BSISD shuffles four principals

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

Four elementary school principals were shuffled among different schools as Big Spring Superintendent Lynn Hise today juggled his administrators to place a director for the new Bauer Magnet School next fall.

Jean Wilder, currently principal at Washington Elementary, was named to administer the magnet school program.

The magnet school was created by a recent consent decree with the U.S. Justice Department to rid the district of racial imbalance caused by the predominantly minority Bauer school.

Current Bauer Principal Harlan Huibregtse will be reassigned to Moss Elementary. Also included in the change are Moss Principal M.A. Barber who will move to College Heights, and College Heights Principal Herman Smith who will take over duties at Washington. The changes will take effect next fall.

Hise said the reason for Ms. Wilder's reassignment was made because of her educational background, experience and leadership capabilities.

"Ms. Wilder is energetic, innovative in her thinking, highly motivated and child-oriented," Hise said. "I'm not saying the other principals are lacking in that kind of leadership, but as to what I perceive we're going to need to make the magnet school successful, her leadership style and qualifications all fit."

Ms. Wilder has been principal at Washington for two years, and previously served as Title I education supervisor and as an elementary school counselor, Hise said. She has worked in the district 13 years.

"Of course, any change is a bit unsettling and I know some people may voice displeasure at the decisions," Hise said. "But as you look at the changes and the need and leadership styles, you can see the reassignments of personnel were the best to get the job done."

Ms. Wilder said she was "very excited" by the reassignment and was looking forward to her work at Bauer with enthusiasm.

NASA in control of balky satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The world's largest and most expensive communications satellite, vital to America's space future, tumbled out of control for several hours today after release from the shuttle Challenger. NASA reported it had regained command, but it was unclear how effective the satellite could be.

The question was whether ground controllers could maneuver the 2½-ton, $100 million satellite to its planned stationary orbit 22,300 miles high. Trackers estimated the payload was in a distorted orbit ranging from about 14,000 to 22,000 miles high, and it could not be fully effective on that path.

Experts consulted computers to determine if stabilizing gas jets aboard the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite could be used to shift the craft into stationary position.

"There is some possibility it could be done," said Julian Levine, a spokesman for TRW, which built the TDRS. "The satellite has some on-board propulsion capability and the technical issue now is its ability to move the satellite into the proper orbit."

Challenger commander Paul J. Weitz and his crewmembers, pilot Karol J. Bobko and mission specialists Story Musgrave and Donald H. Peterson, who had ejected the satellite from their cargo bay late Monday, were asleep in an orbit 176 miles above Earth when the trouble began. They were in the second day of the second shuttle's maiden flight.

Mission Control awakened them this morning with recordings of Air Force cadet marching songs and gave them an update on the satellite problem.

Musgrave said they were eager to get on with the day's work, which includes scientific and medical experiments. "We're going to come out of the chute running hard," he said.

An hour after they deployed TDRS, the rocket fired successfully to propel the package on its way to the high outpost.

The problem arose about 6 a.m. after the rocket ignited a second time, to try to arrest the satellite in the stationary orbit. The resulting egg-shaped orbit indicates an engine misfire which sent the satellite tumbling with the rocket stage attached.

SATELLITE DEPLOYED — This is an artist's conception of how the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite, which was hauled into space aboard the Shuttle Challenger Monday, is supposed to look after it is deployed. The satellite ran into problems this morning when it would not separate from its first stage rocket. Later NASA confirmed separation and the panels were being deployed.

"I am not a novelty. I am not weird. I am not different. I am a midshipman, not a female midshipman." — officer quoted in Naval Academy catalog Wave upon wave of navy uniforms rush out of one building and into the next. White and blue-clad right arms flail out, up and down again at the sight of brass-adorned superiors.

Quiet "good morning, sirs" are muffled by the early spring mist. There are no dawdlers among the 4,500 midshipmen. Pressure moves them on, quickly, without hesitation.

Scattered among that ocean of blue masculinity on the Naval Academy campus in Annapolis, Md., are about 400 women midshipmen. One of them, a third class officer in 10th Company, is 22-year-old Debbie Shroyer of Big Spring.

Debbie doesn't make much of being one of the few women in the Brigade of Midshipmen. She expresses much the same opinion as the woman quoted above, that she is a midshipman — no qualifying adjectives, please.

Eight years have passed since Congress authorized the three service academies to admit women "consistent with the needs of the services." Women first graduated from the Naval Academy in 1980.

In contrast to the furor raised when the first plebe women entered its gates in the summer of 1976, Debbie's upperclassmen didn't even raise an eyebrow when she arrived at the academy in 1981.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin H. (Sonny) Shroyer of 2910 Goliad, Debbie is the only member of her family to enter a service academy. She decided to apply while attending Texas Tech as a music major.

"I wanted to be in the Navy because it offers a lot of opportunities for women," she explained. "I thought going through the academy would be the best way to become an officer."

Debbie is an aerospace engineering major at the technical school, although she may switch to computer science. After she graduates, she hopes to get one of the two billets open to women to enter the Navy's intelligence division.

Despite the defiant nonchalance that seems to characterize women at the academy, commanding officers recognize the difficulties women face at the academy, the unique problems that cause a 14 percent higher attrition rate for women than men.

"It's not easy to be a woman at the Naval Academy," Commandant of Midshipmen Bud Edney said. "They need to be outgoing extroverts and thickskinned because they face tough competition from the moment they apply."

The academy usually receives about 2,000 applications for the 100 slots open annually to women.

Anatomy of an arrest

Woman's arrest: routine or nightmare?

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

On March 9, a Big Spring woman became a statistic: She was arrested.

Charged with shoplifting $3 worth of artificial fingernail tips at a local discount store, Gayle Worthan was booked, fingerprinted, stripped and placed in jail coveralls even as she maintained her innocence.

But what she called a nightmarish experience is normal procedure for any arrest, according to Big Spring Police Chief Rick Turner.

Shocked at being arrested at the store, Mrs. Worthan, 43, said she still believed then that the law would be on her side.

"Somewhere you get read your rights and somewhere you tell your story," Mrs. Worthan said. "You always hear of people going in for questioning — on the TV programs, they always listen." However, the police chief said people had misconceptions about the reading of rights.

"That's a fallacy that is not true," Turner said. "The only time ... is if they are going to be interrogated or interviewed by the officer concerning some kind of offense where an admission is sought. If we are not going to use the information in court, we are not required to and we don't."

The police were just the arresting agents in Mrs. Worthan's case, Turner said. A sworn affidavit, or complaint, had been signed by the store manager, and the police had no choice but to make the arrest, he added.

Mrs. Worthan said she went willingly to the police station because she thought she would get to explain See Arrest, page 2A

Cold snap may bring rain, snow

From staff and wire reports

A surprise spring cold snap could blossom into bad weather for Big Spring as a possibility of rain mixed with snow was forecast for today and tonight. The weather is not expected to improve much until the end of the week.

Temperatures last night plunged into the 30s and were not expected to top 50 until Thursday. Rain has been forecast for every day this week.

Up to 5 inches of snow blanketed northern sections of the Texas Panhandle today as a cold front marched across the state, triggering widespread showers and thundershowers.

The National Weather Service reported at least 2 inches of snow on the ground in Amarillo before dawn and 4 to 5 inches farther north, where portions of some highways were closed because of hazardous driving conditions.

A travel advisory was in effect for the South Plains today and for the Panhandle through tonight.

Snow and snow mixed with rain fell from El Paso to Midland and showers also developed over portions of Northwest Texas. Light fog developed ahead of the front in East Texas and along the Coastal Plains.

Skies were cloudy statewide, except for a patch of clear skies along the southern tip of Texas.

Winds behind the front were from the north and northwest at 15 to 20 mph with occasional gusts to 30 mph. Ahead of the front, winds were generally southeasterly and light.

Temperatures dipped into the upper 20s in the Panhandle, while readings in the 30s were the rule across West Texas. Pre-dawn temperatures in North Texas were in the 40s, while the mercury was in the 60s and 70s ahead of the front in South Texas.

Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 28 at Amarillo to 70 at Lufkin, Victoria, Corpus Christi, McAllen and Brownsville.

The forecast called for cloudy skies, unseasonably cool temperatures and scattered showers and thunderstorms through Wednesday.

Q. Why does WFAA on channel 8 go off the air so much?
A. According to Jim Lancaster, vice president of Big Spring Cable TV, the problem lies in the unreliable West Texas Microwave Service from Dallas itself, not with the local cable service. Lancaster said he has no control over the microwave problems, but does contact Dallas when problems occur here. This problem was why he tried to end WFAA transmission in April, 1982, he said.

Navy planes miss runway

INSPECTS JET CANOPY — An unidentified Southern Pacific Railroad security guard inspects the jet canopy left on a street near the El Paso International Airport after a Navy F-4 jet crashed. Both pilots, James Walsh, 28, and Lt. Cmdr Clifford Tinker, 35, ejected from the jet, landed within a few yards of each other and walked away with few injuries. The aircraft ended up on Ft. Bliss Army property and Army officials put a tight security around the plane.

