Gas supplier requests rate hike

By LISA MUSSER
Staff Writer

The average Big Spring gas customer may pay $84 more per year if a rate increase request by Cabot Corp. is approved by the Texas Railroad Commission, Energas Co. officials said today.

Big Spring is one of more than 80 cities that receive their total gas supplies from Westar Transmission Co., Mike Doll of Amarillo, director of corporate communications for Energas, said in a telephone interview today. Westar is a subsidiary of Cabot Corp. Cabot filed a request Tuesday to increase the rate of its margin billing from 28.58 cents to 75 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, an approximate 160 percent increase. Margin billing includes all costs but that of the gas, he said.

Westar, Cabot's subsidiary, has been losing about $1.6 million per month, said Steve Gens, director of state government relations for Cabot Corp.'s eastern and western pipeline divisions.

Cabot would receive a total annual revenue increase of about $26 million per year if the increase is approved, he said.

Energas would receive no money from the proposed increase and is taking an active part in opposing Cabot's request to the Railroad Commission, Doll said.

"We're going to fight it ... on behalf of our customers," Doll said.

Gens said Westar has consistently been losing money because of an "insufficient regulated margin."

Gens said three components make up the natural gas bill: cost of the gas, transmission company margin and distribution company margin.

Westar, a transmission company, has been losing money on its margin because of reduction in the demand for natural gas and an increase in operating cost, he said.

Cabot has not had a rate increase for its gas since 1979. But its operating costs have increased from $12.1 million in 1979 to $37 million in 1985, Gens said.

Gens said the Big Spring area received its gas from the Pioneer Corp. until Oct. 1, 1984, when Cabot Corp. acquired the business. The company has been serving under the same margin expense as Pioneer did.

Energas, which filed a claim with the Railroad Commission in December against what it considered high charges of Weststar then, plans to continue fighting the increase, Doll said.

Energas' claim in December is still pending with the Railroad Commission, Doll said.

Falwell will stage rally in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — The Rev. Jerry Falwell's National Federation for Decency will be allowed to use a Dallas park to stage a Sept. 2 anti-pornography march despite a vote by the city's park board to deny the use of Cole Park.

Board President Billy Allen said the group first voted to ask city staff members to take "all steps necessary to keep Jerry Falwell's group out of Cole Park" because they feared Falwell's recent remarks about South Africa's apartheid regime might spark civil disturbances.

The Falwell group plans to hold a rally at the park that morning and then march to Southland Corp. offices in an attempt to persuade the corporation to stop selling adult magazines at its 7-11 stores.

Allen said the board also "wanted the public to know that we have no part of" the federation's efforts to pressure Southland.

"I don't think this is an appropriate use of a city park," said board member Ida Papert. "And, besides that, I'm a realist. I don't want to attack Southland."

Aid to schools may drop more than $100 million

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau AUSTIN — State aid to Texas public schools could drop by more than $100 million this coming school year, and Howard County school districts may have to assume about $580,000 of that loss, according to preliminary estimates.

Howard County school districts will take in $7.79 million in state funds for the 1985-86 school year, a drop from the $8.37 million received by those schools in 1984-85.

A Texas Education Agency estimate shows $4.44 billion in state funds will go to public schools in 1985-86, down from $4.54 billion for the school year that just ended.

However, the statewide aid loss may become a slight gain when the latest student headcounts are included in the calculations. The Texas Education Agency aid estimates were based on 1984-85 enrollments but will be updated when 1985-86 information is available.

But the bottom line is that less state money will be furnished per child statewide. "For the same number of kids, the state is proposing to spend less money. There is a slight reduction," said Tom Patton, TEA state funding director.

Despite an expected jump in enrollment, there are several factors at work depressing the amount of state aid that will go to school districts, Patton said.

Local school districts are required to pay a bigger share of education costs through school finance reforms adopted by the Texas Legislature in 1984, Patton said. "It is like a deductible insurance policy."

Increases or drops in local property values also will play a role in the amount of state aid they will receive and how much they will have to pay on their own, Patton said. "Some districts will have had an increase in property value relative to their neighbors, meaning their local share will go up."

Another factor, and probably the largest, Patton said, is the cut in the "parachute" funds furnished to ease the blow as wealthy school districts are weaned in part from state funds. The parachute funds will be phased out by 1987-88.

A large number of school districts will have to raise local property taxes this year.

Stanton gets police chief

STANTON — No longer is this town without a top cop. Mike Adams, 30, has accepted the police chief position and will begin work Sept. 3.

Adams said he agreed Wednesday to take the position offered to him by the City Council.

The council chose Adams Tuesday night from a pool of about 15 applicants, Mayor Danny Fryar said.

Adams was on vacation Tuesday and was notified about his selection Wednesday morning, but at that time he said he wasn't sure if he would accept the job.

Stanton has been without a police chief since Ricky Kennedy left

Aug. 9 to take a higher paying job with the Pecos County Sheriff's Office in Fort Stockton.

The town's police department has been operated by its three patrolmen in the absence of the chief, Fryar said.

Adams has intermediate law enforcement certification, and has worked as a captain at the Lamesa Police Department and as a patrolman in Midland.

He currently is a farmer in the Stanton area.

Adams, who was raised in Stanton, said he is "excited about working to help the people I've known all of my life."

Hightower touts proposed farm bill

DES MOINES Iowa (AP) — Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said Thursday a farm bill has been proposed in Congress that would revitalize the agricultural economy and also cut $20 billion from the federal deficit.

"The economic depression that has gripped the agricultural economy for the past five years has not only driven more than 300,000 farmers from the land, it has also decimated the industries that serve farmers," Hightower said.

In a speech to the Agricultural Implement Workers Bargaining Council of the United Auto Workers, Hightower said that during the Great Depression, International Harvester lost money in only 1932 and 1933.

"This time around, Harvester started losing money in 1979 and hasn't stopped since, having lost more than $1.5 billion. As a result, International Harvester closed the Farm-all tractor plant in Rock Island, Ill., causing a loss of 2,600 jobs, and the Memphis plant, costing 1,425 jobs," Hightower said.

"The bad news is that this depression isn't over yet," he said. "Without improvements in real farm income, industry experts estimate that 43 percent of the farm implement dealerships in business today will have to close down before the decade is out, and that means more jobs lost."

Hightower said the proposed Farm Policy Reform Act would allow "for higher farm prices that add up to a 52 percent increase in net farm income and a 15 percent boost in farm export value while virtually eliminating direct federal farm subsidies."

Big Spring's Olympic medalist Rose Magers, a member of the U.S. women's volleyball team, displays some of the Team USA sweatsuits.

Olympic leftovers in sale

"You should have been here earlier. Boom! People came and boom! it was gone," said Olympic silver medalist Rose Magers, standing among the remnants of her garage sale Thursday.

Magers, a member of the U.S. women's volleyball team that won a silver medal at the Los Angeles Olympics, had a one-day sale of sweatsuits, athletic shoes and other mementos from her days on Team USA.

By 4 p.m., most of the items were sold, including eight 13 pairs of athletic shoes and piles of Team USA sweatsuits. Magers, who is taking a breather from Team USA, said she wanted to sell the items because they were taking up too much space.

The Big Spring native said she was selling them at reasonable prices — $20 for a sweatsuit — because most were given to her. "I can't come back here and sell them at high prices, because I got them free," she said.

