PROCLAMATION

DESIGNATING FEBRUARY 28th TO MARCH 6th AS TEXAS WEEK

WHEREAS, the approach of Texas Independence Day and the anniversary of the Fall of the Alamo herald a week sacred in the hearts of all Texans; and

WHEREAS, I am prompted by the patriotic motives of the members of the Forty-Second Legislature, as expressed in Senate Concurrent Resolution Number Eight, and by my own feelings of love andpatriotism toward my State;

NOW, THEREFORE, I H. Schwartz, Mayor of the City of Baird, Texas, do hereby proclaim the week of February 28th to March 6th, 1937, as

TEXAS WEEK

And I urge all citizens to cooperate in observing TEXAS WEEK in an appropriate manner, to the end that we shall recall the heroic deeds of the founders of this Lone Star State as they were exhibited in the Declaration of Texas Independence on March 2, 1836; then in the heroic deeds of those brave patriots who gave their lives for Texas in the Alamo on March 6, 1836; and in the many other significant events connected with the early history of Texas.

TEXAS WEEK in 1937 marks the beginning of the second century of Texas history, and I suggest that every home, church, school, civic organization, fraternal group, convention, court, patriotic society shall render suitable programs, in order that we may be inspired by the deeds of our forefathers to a new sense of loyalty, appreciation, and devotion to the romantic history of Texas and to help us take the long look as we plan for the next century.

May the visitors who were here during the Centennial come back to see us this year, and may millions come who could not make the trip last year. We hope to see thousands of the citizens of Mexico and the other Latin-American Republics in Texas in 1937. May we extend to our visitors a welcome that shall fully exemplify the spirit of our State Motto: FRIENDSHIP.

I urge you to make TEXAS WEEK book week, education week, and patriotic week. Add some books on Texas history to your library and read again the most interesting pages of our glorious history. To show our patriotism it is appropriate and practical for every home, school, office building, municipal building, and courthouse to unfurl to Texas breezes the Lone Star Flag of Texas every day during TEXAS WEEK.

Let us all, during the brief days of TEXAS WEEK, make much of the cultural and spiritual values of our wonderful traditions and dedicate our lives anew to the lofty ideals of statesmanship, character, leadership, and service which our forefathers exhibited in their lives of consecration to liberty and sobriety.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have hereunto signed my name officially and caused the Seal of my Office to be impressed hereon at Baird, this the 20th day of February, A. D., 1937.

H. SCHWARTZ.

One hundred farmers and wives heard the discussion for the need of organization in Baird, Monday, Feb. 22nd. and to the Texas Agricultural Association.

Roy Kendrick of Denton presided as temporary chairman. Mr. Kendrick said that farmers of Cal lahan county had been forced to see the necessity of organization when their farm program was nul lified by the action of the Supreme court. He said united effort had broken down our law and that ers of this nation would build & had heretofore.

J. Walter Hammond of Tye was a guest of the Callahan Agricultural Association and delivered the main address. Among the things stressed by Mr. Hammond was the need for the same kind of organization as has been in force for the industrialists. He said, "I see a country that has gradually let the industrial people run up a system of tariff that created for them a monopoly that has enabled them to almost be able to dictate . the government. This tariff was first gained as a temporary measure but when it expired it was reenacted on and on and grew with each enactment until it finally reached its maximum under the Smoot-Hawley tariff of the previous administration. That tariff was secured by organization among industrialists. If farmers and

M. H. Perkins, farmer and secretary of the National Farm Loan Ass'n., declared. "The best evidence of orga ized cooperation is today shown by membership in the Farm Loan organizations that enable farmers to secure money at 3 1-2 per cent whereas no other bank in the nation extends them credit so cheanly. Therefore, I think that when the farmers of this nation become fully organized that they will be able to improve their own conditions as well as uplift that of labor which has mutual benefits to be derived."