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Two Navy jets flying in tandem ran off a runway in a surprise April snow storm, and one plane broke up in a fiery crash after its pilots ejected safely, authorities say.

The second F-4 Phantom jet Monday night ran off the runway at El Paso International Airport and came to rest safely in mud, officials said.

The first jet was trying to land at the airport at about 7:25 p.m. when it skidded across a four-lane highway and came to rest on the grounds of nearby Fort Bliss, said Pentagon spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Fred Leeder.

An unidentified motorist escaped injury when the plane's wing clipped his car on a road adjacent to the base, El Paso Police Officer Eddie Provencio said.

"The two crew members ejected safely at a low altitude," Leeder said.

Their jet broke into "a million pieces" after crashing, said Provencio, and two large pieces of the plane's fuselage lay about 1,000 feet from a row of middle-class homes in eastern El Paso.

The plane appeared to have "landed too late on the runway," said Richard Moya, an employee of Emery Worldwide air freight at the airport.

Larry Alderette, was directing a play rehearsal at the La Casita Theater Workshop on Fort Bliss, when he saw the lights of the jet hurtling towards the base.

Marchers mark King shooting

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Workers marching in the city where Rev. Martin Luther King was slain 15 years ago vowed to preserve the civil rights leader's memory by fighting for full employment and an end to the economic policies of the Reagan administration.

"There was a dream that Dr. Martin Luther King had and it's our job to keep that dream alive. There was a dream that he had that every man should have a job," said James Butler, president of New York Local 420 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, at Monday's march.

About 250 workers attended the march. In the years just after the assassination, as many as 10,000 attended the annual tribute.

"You're heard about 12 million people out of work nationally and Reagan is talking about staying the course. We don't want cheese and butter, we want jobs," said Rev. Samuel B. Kyles, who was a local lieutenant for King.

King was gunned down April 4, 1968, when he was in Memphis to lead sanitation workers in a pay protest. An escaped convict, James Earl Ray, confessed to the slaying and was sentenced to 99 years in prison.

Chanting "Reagan must go," and carrying placards demanding jobs, the marchers set off at 11:25 a.m.

from Clayborn Temple and snaked along the littered streets of an economically depressed neighborhood and headed for the Lorraine Motel, where King was fatally shot.

Black businessmen and civic leaders paid $144,000 for the Lorraine for a foreclosure sale last December and hope to convert it into a civil rights museum and a shrine for King.

Organizers called the demonstration "a march for jobs and justice."

"It is our union's obligation to see that this union makes a difference in the election in 1984," said Gerald W. McEntee, AFSCME international president.

In Atlanta, King's birthplace, the nation's black leaders gathered with the civil rights leaders widow to demand peace and jobs.

Addressing a crowd carrying signs proclaiming "Bread not bullets," and "Jobs not jails," Del. Walter Fauntroy of the District of Columbia urged listeners to "drive from the positions of power those who in the past 2 1/2 years have perpetrated the most incredible transfer of wealth in the history of this country, from poor to rich."

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which King founded, announced plans for a march on Washington Aug. 27, the 20th anniversary of King's "I have a dream" speech in the nation's capital.

Earlier Monday, Coretta Scott King, King's widow, joined SCLC leaders and others in a brief wreath-laying ceremony at King's tomb.

She told a news conference that she plans to join in the August march to help "forge an accelerated, non-violent campaign for jobs, peace and freedom."

"My husband believed that a massive interracial coalition of poor people and others of good will could forge a mighty challenge to poverty in America," Mrs. King said. "He saw this as a natural extension of his work in the civil rights movement."

Fewer than 1,000 people gathered in Anderson, Ind., for a rally to mark the assassination anniversary and to call attention to the plight of the unemployed.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, a former King lieutenant who now heads Chicago-based Operation PUSH had predicted a turnout of 10,000.

15TH ANNIVERSARY — Christine Farris, the sister of Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., lends her arm for support to Rev. Martin Luther King, Sr., as the two make their way down a walkway Monday in Atlanta at the Martin Luther King Center for Non-Violent Studies following a service marking the 15th anniversary of King's assassination.

Israel, Lebanon near agreement

KHALDE, Lebanon (AP) — Israel and Lebanon today were reported close to agreement on troop withdrawal, but President Reagan's overall Mideast peace plan was set back when PLO chief Yasser Arafat turned down the offer by King Hussein of Jordan to negotiate on the Palestinians' behalf.

In the Israeli-occupied southern Lebanese port of Sidon, a bomb went off in the main square but Israeli military sources said it caused no casualties. Israeli and Syrian forces were reported to have poured more tanks into eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

At the opening of the latest round of U.S.-mediated troop withdrawal talks in Khalde, Lebanese spokesman Daoud Sayegh quoted Israeli chief delegate David Kimche as saying "We want an early agreement with Lebanon and I think we are now close to it."

Kimche, director-general of the Israeli Foreign Ministry, did not elaborate, Sayegh told reporters.

He said the discussions focused on security arrangements designed to shield Israel against renewed Palestinian guerrilla attacks from southern Lebanon.

But he did not say whether any specific arrangements had been agreed upon.

Israeli invaded Lebanon June 6 to smash the Palestine Liberation Organization and forced thousands of guerrillas to evacuate west Beirut in August. But thousands more remain in northern and eastern Lebanon, sheltered by Syrian troops who have been in Lebanon since the end of the 1975-76 Moslem-Christian civil war when they were sent to monitor the armistice.

In the Jordanian capital of Amman, PLO sources who requested anonymity said Arafat turned down Hussein's offer to negotiate on the guerrillas' behalf with Israel after meeting Monday with top aides serving on the 15-member PLO executive committee.

Arafat told reporters after arriving in Kuwait today that "King Hussein and I are agreed on what is good for both sides," he said.

A main topic of the talks between Hussein and Arafat was the peace initiative presented by Reagan last September, according to sources close to the discussions. The plan calls for Palestinian self-government in the Israeli-occupied territories in confederation with Jordan.

American diplomats have said Hussein was willing to negotiate the plan with the Israelis — as hoped by the Reagan administration — if the PLO agreed.

But the PLO claims it is the sole representative of the 1.3 million Palestinians in the West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip, and rejects Reagan's plan because it does not call for an independent Palestinian state and does not provide the PLO a role in peace talks.

The Palestine National Council, the PLO's parliament, favors a plan adopted last fall in Morocco by Arab states, calling for an independent Palestinian state with Arab east Jerusalem as its capital. It implies Israel's right to exist, but Israel refuses to accept an independent Palestine state or to withdraw from east Jerusalem.

Israel also rejects Reagan's plan but U.S. diplomats said the Israelis might be willing to discuss it with Hussein and non-PLO Palestinians.

London thieves get $8 million

LONDON (AP) — Police combed London today in search of a six-man gang that broke into a security firm, looted the vaults while drinking wine and made off with a mountain of unmarked bills estimated as high as $8.82 million.

The vaults were stuffed with used banknotes collected before the four-day Easter weekend, and police said they did not believe any of the stolen notes could be traced because no numbers had been recorded.

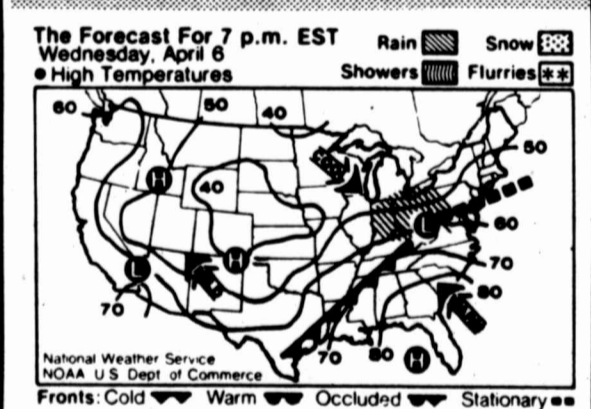

No one was hurt in the eight-hour raid, staged by the shotgun-carrying robbers to coincide with the Easter Monday bank holiday.

"They got a hell of a lot. It was a mountain of money," said a Scotland Yard detective after investigating the ransacked vaults of Security Express Ltd.

One of the firm's employees said the loss might be more than 6 million pounds — $8.82 million.

Britain's largest recorded cash theft to date was the so-called Great Train Robbery in which 2.6 million pounds, then worth nearly $7.3 million, was stolen. There have been two larger robberies since then, from a bank and a security vault, but valuables as well as cash were stolen.

Willie's not on this road again

WACO, Texas (AP) — Singer and songwriter Willie Nelson almost had a stretch of road through his hometown named in his honor, but the plan was scuttled after officials learned the highway already was named for a county commissioner.