Magers leaves soon to teach a volleyball clinic in Pittsburgh, Penn. She probably will rejoin Team USA next year, she said.

Loeffler recycles proven promises

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) — In entering the Republican gubernatorial game, Tom Loeffler borrowed a few pages from President Reagan's campaign play book.
He immediately began running against the capital.
He sounded an alarm about taxes.
He branded the incumbent's policies as "failed."
He pushed traditional values.
He promised to mobilize public support if legislators balk at making tough financial decisions.
And in case anybody missed the connection, the congressman used the president's name a time or two.
"President Ronald Reagan brought a new beginning to America and changed the role of the federal government. It is now time to bring a new beginning home to Texas," Loeffler said during a series of stops statewide Thursday.

"What we must do in Texas is follow the model of what President Reagan has done for the American people," was his answer to a question about the state's precarious budget situation.
Criticizing state spending and the $4.8 billion school and road tax increase Gov. Mark White pushed through the Legislature, Loeffler said officials in the capital are out of touch with citizens in the state.
"If we want to continue Texas as we know it," he said, "then we have got to learn to live within our means, to be Texans in Austin as we are Texans throughout the rest of the state."
While no major state official has even suggested a state income tax, Loeffler, third-ranking Republican in the U.S. House, nonetheless warned of the danger of one.

"The downfall of our economy and our state ... would be a state corporate or personal income tax," he said.
While no governor's budget proposal ever gets much more than a quick glance from the Legislature, Loeffler said White has failed to be a budgeting leader.

The incumbent's best efforts, he said, are little more than "tried and failed policies." But if elected, Loeffler said he would stand up "and submit a budget that the Legislature will follow."

He promised another Reagan strategy if lawmakers balk: Asking the public to pressure them.
"I will call upon the support of the people ... to help me encourage the Legislature to make the tough decisions but to still come up with the programs that are necessary."

Dorton mum on union stand

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer
Fire Chief Carl Dorton said Thursday afternoon he would not comment on a union statement opposing planned demotions and a reduction in department manpower.
Councilmen on Monday included in their 1985 budget a proposal that would close Central Fire Station, eliminate two men from the department by attrition and demote four others. In addition, it would allow the chief to appoint an assistant fire chief, create the position of a training officer and eliminate the arson investigator's position.
Members of the Big Spring Professional Firefighter's Association Local 2922 voted in an emergency meeting Wednesday to oppose the demotions and manpower reductions.
According to a statement issued Thursday by the association the manpower, reductions and demotions would save the department only $100 a month.
Dorton said he did not know if that figure was accurate. "I haven't put a pencil to that part of it," he said.
When asked whether he had discussed any compromises with firemen that would save money but avoid demotions and reductions in manpower, Dorton said he would not bargain on the issue.

At a council work session on the budget Monday, Dorton estimated that his entire proposal would save the city $50,000.
The proposal will follow the state civil service rules and regulations, he said.
The union statement said most firemen do not oppose the closing of the Central stationhouse.
If the station is closed, the city will have to build an addition to another manned station to house its snorkel, said Dorton. That will be a top priority if the proposal is approved, he said.
"As long as I have a plan, say to build an addition in another six months, it's okay with the State Insurance Board (to house it temporarily in the unmanned Central station)," Dorton said. "If I leave it at an unmanned station for five years, then they have a problem with it."
The State Insurance Board in Austin must approve changes in manpower, equipment, stations and other areas of a fire department that affect key rates.

Car hits pole, hurts woman

ODESSA — A Big Spring woman was listed in stable condition this morning in the intensive care unit of Odessa's Medical Center Hospital after a one-vehicle accident Thursday morning on FM 700 and Baylor Street.
Leticia Trevino Young, 21, of 2607 Hunter was taken to Malone-Hogan Hospital and later was transferred to the Odessa Medical Center, a Medical Center spokesman said this morning.
Young suffered head injuries in the accident, a spokesman from Malone-Hogan Hospital said.

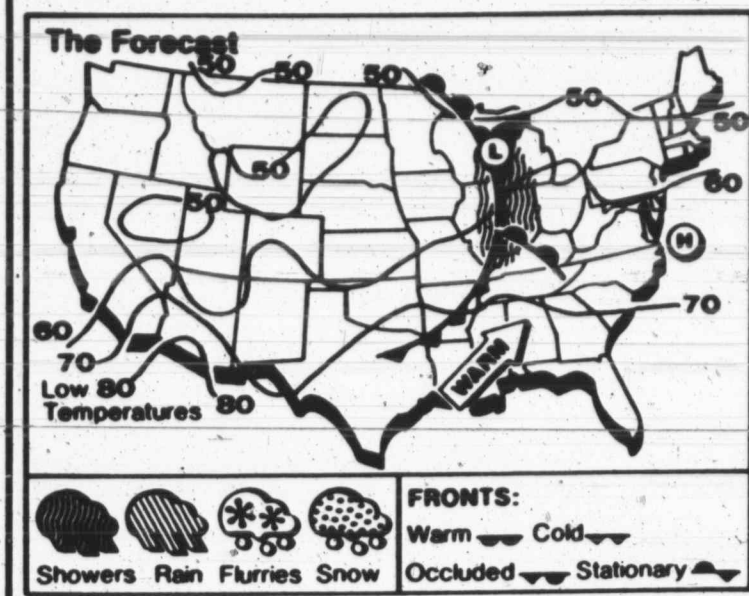

The accident occurred just before 10 a.m. when the woman lost control of her 1973 AMC Hornet as she was traveling east in the right lane of FM 700, police said. The car struck a utility pole, a fence and a Big Spring Cable TV pole, according to the police report.
The report listed "unsafe speed" as a possible cause of the accident.
The first pole was broken at ground level, leaving it hanging in the air, police reported. In addition, about 24 feet of wood fencing was destroyed and $150 damage was done to the cable TV pole, according to the police report.

Disaster response rated 'excellent performance'

By LISA MUSSER
Staff Writer
No 10s are awarded in disaster drill critiques, so the 8.9 rating given for emergency response in Big Spring Thursday signaled an "excellent performance," a Department of Public Safety training officer said.
The tabletop emergency drill conducted by city, county and federal agencies and emergency medical teams proved the participants had the power to "pull together as a team," DPS assistant training officer Bobby Ewing of Austin said Thursday afternoon in a critique session.
Ewing said he gives no 10 ratings because there is always room for improvement.
Administrators in the detective room of the police department, the contact point for the morning drill, listened Thursday afternoon as the overall effort was critiqued.
Overseers of the drill were Ewing; A.H. Koenning, liaison officer of the Department of Public Safety from Midland; and Sgt. Frank Woodall of the Department of Public Safety from Big Spring.
Hal Boyd, emergency management coordinator for the city, said the disaster drill showed several areas needing improvement. "Our plan is good, but it's outdated," said Boyd, who also is Big Spring Airpark and industrial development manager.
Boyd said the agencies would work on an updated plan based on experience obtained Thursday.
Two areas needing improvement are communication between the agencies and quicker coordination at the beginning of the drill, Boyd said.

