overhead. We've thought about what to do. Option A is waiting until the holidays and putting our Christmas tree there. Option B is converting it into a lighted dance floor (how about that, Linda). Option C is buying a piano and making it a practice room.

Right now, Option A is holding its own. We'll save our pennies all fall and hope we piggy-bank enough to buy a Christmas tree.

SINCE TWO of us our battling big price tags, we've decided to join forces and whip food costs.

My objective, really, is to put some meat on Little Richard's bones. If he doesn't eat better, I told him, I'll hang him on the door at Halloween as a skeleton.

Billy says fill him up with meat and potatoes but we're going fancier. To celebrate getting all our junk moved in (and half of that thrown right back out), we grilled some steaks a week ago. Of course, we forgot to pull them out of the freezer until the time we wanted to eat. We used every method short of a blow-torch to get them thawed out before our company arrived.

Speaking of food, our expert handling, preparation and buying selection will probably put gray in the hair of Don "So fresh and so delicious" Newsum.

Not convinced yet that fruit will go bad if you don't eat it right away, we usually end up with some very squishy bananas or very dried up cantaloupes. It smells like a real "farmer's market" in our place, one reason we didn't pick Option B (the lighted dance floor) for our dining room. Who wants to boogie in a produce department?

Now when we go to the food store, talk about two Scrooges. Hey, why pay more? Here's an example. Why pay 77 cents for 150 sheets of Kleenex when we can get 200 (that's 50 more) for 88 cents? Isn't that sharp thinking? Think of the money we can save on food and put to good use — like buying a new album or set of golf clubs.

One good thing, usually, of having a roommate is sharing stuff like clothes. That's a problem here, though. Little Richard (all 6-3, 140 pounds of him) doesn't quite match up to my squatty 5-11, 155 pounds. By comparison, we look like pool cue next to a fire hydrant. We tell girls we are football players...no wonder we haven't scored yet.

The situation should be mutually beneficial to both. I hope to develop Little Richard into the Incredible Hulk and he plans to teach me how to play the guitar like Jimi Hendrix. He'll get me to read intellectual books like "The World According to Garp" and I'll show him a great left-handed book shot he can use in the winter basketball leagues.

The main thing is, we'll beat the high cost of living and still be living high at the same time. That may be because we are on the second floor, but it sure beats being broke and in the basement.

Say, Rich, you think we can move a piano up by ourselves?

'Limits to Growth,' plus 10

Ten years ago, as a freshman economics student, I got a chilling introduction to the subject: a new study warning of an impending global catastrophe. Only later did I learn that my instructor assigned it as an example of bad economics and bad forecasting.

But 10 years after its appearance in this country, the ideas propagated in "The Limits to Growth" still influence the way many people look at the world.

And why now? By most measures the book, written by a group of scientists at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for the previously obscure Club of Rome, was a spectacular success.

The National Observer said it "may be as important to mankind as the Council of Nicaea and Martin Luther's 95 Theses." Anthony Lewis of The New York Times called it "one of the most important documents of our age." It was hailed by such environmentalist thinkers as Lester Brown and Garrett Hardin. It sold 3 million copies worldwide.

The report argued that continued growth in population and economic output will soon exhaust the earth's resources and produce fatal amounts of pollution. Unless these trends are halted, it predicted a Malthusian catastrophe within 100 years — "a sudden and uncontrollable decline in both population and industrial capacity." The conclusions became articles of faith among the disciples of the "small is beautiful" school.

Even at the time, there were obvious flaws in the study. Nowhere, for example, did it acknowledge that when death rates declined, birth rates invariably follow — an admission that would have produced entirely different results.

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — The cigarette industry is engaged in a multimillion-dollar "Tar Wars," with The Force being applied against one company by its competitors.

Rival cigarette makers complained to the Federal Trade Commission about the tar content of Brown & Williamson's Barclay cigarettes. Acting on test data supplied by the competitors, the FTC last June determined that Barclay cigarettes have a filter that fooled the commission's tar-testing machines.

Instead of the one milligram of tar that Barclay has been claiming, the FTC found the level was anywhere from three to seven milligrams per cigarette.

Brown & Williamson went to court to keep the FTC from elaborating on its findings, and a federal judge in Kentucky temporarily stopped the agency from proceeding further.

The injunction, however, doesn't apply to me. Here's what the makers of Barclay didn't want the smoking public to know:

According to a June 1 memo written by FTC official Timothy Muris, "all three of our consultants have concluded quite clearly that Barclay cigarettes smoke significantly differently in human lips than they do in our machines."

Muris added: "All agree that the Commission should act now to inform consumers that Barclay is not a 1-

NOR DID the authors heed the most basic axioms of economics, such as the role of prices. The report assumed that the consumption of resources would increase exponentially until they were completely exhausted. But long before that point, rising prices would intervene to reduce consumption of a given commodity, encourage the discovery (or fabrication) of new sources, and stimulate the emergence of alternatives.

Ten years after, it's also possible to compare the expectations of the authors with actual developments. One resource for which demand was rapidly increasing in 1972 is oil. Between 1947 and 1972, world oil production rose by more than 500 percent. "The Limits to Growth" suggested that it would grow at an even faster rate in the coming years, and that the earth's oil resources would dwindle even further.

In fact, both assumptions were wrong. Between 1972 and 1980, world oil production rose by only 17 percent — a sharp reduction in the rate of growth. Nor did this reflect growing scarcity. Energy crisis or no, the world's proven reserves of oil actually rose by 21 percent during the 1970s. The explanation for both trends was higher oil prices — a possibility the Club of Rome ignored.

THEN THERE is population growth, the authors' gravest worry. Who could have predicted 10 years ago that U.S. birth rates would drop not only to the "zero population growth" level but well below it? Or that the world's growth rates, which the Club of Rome expected to accelerate, would decline?

In the Third World, as author

William Tucker notes in his new book, "Progress and Privilege," the transition from large families to small ones "is occurring faster than it ever happened in Western history." India, once the most dramatic example of the consequences of overpopulation, is now self-sufficient in food.

Then there is pollution, another instance where exponential growth was anticipated. But by the time the report was issued, federal laws were in place to avert that prospect — and they have worked.

The 1981 report of the Council on Environmental Quality found that in recent years "there has been a noticeable improvement in air quality" and that "despite a growing population and an increased gross national product, there has been little or no change in water quality nationally." Other industrialized countries have also mounted successful efforts to reduce air and water pollution.

What all this illustrates is not merely the futility of trying to predict the future. It also shows how dangerous it is to ignore the capacity of humans to act rationally to advance their own well-being. Almost any of the predictions made by the Club of Rome could have been made by earlier generations (and in fact were). But like the horizon, the day when we will use up all the earth's bounty keeps receding as we advance.

If these facts aren't persuasive, consider this: In 1976, the Club of Rome's call for a halt in economic growth was repudiated by no less an authority than the Club of Rome. On the 10th anniversary of the appearance of "The Limits to Growth," and the 26th anniversary of the birth of Thomas Malthus, that deserves to be remembered.

Low-tar cigarette isn't so low

milligram tar cigarette."

THE INTERNAL FTC documents, obtained by my associate Tony Capaccio, show that the agency relied heavily on research data submitted by R.J. Reynolds and Philip Morris.

One consultant, Dr. Lyhnn Kozlowski, had this to say in his suppressed report: "In my opinion, the Philip Morris and R.J. Reynolds research strongly supports the conclusion that Barclay delivers tar and nicotine out of proportion to the FTC rating."

Another consultant, Dr. Fred Block, write: "The preponderance of data thus indicates that the FTC tar and nicotine values of Barclay cigarettes are misleading... The data do indicate the present need for action."

The FTC's draft statement, suppressed by the court order, states that Barclay cigarettes "are more appropriately ranked at significantly higher levels of tar and nicotine" than their currently advertised levels. "The relative delivery of carbon monoxide is significantly greater than suggested by the current FTC rankings."

What's more, the statement warns, because of the unique construction of Barclay filters, higher tar levels "occur automatically and cannot be avoided by informed consumers."

Health considerations aside, the stakes in the Barclay controversy are enormous. As smokers continue to favor low-tar cigarettes, a low FTC rating is pure gold for a tobacco company. In its 18 months on the market, Barclay has captured a 1.5 percent share of the cigarette market. Industry figures indicate that each percentage point of market share is worth $130 million a year.

Footnote: A Brown & Williamson spokesman said it was Barclay's success in cutting into the market that caused the competition to complain. "We feel that in singling out Barclay, the FTC has bowed to a competitive ploy," he said.

CUSTOMS COWBOY: U.S. Park Police keeping their eye on a "Yipie" marijuana smoke-in near the White House last July 3 were understandably concerned when they spotted a pistol holster sticking out from under the motorcycle jacket of a casually dressed man.

Under questioning, the man identified himself as a Customs Service security agent, and said he was "gathering evidence" for his boss. But the Park Police thought he was "acting funny," so they relieved him of his Smith & Wesson handgun and hauled him in.

After a few hours of confusion, Customs supervisors verified the gun-toting spy's identity, and were able to retrieve both him and his weapon. Customs sources say he didn't have

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Why do you think so many marriages are breaking up today? — Mrs. R.D.

DEAR MRS. R.D.: I am sure there are many reasons for this critical problem. For example, movies and television have often given young people an unrealistic view of love and marriage. They have come to believe (for instance) that love is basically a wonderful emotional experience, and when the inevitable stresses of marriage come and the emotion fades, they may feel that love has ended and marriage is no longer important. Or again, there are many strong pressures on marriage today — the pressure to get ahead and be financially successful, for example, which may make a husband (or wife) become selfish or neglectful. Many other reasons could be given.