McLennan County commissioners on Monday approved a petition to name an eight-mile portion of old State Highway 2, which runs through Nelson's hometown of Abbott in neighboring Hill County, as the "Willie Nelson Highway."

But after the vote, Commissioner Vince Incardona discovered the highway already is named for former McLennan County Commissioner Jerry Mashek.

"There's no way in the world we're going to change the name of that road," Incardona said.

County Judge Stanley Rentz said the commissioners would rescind the action Tuesday.

Hillsboro lawyer Frank McGregor has asked McLennan and Hill county commissioners to support the name change, although the Texas Legislature must give final approval.

Hill County commissioners have not discussed the matter, County Judge Larry Wright said Monday.

McGregor, a former state legislator, is spearheading efforts to rename the highway after Nelson as the first step toward construction of a country-and-western music museum south of Hillsboro.

"This thing could make the country music hall (Grand Ole Opry) in Nashville look sick," McGregor said. "It could be one of the biggest things in our area."

McGregor said the success of the project — which is "in the planning and dream stages now" — hinges on Nelson's support.

But Nelson does not want to become the center of a local political spat, McGregor said.

"It will depend on interest, number one — monetary and the interest of Willie Hughes Nelson."

Gloria Swanson was the epitome of Hollywood glamour

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gloria Swanson, who died Monday at 84, was indelibly linked in the public's mind with Norma Desmond, the half-mad movie star of the 1949 classic, "Sunset Boulevard."

"But I'm not Norma Desmond," she once protested. "I'm not a recluse and I don't live in the past. I travel so much that when I wake up in the morning I sometimes don't know which side of the bed to get out of. I have an insatiable curiosity about everything, and I like young people."

Like Norma, Gloria Swanson was a major star of the silent screen. But Gloria did not lock herself into a Sunset Boulevard mansion when her film career dwindled. She turned to the stage, later television and the lecture circuit, and she preached nutrition long before it became fashionable.

She won the "Sunset Boulevard" role only because Mae West, Mary Pickford and other stars declined it. She was 50 but her healthful life made her look years younger.

William Holden, cast as the screenwriter who was kept by Norma, was 31 and looked it. Director Billy Wilder was concerned that the age difference was unnoticeable and tried to persuade Miss Swanson to allow aging make-up.

"Can't you put the make-up on Mr. Holden instead, to make him look younger?" she suggested, and that was done.

Despite her once-in-a-lifetime performance, the Oscar eluded her, as it did Bette Davis for her Margo Channing in "All About Eve." The award that year went to another sensational performance by newcomer Judy Holliday in "Born Yesterday."

A new film career failed to develop for Miss Swanson, but she didn't stop to lament. She continued with her wide variety of pursuits.

She loved to talk and she would discuss anything — except her affair with Joseph P. Kennedy. In the late 1920s she was a studio boss, and she was his biggest star on and off the screen — this despite her marriage to a French marquis and his to the matriarch of the Kennedy clan, Rose Kennedy.

Fifty years later Miss Swanson unburdened herself in an autobiography called "Swanson on Swanson." She wrote of Kennedy's close attention to her career and his constant affection.

Gloria Swanson never lost her glamour, even in her 80s. She once explained one reason why she stayed youthful:

"The past never intrigued me. I'm interested in the now. Life is a constant surprise to me, and each morning I wake up and say, 'What now, God?'"

Gloria Swanson's film career

NEW YORK (AP) — Gloria Swanson's film appearances, as reported in the Motion Picture Almanac, began with shorts and comedies with the Essanay, Keystone, Sennett and Triangle film companies.

Features in which she appeared were:
For Cecil B. DeMille — "Don't Change Your Husband," "For Better For Worse," "Male and Female," "Why Change Your Wife," "The Affairs of Anatol."

For Paramount — "The Great Moment," "The Gilded Cage," "My American Wife," "Prodigal Daughter," "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife."

For Alan Dawn productions — "The Hummingbird," "Society Scandal," "Manhandled," "Wages of Virtue," "Madame Sans Gene," "Stage Struck."

For her own company, through United Artists — "The Lovers of Sonya," "Sadie Thompson," "The Trespasser," "What a Widow," "Indiscreet," "Tonight or Never."

Also, "Music in the Air," 1935; "Father Takes a Wife," 1941; "Sunset Boulevard," 1949; "Three for Bedroom C," "When Comedy Was King" and "Airport-1975."

She appeared on the New York stage in "Twentieth Century" in 1951, "Nina" in 1952 and "Butterflies Are Free" in 1970.

In 1974 she appeared in the television movie "Killer Bees."

Judge won't change bail for automaker De Lorean

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Z. De Lorean, accused of cocaine trafficking and described in court as a "financial cripple," listened intently as his lawyer tried and failed to have his $5 million bail reduced.

U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi on Monday rejected defense motions to cut bail in half for the former sports car manufacturer. He also rejected prosecution motions to double the bail.

Takasugi said government allegations that De Lorean has access to more than $17 million hidden in Switzerland appeared to be based on mere speculation. The claims and counter-claims by both sides on the issue rate "very low on my scale of believability," the judge said.

De Lorean, who faces trial with two other men on charges of cocaine trafficking, has been free on $5 million bail since December.

Alien arrests rise in March

DEL RIO, Texas (AP) — Border Patrol agents last month arrested more than 7,000 illegal aliens, who surveys indicate are coming in increasing numbers from urban areas in the interior of Mexico.

Arrests of illegal aliens in March jumped 88 percent over the same month last year in this sector, said Chief Patrol Agent Jack Richardson.

There were 10,206 arrests in March, the highest in the history of the Border Patrol in this area, Richardson said. Last March's figure was 5,470.

Agents in this 41-county sector arrested 7,173 illegal entrants into the United States in February.

John Green, deputy chief patrol agent, said 93 smugglers were arrested last month, compared to 87 caught in the same period last year.

Thirty aliens from countries other than Mexico were taken into custody in March, Green said. Most were from El Salvador, a fact Green attributed to the continuing political unrest and economic hardship existing in that country.

Three each were from Guatemala and Honduras and one each from Cuba and Yugoslavia.

The Border Patrol and his men conducted extensive surveys with 1,171 of the aliens arrested in March "to find out why they are coming," Richardson said.

The surveys found that 99 percent of those interviewed were male, 33 percent were married, 26 percent had minor children, 64 percent were age 26 or younger and 36 percent admitted prior immigration violations. Thirty-six percent of those surveyed were from Guajuato, a state Richardson said was one of the more economically depressed in Mexico.

BEDWETTER
LET THEM HAVE A DRY BED

The greatest gift you can give a bedwetter and the rest of the family, too, is an end to this serious problem, and make no mistake, bedwetting is serious. It can cause complicated psychological problems that last a lifetime. It's so needless because bedwetting, when not caused by organic defect or disease, can be ended. Send for our free brochure, "Bedwetting — What It's All About and How To End It," a report by two medical doctors. No obligation.

Easy growing daylilies date to ancient European gardens

No one can call the Hemerocallis, commonly called "daylily," a new flower, says Mrs. G.W. Basham, master judge, at the Judges Advance Study Club meeting March 17. The meeting was held in Mrs. C.L. Sparkman's home.

Although its popularity as a garden flower dates back for only a few years, it actually has a long history.

Prior to 1575, the Hemerocallis was featured in many European gardens. Its name comes from two Greek words — hēmera (day) and kallas (beauty); hence it is sometimes translated "beautiful for a day." Most types open for one day and close at night. The plants come from the Orient. In the late 1930s less than 200 varieties were registered. By 1954, more than 4,000 varieties were registered. Daylilies require little attention and can stand some punishment and still come out on top.

Daylilies come in every shade of red, yellow, orange, rose, brown, buff, near-lavender, near-purple and the pastels. Some of the newer varieties either open or remain open in the evening.

A long blooming season can be attained by the use of early-midseason, midseason, late or late midseason. There are also repeat bloomers.

The fall blooming varieties give relief to the decreased bloom and color in the garden. The types are evergreen, semi-evergreen and dormant. The flowers can reach tall, medium or dwarf heights.

Daylilies combine well with zinnias, larkspur and many other plants. Pleasing color effects may be worked out with the daylilies alone.

For a period of continuous bloom beginning in early spring, plant daffodils, irises, peonies and daylilies. The dwarfs are ideal for slopes and rockgardens.

To plant daylilies, plant at least three clones to a clump in a triangle fashion. No flower is better adapted to mass plantings. The daylilies are eye-level plants and are easily seen because they attract a person's vision. The plant requires no petting, but do not compete well in masses of tree roots. They can be grown near trees, but require more food and water. The plant does well along the edge of a body of water.

Locate the plant so that it receives six hours of sun in an area that is not heavily shaded or poorly drained. Space the plants two feet apart.