Another goal will be to more involve private sector participants, including area hospitals and utility companies.
A long-range goal would be to designate a disaster base containing specified areas in the building from which participants would operate, Boyd said. The designated location would allow the agencies to coordinate together more easily, he said.
"The police station was used as a base during this drill, he said.
Participating in the drill were several city officials, the Big Spring police and fire departments, Howard County Sheriff's Office, Federal Prison Camp, Veteran's Administration Medical Center, Big Spring Independent School District, Lee Ambulance Service, Big Spring Amateur Radio Club and the Big Spring-Howard County Emergency Management Agency.
During the disaster response exercise, the agencies reacted to a scenario involving several major accidents, including a fire and explosion at the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp; an explosion of a railroad car, causing a toxic chemical to leak on the northwest part of town and into Two Mile Creek; and an accident at FM 700 and Highway 87, causing another toxic chemical leak, Pat Hardy, the city's administrative assistant, said Thursday.
In addition, the drill provided for a tornado which ripped apart Lakeview Elementary at 1107 N.W. Seventh and the Rip Griffen Truck Stop, triggering explosions at the truck stop, and a TV news team helicopter crash, Hardy said.

Snake sales snubbed

DENVER — Zoo officials, citing violations of wildlife protection laws, have turned down a $50 donation from Snakes Inc., formed by 10 children who spent most of the summer catching and selling snakes to raise the funds.

"If you were given a gift gained by illegal activities, would you accept it?" asked Assistant Director Paul Linger. Officials said they would visit the cardboard office of Snakes Inc. today to explain why snake-vending is illegal.

The ten budding entrepreneurs have caught and sold bull snakes, blue- and yellow-bellied racers and garter snakes to raise the money for a reptile house at the zoo.

Chad Weygand, 10, chairman of Snakes Inc., was "very upset" at the news, said his dad, Larry. "It's going to be a crushing blow to the kids."

Weygand said he, too, is upset with "the whole bureaucratic machinery. If they want to make a mountain out of molehill, they picked the wrong guy."

Winners claim cash

NEW YORK — A 36-year-old man stepped forward today to claim his one-third share of North America's biggest lottery prize, $41 million, while 21 factory workers who shared another third of the prize reported to work as usual.

It would "not be fair for the company not to show up — it would hold up production," said Virat Lao, one of the workers who pooled their chances in Wednesday's big state Lotto game. "And they've been good to us."

The final winner, who bought a ticket in Albany, had not claimed the prize by this morning, lottery officials said. Each of the winning tickets correctly predicted the numbers — 14, 17, 22, 23, 30, 47 — drawn at random from 48 possibilities.

The holder of the second winning ticket, Joe Moore of Brooklyn, said at a news conference today that he was numb after learning he had won $13.7 million. "I haven't really realized the impact of what's happened to me yet," Moore said.

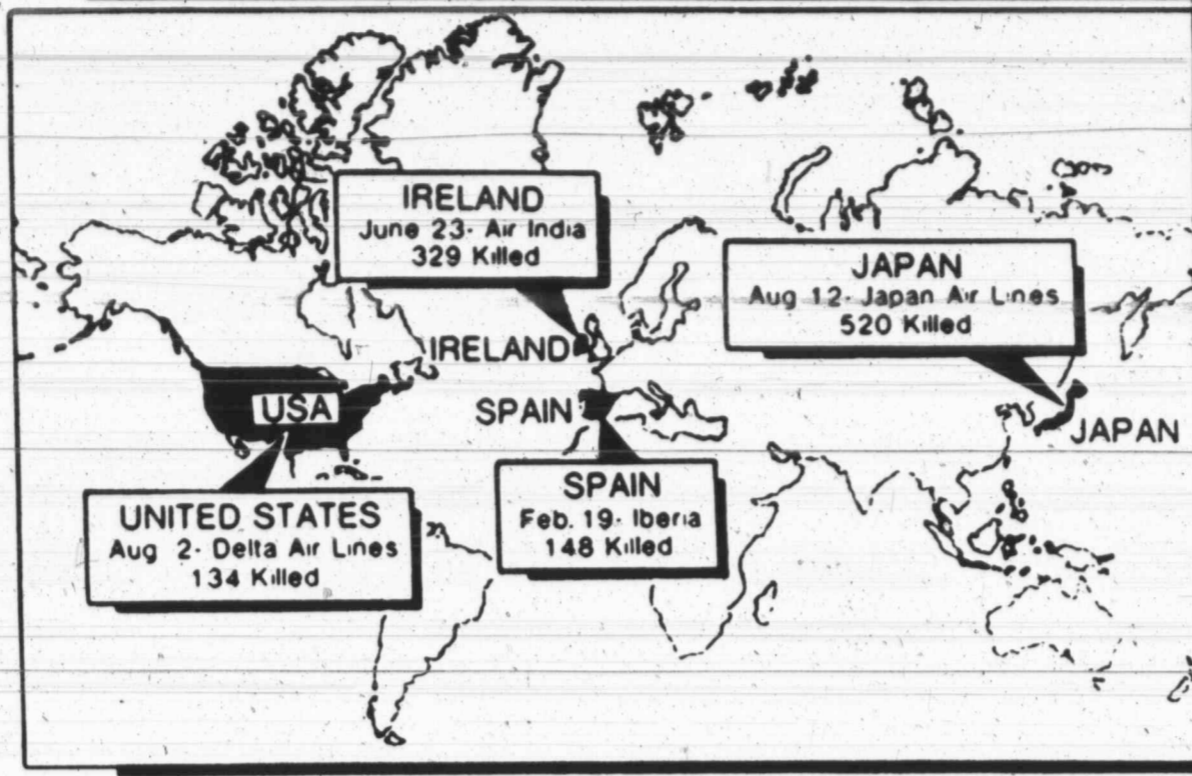

A regular lottery player, Moore said he probably would keep his job with a computer data processing firm. Asked how he would spend his winnings, he said, "I'm probably going to try to shelter a lot of it from Uncle Sam."

Human error blamed

SOUTH CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Union Carbide Corp. today blamed equipment failure and human error for an Aug. 11 poison gas leak at its Institute plant that sent 135 people to hospitals.

The company also said that the poison cloud was composed of 650 pounds of methylene chloride, a suspect cancer-causing agent, and 2,000 pounds of aldicarb oxime "decomposition products." By that, the company meant the aldicarb broke down in a storage tank before being released.

AVIATION DEATHS IN 1985

This map locates the four worst aviation accidents during 1985 throughout the world. With 15 accidents and more than 1,400 people killed, 1985 is already the worst year for fatalities in the history of civil aviation, according to a United Nations-affiliated agency.

Fear of flying

This is worst year ever for aviation deaths

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 1,400 people have been killed in accidents involving scheduled flights on commercial planes so far this year — more than during any full year in the history of civil aviation, a United Nations-affiliated agency says.

The 1985 death toll has soared because of four major crashes this year. The most recent, the worst single-plane accident on record, was the Aug. 12 Japan Air Lines crash that killed 520.

Until now, 1974 with 1,299 deaths ranked as the worst year for scheduled, commercial airline service, Eugene Sochor, a spokesman for the International Civil Aviation Organization in Montreal, said Thursday.

The 1974 total was high because 346 people were killed in the March crash of a Turkish DC-10 northeast of Paris, he said.

Last year, Sochor said, there were 15 accidents involving commercial scheduled airliners — the same number as this year's total to date — but only 224 fatalities. That was the lowest death toll in the 40 years the ICAO has kept the records.