Twenty-two members enrolled with the membership fee of $2.00 Monday. People who were not able to be present are urged to join the Callahan Association and may leave their money at the most convenient place. European Powers Agree on Blockade of Spain to Insulate the War-Farm Tenant Program-Supreme Court Controversy Grows.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

So FAR as the international nonintervention committee can do it, the war in Spain is now insulated. Representatives of 26 European nations agreed that no more volunteers for either side in the civil conflict should be permitted to enter the Iberian peninsula, effective at midnight February 20; and they laid plans for a complete blockade by land and sea that would prevent the importation of any more men or war munitions. Only Portugal dissented, objecting to establishment of frontier guards on her territory; Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Russia ignored the Portuguese protests and went ahead with the blockade plans, which are to be put into effect by

The decisions were reached after France delivered a virtual ultimatum to her fellow committee members to end their bickering and warned Italy she would not stand for "open invasion of Spain." The French were quick to place guards at all strategic points along the Franco-Spanish frontier.

The international naval patrols presumably will not have authority to stop vessels suspected of carrying arms and men to Spain, but will report ship movements to the committee for action and will place observers on the vessels to check cargoes.

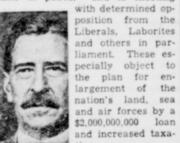

Supposing this blockade to be successful, it may well be that the Spanish civil war will die of inanition. Then may be brought about that which the international committee seeks-international mediation between the insurgents and the loyalist government.

For the present both sides are renewing their efforts for decisive victory. The fascists, still driving hard at the "life line" that connects Madrid and Valencia. so are attacking the capital itself again. Their airplanes made two night bombing assaults on the city and its environs, killing a number of persons; and their artillery constantly shells the highways to Valencia.

The loyalist government, at its temporary seat in Valencia, took a new mandate of absolute power from all Popular Front parties and mobilized all available man power to oppose the insurgent forces. All military classes of the last five years were drafted for immediate war service.

Leahy, chief of naval operations of the American navy, served notice that any foreign nations expanding their navies beyond the standards of recent treaties might expect that the United States would match their construction. He said it was his understanding that this nation was definitely committed to the maintenance of a "navy second to none." To maintain that principle, he declared, it would become necessary for the United powers did. The present United States building program calls for start of construction this year on two new capital ships. Great Britain already has laid the keels of two new craft and the program announced in London calls for the start, after April 1, of construction of a third new vessel. When Britain lays a third keel, then this government is likely to start similar construction.

IN A special message to congress President Roosevelt urged legislation to "improve the present in-tolerable condition" of 3,000,000 farm tenants, presenting this fourpoint program:

1. Action to open the doors of ownership to tenants who now have the requisite ability and experience.

2. Modest loans, with the necessary guidance and education to prevent small owners from slipping into tenancy.

3. The retirement by public agencies of land proved to be unsuited for farming and assistance to the families living thereon in finding homes on good land.

4. Cooperation with state and local agencies of government to improve the general leasing system. Congressional leaders promised immediate action, and Chairman basis for the new legislation. The President's farm tenancy committee, headed by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, recommended that congress make available "a definite sum each year for a number of years" for a land-purchase program, but mentioned no definite figure. Wallace said, however, he thought Jones' proposal for $50,000,-000 annual appropriation for ten years is "reasonable."

infirm judges to perform their share of the work. Investigation has shown, however, that the second reason is unsound.

Commenting on Mr. Cummings' speech, Senator Glass of Virginia said: "I think it indicates that the country is in infinitely greater need of an attorney general than of additional judges on the Supreme court or of judicial wet nurses for six of the present members of the court."

Senator Minton of Indiana defended the plan in a radio address street car or bus, had gone every but probably did it more harm than good, for he frankly admitted the purpose of the administration is to change the personnel and views of the Supreme court, in order that President Roosevelt's New Deal program will be held constitutional.

Senators Bone and Wheeler introduced a resolution for a constitutional amendment that would give congress the power to override Supreme court decisions by a twothirds vote of both houses, but only after a national election involving congressional seats has intervened so that the people have had a chance to speak on the issue.

Legislatures of many states adopted resolutions for or against the plan, most of them being in opposition.

Mr. Roosevelt received several groups of senators, some of whom are among those opposing the packing of the Supreme court, and reiterated his intention to push his plan through congress without modification. He said the people had voted for a New Deal and were going to get it.