Plant the daylilies in early spring to fall (so long as the ground is not frozen). If planted late in the fall, mulch the plants. Do not plant the daylily too deeply. The soil line should be about one-inch above the crown. Spread the roots and place soil between them. Water well when planted and as required the first month.

Daylilies do best in acid soil and humus or peat moss is conducive to this. Too much fertilizer promotes excessive growth and decreased flowers. Too much nitrogen in the springtime is not conducive to best flowering.

After flowering, give the daylily a period of rest in order to put on new growth for next season's blooms. This period is the best time for fertilizing. Daylilies can be fertilized four to six weeks after the peak of blooming.

Put the fertilizer on or in the ground around the daylily rather than on top of the mulch. Chemical fertilizer doesn't need to come into direct contact with the plant, particularly the crown.

Inorganic fertilizers give better results if worked into the soil and the plants are watered well. Rotted barnyard manure is the best, then average commercial fertilizer next.

A small cup of commercial fertilizer to three gallons of water works well. Pour the mixture on the soil around the plant.

For a neat garden, remove wilted flowers daily. Water heavily in the hottest part of the summer to increase size and give better color.

To propagate, three principal ways will work. One is division of clumps, another is proliferations — sprouts on side shoots growing out from nodes of the flower scapes, and the last is seed.

Daylilies do not come true to variety when grown from seed. When rooting proliferations, a mixture of half sand and half peat moss is a good planting mixture. Daylilies may be rooted readily in water, but suffer shock when placed in soil.

If using the sand/peat moss medium, cover the cuttings with a glass jar. The cuttings should root in two weeks. If properly watered and fed, the cuttings should bloom the following season.

Daylilies are like irises — dig them, forget them and plant them months later. The daylily is a "lazy man's flower."

Mrs. Sparkman presided over the meeting. She reported on the District I meeting in Hereford. A program on Floral Design was presented by the District I judges at the meeting.

Dr. Donohue

Toxoplasmosis: use sensible caution

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have become concerned about toxoplasmosis since becoming pregnant. I am finding it hard to find safe food to eat. I keep worrying about whether meat is done sufficiently. Please tell me what meat this parasite does and does not live in. Also, what about raw eggs? I need to cure my paranoia about this, which is beginning to get the best of me and my husband — K.A.

You should be aware of toxoplasmosis and take sensible steps to avoid it, but you need not throw yourself into a panic. When diseases like toxoplasmosis get media attention, we're led to believe that a new and mysterious illness is attacking the human race. Toxoplasmosis is an old illness, but since it can be passed on from a mother to fetus, it causes natural concern among pregnant women.

The meat of many warm-blooded animals has cysts of toxoplasmosis, but those cysts are killed when meat is heated to over 140 degrees F. or when frozen to minus 4 degrees F. Raw eggs are not usual sources of infection, but raw fruits and vegetables may carry cysts. Concern is expressed about cats because that animal is the "definitive" host for the toxoplasma, the one-celled organism that causes the actual illness. The organism's life cycle is completed in that animal, which is why it is called the definite host.

All you need to do is follow these rules: Heat meat to more than 140 degrees; wash your hands after touching uncooked meat; wash all fruits and vegetables; avoid cat droppings; avoid stray cats.

And stop making yourself a nervous wreck.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I don't know if I have a problem or not. My head is ringing, especially when I go to bed. I had a large piece of salted ham and I nearly went crazy. My right ear was ringing 'til next day. Is there anything to worry about? — Mrs. J.K.

The list of possible causes of ear ringing is long and runs the gamut of seriousness from ear wax buildup to tumors of the hearing nerve. In between are such possibilities as medicine effects, fluid buildup, and on and on.

Probably all of us have ear noises. Normally, the sounds around us mask ringing and we remain unaware. When lying in the silence of a bedroom, they begin to sound like mid-shift in a boiler factory.

The problem becomes even more frustrating when a treatable cause cannot be found. But a hearing check is essential as a starter, because as hearing diminishes outer sounds are dimmed and inner ones become more pronounced.

Why did the salted ham seem to add to your noises? A guess is that the salt caused a fluid buildup in your circulation, causing the distended ear blood vessels to pulsate, adding to your problem. So if salt aggravates your head noises, avoid it — something you should do anyway for other good health reasons.

After you've been checked for hearing problems, there are steps you can take — setting a bedside radio to a point on the dial where there's a low-level static, or getting one of the ear-noise maskers, a little device worn like a hearing aid, and which emits a noise to mask the one inside your head. The booklet "Ear Noises: Their Causes and Cures" may offer other hints. Other readers can order by writing me care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents.

Hairstyles turn women's heads

CHICAGO (AP) — Throughout history, only a few women have made "headlines" with signature hairstyles that millions rushed to copy, a national group of professional hairstylists points out.

The Helene Curtis Guild of Professional Hairstylists, which has presented the Ten Best Coiffured Women Awards each year since 1958, has pinpointed several signature hairstyles that have turned heads around the world.

What made Bo Derek famous as a result of the movie, "10," for instance, was not just her figure, but the way she wore her hair. The 300 cornrow braids created a hair fashion sensation that swept the country and helped make Bo an overnight star.

The most recent trendsetter was Lady Diana's peekaboo trim that became known as the "Lady Di" cut. The softly layered style created by her London hairdresser gave "shy Di" the most sought-after look of 1981.

Liza Minnelli introduced a short, spiky style in the early 1970s that helped top off her stage personality — a mix of youthful vivacity and avant-garde sophistication. Not until nearly a decade later did the style become generally popular, when it was adopted with variations by New Wave rock musicians.

Rarely have sports stars been hair fashion trendsetters, according to the hairstylist group, but ice skater Dorothy Hamill was an exception. The "Dorothy Hamill Wedge," created by New York hair designer Suga in 1976, enhanced the skater's movement on the ice — and proved popular with active American women who wanted a swingy, easy-care look for sports, office and home.

In 1967, Audrey Hepburn's "gamine" style was at the forefront of the decade's trend to short hair fashions. Her hairstylist from Alexandre's salon in Paris said, "In all my career, the greatest sensation I have had is Audrey Hepburn. On her one can see immediately the results of one's work." He correctly predicted that the style would be copied by millions. Some public figures found hairstyles that were their signatures for years, with modifications and updates. Lauren Bacall's shoulder-length flip, for example, is a timeless style that exemplifies a cool, but sexy look.

Dear Abby

Sex offender's future worries past victim

DEAR ABBY: For a 27-year-old woman, I've been through a lot. I attempted suicide three times and was institutionalized twice because I was so filled with guilt and self-loathing I didn't think I deserved to live.

I am now recovering with the help of a therapist who has helped me realize that I was a victim.

My problems began when I was sexually abused by my stepfather from the time I was 8 until I was 14. I never told anyone until my younger sister became pregnant by him when she was 14. Because of her testimony and mine, Dad was sent to prison for seven years. (My mother divorced him.)

I just learned that he is out on parole and going to marry a young widow with two small daughters. I don't know if she knows about Dad's record, but if she doesn't and he molests her little girls, I would never forgive myself for not warning her. Should I be the one to tell her?

ANONYMOUS, PLEASE

DEAR ANON: Discuss this with your therapist. In any case, I agree, the woman must be told. Your letter gives me an opportunity to repeat this advice:

Parents, keep a sharp eye on your little ones. They are never too young to be told that they must not allow anyone to touch their private parts, or to involve them in any "secret" game-playing. Stress the importance of reporting such incidents immediately, particularly if the older person makes the child promise not to tell anybody.

Studies show that most children are sexually abused by a trusted family member or friend — rarely a stranger.

"Parents United" has an excellent self-help program, and the organization is nationwide. Please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Parents United, Inc., P.O. Box 952, San Jose, Calif. 95108, for the address of the chapter nearest you.

DEAR ABBY: Some years ago I was dating a man in another city. For Valentine's Day, he sent me flowers that were legally dead on arrival.

I told him about it, so his florist called and promised to send me some "lovely flowers" on the next occasion that called for flowers.

He did, too — on Mother's Day!

I didn't have the heart to tell my poor guy. NOT AMUSED IN WEST VIRGINIA

DEAR NOT: Too late now, but you should have told the florist you wanted a replacement too sweet!

New focus on knit gives industry life

NEW YORK (AP) — With designers including hand knits as key parts of their collections, hand knitting has become hot fashion news and home hand knitting is on the upswing, according to the Hand Knitting Association (HKA).

"There is a true renaissance of hand knitting, with a strong trend to high fashion knits," says Robert Briefel, chairman of HKA, an industry group made up of yarn craft manufacturers, distributors and suppliers. "The hand knitting industry has moved in tune with fashion and the times and has met with enormous consumer interest and demand," he adds, noting that 27 million Americans have taken up knitting, buying 100 million pounds of yarn in 1982 alone.