Earlier this year, an Air-India Boeing 747 crashed off the coast of Ireland on June 23, killing 329; an Iberia Boeing 727 crashed into a mountain in Spain on Feb. 19, killing 148; and a Delta Air Lines jet crashed at Dallas-Forth Worth Airport on Aug. 2, killing 134.

Despite those large numbers, Sochor cautioned that "when you deal with aviation safety, you cannot jump to conclusions on a yearly basis. You cannot say there's something wrong with aviation or that it's particularly worrisome that there are more (fatalities) than last year."

He said there are relatively few accidents each year and they occur at random. In the last 10 years, he said, there have been an average of 22 accidents annually.

In addition, Sochor said, airlines are dealing with a growing number of passengers who take more flights and travel more miles. In 1984 there were 330 million passengers on scheduled airlines, he said, while 900 million are expected this year.

Viewed over a period of several years, Sochor said, the rate of fatalities is going down. He said the aviation organization estimates the likelihood of a fatal air crash at one in 500,000 flights.

The international air group's statistics do not include Thursday's crash of a British Airtours Boeing 737 in Manchester, England, which killed more than 50 people, because the plane was a charter rather than a scheduled flight.

6 killed in battle

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Police firing rubber bullets and shotgun blasts today battled a mob of stone-throwing blacks in northern Cape Province, killing six people and wounding 20, authorities said.

In Cape Town, the Rev. Allan Boesak, a mixed-race opponent of apartheid and President of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, announced a march next Wednesday to the gates of Pollsmoor Prison to demand the freedom of black leader Nelson Mandela, jailed for 21 years.

Residents of Soweto, near Johannesburg, said the army had for the second day in a row arrested youngsters boycotting classes.

Hundreds of parents, aided by clergymen, gathered at a main police station to locate their children, the residents said. They reported scattered stone-throwing in the afternoon, but no new deaths.

Spy dust studied

MOSCOW — A chemical the State Department says was used by the KGB to trace U.S. diplomats' movements apparently has been in use for 11 years, a U.S. Embassy official told reporters today. But he said American officials are still unsure how the Soviets employed it.

The official discussed the State Department charges at a briefing in the U.S. Commercial Office, during which he insisted he not be identified by nationality.

The Associated Press declined to take part in the briefing because of conditions set by the official, and learned of the official's comments from other journalists who attended.

The official also indicated that the United States first found the tracking powder outside the Soviet Union.

On Wednesday, the U.S. Embassy and the State Department in Washington said the KGB secret police have been using a potentially cancer-causing chemical known as NPPD, or nitrophenylpentadienol, to trace the movements of American diplomats in Moscow and monitor their contacts with Soviet citizens.

Battles rock Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Gunbattles rocked central Beirut's Moslem-Christian dividing line today, and police said the death toll in the latest outbreak of civil war fighting had risen to 321.

However, the all-out artillery war that had engulfed the metropolitan area for four days ended about midnight, 11 hours after a deadline set for a Syrian-sponsored cease-fire. Today's fighting was limited to the Green Line that splits the city into Moslem and Christian sectors.

The airport, shelled four times since Monday, reopened after work crews cleared debris and repaired the damaged terminal and runways, and a jetliner of the Middle East Airlines, Lebanon's national carrier, arrived from Cyprus, airport spokesmen said.

Idea exchange is a good thing

Accuracy in Media, the self-appointed watchdog of the American press and broadcasting, is about to take on higher education.

Reed Irvine, the founder of the Washington-based group, said he is convinced that there's a liberal slant among faculties at major universities, that students aren't exposed to a more conservative interpretation of historical fact — and that the liberal bias is reflected in the nation's journalism.

Irvine's plan has a certain cloak-and-dagger quality. Students and retired people will be recruited to register for liberal arts classes. They will call their professors to task when they feel they are being misled.

The reaction from university faculties is predictably affronted. "An infringement on academic freedom," said Ernest Benjamin, general secretary of the American Association of University Professors. "Injurious to the cause of the university and truth-seeking as we perceive it," said Wilson Smith, chairman of the University of California Academic Council.

But the critics are making the same mistake that Irvine's group too often does: Disagreeable facts, facts that don't jibe with one's own interpretation of things, aren't necessarily wrong.

Accuracy in Media recently scored its most impressive sting in its 16-year role as a media gadfly when it was granted an hour by the Public Broadcasting Service to rebut a PBS television series on Vietnam. It can be argued that public television was overly generous and that Irvine's production lacked professional quality.

But its role as critic and challenger is legitimate in a free society. The press traditionally has considered itself a gadfly. There's nothing wrong with the gadfly having to put up with another gadfly, or with that gadfly being pestered by still another. The free exchange of ideas — with as much access and disclosure as possible — is crucial to informed decision making.

So, professors, take it from the voice of experience. Accuracy in Media, with its $1.7 million annual budget, may have the money, but it has no particular magic. It is as vulnerable to criticism as any other institution.

Criticism isn't censorship; it's the very opposite. It wounds only those who don't have an honest rejoinder.

In a war of nerves, we need nerve gas

People get understandably nervous at the mention of nerve gas. Chemical weapons were one of the most horrific elements of an horrific conflict, the First World War. Since then the world's major powers have refrained from their use.

Now both the Senate and the House of Representatives have expressed agreement with the Reagan administration's request for a new generation of chemical weapons, ending a 16-year moratorium begun by President Nixon. But Senate conferees insisted on removal of some restrictions attached by the House, so the House will have to decide whether to accept the changes or reject the whole program.

The push for production of nerve gas evokes emotional opposition. No civilized society would justify being the first, or possibly even the second to use it, so why should a civilized society possess it? The answer is that, as in the case of nuclear arms, immoral weapons can serve moral ends, like eliminating the incentive for either side to use them.

But the argument is not really one of principle. The most active opponents of these weapons argue simply that the ones we have are adequate. It is a question of military utility, not morality.

Judging that issue isn't easy, since most of the useful information is classified. It may be that, in the pinch of a war in Europe, what the U.S. has would be enough to deter the Soviets from using their own, or to punish them if they did use them. Still, most of the current chemical arsenal is old or obsolete, and sooner or later it will have to be replaced. Better too soon than too late.

The reason for having usable chemical weapons isn't to use them but to discourage the other side from using theirs. The Soviets have chemical weapons. To judge from their use of chemical weapons against Afghan rebels, they have no moral scruples about using them.

The Soviets wouldn't have to actually launch a gas attack to accomplish their purpose. Faced with the mere threat, NATO troops would have to don special protective gear — rubber suits, gas masks, boots, gloves — that seriously hamstrings the performance of ordinary tasks. The enemy troops, spared this hindrance, would be unstoppable.