I believe, however, that there is a more basic problem today, and that is the spiritual problem which is behind many, many broken marriages. We have forgotten that marriage is not merely a matter of convenience, but it is a solemn responsibility given us by God. It is God who created marriage, not man, and God takes marriage very seriously. That is why young people should be taught that marriage is a serious matter and should not be entered into casually. Nor should it be dissolved casually, for divorce is a very serious matter in God's eyes also. Jesus said, "At the beginning of creation God made them male and female." For this reason a man will leave his father and mother and be united to his wife, and the two will become one flesh. So they are no longer two, but one. Therefore what God has joined together, let man not separate." (Mark 10:6-9).

The key to a successful marriage is Christ. If you are contemplating marriage, determine that you will seek the partner of God's choice and that you will make Christ Lord of your marriage. If you are married, make Christ the center of your marriage and seek to honor him in all you do. How ever others in our society view marriage, you determine that by God's grace you will let him rule in your marriage.

Thoughts

It takes a man twenty-five years to learn to be married; it's a wonder women have the patience to wait for it.

permission to carry his pistol outside the office, and an internal investigation was made into the embarrassing incident.

Customs officials would not comment on what, if any, disciplinary action was taken against the agent, but offered assurance that all personnel were now "sensitive to firearms policy" if they weren't before.

MISSED POINT: The Voice of America recently taped what Washington officials figured would be a dynamite feature for the radio's Korean listeners: a story on Peter Kim, Korean-American star place-kicker for the University of Alabama. But when the tape arrived in Seoul for broadcasting, officials there had to do it all over again. Reason: Most Koreans, especially in the North, don't have the foggiest idea of what American-style football is all about, let alone place-kicking.

LET'S SEE: M-I-S-S-I... As one of Washington's better-known Republicans, House Minority Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi is regarded by GOP candidates as a valuable endorsement to get. One such hopeful, Manuel Iglesias, got Lott to sign a fundraising invitation to help Iglesias raise money for his campaign against Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla.

The letter had "Congressman Trent Lott" printed in bold letters across the top.

Car plows into New Orleans crowd

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A teacher was arrested after his speeding car plowed through tourists, vendors and street entertainers along crowded Bourbon Street, sending pedestrians flying and injuring up to 15 people, police said.

Among those hurt Wednesday night was a 14-year-old street dancer; struck and dragged briefly after the car burst through steel barricades and careened about seven blocks down the pedestrian mall in the nightclub heart of the French Quarter, officers said. The street is closed to vehicles during the evening.

The car's driver "wasn't hitting anything but people," said Bonnie Harnois, whose flower cart is at the corner of Bourbon and Toulouse. Witnesses estimated the vehicle sped at up to 40 mph down Bourbon Street, which is hardly wide enough for two buses to pass each other.

Homer Robinson, 32, a teacher from the Algiers section of New Orleans, was arrested after the car was stopped at the edge of the quarter, said Police Sgt. Ray Burkhart.

Robinson, being held at Charity Hospital for examination and blood analysis, would be booked on 15 counts of causing negligent injury, reckless driving and related charges, Burkhart said.

"At this point we have no motive or reason why the man did what he did," said police spokesman Gus Krinke.

Within an hour of the 8:20 p.m. incident, the neighborhood's nightclubs were again blaring out jazz while striptease dancers enticed passing pedestrians and hot dog vendors and flower sellers pushed their wares. At least seven major conventions were in town.

A car careened along a similar Bourbon Street route in April 1972, killing one person and injuring 18.

The most seriously injured Wednesday was street dancer Maseo Thomas, 14, who suffered head injuries.

Also hurt was his 19-year-old brother, Darryl, who said the two teen-agers were "standing by the barricade and this dude came from Canal Street. He stopped a little bit but then he just slammed on the gas. He ran over my little brother" and dragged him about six feet.

Krinke said two police officers saw the car speeding down Bourbon with a woman sprawled across the hood. The woman rolled off and the car turned left at Ursuline, then turned the wrong way on busy Rampart Street.

At Canal Street, it smashed into a car stopped at a traffic signal, where officers closed in and handcuffed the driver, Krinke said.

"I'm surprised he didn't run over more people," said taxi driver Huey Brown. "I don't know how they all got out of his way."

"I was getting ready to cross the street and saw this car flying down the street," said another witness, 41-year-old Gary Sage. "I yelled 'Get out of the way!' It was coming down around 35 to 40 miles an hour. It wasn't stopping for nothing."

Michigan judge wants his raise

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A county library apparently is benefitting from a judge's displeasure with a city council over the size of his paycheck.

East Lansing District Judge Daniel Tschirhart is diverting most of the fines assessed in his court from the city to the county library.

"I'm the only city employee with no raise this year," Tschirhart said Tuesday. "And that's happened twice in three years."

Tschirhart said his $51,252 salary makes him one of the lowest-paid district judges in the area.

The judge said he's diverting fees to the Ingham County Library because "the city has a lot of money, and the library needed money." The switch means a loss of about $55,000 a year for the city — and a similar gain for the library.

District court judges in Michigan can decide how to divide their fines between court costs and general fund. Court costs go to the local government's general fund, while penal fines go to the county library.

In the past, 95 percent of the fines levied by Tschirhart were deemed court costs and went to the city. Now, 95 percent of his fees are called penal fines and go to the county library.

Mayor Larry Owen said there is "just no justification for that kind of behavior. There's no other possible explanation than that he's angry he didn't get a small raise."

District judges in Michigan earn from $44,780 to $60,720. The average salary is $56,403, according to the administrator's office. In addition to his salary, Tschirhart receives a $720 annual car allowance.

BACK TO PRISON — Joseph "Jo-Jo" Giorgianni, a 565-pound man found guilty of a sex offense, is escorted from court in Trenton, N.J., after a judge who recently freed

Jo-Jo from prison ordered him back behind bars Wednesday.

565-lb. sex offender back in prison

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — After nearly a month of freedom and a storm of protest, Joseph "Jo-Jo" Giorgianni is back in prison, and the jailing of the 565-pound sex offender probably will help his victim, her sister says.

"At least he's behind bars. I think that will help her a lot," said Delores Milewski, 23, a sister of the unidentified girl who was 14 years old when she was sexually abused by Giorgianni in 1978.

"Now he's going to get what he deserves. It's been four years," Mrs. Milewski said.

The obese convict, who suffers from asthma and other respiratory ailments, was returned to custody Wednesday by Superior Court Judge Richard J.S. Barlow Jr., who had freed Giorgianni on Aug. 6 after only a week in prison.

Giorgianni, 33, was sent to a state prison hospital for tests to determine where he can safely serve his 15-year term. His emergency requests to be free on bail pending appeals were denied Wednesday by an appeals court and a state Supreme Court justice.

Barlow, who had reduced Giorgianni's sentence to three years of probation and a $2,000 fine, said he had ordered the release because evidence indicated the fat man could die if confined without adequate air conditioning, a ready supply of oxygen, easy access to a bathroom and dining area, and 24-hour medical attention.

Since then, however, the prosecution presented new evidence refuting Giorgianni's claims.

At a special hearing Tuesday, two witnesses said they saw Giorgianni five times recently at an Atlantic City casino without a cane, oxygen or any other medical assistance. A videotape showed Giorgianni lighting a cigar at the casino.

A doctor who had examined Giorgianni testified it appeared he had been feigning an asthma attack during the exam, and the doctor concluded imprisonment would not be fatal. He said Giorgianni's health problems were due to the fact that he was obese.

Two state corrections officials testified they would provide whatever was necessary to keep Giorgianni alive.

Giorgianni, a sandwich shop operator, and Clarence "Larry" Sindora, 26, both of Trenton, were convicted in 1980 of carnal abuse and debauching the morals of a minor.

According to court records, Giorgianni and Sindora plied a 14-year-old female customer with liquor in the back room of Giorgianni's sandwich shop in October 1978. The girl lapsed in and out of consciousness as the men sexually assaulted her, records show.

Sindora started serving his 15-year term Aug. 4 and is in prison.

After Giorgianni was freed, Mercer County Prosecutor Philip Carchman, New Jersey Gov. Thomas H. Kean and area newspapers received hundreds of letters and telephone calls protesting the release.

After the judge revoked Giorgianni's $15,000 bail and ordered him to prison Wednesday, he left the courthouse in a van, which was listing to one side as it pulled away.

He will stay in the 13-bed prison unit at St. Francis Medical Center for tests before receiving a permanent assignment, Corrections Department spokesman James Stabile said.

Giorgianni will be eligible for parole in two years, seven months and 10 days, Carchman said.

Giorgianni's lawyer, E. John Wherry Jr., said he was appealing the imprisonment, claiming Barlow did not have the authority to increase Giorgianni's sentence once it was reduced.

Man sentenced to die for Abilene murder

ABILENE (AP) — A 26-year-old Abilene man has been sentenced to death by lethal injection after being convicted of capital murder in the slaying and torture of an elderly artist.

But before he was sentenced Wednesday morning, Wayne East either tried to commit suicide in his jail cell or staged a suicide attempt to escape, authorities said.

East was convicted Tuesday of the Nov. 23 murder of 77-year-old Mary Eula Sears. Police said Ms. Sears was tied to a chair and tortured by East to make her tell him where she kept her valuable jewels.

He stood motionless Wednesday as the jury's sentence was read after 18 minutes of deliberation.

East was treated at the Taylor County jail by Abilene Emergency Medical Service personnel shortly after midnight Wednesday, records show.

Jail Administrator Wendell Griffis testified in court before the sentencing that he went to East's cell on the third floor at 12:06 a.m. and found him "laying in the doorway of his cell ... breathing very well, staring at the ceiling, apparently conscious."

He said East lay there about 15 minutes after paramedics and a doctor were called.

Griffis said his attention was diverted by "a commotion in the next cell" and that when he turned around, East had Deputy Sheriff Sam Peak on the floor and was "on top of him." Griffis said four deputies were needed to handcuff East.

Sheriff John Middleton declined to comment on the incident, citing a "gag rule" imposed by State District Judge Billy John Edwards on all officials concerned with the trial.