Americans spent hundreds of millions of hours knitting last year, industry leaders say, with a greater number of men and professional people involved with the art than ever before. At the HKA's recent show during the annual National Needlework Association meeting in Anaheim, Calif., the diversity of today's knitters was dramatized in a slide presentation featuring knitters from all walks of life.

One of them, Dr. Leland O. Learned, an anesthesiologist from Salt Lake City, Utah, described his longtime love affair with knitting as having begun during emergency room stints as "a good cure for boredom and a fine release for unwinding after a stressful day."

Business executives, both male and female, increasingly have joined the knitting brigade. They describe the activity as one that satisfies creative needs, makes productive use of otherwise "down time" and produces meaningful garments for themselves and others as special gifts.

Some use knitting as an aid to smoking and weight reduction, while others find it a calming therapy that is portable, easy to master and fun.

Tammy Homer, president of Homer and Durham Advertising Ltd. in New York City, says that knitting is her way of decompressing from her high-powered business. "I am challenged by the intricacies... by the patterns in knitting."

The excitement of personal creation is what draws knitter Patricia Wiley, group marketing director for National Distillers Products Corp. Based in New York City, Ms. Wiley says she enjoys making the transition from high-powered executive to knitter away from the office.

And, as designers present knit garments in their collections, knitting has become an economical way to stay in step with high fashion at substantial savings, Briefel notes.

Midland man carves name for himself

By RICHARD ORR
Midland Reporter-Telegram

MIDLAND — "It scared the hell out of me. I had heard of Neiman-Marcus and was afraid they'd turn me down."

But the renowned merchandiser of the ultimate in elegance didn't turn down Perry Holley down. In fact the 12-year working relationship he subsequently had with Neiman's helped make the signature "P.B. Holley" on wood carvings what the name Rolls Royce is to automobiles.

Holley didn't have any carvings on hand when Neiman's contacted him one November day in 1968, so the nine birds he later took to Dallas for an audition had to be borrowed from their original purchasers.

The head buyer for Neiman's took one look at the exquisite detail and the soft, lifelike hues of his basswood creations, Holley recalls, and said: "How many can we get, and how soon can we get them?"

On May 3, 1969, he took 40 birds to Neiman's Dallas store for a scheduled five-day show.

"I worked night and day to get 'em ready," he said in his soft, matter-of-fact manner.

By the end of the second day, all but four of the birds had sold for prices ranging from $300 to $1,400. Neiman's was delighted, of course. But it left them with no birds for the show scheduled at their Houston store the following week.

So the birds were tagged and sent to Houston, where Holley took orders for them before they were returned to the people who had bought them in Dallas.

Holley estimates he turned out 360 pieces for Neiman's during the course of the 12 years that followed, years that saw his work sold to buyers worldwide.

That's quite an accomplishment for the 59-year-old untutored product of a broken home. He was reared in a state orphanage at Corsicana from the time he was 6 years old until he graduated from the orphanage high school and joined the Navy in 1941.

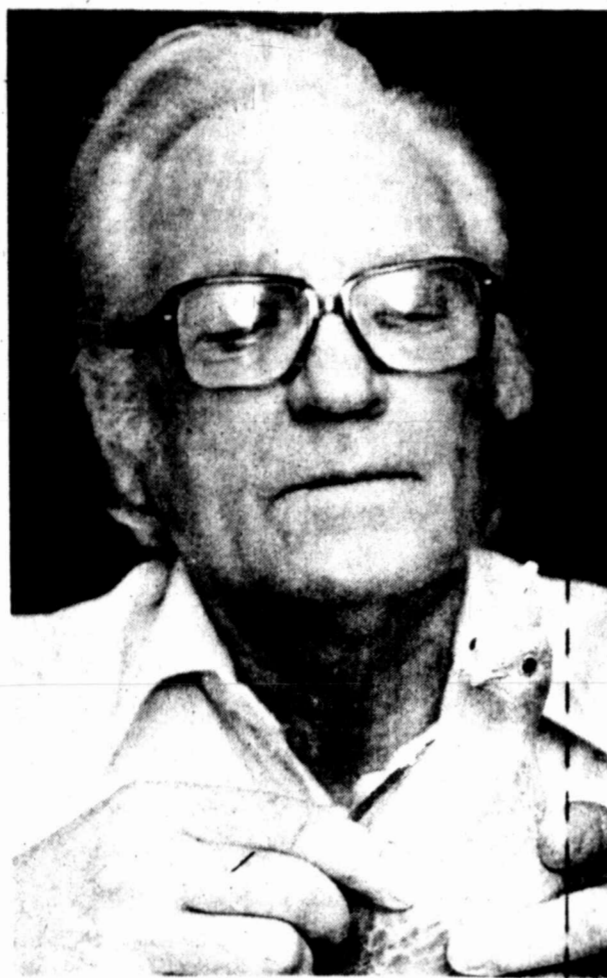

"It was a good life," he says in fond memory. "We used to feel sorry for the kids on the outside. There were a thousand kids there (including his brother and sister). It was like a big family. We learned to take care of each other."

It was at the orphanage that Holley also learned to "whittle little dogs and things," and he says his lifelong "fascination with wood" probably derives from a grandmother who used to say she wished she were a man so she could have been a carpenter.

Nicknamed "Tex" by his shipmates, Holley sharpened his carving skills by whittling replicas of Japanese ships for the war table used in keeping track of the enemy fleet.

"The main thing they wanted were profiles so (the real ships) could be identified with binoculars," he said, also recalling that his first ship went down off the coast of North Africa after being torpedoed by a German U-boat in 1942.

A post-war job opportunity as a model-maker for MGM studios turned to so much sawdust during a year-long carpenter's strike being honored by the Hollywood model-makers. Holley wound up in Midland in 1949 — along with his wife, Liz, and two sons, one of whom would die on Christmas day 20 years later in WHITTLING AWAY — Perry Holley, 59, of Midland carves a Bobwhite from a piece of wood. The former cabinet maker estimates he has turned out 360 pieces for Neiman-Marcus of Dallas in the 12 years he's been carving the bird.

Viet Nam.

The year 1949 was a good one for Holley and Midland.

"The day I came here I got on as a carpenter — a cabinet maker, really. They were building houses all over this town."

Nineteen years and a daughter later, back problems forced him into retirement and turned his carvings from a hobby to a livelihood.

"When I started doing the birds (90 percent of his work consists of game birds, 90 percent which are purchased by men) I didn't know if I could make a living at it or not."

A Canyon woman had the distinction of becoming Holley's first purchaser when she bought a shorebird for $35. It took about two weeks to complete in his spare time and was done in house paints.

That was in 1967.

House paint soon gave way to artist's oils mixed with flat white-producing creations so natural in appearance they almost look like stuffed birds — and a Midland woman later paid $135 for a pair of blue quail to give her husband on their wedding anniversary.

A "little bird" carried word of his work to Neiman-Marcus, and "P.B. Holley" now graces homes and mansions around the world.

Today Holley finishes 25 to 30 birds a year ("Most on order, others 'cause I wanna do 'em"), and hasn't let success go to his head. Actually he's a little mystified by it.

"It still shocks me that people will pay for something I enjoy doing. It's a real pleasure for me."

San Angelo parish bans 'wet' dances

SAN ANGELO (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest who first tried to end to the violence in his parish by asking his congregation to turn in their guns says he now must take his campaign a step farther.

St. Mary's Catholic Church no longer will rent its gym for dances and parish dances will be held without alcoholic beverages, said the Rev. Joseph Uecker.

He said the church will lose $3,000 in rental fees, but he wants a "put up or shut up" attitude toward ending violence to prevail among members of the congregation, which last year buried five gunshot victims.

"Since the death of Roy Canava on Feb. 24 ... the time has come for us, as a parish, to take a step toward eliminating violence," Uecker wrote in an Easter letter to parishioners.

Uecker conducted Canava's funeral and has since urged his parishioners to turn their weapons over to him.

The decision banning alcohol and outside rentals, except for existing contracts, was made by the parish council March 27.

The ban on alcohol at parish dances is not permanent, he said.

"The action of our Parish Council is a statement that we do not believe that it is possible at this time to have public dances with alcohol without the abuse of that alcohol," he wrote.

Vanity fares badly; critics rip magazine

NEW YORK (AP) — Vanity Fair, the exemplar of Jazz Age sophistication, returned last month as a slicked-up, ad-heavy journal of cocktail conversation for the soon-to-be-rich. Some critics thought it fell flat on its elegant face.

A watercolor on the cover showed Pan blowing geometric abstractions out of a pipe. Inside were Andy Warhol's paintings of Alfred Hitchcock, Richard Avedon's portraits of coal miners, a collage of scenes from Wagner operas.

Nora Ephron contributed a short story of a man who preserved a dead pet hamster in the freezer next to the ice cubes, and Nobel laureate Gabriel Garcia Marquez was represented by his grim "Chronicle of a Death Foretold."

Ads offered apparel, Palm Beach townhouses, world cruises and financial services "for those who are getting rich."