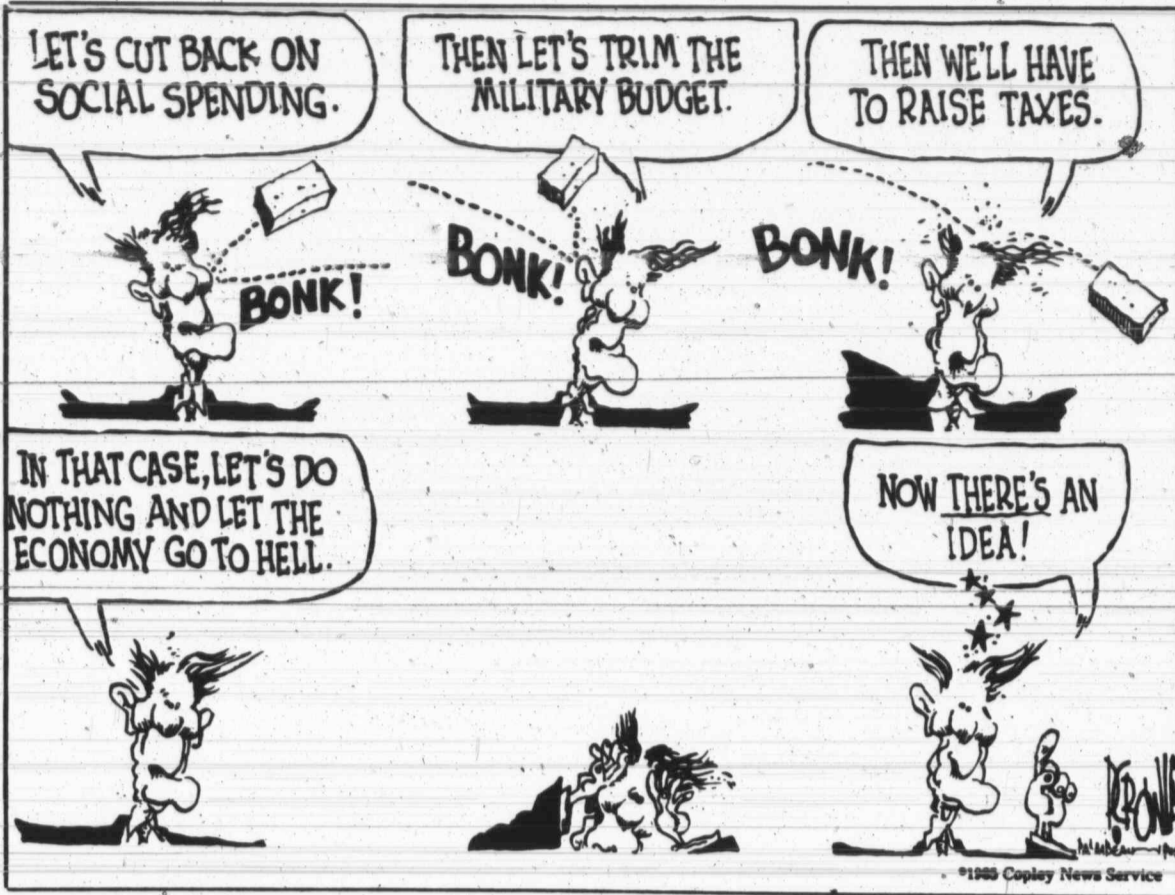

If the Allies have their own chemical weapons, the situation is much different. The Soviets would have a strong inducement not to use gas. And their troops would have to take the same protective steps as ours.

Certainly the Reagan administration should pursue an agreement with the Soviets to ban chemical weapons. But the obstacles to verification, incomparably greater than for nuclear weapons, argue against betting much on that hope.

In any case, an agreement with the Soviets wouldn't remove the threat of gas warfare. Chemical weapons are inexpensive, relatively simple to make and potentially very effective. Sixteen nations already have them. In a war with the U.S., a Third World country might gas American troops if it knew it wouldn't be gassed in return.

In a dangerous world, the U.S. has little choice. It ought to produce new chemical weapons to minimize the chance of ever having to use them.

Military doctors are exempt from malpractice suit worry

WASHINGTON — Recent disclosures might lead a cynic to say that military medicine is to medicine what military music is to music. Testimony before Congress not only has laid out cases of incompetence by military doctors, but has deplored the fact that members of the armed services are not allowed to bring malpractice suits against military physicians.

Legislation is now pending in the House that would overrule a 1950 Supreme Court decision, which forbade military malpractice suits in the absence of "clear" congressional approval.

The Defense Department is fighting the proposed law, on grounds that if service personnel are allowed to sue for bad medical treatment, the floodgates could be opened, allowing suits for virtually anything — from harsh words by a first sergeant to wrongful death caused by an incompetent officer's commands.

The result, Pentagon philosophers say, would be a breakdown in the discipline that is the bedrock of the military system.

But James Magill, assistant director of the lobbying arm of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, doesn't see it that way. The proposed law, he said, "will have no adverse effect on the morale of U.S. servicemen." The VFW doesn't see why service personnel should be second-class citizens concerning the right to file malpractice suits.

Two tragedies uncovered by our reporter Mark Woolley show why military men and women need the protection civilians have against medical incompetence:

- On March 1, 1984, Air Force T-Sgt. Albert Branch checked into the emergency room at Moffett Naval Air Base in California, complaining of dizziness, weakness and shortness of breath. Though he had a mildly tender abdomen, he was treated only for hyperventilation — given a suppository, made to breathe into a paper bag and sent home. Branch was told to go on sick call the next morning, but he never made it. He collapsed at home and was taken by ambulance to a civilian hospital, where he died shortly after admission.

- An autopsy revealed that the previously healthy sergeant had died of an intestinal obstruction, caused by the bowel twisting around itself. An official military investigation concluded that Branch's condition was misdiagnosed by the emergency room doctor, and that this may have caused his death. But Branch's family never got a penny of compensation — and the physician was never disciplined.

- On Jan. 17, 1974, Jerry Meagher, a Navy electronics technician, went into the Balboa Naval Hospital in San Diego to have a cyst removed from his left arm. During surgery, complications developed and Meagher's heart stopped. No trauma unit was called until three hours later, and though Meagher was revived, he was given the last rites.

Hospital records show that Meagher was resuscitated within five minutes, which would normally mean that there would be no brain damage. But Meagher is now a severely brain-damaged quadriplegic. He gets 100 percent disability of $3,500 a month, but his parents pay an additional $800 a month for his 24-hour nursing care. No disciplinary action was taken against either of the two doctors involved in Meagher's operation.

Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., who is pushing the bill that would give military personnel the right to sue for malpractice, explained: "This bill is not an indictment of all military physicians. We just want to weed out the bad apples."

UNDER THE DOME: The recent House vote to lop $6.6 billion from the U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corp. came as no surprise to Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla. The longtime critic of the Synfuels boondoggle had a press release ready for distribution as soon as the vote was tallied.

Actually, the lopsided, 3-to-1 vote against Synfuels wasn't as easy as it looked; Synar has been fighting for two years to get rid of the agency. The Senate must still go along with the death sentence, of course. If it does, it will be the biggest single spending cut approved by Congress this year.

JUNKET JOURNAL: Rear Adm. E.K. Walker Jr., the Navy's top supply officer, made it to no less than nine celebrations for the Navy Supply Corps' 190th birthday, including cake-cutting ceremonies in Naples, Italy; Rota, Spain; and San Diego, Calif. The admiral's marathon birthday ball from last January through March was dutifully recorded in the corps' glossy bimonthly magazine. The official itinerary were given listed several inspections, high-level talks and "in-depth discussions" in which the admiral participated.

POLITICAL POSTSCRIPT: Sources close to Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., say he's tired of the Senate after 23 years. The only big challenge left for him is the presidency. But he's much too shrewd to just plunge into the race. Intimates expect him to test the waters first. If he decides not to run, he probably won't announce it until after the 1986 elections. If he decides to make another bid for president, he'll keep quiet until late 1987.