'Hill Street' has one Emmy all locked up

NEW YORK (AP) — Looking for a sure thing? Bet your local patsy that somebody from "Hill Street Blues" will win an Emmy for best supporting actor when the awards are handed out Sept. 19.

It's a lock. All five nominees in this category come from NBC's classy cop show: Taurean Blaque (Neal Washington), Michael Conrad (Phil Esterhaus), Charles Haid (Andy Renko), Michael Warren (Bobby Hill) and Bruce Weitz (Mick Belker).

This is another example of how "Hill Street," which received 21 Emmy nominations, is exceptional. Most dramatic series are star vehicles. Tom Selleck is "Magnum, P.I." Jack Klugman is "Quincy." William Shatner is "T.J. Hooker."

The supporting casts in these shows are not memorable. They may be moaners, cynics or cheerful helpers, but they never get to develop as characters. They serve primarily as foils for the main man, or because it wouldn't look good to have Magnum always talking to himself.

But "Hill Street" is a true ensemble show of 14 living, screaming and kicking characters. Executive Producer Steven Bochco says only Capt. Frank Furillo, played by Daniel J. Travanti, is indispensable.

"The precinct is a collection of loonies, and he's the only sane one," says Bochco.

The acting on "Hill Street" certainly contributes to its quality, but so does the writing. Characters who are credible and identifiable need to be nurtured on paper before becoming real on screen.

And, more than anything else, that's what sets "Hill Street Blues" apart from the rest of the TV world, making the program a good bet to win its second consecutive Emmy as best dramatic series.

No other show can spur cocktail party conversation about the qualities and quirks of its characters. These players are real people on film, receiving loyalty, compassion and understanding from their viewers.

And no other show can boast supporting characters who are so multidimensional that a string of adjectives can describe their usual patterns of behavior and the kinds of people they are:

Renko is cynical, callous, childish, chauvinistic, bigoted, vulgar, lackadaisical, insensitive and vulnerable. Belker is raunchy, crazed, gentle, devoted, alienated and vulnerable.

Esterhaus is clownish, authoritative, unflappable, pompous, urbane, compassionate and vulnerable. Hill is warm, understanding, sensible, dedicated, tolerant and vulnerable.

Washington is calm, patient, loyal, serious, diplomatic, compliant and vulnerable.

And these are just the five male nominees for best supporting actor. The same word game can be played with every character.

Furillo is sympathetic, tough, decisive, assured, fair and sensitive. Joyce Davenport (Veronica Hamel), is bright, blunt, aristocratic, aloof and alluring.

'If you're not goin' up, you're goin' down'

Why Kenny Rogers made a movie

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "In this business if you're not goin' up, that means you're goin' down." That's Kenny Rogers' explanation why he made his feature-film debut in the nation's theaters this summer.

The 20th Century-Fox release was called "Six Pack," and it made little attempt to exploit his fame as a country music superstar. His barroom baritone was heard only over the beginning and end titles. During the film, he raced stock cars and traveled the track circuit in a van with his adopted family of six mildly larcenous youngsters, Diane Lane and five younger brothers.

Between rehearsals for Johnny Carson's "Tonight" show, the bearded, burly Rogers reflected on his acting career.

"I never had any big, burning desire to be an actor. I feel the same way about acting as I do about cocktail parties: I hate to go, but once I'm there I have a great time and don't want to leave.

"I look at it this way: music is something I do; acting is something I can do. There are actors who can act and there are those who can act with believable dialogue and believable situations. I fall into the latter category. I believe I have the capability to act if the conditions are right.

"I grew up in what you might call the ghetto area of Houston. They had free Saturday matinees for the kids, and I grew up on Buck Rogers serials, a lot of Gene Autry and Hopalong Cassidy. Those were my heroes, but I never thought of myself in their shoes.

"But in the entertainment business," Rogers says,

"you've always got to get hotter in order to maintain your level. I could always do music, but I wanted to open up other options. One of them was acting. I considered it whenever I thought of myself at the age of 90 or 95 still singing 'Ruby, Don't Take Your Love to Town.' Actors last longer than singers."

Rogers' first acting venture was a television smash hit. "The Gambler" was based on his million-dollar single, and the two-hour movie scored a sensational 49 share, meaning that almost half of the nation's TV sets in use were tuned to Kenny Rogers. He followed with another movie based on a million-dollar, "Coward of the County." It was less successful — only a 48 share.

Quite naturally, 20th Century-Fox was impressed by such numbers and agreed to sponsor "Six Pack." Daniel Petrie ("Eleanor and Franklin," "Sybil") directed the film on locations in the South.

"The real difference between a feature and a TV movie is that you add two months of shooting," observed Rogers. "Otherwise they're basically the same thing.

"The only real problem with 'Six Pack' is that when we started shooting in Atlanta in January, three inches of snow were on the ground — and we were shooting a summer movie. It was a bit hectic spending three months in a van with six kids. But I was proud of myself. I never hit one of 'em."

More movies? Rogers said he might do one more. "If I were motivated, which means if I like the story. If that one goes well, then I might do more. If not, well, I still got my music."

Are OTC drugs inexpensive?

COLLEGE STATION — Is "doctoring" yourself cheaper or not? Americans spend more than $3.5 billion a year "doctoring" themselves with non-prescription drugs readily available at pharmacies and supermarkets, says Beverly Rhoades, a consumer information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Sometimes these medicines neither prevent nor cure illness or discomfort. In fact, if consumers keep a record of these expenses, most will be surprised at how much they spend," the specialist says. In addition, many consumers are concerned about their prescription-medicine expenses.

What can consumers do? Realize that prescription and over-the-counter (OTC) medicine indeed constitutes a sizable part of medical expenses, the specialist says. Then take a hard look at both types of medicine — with your own buying-and-use procedures in mind. In each case, decide if you're getting the most effective results possible for the most economical prices.

Before taking any more over-the-counter (OTC) medicines, ask yourself these questions: Are the drugs safe for general use without a doctor's supervision? Does the label warn you not to take the drug if a certain illness or condition exists? Can you take the drug safely in combination with other drugs you now take? Does the label warn about possible side effects? Do the drugs really do what the makers claim they will?

If you had to say "no" to any of those questions, avoid treating yourself, Rhoades cautions.

Personal 'Packaging' is believed to be an important skill for women

WASHINGTON (AP) — People may want to be judged by their talents, but, as Barbara Blaes has discovered, initially everyone is judged by his or her personal appearance.

"The idea of image is being taken very, very seriously by corporations today because they realize that their image is enhanced by the image of those who work for them," Ms. Blaes said. "And women are beginning to realize that this whole idea of image is not vain, it's not phony and it's not foolish. Actually, it's a business skill. It's a business tool. And it's something we can use to our advantage."

Ms. Blaes was among a group of panelists who discussed "Personal Packaging: the Key to Career Success" here recently, sponsored by the National Council of Career Women Foundation and the Clairco Co. Scholarship Program.

She said she had become aware of the importance of personal appearance while working as the director of publications for an educational association. As part of her job, she traveled across the United States, giving speeches and participating in panel discussions.

Ms. Blaes said she had begun to notice that at professional meetings, most of the men looked like professionals, while most of the women looked like support staff, even though they were giving reports and held very responsible jobs.

"At one particular meeting, a woman got up to give a report. She was dressed in either a pink or orange polyester pant suit. She was halfway through her talk before I realized that she had something to say. I was stunned that I had discounted her because she did not look to me like an authority," Ms. Blaes said.

This incident gave Ms. Blaes the idea of starting her own image-consulting firm, Blaes and Associates, located in the Washington, D.C. area.

Ms. Blaes said when women thought about their image, they thought in terms of getting a haircut, buying some clothes for work or changing the color of their lipstick.

"The idea of putting yourself together as a package and presenting yourself to others as effectively and efficiently as you can is somewhat a new idea for many women," she said. But, she added, a woman can engineer her appearance so that she can present an aura of commitment and trustworthiness.

William Morin, another panelist, also stressed the importance of appearance. He is chairman and chief executive officer of Drake, Beam, Morin Inc., an international human-resources management consulting firm based in New York City.

Morin said that companies when they were hiring people, were buying image and that image according to a Harvard University study, is made or broken in the first 10 seconds of a job interview.

"The rest of the time, after the first 10 seconds, is either putting pluses or negatives on it. And it's that handshake, the firmness of it, the image, and from there on, it's up or down," he said.

Of course, image isn't the only key to success in business, the speakers agreed. Ms. Blaes stressed that one ounce of image went along with every pound of performance.

Exercises relieve the stress placed on damaged joints

ATLANTA (AP) — Exercises can relieve much of the stress placed on damaged joints if begun in the early stages of arthritis, says the Arthritis Foundation.

"Hands, feet, hips and knees affected by arthritis can't endure the same exertion that is placed on healthy joints," said Dr. Frederic C. McDuffie of the foundation. "But if you are careful not to strain your joints, particularly early in the course of the disease, you may retain good use of them longer."

He suggests following a prescribed exercise program to maintain range of motion in joints, and avoiding tasks that force

Dear Abby

Daughter speeds dad's trip to grave

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps there's no answer for me, but I must try. Because of multiple medical problems, I'm dying much sooner than I should. My heart, however, is dying faster.

I was divorced from my daughter's mother when my daughter was 3. Since that time I have given my daughter everything she ever wanted. She is now 19, attending college locally — five miles from my home, and one mile from her mother's home.

My daughter drives a beautiful sports car — a gift from me. She doesn't pay one cent for fuel, upkeep, repair, taxes, etc. I do. She has no money worries, thanks to the trust fund I established for her. She wears beautiful clothes and jewelry — gifts from me. Everything I own has been willed to her with no strings attached. All these years I have remained unmarried, and have skipped in order to give my daughter all these things.