Publisher Joseph E. Corr Jr. said it all gave him a headache, but he retains his faith that Vanity Fair will be the preferred reading matter of the "new elite."

Not since the 1920s have the American rich been so ostentatious about their lack of ostentation, so smug in their mutual self-congratulation, so indifferent to the society upon which they feed," wrote Jonathan Yardley in the Washington Post. "In Vanity Fair... that message comes through loud, clear and contemptible."

Henry Fairlie in The New Republic dismissed it as "so crude, so wasted, so trumpery an effort." Fairlie thought a 12-page section advertising the clothes of designer Ralph Lauren was "the most appealing thing" in the magazine. Others said it didn't live up to its predecessor's illustrious reputation.

The old Vanity Fair, which introduced such writers as Dorothy Parker and Edna St. Vincent Millay and artists like Picasso and Matisse, was published by Conde Nast from 1914 to 1936 when it was incorporated into the fashion magazine Vogue.

Revived at a reported cost of $10 to $15 million, Vanity Fair is unabashedly wooing "the new elite." Not the old rich, but the new moneyed young Corr says are becoming the "emulated aristocracy of our society."

The magazine's targets are "upscale" professionals, average age 38-40, mean annual income, $40,000 and up. They came of age in the turbulent 1960s, perhaps dropped into a commune for a while but soon learned, Corr says, "you couldn't make much growing mushrooms."

"The new magazine will cover anything that counts," he said, from punk rock to William F. Buckley, Jr.

We will be high, low, beautiful, grotesque. We will be the cocktail conversation of the '80s that our illustrious forebear was to the '20s...

"These young folks fill their lives with an eclectic and rather deep interest in things cultural," Corr says. "If they're into music they have a record collection from Bach to the B-52s."

Apparently just the sort of people advertisers want. The magazine's 290-page March issue had 168 advertising pages, which the Publishers Information Bureau says might be a first-issue record — although there are no definitive figures. A full-page, four-color ad cost $12,750, the magazine said.

ROUGH START — A reader checks out the premiere issue of the new Vanity Fair, the reincarnation of the magazine that 50 years ago was the ultimate in sophistication. The new journal, brought forth with much fanfare, fell flat on its face with the critics.

CBS to show Afghan tapes

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS Evening News' says it will broadcast first-ever videotape showing Soviet soldiers and war machinery in Soviet-controlled areas of Afghanistan, beginning Tuesday night.

"You see the Russian military presence for the first time, and it is considerable," said Peter Larkin, CBS News' foreign editor, who supervised the project.

Others, including CBS' Evening News' anchorman, Dan Rather, have been inside Afghanistan since the Soviet military intervention began there in December 1979, but always as observers from the rebel side.

Larkin said the footage was shot over a five-week period by Erik Durschmeid, a Canadian citizen who lives in Paris. Larkin said Durschmeid entered Afghanistan on assignment for CBS News.

Charles' 'slama jama' stuns Coogs

Jammin' Coogs die by the dunk

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — North Carolina State's Heart Attack Wolfpack rule as college basketball's national champions today, unlikely winners of a crown that had been all but conceded to Houston's Phi Slama Jama skywalkers.

Beaten 54-52 in the NCAA finals Monday night, the men of the tallest fraternity in the land learned a couple of important facts of basketball life.

When you live by the dunk, sometimes you can die by the dunk, too. And you also can perish at the foul line, where soaring above the basket simply isn't allowed.

The irony of it all was that N.C. State did Houston in with a dunk by Lorenzo Charles at the final buzzer after Phi Slama Jama failed Elementary Basketball 101: Foul Shooting.

State was a longshot in this tournament after a mediocre 10-loss season. But Coach Jimmy Valvano, a street-smart New Yorker who took his wise-cracking act to tobacco country, sold his kids a dream and saw them deliver it against the top-ranked Cougars.

It was not an easy victory, but little of what the Wolfpack did in the tournament was easy. Why should the title game have been any different?

So when Charles grabbed Dereck Whittenburg's last-gasp air-ball and stuffed it through the basket for State's winning points with one second remaining, it was almost routine for the Cardiac Pack.

"That's just the way it's designed on the blackboard," deadpanned Whittenburg, who in three years of playing under Valvano has learned to place his tongue in his cheek every bit as well as his coach. "You think that's a freak play?" asked Valvano. "It's part of my Emergency Scoring Series, triple credenza play, unbalanced coach around left end."

It set off a wild celebration in the University of New Mexico's Pit, where State eliminated first Georgia and then Houston to capture the second NCAA title in the school's history.

It was a crown N.C. State almost didn't have a chance to win. They were the longest shots to win this tournament since 1966 when tiny Texas Western upset No. 1 Kentucky in the championship game.

The Wolfpack struggled through a mediocre season and was a so-so 17-10 going into the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament. It was there that State beat North Carolina and Virginia on consecutive nights to win an automatic invitation to the NAAs.

THEN THERE were pulsating wins by two points in double overtime against Pepperdine, by one point over Nevada-Las Vegas and by two over Virginia again to reach the Final Four.

All the while, Valvano was selling a dream, telling his kids they were a team of destiny. And the Pack bought the idea.

"They get tired of me talking about dreaming," Valvano said. "But I've been dreaming about this for a long time, ever since I got into coaching."

All State had to do to make the dream come true was beat the No. 1 team in the country, a dunk-drunk squad riding the crest of 26 consecutive victories. Houston had put on a clinic destroying second-ranked Louisville in the semifinals and figured to destroy Valvano's dream.

But it didn't quite happen that way. "Our goal was not to give them a dunk, to make them beat us outside," Valvano said.

The Wolfpack scored the game's first three baskets and for the first 15 minutes, Phi Slama Jama did not manage a single stuff shot as State's dreamers charged into a lead on the fine inside work of 6-11 Thurl Bailey.

"We played great," said Valvano. "We were up 6-0 and it could have been 10-0."

Eventually, 7-foot Akeem Olajuwon soared over the rim for one of Phi Slama Jama's specialties with five minutes left in the half. It was to be the only dunk all night for the team that had stuffed 13 in the faces of (See 'Cougars' on page 8-B)

THE WINNING DUNK — North Carolina State's Lorenzo Charles (43) stuffs the ball through the basket to give State a 54-52 win over Houston in the NCAA finals Monday night in Albuquerque. It was a tough loss for Houston coach Guy Lewis, whose Cougars have been winning by the slam dunk all season.

Wolfpack leaps on lucky breaks

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — North Carolina State was good, yes. But the 1982-83 NCAA basketball champions agreed they were also very lucky — especially at the end, where it counts the most.

"You need luck in a national tournament," an always-frank Jim Valvano said in at the moment of his greatest triumph. "Being in the right place at the right time is going to help you win a close game."

The underdog Wolfpack's improbable 54-52 upset of top-ranked Houston in the NCAA title game Monday night included at least two strokes of great fortune in the final two minutes when the game was ready to swing one way or the other.

Dereck Whittenburg's 23-footer set the stage for the final act in the drama, knotting the tightly-played affair at 52-52 with 1:59 left. Valvano then ordered his troops to foul Alvin Franklin, Houston's freshman guard in hopes that the Cougars' season-long Achilles heel, poor foul shooting, would deliver the ball back to the Pack.

It did. With 1:05 left, Franklin missed the front end of the one-and-one. The ball bounced off the rim and North Carolina State's Cozell McQueen and Thurl Bailey both got their hands on it. But Bailey thought he was fighting Houston center Akeem Olajuwon.

"I thought Cozell was Akeem, and I was trying to pull it away from him," said Bailey. "Then I looked at his back and saw who it was, and let go of the ball."

At that instant, McQueen deferred to Bailey and he, too, let go. The ball came within inches of going out of bounds, and into Houston's possession, before McQueen saved it.

"We were awful lucky right there," said Bailey. Valvano said the winning shot, Lorenzo Charles' stuff at the buzzer of Whittenburg's 30-foot prayer, was also dripping with good fortune.

"When I got the ball, I couldn't see the time," said Whittenburg. "I really didn't know where the goal was or how far away I was."

He let fly. The ball arched high into the air, angling lazily toward the basket. And, luckily for the Wolfpack, Olajuwon was not as close to the bucket as Houston Coach Guy Lewis had instructed him to be and Charles was standing there instead.

"When Dereck shot it, I saw it was going to be short," said Charles, whose two last-second free throws had lifted the Wolfpack past Virginia in the West Regional title game. "I was in the right place at the right time."

"When I looked up, I saw Lorenzo grabbing the ball and putting it through," said Whittenburg. "I looked at coach. He looked at me — we didn't know what had happened. And then everybody started jumping and hugging, and that was the game."

"When I saw him slam it, a cold chill went through me," said McQueen.

"Throughout the tournament, the other team was supposed to win," said McQueen. "It was just our day."