Around The Rim

Harpist is hip on bizarre

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
His music has the capability of mystifying listeners spanning from the desert floors of West Texas to the rain forests of the Central African Republic.

Andreas Vollenweider, a West German harpist, has released two albums of music since 1983 and it's the understatement of the year to label it "weird music."

Try "bizarre," or better yet to borrow from the repertoire of philosopher Soren Kierkegaard's vocabulary — "primeval" best describes these melodies.

I bought his latest release "White Winds" in Austin last month. Apparently it's faddish listening among those who attend the think tank, because pictures of the album cover adorned most of the tape and record storefronts along University Avenue.

Side One begins with the sound of a boat being paddled into still waters. After listening to Vollenweider's music for weeks, I think I'd be safe in assuming the guy is fascinated about the origins of man and early civilizations.

Oriental melodies will suddenly turn into Irish rhythms. He draws sounds from instruments such as an electroacoustic modified pedal harp and rhythmanatomic acousticolors (couldn't really tell you much about that instrument).

A sampling of his songs includes "The Glass Hall (Choose the Crystal)" and "The Play of the Five Balls; The Five Planets; Canopy Choir."

Good easy listening as I madly drive to work in the morning.

Former Portland Trailblazer basketball superstar Bill Walton used to turn on his motivation before a hardwood confrontation by listening to music.

I listen to Vollenweider's tunes immediately after receiving emergency calls at home. His music puts me in the proper frame of mind when hustling out to disaster scenes to ask "who," "what," "where" or "why."

Since his fast-paced days with the Trailblazers, Walton has gradually toned down his playing style. I bet he listens to classical music to calm his mind before tackling the books, now that he's a law school student.

As for a change in my future listening habits, it will probably be Leadbelly tunes before going out in the fields of the Presidio Valley to pick melons.

Taxpayers' belts are tight enough

To the editor:
I would like to take this opportunity to urge every taxpayer in Big Spring to attend Tuesday's City Council meetings on budgets.

A proposal to raise our taxes again is on the agenda. Only through a show of many concerned taxpayers can this unnecessary raise be prevented. It seems we are in an economic slump and the taxpayer will take the blunt of it again. It is time for city hall to tighten their belt buckles. Mine has been tightened enough. I'm on the last loop.

I wonder if we are in such a slump (and I'm not doubting that) where we are supposed to come up with the extra money. I sure haven't had a raise lately. Have you?

It is time for such facilities as the Golf Course and Tennis Courts — etc. to pay for themselves or close it. I'm tired of paying for someone else's recreation.

Dear Abby

Helping stutterers

DEAR READERS: My attention has been called to a handicap that afflicts millions of people, but because it isn't life-threatening in the physical sense, it is minimized. It's the only handicap I know of that is openly ridiculed and made the butt of jokes. It's stuttering. People who stutter are terrified to answer a telephone, speak up in a classroom, apply in person for a job, ask for a date, order in a restaurant, etc.

Because stutterers are afraid to talk, they are thought to be less intelligent than the average person. Some famous people who were stutterers, but overcame it: Thomas Jefferson, Charles Darwin, Jack Paar and Anthony Quinn, to name a few.

When a stutterer stutters, here's what not to do: Don't insert words, or finish phrases for the stutterer. Don't say, "Just think before you speak, and don't talk so fast." These seemingly helpful suggestions don't work.

What can help? There's a National Stuttering Project composed of members who form self-help groups in every state. I have seen their materials and newsletters, and recommend them highly.

For information about this organization, write to: National Stuttering Project, 1269 Seventh Ave., San Francisco, Calif. 94122. Please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: I have not been married very long and I need to know how to handle this:

My husband is a very good-looking man who gets a lot of attention from the ladies. His job (bartending) puts him on display, so to speak, where he can meet a lot of attractive women. Some of them get friendly when they're half-loaded, which is very handy for him because he doesn't have to pay to get them drunk. He also works late hours, which doesn't help our marriage. He should get home by 2 a.m. but sometimes he's not home until 5 or 6. I think he's cheating on me.

Well, I found a strange set of keys in his pocket, so I took them and hid them. I see him going crazy looking for those keys but I don't say anything. I would like to know whose keys they are.

Should I ask him? You can print this. He never reads your column.
NEEDS HELP

DEAR NEEDS: Don't ask him whose keys they are. A man who cheats will also lie.

CONFIDENTIAL TO WORRIED IN DICKINSON, TEXAS: You have good reason to worry. According to the Mayo Clinic Health Letter: "Cigarette smoking greatly increases your chances of acquiring bladder cancer. Cigarette smokers acquire bladder cancer two to five times more frequently than nonsmokers. The hazard increases with the number of cigarettes you smoke daily and the number of years you continue the habit."

Dr. Donohue

Dream foods

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I wrote you before, but you never answered my question. I would really like an answer. It concerns the so-called dream foods — that is anything high in potassium, such as bananas, pineapple, watermelon, cucumbers. I want to know if they really do bring on dreams. Give me an answer. — D.C.G.

It's a revelation to me. I have not heard of potassium foods influencing dreams. I can't see how they would. I'm going to eat a lot of bananas tonight. If it works I'll let you know. If it doesn't I'll stick with my original thought that the idea has no merit.

Headaches — you can beat them! Write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, IL 60611, for a copy of his booklet, "How to Tame Headaches." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and $1.00.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Pastor plans to expand membership, buildings

By KIM KIRKHAM

Mike Watkins plans to add on to and build up First Missionary Baptist Church, 1209 Gregg.

New pastor of the church, Watkins, 35, is planning to build on a lot north of the church, providing more classes.

The attitude of the people of the 40-member church will help him obtain this goal. "They really have a desire to have something. Even though they're a small group, they're willing to do whatever is necessary to grow," he said.

Watkins also wants the church to become self supporting. The church is sponsored by Tall City Baptist Church in Midland.

The young people's department has 12 youth.

MIKE WATKINS
...pastor First Missionary Baptist Church

Missionary Baptist Church in Roswell, N.M. for 2 1/2 years.

He also served at Landmark Missionary Baptist Church in Napa, Calif., Grant Missionary Baptist Church in East Wenatchee, Wash., and Fairhaven Missionary Baptist Church in Mineral, Ark.

Although Watkins grew up in a rough area in California, "I knew there was something better to do than to grow up like most people that I was raised with," he said.

"We had a young preacher when I first started going to church," said Watkins. "I guess he helped me surrender to the ministry."

Watkins advises young ministers to be willing to work hard, and "if you don't love people, you're in the wrong business," he said.

Watkins attended Texas Baptist Institute and Seminary in Henderson, Missionary Baptist Seminary in Littlerock, Ark., and California Missionary Baptist Institute in San Pablo, Calif.

Watkins' wife, Carolyn, teaches Sunday School and is assistant pianist at the church. "She encourages me. She's my right hand man, my best friend," he said. "I couldn't get along without her."

They have four children, Michael, 12, Melissa, 11, Christina, 7, and Michelle, 4.

In his spare time, Watkins enjoys hitting golf balls at the driving range, hunting, and working around the house.

Religion roundup

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The World Council of churches has called for renewed commitment by it and the Roman Catholic Church to give "common witness" to Christianity in the world.