> By EARL GODWIN 7 ASHINGTON .- The hyste ria over the President's Supreme court message conceals the fact that the President makes very mild proposals, quite within the Constitution and within the scope of congressional duty toward the court.

> The Constitution, which many people erroneously believe to be strained by the President's Supreme court message, specifically directs that congress shall regulate Supreme court procedure and jurisdiction, and may ordain and es tablish any kind of an inferior court. It can create new inferior courts never heard of before. It did. on one historic occasion, abolish the term of the Supreme court and kept that body in a continuous vacuum for months. It could cut the size of the court to three members -and the President could retain any three he preferred-by and with the advice of the senate, after the rest of the court had been retired

Mr. Roosevelt's mild measure is to permit members of the high court to retire on full pay (something not legal now); or if the older ones (seventy years) do not care to retire, he can appoint one other man for each older judge to help out with the heavy court duties.

Of course, the old question has been asked so many times it is stale: who is running the country? Congress-elected by the people or the courts, appointed for life. So in the last analysis this argument over the court is not a row between the President and the court; but between congress and the Nor is it of any use to argue that the Constitution does not grant the court power to nullify a law of congress. We have become used to that and accept it as if it were in the Constitution.

The same corporation lawyer leadership is leading this fight against the President's short cut to a liberalized United States that led the country uphill and then scurried down again, in all previous political anti-Roosevelt battles.

You recall the nation-wide telegrams, letters, editorials and ballyhoo over the President's holding company bill-the one to kill the useless and expensive and politically immoral groups of financiers who had their hands on every electric light and power company. The same stuff is being pulled again today; and I predict the same results. At this writing the noise is great-but keen analysis shows the President will win his fight, easily in the house, less easily in the senate-but he will win it.

Heavy-browed corporation lawyers oppose the idea of a rejuvenated and liberalized Supreme court, preferring constitutional amendment giving the federal government full control over wages, hours, commerce, and everything else which the court has said was outside the federal jurisdiction. They prefer, they say, such an amendment to the President's court plan-but actually they do not want any change in the situation at all. They really want the old horse-andbuggy and states' rights situation to prevail. That's the situation which has prevented the federal government from using its full power for national crises-and that's what the stand-patters like.

Actually, they would not endorse a proposed New Deal amendment to the Constitution at all. What they would do is to see one safely launched-and then you would see a dozen Liberty Leagues spring up fully armed and financed by millions of dollars.

The same lawyers and propagandists who now propose an amendment in place of the President's mild proposals, would be found to be in the fold of these wealthy associations, rallying their friends, giving expensive dinners, talking on the radio-and attacking such an amendment with the same vigor they have attacked everything else Mr. Roosevilt has proposed.

In time such an amendment would be adopted, but it would take possibly twenty years; and by that time anything could happen. This present administration of earnest liberals would have been retiredand there is great danger of tremendous social upheavals if something is not done now to relieve the situation presented by an inability to deal direct with the social problems of this era. Offering the nine million unemployed a twenty-year amendment would not make much of a hit. I doubt if we could get through the next few years without great trouble unless we have liberal courts, composed of men who see in the Constitution a grant of live power to meet all national crises with national resources and unified strength.

One of the interesting sidelights is the fact that British editors are apparently all favorable to the President's plan to guarantee a more liberal viewpoint by the Supreme court. You see, the British have had the same sort of trouble several times. The two previous occasions happened a hundred years ago when the house of lords stood pat and refused to pass a reform measure proposed by the house of commons; and again in more recent times when the house of lords blocked the British new deal in 1911. They have no Supreme court-but their house of lords is just as obstinate. The liberal members of the government arranged matters so that the king was going to pack the house of lords with enough new liberal and clearminded peers to insure a British new deal which enacted twenty-five years ago just about the same sort of program we have attempted here; but which was halted by the Supreme court. The house of lords saw the light-and Great Britain is twenty-five years ahead of this country in social legislation, agricultural control, etc. That's why the English press, for the first time, in years, seems to be friendly to ar. American idea.