My daughter doesn't come to see me. She drove over here seven weeks ago and stayed five minutes. She's never spent a holiday with me. Christmas Eve she came to pick up her presents and didn't even sit down. When she talks with me on the phone, it's always in a sarcastic, hateful manner. Once she came right out and told me she didn't care if she never saw me again!

I am barely able to move around and must remain on oxygen 22 hours a day due to cardiopulmonary disease. I am going into a VA nursing home because I can no longer care for myself physically. My daughter won't even consider handling things for me. She wrote saying, "I don't want you to talk to me about death." I haven't, but I do use the phrase, "If I'm not around anymore."

If anyone has any suggestions, I would appreciate them. However, don't tell me to tell my daughter I love her, I've told her a million times.

BROKENHEARTED IN ABILENE, TEXAS
DEAR BROKENHEARTED: Your story is not new. ("How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child!" — Shakespeare.) If there's a message in your sad letter, it's this: Love cannot be bought with money.

Dr. Donohue

Drugs effective for narcolepsy

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I would like you to tell me the name of the sleeping problem my niece has. She gets real tired and falls asleep. She is washing dishes, or driving a car, or just standing, and it can happen. However, she wakes up quickly. She had a car wreck once. She doesn't drink or take medicine. This doesn't happen too often. I do hope you can name the trouble she is having, and tell me if there is anything that can be done. — S.B.

I should not have to tell you that your niece has the kind of problem that calls for prompt medical evaluation. She may have narcolepsy, the irresistible urge to fall asleep during the day and under such circumstances as you mention in your letter. I should not have to point out how dangerous this is to her and others. You mention a car accident.

Certainly, narcolepsy is not the only possible cause of her troubles, but it is one that deserves immediate consideration. If she reports muscle weakness, hallucinations

DEAR ABBY: There have been many theories explaining why some people are always late for appointments, meetings, engagements, etc., but do you have any idea why some people have a mania for being early?

C. IN THE BRONX
DEAR C.: People with a mania for being early probably have a phobia about being late.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Bill in Columbus, Ohio": My sympathy, Bill, for I suffer an advanced stage of "quattrogenarianism" through my husband.

It could be worse, I guess, as it's well-known that if these conditions persist, one can develop centenarianism, and the prognosis is not too terrific!

ELIZABETH IN SEATTLE
DEAR ELIZABETH: Rejoice! Your chances for developing centenarianism (translation, "4-making it to 100") are vastly better today than they were 50 years ago. And I think that's pretty terrific.

DEAR ABBY: Your column about men and women in the service who rarely wrote home, much to the dismay of their parents, brought back memories. During World War II, I served aboard the U.S.S. Salamone.

I didn't write home, so my mother wrote to Franklin D. Roosevelt, then the president of the United States! Capt. Holbrook called me in for a little talk and requested that I write to my family. He also requested that I ask them not to write to the president again.

That did the trick. I wrote home every week thereafter.

TV crews irk Reagan staffers

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — The mountaintop overlooking President Reagan's ranch has been dubbed "Violation of Privacy Peak" by White House staffers irritated at network camera crews trying to take pictures of the vacationing chief executive.

Each day, crews from ABC, CBS and NBC trek up into the Santa Ynez Mountains and focus powerful lenses down on Reagan's ranch, about two miles away, hoping for a picture of the president horseback riding or doing ranch chores.

The competition for the closest shot has been gradually escalating with the arrival of more and more powerful equipment on each Reagan vacation.

One network correspondent privately calls it "the silly millimeter war."

This trip, there is unanimous agreement among the crews that CBS took top honors with a motor powered reflector telescope lens usually used for astronomy work.

CBS cameraman Greg Amadon said the network was renting the lens, rated at a maximum 40,000 millimeters, for $600 a week from a company in San Francisco.

On a recent clear morning, CBS was able to zoom in on the president walking from his ranch house to his stables. Viewers saw the president brushing down his horse and riding away.

The CBS pictures are so good that ABC producer Leo Meidlinger said he is thinking about using a similar lens on future trips.

NBC producer Jim Lee said his crew's lens, while not as big as the one used by CBS, is so powerful that it can't be used at full strength because heat waves and haze distort the picture. ABC and CBS have a similar problem, and it shows up with a wavy picture on the news.

The Reagan staff is not alone in its concern about the loss of Reagan's privacy.

"It offends my sensitivity to privacy," admits CBS producer Susan Zirinsky. However, she argues Reagan gave up his right to privacy when he ran for president.

Even so, she said the crews stay on the mountain long enough only to get a shot of Reagan's activity, usually four or five hours a day, and are not camped out at the observation post around the clock.

The networks' lens and camera equipment stood underneath a tent on the mountaintop to shield it from the sun during the day. At night, all the equipment is protected by a guard who also watches over a microwave transmitting dish.

For his part, the president is not concerned about the intrusion, according to one aide.

"I think he thinks it's a little silly," said the official. "It's the same stuff every day. He feels sorry for the guys (cameramen) who have to go up there every day."

Reagan raps Polish force

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan condemned Wednesday the use of force to break up demonstrations in Poland on the second anniversary of the Solidarity independent trade union.

"These events once again point up the need for reconciliation and restoration by the government of basic human rights in Poland," said White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes.

Speakes said the Polish government's crackdown against the demonstrators underscored the significance of the economic sanctions Reagan imposed in December against the Soviet Union and the military government in Warsaw.

Compensation upped for passengers bumped off flights

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attention airline customers: the government says you are again entitled to double compensation if you're bumped from a flight and aren't quickly provided with alternate transportation.

Now the bad news: You must pay new air travel taxes today even though President Reagan has not yet signed into law the bill establishing them, according to the Internal Revenue Service.

Both changes, announced Tuesday, will affect thousands of airline passengers in the United States every day.

The Civil Aeronautics Board reinstated double compensation as of Oct. 1 after suspending it for a year. The CAB dropped the double payment requirement after the strike by air traffic controllers in August 1981, because the number of flights was reduced.

"We feel the system is back enough to normal operations that the airlines can find alternative transportation (for a bumped passenger) within the time period," CAB spokesman Ted Lopatkiewicz said.

Under current regulations, a passenger who is bumped off a flight is entitled to the face value of the one-way ticket up to $200 as well as a flight to the original destination.

But under the double compensation provision an airline must pay double that amount if the passenger does not arrive at the destination within two hours of the original arrival time.

The two hours is extended to four hours on international flights.

Government estimates show that more than 90,000 passengers were involuntarily bumped from flights in 1981.

The bumping is attributed largely to the practice among airlines of overbooking flights because of expected "no-shows" — people who make a reservation and then don't show up to claim it.

Meanwhile, reporters curious about IRS authority to collect taxes before a tax bill is signed were told the agency was acting according to provisions contained in the measure.

Most of the provisions in the $98.3 billion bill, which Congress approved Aug. 19, concern 1983 taxes. But the tax changes concerning air travel and fuel were to take effect at 12:01 a.m. Wednesday.

"Despite the fact the president has not signed the bill, the applicable taxes should be collected as of Sept. 1, 1982, even though the bill may not be signed until after that date," an IRS statement said.

There was no indication when Reagan, vacationing in California, was likely to sign the bill, for which he had lobbied strenuously.

The airline tax changes include:

- An increase from 5 percent to 8 percent in the levy on commercial airline tickets and a new 5 percent tax on air freight.
- A new $3-per-person departure tax for passengers leaving the country.
- Increases in taxes on fuel used in private aviation.

Judge lets Braniff cut some pension checks

FORT WORTH (AP) — A group of retired Braniff International pilots has asked a federal judge to block a bankruptcy court decision that would slash the pilots' September pension checks by two-thirds.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge John Flowers ruled the grounded airline could reduce pension payments to retired pilots from $3,000 to $1,000 in September, and also give retired managers smaller checks.

Flowers ruled, however, that Braniff International Corp. must pay retired teamsters and machinists their full pension checks in September. The airline had wanted to cut machinists' and teamsters' September pension checks by as much as 40 percent.

The airline, which suspended operations and filed for protection in bankruptcy court in May, had asked the judge to permit reduced September pension payments from all four plans covering 9,700 retirees.

The checks were to be mailed today, but probably will be delayed, Braniff officials said.

Hal Gillespie, a lawyer for the group of retired Braniff pilots, asked U.S. District Judge Eldon B. Mahon of Fort Worth for a stay of Flowers' decision.

Earlier Tuesday, Gillespie asked Mahon to prevent Flowers from ruling on the pension plans at all, arguing that Flowers did not have jurisdiction over the plans. Mahon refused.

"The pension plan has to be resolved no matter what," Braniff President Howard Putnam said Tuesday.

He said the struggling carrier still is discussing with two other airlines the possibility of a joint operating agreement.

"No airline will come in and say, 'We'll assume your liabilities,'" Putnam said. "They say, 'We are ignoring the pensions. You'll have those solved.'"

Flowers ruled Tuesday that employees represented by the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers would be "irreparably harmed" by sudden slashes in their payments.

"We won, because the judge directed us in how to treat the pension plans," Mel Garbow, Braniff's attorney. "We wanted to treat everybody fairly, and that's what we wanted him to tell us to do."

The judge set a Sept. 14 hearing on Braniff's request to abandon the pension plans for the teamsters and machinists, the airline's largest unions, and turn them over to the federal Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp.

Arrangements to give the funds to the agency, which insures private pension plans, still must be negotiated. Payments from the agency would be considerably smaller than the Braniff checks.

First private space launching ready to lift off

HOUSTON (AP) — A 37-foot military surplus rocket stands poised on a sandy Texas island, ready for the first privately controlled launch of a spacecraft, officials of a Houston company announced here.

"We're confident it's going to work like a charm," said Donald K. Slayton, a former astronaut who is mission director for the launch attempt next Wednesday.