Lewis misses title bid for fourth time

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Just when Houston's Phi Slama Jama was ready to soar into orbit, it came crashing to earth.

After pouncing Louisville with 13 dunks en route to a 94-81 victory in the NCAA semifinals, the Cougars' high-wire act snapped Monday night with only one dunk in a 54-52 last-second loss to North Carolina State in the title game.

And Houston Coach Guy Lewis, who had all but erased the stinging criticism that he could not win the big games, found himself once again haunted by coaching decisions that did not succeed in the title game. Four times now Lewis has been in the Final Four. Four times he has lost.

"It feels awful," Lewis said of the collapse. "I feel bad after every game we lose but this one, of course, has a special significance."

On behalf of the dunking fraternity, 6-foot-5 Benny Anders said he and his mates did their best.

"We were thinking dunk but we didn't dunk," he said. "I guess we were just trying to get the ball in the basket."

But the ball went in the basket only 38 percent of the time from the field and poor foul shooting, the Achilles' heel the Cougars have had to run on all season, finally buckled. What had been called one of the best college teams of all time was left without a national title.

The crash was too great a disappointment for 7-foot center Akeem Olajuwon, who left the court abruptly, refusing to comment on his team's first loss in 27 games.

Olajuwon scored 20 points, had 18 rebounds and blocked seven shots to earn most valuable player honors. But he couldn't overcome Houston's 53 percent shooting percentage at the free throw line or the ineffectiveness of Phi Slama Jama.

Anders almost stole the ball from N.C. State guard Dereck Whittenburg in the final seconds in a desperate attempt to save the day for the Cougars.

Whittenburg managed to retrieve the ball and put up a wide shot which forward Lorenzo Charles crashed home with a slam at the buzzer.

"I had told myself I would make him (Whittenburg) go to his left and as soon as he put it on the floor twice, I was going for it," Anders said. "I got a hand on the ball but he turned and put it up."

Lewis has won 531 games in 27 seasons at Houston and was named last week as the Associated Press Coach of the Year.

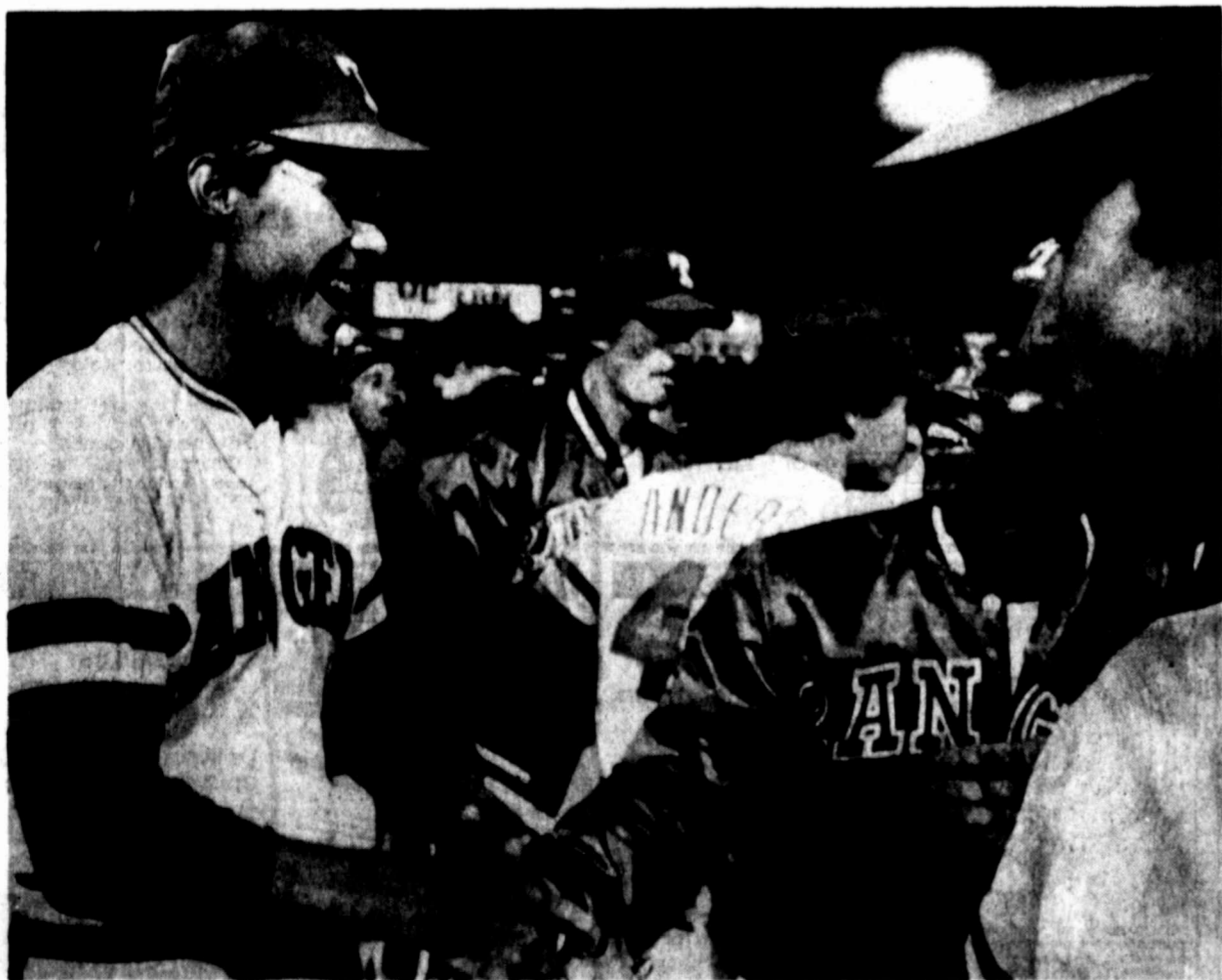

NOW, THOUGH, the old questions about Lewis' coaching decisions have surfaced again.

Why did he go to a passing game in the second half after Houston had staged a patented rally to take a 42-35 lead? The controlled tempo was supposed to be N.C. State's strategy but the Cougars took a page from the Wolfpack playbook.

"We went to that because I have a lot of confidence in that offense," Lewis said. "I felt we could pull it out and get some layups."

Lewis pointed to Houston's season-long weakness at the free throw line as the key to the loss. The Cougars hit only 61 percent from the line for the season.

Rader's Rangers open with win

HOW TO SPELL RELIEF — Texas Rangers relief pitcher John Butcher, left, receives congratulations from teammates after the Rangers' 5-3 win over the Chicago

White Sox Monday in Arlington. It was the managerial debut of former Astro Doug Rader.

ARLINGTON (AP) — Doug Rader wanted the Texas Rangers to at least look good in his managerial debut.

And after one inning Monday night in an American League opener with the Chicago White Sox, they shined like the same Rangers who lost 96 games in 1982.

However, Texas rallied from a stumbling start to outlast the White Sox 5-3 behind homers by Mike Richardt and Larry Parrish.

"I almost swallowed my chewing tobacco," Rader said after starting pitcher Mike Smithson gave up two hits, two walks and hit a batter in the Chicago first inning. "It scared the hell out of me."

Smithson steadied to last six innings then John Butcher came on in relief to earn the victory with three innings of two-hit hurling.

"The bullpen is supposed to be our weak spot but we showed it just might be our strong point," said Butcher. "It's certainly my most exciting moment in sports, including high school, college and professional baseball."

Rader said "Butcher was just great. His sinker was eating them alive."

Smithson gave up a single to Rudy Law, then walked two batters. A hit batsman, a ground out, and Carlton Fisk's single gave the White Sox their three runs.

Texas scored two unearned runs in its half of the inning off LaMarr Hoyt. Richardt tied the game with a homer in the sixth and Parrish drilled a ball some 425 feet over the centerfield fence in the seventh inning. Buddy Bell provided an insurance run with a run-scoring single in the eighth inning.

"I didn't know whether that ball was going to make it or not into the wind," said Parrish. "This puts me three months ahead of last year. That's how long it took me to hit my first homer."

Ironically, Parrish had been mentioned in trade talk earlier this spring as Chicago-bound.

"Parrish killed that ball," said Rader. "The wind never had a chance."

Hoyt said "I couldn't believe Parrish's ball. When you hit one out in centerfield here, you've really hit the ball. You have to give him credit."