Supreme court justices have always been given a cold shoulder by congress, despite the fact that the court has a tremendous hold on the affections of the American For nearly a century and a half they had to make the best of quarters far too cramped for the dispatch of business and, strange as it may seem, these venerable gentlemen have been shabbily treated when it came to the question of retiring on full pay. A lower federal judge may retire on his regular pay; a Supreme Court justice so far has had to resign from the bench and cease to be a judge in order to get his full pay-and at that, the salary is subject to revision or abolition by congress. The bill recently enacted by the house of representatives allows a justice of the highest court to retire at seventy if he desires-and draw the full $20,000 salary.

There is a difference between retiring and resigning. When a judge retires he is still a judge; he may be recalled by the government for any judicial purpose and he draws full pay. When a judge resigns, he loses all rank. His salary may be cut off. When the late Justice Holmes resigned there was a wave of economy which cut his salary in two, and on top of that a depression-time economy act took off a ten per cent slice of the remaining half.

The earliest court chamber in Washington was a tiny room on the same floor with the senate and house. Then the court went downstairs into the basement and sat in a room directly beneath the senate chamber of the days of 1810. The British tried to burn this room in the War of 1812, by filling it with tar barrels which were set on fire. The walls were marble and the columns cracked-but that's all.

Congress could not use the capito. for some time after the fire and met in a hotel, forgetting all about the court. The Supreme court's clerk then rented the court the use of his own home, a little two-story brick building near the capitol, standing until recently. Later congress assigned the highest court in the land to a room in the capitol which is described in the works of Rufus Choate as "little better than a dungeon"; and there the great Chief Justice John Marshall presided during famous trials. Later the court was given another cellarlike dungeon almost impossible to find. . . "A stranger might traverse the dark avenues of the capitol for a week" said a correspondent of a New York paper covering the famous case of Biggons versus Ogden in 1824, "without finding the remote corner in which justice is administered." Capitol guides recite this with glee.

Jesse Jones, RFC head, once made the remark to me that his ambition was to see national credit extended so that every young man of good character could borrow at least $200 on his own signaturebacked by his character. Few bankers talk like that, but Jones is exceptional. I believe that Jones would carry out his ambition if he were in some other type of banking operation.

Whenever RFC comes up for debate in congress, someone wants to know when the government intends to do something as helpful to the small may as it does for big business through the RFC. Through the seed loan policies of the government, small farmers have been borrowing money to buy seed, feed and supplies ever since 1921. This lending power has just been extended as one of the first items on the legislative programs of this Con-

Credit is furnished to farmers tration-farmers unable to obtain credit from other sources. Many of them will be tenant farmers without land or specific resources, and the loans will be lifesavers in both the drouth area and in this present flood district where many will have their seed and livestock swept away. The interest is four per cent and the loans are authorized for the benefit of small men who would otherwise be at the mercy of loan sharks and who would have been forced on to the relief rolls. He Gave Us "Craps"

WHEN Bernard Xavier Philippe de Marigny de Mandeville was sixteen years old, his father, who was Louisiana's richest Creole planter, died and left his entire fortune to the wild and headstrong son whose every whim had been granted by the indulgent father. Within two years Bernard's guardian, finding him uncontrollable, shipped him off to England in the hope that life abroad might improve his behavior.

But it didn't. For young Marigny became even more dissipated in London than he had been in New Orleans and finally his guardian ordered him to return home. The boy came back, bringing with him a new dice game, called hazard, which was then all the rage in England and France.

This was at the beginning of the Nineteenth century and hordes of Americans were swarming into the capital of their newly-acquired Louisiana territory. The pleasure-lov-ing Creoles looked upon these energetic and unmannerly visitors with disgust and their dislike was fully reciprocated by the Americans. They regarded the Creoles as an effete, alien race and spoke of them slurringly as "Johnny Crapauds" (frogs). When they saw them huddle around a table playing Marigny's new game of hazard, they called it "Johnny Crapaud's game."

But these Yankees soon found themselves fascinated by the game and taking part in it with the Creoles. Gradually they shortened the name to "Crapauds" and eventually it became "craps," the name it bears to this day. Meanwhile the man who had introduced it to this country was steadily losing his great fortune, little by little. Part of it went because these despised Yankees were better with the "galloping dominoes" than he was. Part of it went because he was given to making grand gestures-such as lighting his cigar with five and ten dollar bills twisted into "spills."