The solid-fueled rocket, named Conestoga I, is scheduled to carry a dummy payload to 192 miles above the earth where it will eject a shower of ice crystals and then fall into the Gulf of Mexico 321 miles from the Matagorda Island launch pad after a flight of about 10 minutes.

Space Services Inc. of Houston is paying about $2.5 million for the rocket and the launch facilities.

A liquid-fueled rocket financed by the company exploded on the launch pad last year during testing, something company officials said won't happen with the simpler solid-fueled rocket they're using this time.

Slayton said the Conestoga I is built around a Minuteman I second stage rocket engine that has a long history of successful launches. The company purchased the rocket from the government for $365,000.

Asked how confident he was the rocket would work, Slayton said: "About 99.4 percent."

The rocket will liftoff at 10 a.m. from a pad on the southern tip of Matagorda Island, north of Corpus Christi, and then arc out over the Gulf.

One minute, 20 seconds into the flight, a shroud covering the payload will be separated by small rocket thrusters and the rocket booster will burn for another five seconds. Then the booster will fall away and other rocket thrusters will send the 1,097-pound payload into a spin.

Four hundred pounds of water, carried for ballast, will eject from the craft at its highest point above the earth and Slayton said the water will immediately turn into a shower of ice crystals.

The craft is expected to splash into international waters of the Gulf of Mexico about 259 miles from the Texas coast.

Last August, SSI's liquid-fueled rocket, called Percheon, exploded spectacularly during an engine test at the Matagorda Island launch site. A fireball, fueled by kerosene and liquid oxygen, enveloped the pad and soared 200 feet in the air.

There were no injuries, but it set the SSI space plans back by six months and led the firm to select another engineering contractor team, and a different type of rocket.

David Hannah, a Houston businessman who is chairman of the board of SSI, said next week's test launch is critical for the company.

"We're still on trial," he said. "We've got to see whether we can do it... I have every confidence we will be (successful)."

The company is the first American firm to attempt to build and launch a spacecraft. Hannah said the firm plans to develop a launch system that can carry satellites into low earth orbit for commercial customers.

If next week's launch is successful, the firm should be ready to launch satellites within two years, he said.

Though SSI does not have any customers yet, several oil exploration companies have expressed interest, he said. SSI-launched satellites could be used to explore for oil and minerals, providing more exact data than is now available.

SSI's 57 investors already have spent $6 million to develop a satellite launching system, Hannah said.

Asked what his company could offer that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration or by the French commercial rocket system, Ariane, don't already, Hannah said: "We'll be able to be competitive in pricing, dependability and we'll be able to deliver more quickly than any others."

Clements tells Collins not to meddle with governor's campaign

FORT WORTH (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has blasted fellow Republican Jim Collins for "a breach of good taste and a breach of etiquette" and warned Collins not to meddle in Clements' re-election campaign.

Collins, who is running for the U.S. Senate, released a poll several weeks ago that indicated he was gaining on incumbent Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, a Democrat. But Collins' aides said the poll also showed Clements trailing his Democratic opponent, Attorney General Mark White.

"I consider it a breach of good taste and a breach of etiquette for someone to dip into my race," Clements said during a campaign stop here. "Mr. White can do what he wants. He's my competitor. But I don't like someone else dipping into my race."

"Put I'll tell you what," the governor said, "if it continues, what's good for the goose is good for the gander."

Clements' comments came after a speech to about 1,000 people at a reception for Young Professionals for Clements. The governor is in the middle of a two-week campaign tour across the state.

The governor never had responded to the poll commissioned by Collins, currently a U.S. representative, except to say that it was inaccurate. He has remained neutral in the Collins-Bentsen race.

Clements said he has seen four polls, all showing him "comfortably ahead" of White. One was conducted by a pollster he hired and another was by a national pollster who checks support for President Reagan, he said. Clements said the two others were Democratic polls.

The governor said he planned to have another poll conducted in a couple of weeks.

Clements said he is counting on the votes of Democrats to return him back into office, adding that 45 percent of all Texans say they are ticket splitters.

"You can't imagine how important that is to the election process in Texas," Clements said.

Chemical's study may be an aid to brain transplants

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES — The discovery of a natural chemical the brain uses to repair itself should boost rapidly-expanding research on partial brain transplants, a psychologist says.

"The reason all this sounds far-fetched is because people think about (transplanting) the whole brain, instead of just a part of it," said Carl Cotman of the University of California-Irvine. "We're just trying to repair or replace a nick in the brain. Given that, I don't think it sounds so eerie."

In a series of experiments in which a portion of rats' brains were cut away and replaced by brain tissue transplanted from unborn rats, Cotman said his group found growth factor proteins that "help the brain's repair capacity and help the graft survive."

The growth stimulant, its existence long suspected, apparently is produced in direct response to injury and peaks in concentration three to six days after tissue is surgically removed, he said in an interview.

"More of the neurons that we transplant stay alive when we put them in after a delay (to catch the peak). They grow out very vigorously and they make many of the connections that had been lost" through removing the original tissue, he said.

That finding should help other researchers now experimenting with transplants, Cotman said. Growth factors, if isolated and purified, might even be inserted with transplants to improve success, he said.

The research, which also involved Ellen Lewis and Manuel Nieto-Sampedro of UCI and a UC-San Diego team headed by Silvio Varon, Marston Manthorpe, Stephen D. Skaper, Gilles Barbin and Frank M. Longo, was reported in the Aug. 27 issue of the journal Science.

Cotman speculated that years from now treatment with growth factors might be tried to stop or slow progressive brain deterioration, such as in some forms of senility.

Researchers around the world are proving they can transplant a piece of one animal's brain into the brain of another. The new tissue usually survives and often automatically hooks itself accurately into the brain it is joining. The result in many cases is the correct, though seldom full-scale, production of vital hormones.

The peculiar nature of the brain all but eliminates the problem of rejection, which bedevils most organ transplants, and Cotman said the surgical technique "is not terribly difficult."

Cotman, a major figure in such research, said some scientists have even found they can inject brain cells into an animal's brain and "they definitely become part of the (brain) tissue. They migrate to the correct positions and, as far as people can tell, they do all right. It really is the stuff of science fiction."

Swedish scientists this year took a portion of a human's adrenal gland and transplanted it to another part of the same person's brain in hopes of easing severe Parkinson's disease, a progressive neurological disorder involving loss of a specific hormone. The transplant was made, but the improvement was described as slight.

Cotman says years of work with animals are still needed before humans reap the potential of brain transplants. Although scientists have shown transplants can survive and form connections, they don't know whether every hook-up is made and the result is functional in all respects.

Condor program funding might be cut by Audubon

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The National Audubon Society threatened Wednesday to pull its funding from a program to save the California condor after the state virtually banned the attaching of radio transmitters to their wings.

Society biologist John Ogden, co-director of the Condor Recovery Program in Ventura, says if the California Fish and Game Commission does not lift the restrictions imposed last month, the society will abandon the three-year program begun last year. The commission imposed the restrictions because it was worried that the birds would be injured during the capture.

The project, billed as the most ambitious effort ever undertaken to save an endangered species, is conducted jointly by the society and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Noel Snyder, the federal agency's co-director of the program with Ogden, said Fish and Wildlife Service officials in Washington, D.C., are now deciding whether to urge the state to reconsider the restrictions.

The Audubon Society has spent about $100,000 a year so far on the condor project for a total of $300,000, Ogden said.

The state restrictions go into effect today and will be effective until August 1983, said Terry Mansfield, the state commission's assistant executive secretary.

The society and federal wildlife officials in the project want permission to trap up to six of the birds in order to attach solar-powered radio transmitters to their wings. That would allow tracking of the birds to study more intensely their natural habitats and the reason they are becoming extinct. The radios have a range of about 100 miles, Snyder said.

Ogden estimates that fewer than 30 of the vultures exist. The birds, which have 9-foot wing spans, are found only in California.

At its Aug. 5 meeting, the state commission unanimously voted to permit trapping only an immature female condor to become a mate to Topa-Topa, a male that's been at the Los Angeles Zoo for years.

Thursday Notes

Come on, Ted Turner. Say, "Thank you Whitey Herzog, thank you Lonnie Smith and thank you Cardinals." While your Braves were stopping the Phillies, the Cards were taking care of the Dodgers...in L.A. Of course, the Cards like the Phils getting beat, too.

Boy, the pennant races are going to be good by the end of the month. Hang in there, Ted.

I made a new friend Wednesday over the phone and got to meet him in person today.

There aren't too many USC Trojan fans around but Jack Wilson and myself will hold down the camp here in Big Spring. While I started following SC back in the 60's when a pretty fast guy by the name of Simpson was breaking for long touchdowns, Mr. Wilson has been a fan since around 1930.

While our age difference is probably triple, we are both chagrined that Southern Cal will be banned from TV this year. At least we can watch some alumni...Cincy's Anthony Munoz, Cleveland's Paul McDonald, Pitt's Lynn Swann, Oakland's (uh, L.A.'s) Marcus Allen, etc...do their thing in the pros.

As if enough wasn't going on and more to start Friday and Saturday between the goalposts, Jamie Baldwin and Jose Martinez have their boxers boxing again.

They will punch, hook and jab in an exhibition match Saturday night against Seminole, Olton and two teams from Odessa at a baseball field at the federal prison. The fights aren't open to the public but for the enjoyment of the camp residents.

Big Spring should look good, having come off a first place finish at a recent tournament in Hobbs, N.M.

This sports writer is no golfer by any stretch of the imagination but luck was on his side (the right side because I hook the ball) Monday.

The scene was the LaJet Media Open in Abilene and I had the fortune to duff away on the third place team. Actually, we tied for second at nine under-par in the scramble but lost a scorecard playoff on the second hole.

Playing on the team were Jim Eagle of Colonial fame in Fort Worth, Bill Fox (owner of KRBC radio in Abilene) and Terry Bettis who does a lot of work for Q-100 in Abilene. Terry can hit the ball a mile and bailed us out of several jams.