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, APR. 6, 1983

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day to follow the suggestions of experienced persons. You have good judgment and are more resourceful than usual. Make practical plans for the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Engage in activities that will make your life more interesting. Put your special talents to work. Use care in travel.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Do whatever is necessary to make your home more comfortable. Do some entertaining in the evening. Show that you have poise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get in touch with persons who can help you become more efficient in your line of endeavor. Improve your appearance.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Plan how to make your monetary structure more profitable. If you have any doubts, confer with financial experts.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get together with good friends who can give you the assistance you need now. Make sure you put ideas across intelligently.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Take steps to make the future brighter. Once business matters are taken care of, engage in recreation you enjoy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Look to a higher-up for the data you need. Get together later with individuals whose interests are similar to yours.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get an early start in outside activities and where your career is concerned and make big headway. Take care of civic duty.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Put those fine ideas to work that will help you advance in your line of endeavor. New contacts can be helpful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Following your hunches is wise now, since they could lead you in directions you had not thought possible in the past.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Coming to a better agreement with associates is possible today. You have clever ideas that should be expressed.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make conditions around you more ideal so you can operate more efficiently in the future. Go shopping for wardrobe needs.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who likes to get important things done, for personal gratification and for the adulation of others. Be sure to give encouragement. Much vision here that should not be thwarted. Sports are a must.

ELDRED GRAY MOVES TO NEW LOCATION
...He's now at 201 Permian Building

Eldred Gray can help you gain from tax act

It's income tax time. April 15 is only a little less than a week away and you're probably looking for ways to get the most out of your return.

Because of the new tax laws, like the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act, your tax preparations are most important if you are to receive the best benefit possible.

It is complicated, but Eldred E. Gray, a Big Spring certified public accountant can help you sort through it all.

He has moved to a new office at 201 Permian Building.

The most important thing you need to do is review your entire tax plan so that you can benefit from the new laws.

Although it is illegal to not pay income taxes, it is wise to pay as little as possible. The government has given tax breaks for a number of things to make individuals' payments lower. Eldred Gray can help you find these breaks.

Among the things that can be deducted are moving expenses, energy saving measures for the home and job-related expenses.

Political contributions and contributions to charitable organizations can also be written off for savings to the taxpayers.

But, it often takes several different forms to get what you need. Eldred Gray has the qualifications necessary to help. He has been a certified public accountant for 16 years and has over 25 years experience in preparing income tax forms. He knows the best way to claim exemptions.

Time is running out. If you have a great deal of tax work still to be done, you may need to file for a filing extension until August. Gray has the information to help you.

Call him today at 267-5938. He also offers services for bookkeeping, money management and audits.

Cougars stalled in second half

Louisville's Cardinals just two days before. State's tenacious 2-3 zone defense controlled the area under the hoop.

At halftime, Bailey had 15 points, Houston's Clyde Drexler was tied to the bench with four personal fouls and the Wolfpack was sitting on a 33-25 lead, 20 minutes away from a national championship.

It turned out to be the longest 20 minutes of Valvano's life.

"I felt we were in a better position eight down to North Carolina State at the half than we were five down to Louisville at the half (in the semifinals)," said Houston Coach Guy Lewis. "I just had the feeling we hadn't played a lick. I felt if we go out and play at all, we win the game."

North Carolina State came out ice cold in the second half and Houston went on a tear, outscoring the Wolfpack 17-2 over the first 9 1/2 minutes. It was reminiscent of the 21-1 Cougar spurt that had buried Louisville on Saturday. The only difference was that Phi Slama Jama still wasn't stuffing. But the fraternity did have the lead, 42-35.

"We were stone cold," said Valvano.

IT WAS beginning to look like the dream was over. Then, though, Houston helped revive it. The racehorse, run-and-gun Cougars, slowed to a walk. The slowdown that N.C. State was expected to play arrived from an unlikely source — Houston.

"We went to that because I have a lot of confidence in that offense," said Lewis. "I felt we could pull it out and get some layups."

Valvano admitted he was surprised to see it. Not sorry, you understand. Just surprised.

"They were on a roll and there was quite a bit of time left," he said. "It wasn't like there were four or five minutes. They hadn't exactly been lighting it up, either. Maybe they were trying to get us extended and further from the basket to get some layups."

Injured Astros open tonight

By The Associated Press
Tom Lasorda, who claims he "bleeds Dodger blue," did considerable bleeding in spring training with a Los Angeles team that finished six games under .500 and averaged almost two errors a game.

But Tom Lasorda is, well, Tom Lasorda; ever the optimist. "Your exhibition record has no bearing whatsoever once the season starts," said Lasorda, who sent left-handed ace Fernando Valenzuela against the Houston Astros in a National League opener tonight. "Starting Tuesday, I don't think anyone will remember or care what we did (in the spring)."

The contest is one of five National League openers, following the traditional game in Cincinnati Monday. The Reds officially opened business for the NL with a 5-4 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Along with Dodger-Astro game, Pittsburgh was at St. Louis, Philadelphia visited New York, Montreal was at Chicago and San Diego played at San Francisco.

After three American League games Monday, the rest of the teams got into action with Toronto at Boston, Detroit at Minnesota, Chicago at Texas, New York at Seattle and Milwaukee at California.

Lasorda expects a better performance from the Dodgers than their 11-17 record and butter-fingered defensive play this past spring. The team is making some adjustments after losing half their infield, first baseman Steve Garvey and third baseman Ron Cey.

Valenzuela, 19-12 last season, will oppose Houston's Joe Niekro, 17-12.

The Astros, meanwhile, seem to be hurting even more — literally. Along with pitching star Nolan Ryan, out with an inflamed prostate gland, the Astros have eight on players battling injuries.

Houston Manager Bob Lillis said he won't forget the just-concluded spring training that was troubled not only by injuries, but bad weather. The Astros wound up with one of their worst spring training records in history, 3-16.

"This experience is something on which all of us can build," Lillis said. "I realize it's been tough on our fans, but it's been tough on the players, too. And when we get off to a winning start, we can all look back on the spring and say, 'We waded through the misfortune.' We proved we could handle adversity."

The Cardinals, defending world champions, have some injury problems, too, as they start the season. Centerfielder Willie McGee, the club's top rookie in 1982, and second baseman Tommy Herr both were out of the lineup with injuries.

The 24-year-old McGee, following an examination by team physician Dr. Stan London, was placed on the NL's 15-day disabled list. McGee, who hit .296 last season, suffered a slight shoulder separation during a squad game in Florida last week. Herr has undergone arthroscopic surgery on an injured left knee and the Cardinals are awaiting the results.

David Green will be McGee's replacement in center field and utility infielder Mike Ramsey will fill in for Herr at second.

By way of contrast with the condition of the St. Louis club, Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner said the Pirates — with the exception of disabled right-hander Don Robinson — are healthier than at the start of 1982.

ting back from an arm injury the season before, will pitch for the Pirates. His opponent will be right-hander Bob Forsch, 15-9, the ace of the Cardinals' staff.

Pete Rose was scheduled to start in right field for the Phillies — the first time he's played the outfield since he was with Cincinnati in 1975. That development happened because of an injury to Von Hayes, whom the Phillies acquired from Cleveland in an off-season trade.

Tony Perez, like Rose a member of the 40-year-old set, will start at first base, Rose's usual position. Another member of the Geritol set, 39-year-old Joe Morgan, started at second.

Steve Rogers, 19-8 in 1982, will open for Montreal against Chicago's Ferguson Jenkins, 14-15. The Phillies send Steve Carlton, 23-11, against New York's Tom Seaver, 5-13. And San Francisco's Mike Krukow, 13-11, has the Opening Day assignment against Tim Lollar, 16-9, of San Diego.

In the AL openers, it's Toronto Dave Stieb, 17-14, vs. Boston's Dennis Eckersley, 13-13; Detroit's Jack Morris, 17-16, against Minnesota's Brad Havens, 10-14; Chicago's Floyd Bannister, 7-7, against Texas's Jon Matlack, 7-7; New York's Ron Guidry, 14-8, vs. Seattle's Gaylord Perry, 10-12, and Milwaukee's Don Sutton, 17-9, against California's Bruce Kison, 10-5.

The Twins open their season with renewed confidence, following their best spring training in history, thanks to some fine performances by Gary Ward and Gary Gaetti.

Braves lose opener

By The Associated Press

The Cincinnati Reds, the worst of the West in 1982, knocked off the Atlanta Braves, the division's best a year ago, 5-4 Monday in the National League's opener to the 1983 major league baseball season.

Eddie Milner's two-out single and stolen base and Dave Concepcion's single off reliever Steve Bedrosian broke a 4-4 tie in the bottom of the eighth inning. Winner Mario Soto allowed five hits and four runs — two earned — in eight innings. Tom Hume picked up the save.

In the only other afternoon game, the American League opener, George Brett's two-run homer and solo shots by Willie Aikens and Jerry Martin powered the Kansas City Royals past the Baltimore Orioles 7-2.

The game in Cincinnati, the traditional opening-day site in the NL, drew 42,892 fans in superb baseball weather. It was the first time in 11 years at Riverfront Stadium that the Reds' opener has not been a sellout.

The Braves, who set a big-league record last year by winning their first 13 games, got a run in the first inning on Claudell Washington's sacrifice fly and two in the second on Chris Chambliss' homer.

In Baltimore, Brett doubled and later scored in the first inning and homered in the third off Dennis Martinez.