Eventually his fortune was all gone and this grand seigneur of the New World was reduced to the barest necessities of life in a tiny cottage, attended only by one loyal old negress. In 1868, then a feeble old man of eighty-three, he tripped over his own doorstep and died as the result of the fall. Thus prosaically ended the life of the last great Creole gentleman. It had spanned the whole history of his state and city. Over it he had seen floating the flags of five nations-Spain, France, the United States and the Confederacy-an experience given to few, if any, of his fellow-

First "Father of Democracy"

L down as a "scurrilous young journalist who yapped at the Father his country" because when George Washington retired from the Presidency he printed in his paper a bitter attack on that chief execu tive, even going to the lengths of declaring that "If ever a nation was debauched by a man, the American nation has been by Washington." But modern scholarship has revised that opinion and has shown that he and his grandfather, rather than Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson, were the real "Fathers of American Democracy.'

His name was Benjamin Franklin Bache and his grandfather was Benjamin Franklin. At his grandfather's knee, in both America and in France, where he lived from 1776 to 1785, he learned the meaning of real "democracy." The elder Ben may have preached the lessons, but it was young Benny who put them into practice.

He founded the Philadelphia General Advertiser, later the Aurora, and in it he attacked Washington because Washington was the symbol of the Federalist faith, which, he was convinced, was standing in the way of the development of the democratic ideal in the new republic. He also attacked John Adams and that led directly to the passage of the Alien and Sedition laws under which statutes Benny Bache was arrested for libel but never prosecut-

For, in what modern historians called "the second American Revolution," Bache and his crusading newspaper had broken the power of the Federalists and snapped the link between them and England. Thereby he freed the new nation from the English idea of a semi-monarchical form of government. He made certain the victory of the new Republican-Democratic party which with the election of Thomas Jefferson began a real democratic rule in this country. For this he should be remembered rather than as a "scurrilous young jour-nalist."

This newspaper is, in effect, a mail-bag which brings you news of events and news of the best merchandise at the fairest prices.

You don't throw away letters unread. You don't read three or four letters carefully and skim through the rest. Treat the "merchandise letters" in this newspaper the same way. Read them all. Read them carefully. One single item will often repay you for the time it has taken to read them all.

Many good housekeepers have formed the habit of reading their newspaper with a pencil and paper, ready to jot down the articles they wish to look at when they start out on their shepping tour. Try this method. It saves time, and saves money, and provides you with the pick of the day's merchandise.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS BY JULIAN CAPERS, JR. Special Correspondent

Austin.-Politics reared its head both houses of the 45th legislature began to make visible headway on the huge legislative program piled up by committees during the first five weeks of the session, and the senate, being older, wiser and more experienced in the ways of politics, took the spotlight.

Gov. Allred had told the solons he would veto appropriations if they were voted without accompanying tax measures to pay for them. Then the governor went to Washington for a week, to attend the Farley dinner, and the senate rushed thru the salary increase bill for district judges, previously passed by the house, and sped it along to Acting Gov. The house put the senate on the spot, voting overwhelmingly to repeal the race-track gambling bill, and sending it to the senate, where the governor already has applied strong pressure for a record vote. CHILD LABOR ALIBI

The senate drove ahead final passage of Ben O'Neal's state child labor bill which would prohibit in legislative halls this week, as the sale in Texas of goods made by children, and permit the state to confiscate and sell such goods. The bill is intended, those who favor ratification of the federal child labor amendment declare, to provide a political alibi for senators who oppose the latter, but plan to support the state bill. Allen Shivers, leader of the senate ratificationists, charged the state law would be an empty gesture, impossible of enforcement.

Ranch Program Discussed

Some fifty farmers remained after the general meeting Monday and discussed with the county agent the ranch program for 1937. Some divisions of this program will be of interest to the ranchers of this county. It might be better understood if we ake for example the ranch of Mr. J. F. Dyer.