I was the team's designated putter and rolled in a few birdies during the afternoon. And on No. 17, where you have to hit the ball about 200 yards over water to reach the fairway, I actually did just that. It was one of only three good shots I hit off the tee but saved some geese from being gunned down on the water there.

Anyway, I returned to Big Spring with a big trophy. No one will remember me in years to come but they'll recall someone from Big Spring was there. And that's what counted.

By the way, former sports ed Jack Cowan (now writing a daily feature column in San Angelo) played on the winning team that shot a 10 under. Their leader was James McAfee who heads up the North Texas PGA.

One last thing. Get out and support your favorite football team Friday night. For you Big Springers, the first home game is next week (preceded by a $4-a-plate barbecue supper sponsored by those Evening Lions) against Estacado, but get over to Snyder tomorrow for win No. 1.

Volleyball

The Big Spring Lady Steers hit the road tonight for a volleyball match at Bronte. Big Spring is 2-2 on the season after a loss Tuesday night at home against Seminole. A junior varsity match precedes the 7 p.m. varsity tilt.

The ninth grade team is at home for 5 p.m. match against Sweetwater.

HOT GAME ON COOL NIGHT — Martina Navratilova smashes a return to Laura Dupont in their rain-delayed match at the U.S. Open Tennis Championships in New York Wednesday night. Navratilova needed just 44 minutes to trample Dupont.

Upsets abound on second day

U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Martina Navratilova had express instructions from John McEnroe as both top seeds prepared for their opening matches at the problem-plagued U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

"John told me to keep it under 47 minutes," said Navratilova. "He wanted to get on."

Their Wednesday night tournament debuts were stalled by a 1½-hour downpour and when she finally took the court, Navratilova followed directions, playing hurry-up tennis and defeating Laura DuPont 6-1, 6-1, in just 44 minutes. The match was interrupted by a 17-minute rain delay, but Navratilova couldn't help that.

It turned out not to be fast enough, though. McEnroe and Tim Gullickson were tied at 3-3 in their first set when a section of stadium lights at the National Tennis Center went out, delaying the match. The lights still had not been restored when 25 minutes later, it began to rain again. That was when officials surrendered and postponed the completion of the match until today.

Earlier, Vitas Gerulaitis, seeded fifth, was eliminated by Fritz Buehning 6-4, 7-6, 6-3, and No. 7 seed Jose-Luis Clerc bowed to Kim Warwick 3-6, 6-4, 1-6, 6-1, 7-6 in the day's major upsets.

In other important pairings, Wimbledon champion Jimmy Connors, the No. 2 seed, survived a first-set tie-breaker and defeated Jeff Borowiak 7-6, 6-2, 6-3, third-seeded Tracy Austin, the defending women's champion, defeated Catherine Tanvier, who retired in the second set with an ankle injury, and Andrea Jaeger, No. 4, beat Lena Sandin 6-1, 6-1.

Navratilova, who carried a sizzling streak of 64 victories in her last 65 matches into the Open, said she was confident that she can win this tournament for the first time.

Martina bristled at the suggestion that she had put pressure on herself with her confident statements.

"I believe I can win," she said. "There's nothing wrong with saying you believe that. Coming in, I'd rather be in my shoes, having played so well and won so many tournaments. It's a good record, if I may blow my own horn."

Connors, who celebrated his 30th birthday today, got no gifts from Borowiak. He struggled through a tough first set and attributed his troubles to jitters, a problem that has affected several of the top players here.

"I started off pretty slow but it is like all my first matches in a big tournament," he said. "I start off pretty nervous and I work my way into the matches."

Gerulaitis, who reached the semifinals in this tournament a year ago, warned interviewers that he would talk only about tennis and said he would leave the interview area if there were any questions on other subject, such as recent reports linking him to a drug probe.

Buehning said he thought the headlines might have interfered with Gerulaitis' mental preparation.

"A few guys in the stands said a few things and maybe he got upset," he said. "I'm sure it had a little bit to do with it."

NFL owners avoid lockout

If the National Football League owners' decision against a lockout puts pressure on the players, it suits Ed Garvey just fine.

In the latest chapter in the league's ongoing labor dispute, the NFL owners on Wednesday ruled out a lockout of players even if no agreement is reached on a new contract by the time the season opens Sept. 12.

In announcing the decision, Jack Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council, said, "From a labor relations standpoint, a lockout makes quite a bit of sense. But after a free discussion of that issue, the owners decided that they owe it to the fans and to the players who have been through the two-a-days (workouts) to open up the season."

Contacted by Cable News Network after Donlan's announcement, Garvey, the executive director of the NFL Players Association, said, "The owners have put it (the pressure to settle the dispute) back on us and that's where we wanted it all along. I never thought they'd seriously lock out, though there's a difference of opinion on our staff about that."

"The deal we made with Ted Turner made it impossible for them to lock us out. But things have a tendency to change, and I'll believe it when we get to the point of striking."

Broadcast executive Turner has signed a contract with the players' union to televise games from a "Player's League" over his "SuperStation", WTBS, should a strike occur.

Donlan said that the decision not to have a lockout was made unanimously by the six NFL Executive Committee members who attended the meeting: Jim Kensil of the New York Jets, Leonard Tose of Philadelphia, Dan Rooney of Pittsburgh, Mike Brown of Cincinnati, Chuck Sullivan of New England and Hugh Culverhouse of Tampa Bay. The committee's seventh member, San Diego's Gene Klein, did not attend.

Donlan concurred that the decision against a lockout would put the onus for any failure to start the season on the union.

"The owners have said they wanted to give the players more money and better benefits, and we think that's what the players want," said Donlan. "And I believe we are going to get this resolved without a work stoppage."

Earlier Wednesday, the Players Association urged resumption of negotiations with the owners — they haven't met since Aug. 26 — but on terms only agreeable, so far, to the players.

Garvey noted that the union's board of directors, which met Monday in Chicago, unanimously reaffirmed the union's five demands:

—Immediate substantial wage increases for all players.

—Elimination of wage inequities.

—Guarantee players a fair share of future revenues.

—Lengthening of careers through elimination of incentives to cut older players for financial reasons.

—Rewarding performance through significant incentives.

League playoffs start

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The Jackson Mets host the Tulsa Drillers for the Texas League East title while the El Paso Diablos host the Midland Cubs for the West title in best two-of-three series this week.

A spokesman for the Texas League office here said Tulsa and Jackson are to play tonight and Friday night, with a Saturday game if necessary. In the West Division, Midland and El Paso are to play Friday and Saturday, with a Saturday double-header if necessary.

The Texas League has split seasons, requiring playoffs to determine an overall season champion.

Alabama St. residents to have water shut off

Abilene man bound, robbed near Westbrook rest-stop

COLORADO CITY (SC) — An Abilene man, Pasqual Castro, was left bound and was robbed of a $1.50 in cash, plus credit cards and a C.B. radio at 4:30 a.m. yesterday at a reststop west of Westbrook. According to sheriff Wendell Bryant, details of the robbery are sketchy, but Castro was approached by two men and held at gunpoint. The investigation is continuing, according to Bryant.

Local man wins second in State Pecan Contest

Lee Freeze, a counselor at Goliad Middle School in Big Spring, won second place in the recent State Pecan Show among 445 other entrants, Howard County Extension Agent Don Richardson said. Freeze took second in the In-Shell Division of the Stuart Variety entries, Richardson said. Freeze had already won the Howard County Pecan Show and the Western Regional Pecan Show. The state competition is sponsored by the Texas Pecan Growers Association, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

Odessa man robbed on Highway 350

An Odessa man is in Malone-Hogan Hospital after being robbed and beaten on Highway 350 at 2:30 a.m. today, according to the Howard County Sheriff's office. Ed Stanfield of Odessa is listed in satisfactory condition, according to a hospital spokeswoman. Stanfield was en route to Big Spring on Highway 350 when he stopped on the side of the road, sheriff's deputies report. While stopped, two Mexican males and a white female drove up, beat him and forced him to strip. He reported his clothing, his money and a Rolex watch were stolen.

4-Hers win top honors

Two Howard County 4-H youths took Achievement Award honors at the District Six 4-H Record Judging contest held recently in Midland, Dennis Poole, assistant county extension agent, said. Paula Kay Allen and Scott Underwood placed second in their respective divisions for the 1982 J.T. Rutherford 4-H Achievement Award, Poole said. Ms. Allen, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Allen of Coahoma, has been active in 4-H for nine years with projects in beef, clothing, lambs, food, shooting sports, citizenship and leadership. A Gold Star Award recipient, she attended the Texas 4-H Congress for two years, traveled to Washington for the Citizenship Heritage Trip and made the 4-H Round-up at Texas A & M University. Now attending Texas Tech University, Paula was a member of the shooting Trap Team that captured State in July and qualified for the National Trap Competition. Scott is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Loyd Underwood of Big Spring. He has been active in 4-H for eight years. Scott has carried projects in swine, sheep, photography, horticulture, food and nutrition, citizenship and clothing. Scott is a senior at Big Spring High School.

Lee gets seven years

Brian Arthur Lee, 20, pleaded guilty to robbery and threats this morning in 118th District Court during jury selection for his trial. Lee received a seven-year sentence in the Texas Department of Corrections from state District Judge Jim Gregg. Lee was charged in the March 22 robbery of Pinkie's North Store in which shots were fired. Two other suspects were sentenced earlier this year to 14-year sentences after pleading guilty to the robbery.

HOSE 'ER DOWN — A fireman hoses down a tractor-trailer rig leaking fuel after a three-vehicle accident at Fifth and Gregg yesterday afternoon. A pickup truck driven by James C. Johnson of Garden City, a car driven by David G. Hanson and the rig driven by Harold Smith of Abilene collided at 2:51 p.m. yesterday. Police said they cited Smith for running a red light. Mrs. James Johnson was admitted to Malone-Hogan Hospital and is in "fine" condition, a hospital spokesman said today.