"We must not only talk about common witness, we must render common witness," the council's policy-making central committee said in a letter to the extraordinary Roman Catholic synod meeting in Rome in November.

The council includes most major Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations.

A "skeptical world" will not take the divided churches seriously unless they "speak and act together in the name of Christ, bringing new hope to a world threatened by meaninglessness, self-destruction, violence and poverty," the council said.

termed the production and deployment of nuclear weapons a "crime against humanity."

The church also condemned the Reagan administration's planning for the so-called "Star Wars" strategic defense to intercept incoming missiles, saying it would enlarge the arms race.

Representatives of the 1.1 million-member denomination also denounced government surveillance of church services and meetings by federal agents, as done in the prosecution of workers in the sanctuary movement, which shelters refugees from Central America.

It elected the Rev. Joan Brown Campbell of New York, a Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) minister, to head the council's U.S. office in New York. She is the first woman ever to hold the post.

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the midst of the turmoil in South Africa, church leaders in this country and abroad have appealed for an end to the apartheid system disenfranchising blacks there and a halt to stiffened enforcement measures.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some Jewish leaders have started a new foundation to help the poor of all kinds, funding local anti-poverty and self-help projects without regard to religion or race.

U.S. Roman Catholic bishops, through their president, endorsed the call by South African bishops for dismantling the racial separation system, saying its elimination would give "witness to the gospel."

Called the Jewish Fund For Justice, it launched its work by making grants to 13 groups, ranging from Navajos in Arizona seeking to upgrade agriculture techniques to low-income people in Boston working on behalf of the homeless.

Leaders of U.S. Catholic orders of men and women sent a message to the South African government, warning of more "bloodshed which lies ahead" if the government continues to deny blacks basic rights.

Lois Roisman, executive director of the foundation, said the grants are a "new expression of Jewish philanthropy" in the United States. Initial grants also went to low-income blacks in Colorado, poor communities in Tennessee and Mississippi and indigent farmers in Minnesota.

From Buenos Aires, Argentina, a meeting of the executive committee of the World Council of Churches sent a message to the South African Council of Churches, praising its leaders for pressing the struggle for "justice and dignity" for blacks.

COLLEGE STATION — Helping church leaders in rural and small towns cope with change had been the objective of the annual Town and Country Church Conference at Texas A&M University for the past 39 years.

Lady Steers sweep Cubs

BROWNFIELD — The Big Spring Lady Steers continued their early season winning ways sweeping freshman, junior varsity and varsity volleyball matches from Brownfield Thursday.

In varsity action, the Lady Steers have yet to lose a game, taking two straight from Cubettes, 15-8, 15-5. Tab Green was the big gun for the Lady Steers in both games, accumulating 7 points in the first game and 10 in the finale. Michelle Hulsted had 4 points in the first game while Monique Jones added three.

Head coach Susan Sharpe cited Green for her excellent job of setting the ball while replacing junior starter Lisa Hale who was sidelined with a pulled groin. "Tabatha just played well the entire match and Monique Jones had a good night spiking the ball and reading the defenses."

In the junior varsity match, the Lady Steers were extended into three games but won the match, 15-10, 17-19, 15-11.

There was balanced scoring in the J.V. match with Priscilla Banks accounting for 12 points in the first game. Laura Mauldin served for 8 points in the second game. Raeline Anderson and Cary Brooks each had four points in the final game of the match.

In the freshman match, the Lady Steers lost the first game 15-5 but then came back strong to take the final two games, 15-4, 16-14. Kathryn Burrow served for 8 points in the second game and Debbie Pulver scored 8 in the deciding game.

The Lady Steer varsity played Midland High at 10 this morning in a first round match at the Monahans Tournament. They will face the winner of Denver City-Pecos in the second round.

Watson tied for Series lead

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Denis Watson had sweet memories of the last time he played golf at Firestone Country Club. Roger Maltbie had only nightmares.

Yet each shot rounds of 5-under-par 65 Thursday to share the first-round lead on a day of sub-par scoring at the NEC World Series of Golf.

A total of 20 players bettered par, seven more than the tournament's previous record for one day.

Watson, a 29-year-old native of South Africa, won last year's World Series, thanks in large part to a record 8-under 62 in the second round.

Maltbie, on the other hand, missed the cut in his last appearance at Firestone, in the 1975 PGA Championship.

Asked if the course played easier than he remembered, Maltbie laughed. "The course played a lot easier today than I remember it. Now when I played it back in '75, I was a rookie and I was paired with Jack Nicklaus for the first two days. At that time, it was the toughest course I had ever seen." "The grass in the rough seemed to be this high" — he held his hand waist-high — "the golf ball looked like a basketball and the hole looked like a thimble."

"I shot something like a 153. Just awful. All I wanted to do was to hide and get out of his way."

One shot back of the co-leaders, at 4-under 66, was Calvin Peete.

Another stroke back were Gordon Brand Jr., Woody Blackburn, Tom Kite, Bob Eastwood and George Archer.

Bunched at 2-under 68, three shots off the pace, were Fuzzy Zoeller, Hal Sutton, Scott Simpson, Dan Forsman and reigning PGA champ Hubert Green.

Tom Watson and U.S. Open champion Andy North were among a group of seven players at 1-under 69.

Denis Watson, still using a makeshift set of clubs after losing his regular set on a flight back from the British Open, used a quick start to move to the top of the leader board.

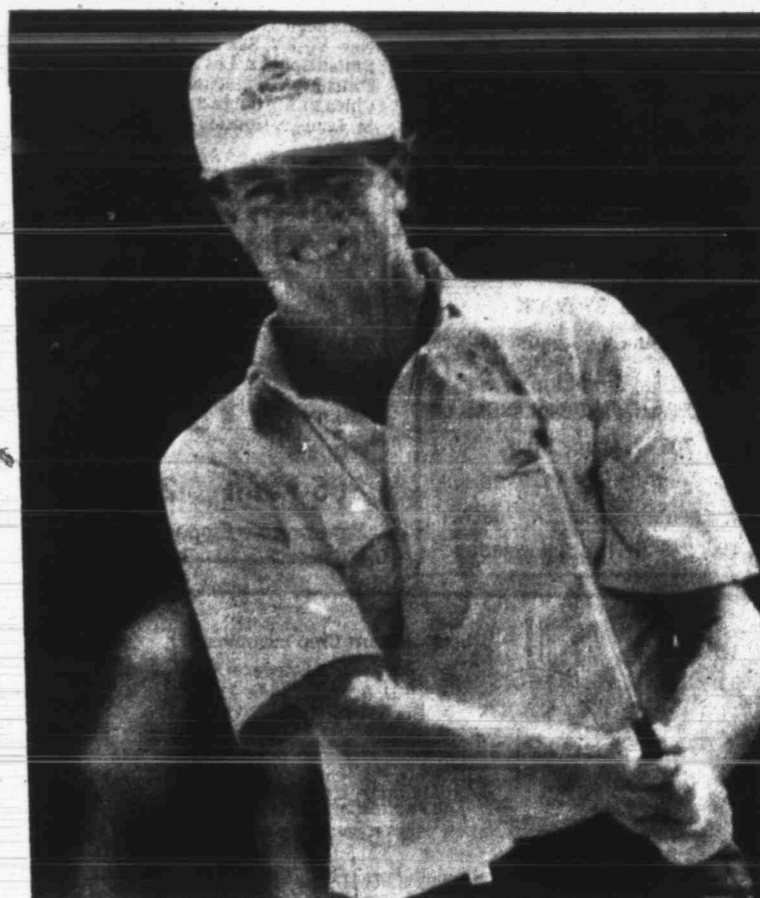

Playing in the first group in the 41-man field, he birdied the first three holes en route to his 65.