We will say that he has 14,000 acres in grazing land and that his land will support one animal unit for each 15 acres. For each unit he may receive a range building allowance of $1.50 which would entitle him to $1400.00. Now, he may earn one-third of this allowance by withholding from grazing stitute practically all the usable one-fourth of his total acreage hot oil now aboveground in the from May 1st until Nov. 1st. If he will contour or furrow his land with channels of not less than 8 inches in width nor 4 inches in depth and not less than 3 1-2 feet apart he may earn 70 cents per acre of any amount or all of the $1400. Or he may build earthen tanks or reservoirs and receive 15 cents per cubic yard on an allowance not to exceed $1400. Or he may build range fences (new construction) of 3 wires with posts not more than 20 feet apart and receive 30 cents per rod. Or he may eradicate prickly pear at the rate of 50 cents, 75 cents, or $1.00 per acre according to the degree of infestation or he may rescue his land from mesquite at the rate The visit of Secretary of the In- acre according to the density of

He also assured dealers that new orders for Chevrolets will receive immediate attention and that deliveries will be made with the utmost rapidity.

"Production now has been reumed, and shipments of new cars will shortly be under way. We expect to be producing at capacity within a few days in order to re ward the loyalty and patience of the people with deliveries of new cars with all the speed of which we are capable."

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-C—The Measure of Christian Love.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets made of ministry on earth many important events took place, but we pass most of them in our present series of studies. The incident related in our nificance because it introduces a marvelously instructive discourse of our Lord.

Whatever had prompted their inquiry, we are delighted to note that the Greeks came with an earnest desire to see Jesus.

It was at the opera, in Paris, as he arises to preach, are the while she sat in the box of the Duc words of our lesson, "Sir, we would de Chartres, one night upon the see Jesus." Little wonder that a eve of the French Revolution, that strong and true gospel is preached in that church.

II. Finding the Cross (vv. 23-33). The reply of our Lord to the Greeks and to the disciples who brought them to him, seems a bit singular at first glance. Did he not wish to receive them? They had probably come to see the great religious leader, the King of the Jews -why does he talk about deathwhy is his soul troubled?

The words of our Lord are clear. Men do not need an example, a leader, a teacher, they need a Saviour. It is as a sacrifice for sin that Christ will draw all men unte himself (v. 32).

We need to relearn that lesson. Leaders of the church are earnestly seeking the explanation of the rapid decline in the influence of the Christian church. It is a good sign that some are beginning to realize that the difficulty is in the realm of the spiritual. The barrenness of socalled modern theology has become apparent to its leaders and they have begun to talk about a "spiritual revival." But unfortunately we for her living. find that they use the expres sion to stand for something entirely different from a real scriptural revival. "The voice is Jacob's voice but the hands are the hands of Esau" (Gen. 27:22).

the denial of self for the glory of guineas. God, both of which truths are emphasized in this passage.

One cannot forego mention of the fact that the last part of verse 26, "If any man serve me, him will my Father honor," was the motto of the late Dr. James M. Gray, whose life gloriously exemplified the truth of the passage. God is willing and ready to do as much for you and for me. Shall we not serve him with all our hearts?

III. Loving One Another (John 13;

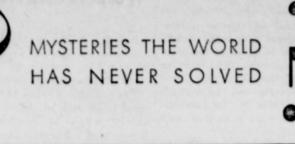

When these words were uttered our Lord was two days further in the last week before he was crucified. He was alone with his disciples in the upper room. What message does he have for them in that solemn hour? That they should love one another. That is a message that needs renewed emphasis in our day. The strife which fills the world has almost engulfed the church, and there is bitterness and strife where love should reign.

Let us observe carefully that it is as his disciples that we are able to love one another. There are two erroneous extremes to be avoided. First, we have the out and out conservative, who proclaims his belief in the Bible as God's Word, who is anxious that he be absolutely correct in doctrine, a really saved man, and who then becomes the kind of "fighting" fundamentalist who dismally fails God in the testimony referred to in these verses. On the other hand we have the liberal who has abandoned the scriptural basis of discipleship and who then boasts of his great love for his brethren. Love is no substitute for regeneration, and regeneration is no excuse for lack of love.

Giving and Taking Orders

He who will not accept orders has no right to give them; he who will not serve has no right to command; he who cannot keep silence has no right to speak .- Hubbard.