Montford meets with supporters

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

John T. Montford of Lubbock, Democratic candidate for the Texas Senate District 28, was in Big Spring yesterday for an informal meeting with supporters. Montford was taking time out from the campaign trail to organize his strategy for Big Spring and Howard County. The 28th is anchored by Big Spring, Lubbock and Odessa, with each city forming an important voting block. Since Montford is from Lubbock and his Republican opponent Jim Reese is from Odessa, those cities may vote for the "favorite son." This means Big Spring and Howard County loom as crucial and Montford hopes to establish a foothold here with a door-to-door campaign and a dinner rally tentatively slated for Oct. 7. Montford said he is running a "positive campaign dwelling on positive solutions. To be successful in this job you have to make yourself accessible, do a lot of hard work and careful analysis of prospective legislation and continually re-examine positions and I plan to do that." Montford, who is criminal district attorney in Lubbock, has as part of his platform, a seven-point crime package. Highlights in the package include stiffer penalties for drunk driving offenders, a bond denial law that prohibits anyone caught "red handed" while committing a crime from being able to post bond, and Montford said he is in favor of building more prisons to alleviate overcrowding in Texas facilities.

Powers—Brooks

Our Lady of Fatima Catholic Church in San Clemente, Calif. was the setting for the Aug. 14 wedding of Lisa Suzanne Powers and Ralph Gregory Brooks.

The Rev. Timothy Lavery, assistant pastor, officiated at the 3 p.m. rite before four large Boston ferns, two pedestal basket arrangements of pink gladiolus, agapanthus, leather fern, eucalyptus and baby's breath.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. R.F. Powers of Montgomery, Ala. and Dolores Powers of San Clemente, Calif. Parents of the bridegroom are Col. (Ret.) and Mrs. Ralph L. Brooks, 2908 Hunters Glen.

Katie Patersen Dawson, guitarist and vocalist, and Mrs. Edith Mitchell, organist, provided music for the ceremony.

The new Mrs. Brooks was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white sheerorgette and chiffon. The full bodice, covered in Alencon lace and accented with seed pearls, featured a Queen Anne neckline. The lace extended over the shoulders of the Bishop sleeves of georgette. The sleeves ended in deep cuffs of Alencon lace and seed pearls that came to a point over the back of her hand. The bride wore a cathedral-length veil trimmed in matching lace and pearls with lace appliques scattered over the entire length.

The bride carried a spray of fresh Queen Anne's lace and pink-tipped white sweetheart roses and tuberoses accented by foxtail and leather fern and eucalyptus.

Acting as maid of honor was Jennifer Crier of Upland, Calif. The bride's three sisters, Virginia Powers of Huntington Beach, Calif., Cynthia Price and Donna Powers, both of San Clemente, Calif., were bridesmaids.

The bridegroom was attended by his brother Mike Brooks as best man. Stan Partee, Greg Horton of Dallas, Wyman Pierce of Lubbock, and Larry Clawson of Coahoma were groomsmen. The bride's brother, Christopher Powers, was an usher.

A buffet reception held at the San Clemente Beach Club followed the ceremony. Music was provided by Rio. The bride's table featured a four-tiered cake accented with pink and green flowers and trimmed with fresh fern and bachelor buttons.

The bride is a graduate of San Clemente High School in San Clemente, Calif. and Texas Tech University in Lubbock. The bridegroom is a graduate of Big Spring High School and Texas Tech University. He is employed by Blum's Jewelers.

Following a wedding trip to Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, the couple is making their home in Big Spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith of Coahoma and Marth Lamkin of Denver, Colo. He is the great-grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph White of Coahoma.

Kennel Club host dog show

By CAROL HART
Lifestyle Writer

Sunday was a typically hot August day, but for a number of dogs and their masters, the heat didn't put a damper on an American Kennel Club sanctioned match at the Dora Roberts Fair Barn.

According to Lillian Hill, match chairman, 96 dogs made up 134 entries in the practice match, designed for puppies and dogs needing more show experience. In all, 33 breeds were represented.

The Big Spring Kennel Club sponsored the event, said Bruce Wright, club president. Dogs who placed in various categories at the show gained no points toward championships in their division or toward points for their obedience degrees. But the dogs did earn experience in competition which they will face in the future if they remain show dogs.

Mrs. Hill added that dogs and their masters from throughout the West Texas area attended the event, including people from Midland-Odessa, Lubbock, San Angelo, and Abilene.

Judges in the conformation category were Robin Nilsson, Retmore, and Joe Strange, San Antonio. Dogs competing in this category are judged on how well they conform to American Kennel Club standards set for their breed. Obedience judges were Sam Harper, Lubbock, and Glenn Perry, Big Spring. Perry was called in at the last minute, Mrs. Hill explained, due to the large number of entries the event drew.

Dogs, depending on their age and experience, competed in five different categories, including sub-novice, novice, graduate novice, open and utility.

Winning the title of best local dog was a Bassett hound belonging to Marsha Gross.

Winning the best in match was a wire-haired dachshund belonging to Jody Nichols of Lubbock. In the sporting group, a Brittany belonging to Tom Green, Midland, won first. In the hound group, a wire-haired terrier belonging to Jody Nichols took first.

...LEARNING THE ROPES - Diana Miller of Big Spring readies her Brindle Great Dane for competition in Sunday's match sponsored by the Big Spring Kennel Club. The match, which was chaired by Lillian Hill, was held to give puppies and novice dogs experience in dog shows. Judged best local dog in the event was a Bassett hound belonging to Marsha Gross.

In the working group, a Siberian Husky belonging to Suzy Beretta of Abilene claimed first. In the Terrier group, a fox terrier belonging to Sandy Doss, Midland, was first.

In the toy division, a miniature pinscher belonging to William Durbin of Midland took the top position. In the non-sporting group, a Boston terrier belonging to Bobby Gene Dunlap, Midland, was first.

In the novice obedience division, high scorer was a chihuahua belonging to Mary S. Howard of San Angelo.

Dr. Donohue

Window Shopper, Big Spring, Tx, September 2, 1982

Boys prone to epiphysis slippage

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My son had slipped epiphysis and had to have pins put in his hip. He is 14. He is getting along well and only uses one crutch now. When the pain stops he can resume walking. We have an excellent doctor, who said this can happen to boys our son's age, especially if they are overweight, which our son is. Could this be a congenital problem, a weakness? The doctor said I am to report any hip pain that may develop in his other hip. Can you elucidate for me? — A.R.

Epiphysis is a combination of two Greek words that mean "on top of a long bone." The epiphysis, thus, is at the end of a bone shaft, in your son's case, the shaft of the hip. In developmental years, this epiphysis is separated from the bone end by a layer of cartilage. Eventually that separating cartilage turns to bone itself. The bone is then said to have "closed over." This happens when the child has reached genetic height.

For some reason or other, your son's hip bone epiphysis slipped out of position. If it stayed that way, his hip would have grown improperly. Why this happens to some is not really known, but it is more common in boys than girls, and usually occurs between 11 and 16 years.

classified ad
that works...

Give readers the information they want and get the results YOU want!

be complete. Put yourself in the reader's place. If you were considering buying this item, what would you want to know about it? Give the item's age, condition, size, brand name and any other information needed to describe it accurately and completely.

don't exaggerate. Misleading information may bring potential buyers to your home, but it won't help you make the sale once they've arrived.

avoid abbreviations. A few easily recognizable abbreviations can help you save space. But don't overdo it. Too many abbreviations will make your ad look like a secret code message. Rather than trying to figure out what you have to say, confused readers will just go on to the next ad.

include price. Price is one of the biggest concerns of classified shoppers. Ads that list prices will get their first attention. Including price also helps you avoid inquiries from callers not in your price range.

be available. List your telephone number or address so potential buyers will know HOW to contact you. State the best hours to call so they'll know WHEN to contact you. If you're not home when an interested prospect calls, chances are he won't call back.

feel free to ask for help! Because help is free for the asking. The Big Spring Herald has a staff of qualified, friendly Ad-Visors who write dozens of ads every day! They'll be happy to help you word your ad for best results.

...brothers enter A&M veterinarian school

Although the school for veterinarians at Texas A&M is historically difficult to gain admission to (only about 100 new students are accepted each year), two would-be vets from the Big Spring area gained admission this year.

That, in itself, is unusual, but the two are brothers.

Neal D. Tindol and Rogan D. Tindol, the sons of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. (Doc) Tindol of Coahoma both were admitted to the Texas A&M Veterinarian school recently.

Neal graduated from high school in 1973 and from Howard college in 1975. He received a Bachelor of Science degree from Texas Tech in 1977 and a masters in 1979. He has been a county agent in Dimmit for the last three years.

Rogan graduated from Coahoma High School in 1977 and attended Howard College before graduating from Texas A&M in Dec. 1981. He has been working for Granada Land and Cattle Company in Marquez.

Police Beat Pot delivery leads to arrest

Police said they arrested 23-year-old Shirley Ann Larry of OK Trailer Park lot 55 last night on suspicion of conspiracy to deliver marijuana.

The arrest was made at 1200 Utah after the suspect offered to sell a usable quantity of marijuana to a Major Crimes Task Force officer at 8:55 p.m. for monetary gain, police reports said.

Ms. Larry's 25-year-old sister, Linda Maxwell, was arrested at the same time on suspicion of public intoxication, police reports said.

Police reports also showed the following:

•Sammy Lee Delgado, 21, of 1508 N. First, Lamesa, was arrested on suspicion of driving while intoxicated, no driver's license and no proof of liability insurance in possession.

•Two batteries were stolen from vehicles parked at Bowl-A-Rama, Interstate 20 south service road, between 7:45 p.m. and 11:55 p.m. yesterday. Lajeania Wallis of 1102 Pennsylvania and David Smith of P.O. Box 971 made the complaint.