"I just love this course. It has always been one of my favorite courses since the first day I saw it (in 1981)," said Watson, who has won almost $140,000 at Firestone, including the $126,000 first prize a year ago.

Maltbie, winner of the Manufacturers Hanover Westchester Classic, credited par-saving putts of 18 feet at No. 8 and 35 feet at No. 14 for his opening-day performance.

"The key to my round was that I putted fabulously," said the 34-year-old Californian.

Peete, who had two birdies on par-3s but none on the par-5s, tabbed his 66 as "by far the best round I've had at Firestone."

DENNIS WATSON, of South Africa, watches his shot from the sand during the first round of World Series of Golf in Akron, Ohio. WATSON fashioned a 5-under par 65 to grab a share of the lead with ROGER MALTBIE.

U.S. down British in Walker Cup

PINE VILLEY, N.J. (AP) — The United States continued its domination of the Walker Cup by beating a team from Great Britain and Ireland at foursomes, a golf game they usually don't play very often or very well.

The United States broke a first-round tie by winning three of four foursome matches Thursday morning and then got singles victories from Scott Verplank, Davis Love and Bob Lewis in the afternoon to defeat Britain and Ireland 13-11 to win their seventh straight Walker Cup.

It was the narrowest margin of victory for the United States since it won 10-8 in 1969, when halved matches were not included in the score.

"I was surprised from the standpoint that we had not done that before," said U.S. Captain Jay Sigel, when asked about the four-some results. "Historically, the four Walker Cup matches I've played in I don't recall us being that decisive in the alternate shot."

Sam Randolph and Jerry Haas, Lewis and Clark Burroughs, and Mike Podolak and Love scored the four-some victories for the Americans, while Verplank and Sigel halved their match.

"The morning was the difference," said non-playing British Captain Charles Green. "We were a bit sluggish in the morning. You would think if we were going to do anything in the match we would have to get away early and we didn't."

The British and Irish almost did something in the afternoon. They outscored the United States 4½ to 3½ and had a chance to win at least another 1½ points.

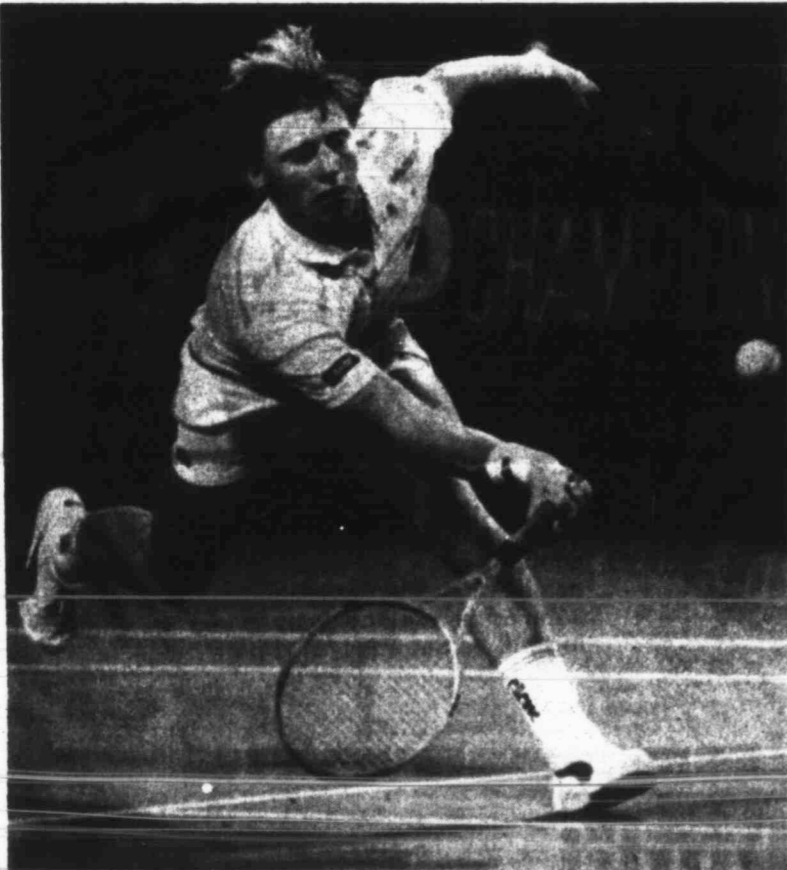

However, Verplank and Randolph helped the U.S. hold on to raise its overall Walker Cup record to 27-2-1.

Randolph overcame fatigue and hit a brilliant three wood to the 18th green that allowed him to halve his match with Garth McGimpsey, the British Amateur champion.

Verplank, playing behind Randolph, then edged Colin Montgomerie of Scotland 1-up, nursing his lead over the final three holes.

It was the best match of the afternoon as Verplank fired a 1-under-par 69 on the par-70, 6,691-yard Piney Valley Golf Club, rated by one golf magazine as the best in the world.

Montgomerie, who attends Houston Baptist University, had a chance to tie the match, but missed an 8-foot birdie putt on the final hole. He finished the round at 70.

Verplank's victory clinched a least a tie for the Cup, and Lewis, a 40-year-old re-instated amateur, won the trophy for the United States minutes later when he finished off Cecil Bloice of England 4-and-2 by paring the 16th hole.

"It gets closer and closer every year," said Sigel. "I truly believe this match will be talked about for years."

Green agreed and looked to the future.

"We had been very hopeful that we could win this year," said Green. "To come over here and make it a match, there is no reason why we should not win at home now. It was close last time in England."

Verplank, the U.S. Amateur champion and the first amateur since 1956 to win a professional tournament when he took the Western Open recently, led the United States in scoring during the two-day, 24-match event which is held every two years. The 21-year-old Dallas resident won two singles matches and combined with Sigel to win a foursome match and halve another.

Sigel scored 2½ points in the tournament, giving him 12½ in four Walker Cup appearances and making him the all-time point leader for the United States. He surpassed Bill Campbell, who had 12 points in seven appearances between 1951 and 1975.

The team from Great Britain and Ireland got singles victories from John Hawksworth, 17-year-old Peter Baker, George Macgregor and Sandy Stephen.

Forsan, S-City deadlocked in scrimmage

FORSAN — The Forsan Buffaloes got their first taste of competitive action last night as they battled Sterling City to a scoreless tie.

The contest was the first scrimmage for the class A teams.

The game was a defensive battle as both teams mustered a combined total of 249 yards. Forsan racked up 149 yards and made one good drive in the scrimmage, which saw each team have the ball for 40 offensive plays.

The big offensive weapon for the Buffs was the passing of sophomore quarterback Brant Nichols to junior wide receiver Lee Morris. Forsan coach Jan East said he was also pleased with the running of fullback Wayne Wright and halfback Bruce Stricklin.

Defensively for the Buffs, linebackers Stricklin and Shane Clinton turned in good performances.

East commented, "We're real pleased with the performance, especially the younger players. If we continue to progress, we will have a good season."