•Jim Fortune of 2603 Albrook said several juveniles have harassed his eight-year-old son and daughter for the past several months.

•Peggy Whitehurst of 1313 Robin said someone stole several items from a car parked in her backyard between 3 p.m. Aug. 27 and 2:10 p.m. yesterday.

•Milton Lozano of 1500 11th Place said a male known to him intentionally concealed his 14-year-old daughter and made an alcoholic beverage available to her between 3 p.m. and 7 p.m. yesterday.

•A Ford pickup truck driven by Ricardo D. Garcia struck the median at FM 706 and Wasson, lost control, skidded about 170 feet and came to rest in a ditch at 11:50 p.m. yesterday. Police cited Garcia for failure to control speed. No injuries were reported.

•A Ford pickup truck driven by Donnie J. Duffy of 4118 Bilger and a Ford Mustang driven by Gregory J. Crull of Travel Inn motel room 7415 collided at W. Highway 80 and Willia at 10:36 a.m. yesterday. Crull was ticketed for failure to yield right-of-way and failure to maintain proof of liability insurance.

Extension Clubs cash cans

In January 1981, the Extension Homemakers Council and Clubs started an aluminum can recycling project to raise funds for Howard County 4-H Scholarships.

Seeking advice from bank personnel, they were told they needed $10,000 to buy a certificate of deposit, using the interest only to award two $300 scholarships each year. With this amount as the goal, the scholarships could go on indefinitely.

Extension Homemakers began at once saving cans and asking friends and neighbors to save their aluminum cans. The price of cans in Jan. 1981 was 26 cents a pound. That price has dropped to 20 cents a pound but the project continues. So far, the Extension Homemakers have picked up 90,000 cans and earned $750 toward their goal, while ridding the city and countryside of the litter. They added $500 to the fund from their earnings at the 4-H-FFA Stock Show last January and bought a certificate of deposit of $1300 so interest earned will help their fund grow.

Extension Homemakers throughout the county need help with their recycling project. They are requesting citizens, businesses, companies or offices within the county to help by saving cans for their scholarship fund. The Extension Homemakers will organize a pick-up service to fit the needs of those helping. Interested individuals or businesses may contact the County Extension Office at 267-8469 or Mrs. L.Z. Rhodes at 398-5531. "Every can saved will be appreciated," Mrs. Rhodes said.

CHRISTY'S COOKIES
A friend of mine favors this version of raisin oat cookies.

1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup quick-cooking oats
1/2 cup raisins
1/2 of a 1/4-pound stick butter (1/2 cup)
1/2 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 large egg
2 tablespoons milk
In a medium bowl stir together flour, baking soda and salt; stir in oats and raisins. In a large bowl, cream butter, sugar and cinnamon; beat in egg until blended. Stir in flour mixture one half at a time, alternately with milk; mix well. Drop by teaspoonfuls, about 2 inches apart, onto buttered cookie sheets. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until golden brown - 12 to 15 minutes. Remove to wire racks to cool completely. Makes 2 to 2 1/2 dozen cookies.

Reduce oven temperature to 350 degrees. Spread blueberries in hot pastry shell. Pour Topping over berries. Bake in the 350-degree oven until top is golden brown - 45 to 50 minutes. Cool on a wire rack. Remove sidewall of pan. Serve warm. Makes 8 servings.

Tuna: basis for meals

During hot days, a refreshing lunch can be built around tuna, the tasty fish which Americans consume at the rate of 1.5 billion cans a year.

This salt-water game fish, which is a member of the mackerel family, can be found in almost all the seas of the temperate and warm zones of Asia, Africa and America. There are a number of varieties, including bluefin, skipjack, yellowfin and the internationally sought "white meat" tuna, known as albacore.

Tuna is mentioned in ancient writings from many parts of the world. The Greeks hunted the fish as a sport, the Incas fished for them from reed boats off the coast of Peru. And the Japanese have long used them for that raw fish appetizer known as sashimi.

Today, tuna is the No. 1 seafood in the United States, with most of it going into the canning industry.

Canned tuna is an important chapter in the growth story of American food processing. In 1903, the first 700 cases of the fish were packed commercially at San Pedro, Calif. It was albacore, which abounded in the region. A decade later, nine tuna canneries in the region packed 115,000 cases.

World War I pointed up the need for an economical, tasty, readily available protein food in a time of food shortage, and soon the plants in southern California were rolling out half a million cases annually.

Consumption of tuna took another leap forward in World War II when domestic protein food shortages resulted from a program designed to feed the U.S. Allies, creating an urgent need for nourishing low-cost food at home.

Today, Americans eat an average 3.1 pounds of tuna a year, at a cost of more than $1 billion.

Canned tuna is delicious in a wide range of dishes from soup to main course. But for me, salad is far and away the best way to prepare this versatile fish, as in this recipe for Tunisian tuna eggplant salad.

1 medium eggplant
1/2 cup chopped scallions
1 large tomato chopped (about 1 cup)

Labor Day barbecue: broiled cornish hens

For one of the last barbecues of the season, you might enjoy broiling cornish hens over charcoal. When we decided to do just that, we used a Japanese-style sauce for marinating the hens, brushing them during broiling, and as a dip when they were served. The combination was delicious.

Serve the hens, if you like, with rice. For a salad we suggest garden lettuce plus blanched fresh soybean sprouts dressed with light-flavored sesame oil and rice wine vinegar.

CHARCOAL-BROILED CORNISH HENS WITH TERIYAKI SAUCE

1/2 cup soy sauce
1/4 cup dry sherry
1/4 cup water
2 Tbsps. sugar
1 Tbsp. minced fresh ginger root
1 large clove garlic, minced
4 fresh cornish hens (each about 1 1/4 pounds), halved
Stir together soy sauce, sherry, water, sugar, ginger root and garlic. Pour over hens and refrigerate, turning every half hour, for about three hours.

Charcoal broil over medium hot coals, brushing occasionally with some of the marinade, until tender and brown — about 15 minutes on each side.

EASY COOKING — For Labor Day guests you may want to charcoal-broil cornish hens with a savory Japanese-style sauce.

Heat remaining marinade and pass as a dipping sauce. Provide lots of paper napkins. Makes 4 to 8 servings or 1 or 2 halves per portion.

NOTE: If the marinade is stronger than you like when you use it for the dipping sauce, dilute it with a little chicken broth or water.

Slenderize with cling peach treats

What a welcome morale builder colorful, low-calorie desserts can be for your dieter or healthy eater who is simply trying to avoid too much sugar. You can help them enjoy good eating practices by including cling peaches in your food repertoire.

Now is a good time to try canned clings because stocks are plentiful, according to USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service. When you buy them, check the label to see what type of liquid is used to pack the peaches.

Extra heavy syrup contains approximately 24 percent sugar; heavy syrup, 19-24 percent sugar; and light syrup, 14-19 percent sugar.

For calorie-watchers and those cutting intake of sugar, buy peaches packed in water alone or peach juice alone, slightly sweetened water or slightly sweetened peach juice, or water with artificial sweetener added for special diet use.

For an extra special treat, prepare "Creamy Fruit Salad Mold." Remember to use peaches packed in light syrup, slightly sweetened, or low-calorie liquid.

CREAMY FRUIT SALAD MOLD
1 package peach-flavored gelatin
1 cup (0.24 L) boiling water
1/2 cup (0.14 L) peach liquid

1 cup (0.24 L) plain low-calorie yogurt
1 cup (0.24 L) canned peach chunks
Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Stir in liquid drained from canned peaches. Slowly blend into yogurt. Chill mixture until slightly thickened. Fold in canned peach chunks. Pour mixture into fancy-shaped 3-cup (0.72 L) mold. Chill until firm.

Season provides grapes

One of the most delightful features of summer and fall is the variety of grapes that pour forth from the vast vineyards of California.

Grapes are also grown in New York, Michigan and Ohio, but the delectable table grapes available at food stores across the country in season come primarily from California.

Many of these fruits are descended from the European wine grape which is grown today in temperate zones here and abroad.

One of the oldest of all cultivated plants, grapes were grown in Egypt 6,000 years ago. The Greeks also cultivated them and the Romans planted them throughout their empire.

The Bible refers to grapes in both the Old and New Testaments, and poets and painters have sung their praises through the ages.

The picturesque vineyards dotting hillsides in France, Italy, Greece and other European countries must have been an arresting sight over the centuries, to judge from old paintings.

The European grape was first introduced in this country by Lord Baltimore in 1616. It never did well in the eastern part of America because of its susceptibility to cold and pests, but in California it came into its own.

Among the varieties flourishing in California today are:

The bright red Tokay available from September through November. It has large berries with a thick skin and a mild taste.

The Red Malaga, already available, will last through October. Grown in the San Joaquin Valley, this large spherical fruit ranges in hue from pink to reddish-purple. It is very sweet.

A particularly beautiful variety is the Exotic, a large black grape with crisp texture. It is available through August.

The most popular table grape is the Thompson seedless which has been on stands since June and will still be there in November. It has a sweet flavor that has been described as neutral. The absence of seeds is a plus.

One of the prettiest is the Olivette, commonly known as the Ladyfinger because of its long, graceful shape. It is pungent and sweet.

Grapes are usually eaten in their natural state or made into jellies or jams. But they are included in some recipes such as this one for curried grape coleslaw.

2 cups coarsely shredded cabbage
1 cup Thompson seedless grapes
1/4 cup sliced green onion
1/4 cup chopped green pepper
Curry dressing
1 tablespoon chopped parsley

In large bowl toss cabbage, grapes, onion and green pepper with curry dressing and chili. Garnish with parsley and paprika. Serves 4.

To make curry dressing combine 1/4 cup each mayonnaise and dairy sour cream, 1 1/2 teaspoons vinegar, 1/2 teaspoon curry powder, 1/4 teaspoon salt and dash garlic powder. Blend well.