PAMELA -Who Was She? By MADOC OWENS

THERE was high glee in I the nursery of the Palais Royale, home of the Duc de Chartres, that near kinsman of the king, who later became the Duc d'Orleans. A beautiful child, a vision of loveli-In the last week of our Lord's ness and grace, a goldenhaired, blue-eyed, mischievous, sprightly girl had been brought from England to be lesson of today is of interest in and the playmate of the palace's of itself, but it is of peculiar sig- royal youngsters. Her name was Pamela.

Pamela was born to be loved. The royal children of the household of Chartres, their governess, the amiable Mme. de Genlis; His Grace, the Duc; princes, princesses and even their Majesties themselves, loved her from the first. She was A man has progressed far on the one of the loveliest creatures ever known to man. And her loveliness increased as she reached maturity.

But who was she? No one cared save women who were envious of her charms, and their wagging tongues found few enough to bring the men to Jesus. listeners. There was not a princeling The true function of every Christian in all France who would not have

But a young Lochinvar was to the Irish Lord Edward Fitz Gerald, son of the Duke of Leinster, first feasted eyes on this charming belle. He was handsome, brave and young-still in his twenties. It was a case of mutual love at first sight. And despite the opposition of Pamela's devoted governess, now her duenna, Mme. de Genlis, the young couple were wedded at Tournay the following December.

Daughter of "Mary Simms."

In the marriage contract, still preserved at Tournay, the bride was described as "Stephanie Caroline Anne Simms, known as 'Pamela, native of London, daughter of William Berkeley and Mary Simms."

In later years her devoted Mme. de Genlis maintained that her fair charge had been the daughter not of William Berkele,, but of one Seymour, an Englishman of good family, who had run off to New Foundland with Mary Simms, a Hampshire girl of humble birth, on whose account he had suffered disown ment after their marriage and who had soon died, leaving her to work

But her poverty had been relieved by a gentleman of the Duc de Chartres' household, who had come to England in search for a playmate for His Grace's children. Ac Let us make no mistake about it, cording to Mme. de Genlis' story, a real revival will center in the Pamela had been bought from Mary cross and will manifest itself in Simms, as an apprentice, for 25

A third version of Pamela's parentage was, however, given in the marriage record printed in the Masonic Magazine the month after her wedding. This describes the contracting couple as "The Hon. Lord Edward Fitz Gerald, Knight of the Shire for County Kildare," and "Mme. Pamela Caper, daughter of His Royal Highness, the ci-devant Duke of Orleans."

A fourth clue was given by Moore in his "Life of Lord Edward Fitz Gerald." It states that "Pamela was the adopted, or, as it may be caid without scruple, the actual daughter of Mme. de Genlis by the Duc d'Orleans."

Which story was true? "Life seems to me more like a beautiful dream than reality. We are so happy that I sometimes ask myself fearfully, will it, can it last?" wrote Pamela to Mme. de Genlis

Became a Politician.

Coming events had forecast their shadows in Pamela's fears. Lord Edward's ambition led him into the vortex of Irish politics. He became the ruling spirit of the Society of United Irishmen. He played the same card that Sir Roger Casement played. Crossing the channel he arranged for a French invasion of Ireland, but was betrayed. With a price of 1,000 pounds upon his head, he went into hiding, contriving now and then to steal into Pamela's lodgings and spend a happy hour with her. But the night after he had returned from one of these visits with her his hiding place was surrounded. Dagger in hand, he flung hamself upon his captors but was overpowered.

Pamela sold all of her bridal presents and with the money tried to bribe his jailers. Vainly she begged to be allowed to share his captivity. But she was ordered to leave Ireland immediately, and but a few days after her tearful departure Lord Edward died, not at the hand of the executioner but from a wound flicted by one of his captors. She could not return to the Duc d'Orleans, that royal gentleman had lost his head by the guillotine. After numerous wanderings and to save herself from poverty in later years she married one Pitcairn, in Hamburg, but he left her in want, which she endured until Britain relented and allowed her the money due from her beloved Lord Edward.

Spent Last Days in Paris. This enabled her to spend her declining days in comfort in Paris, where just before her death, at the age of fifty-seven, she was described as having been "still admired and sought after; brilliant in society, spirituelle and remarkable for live lines; of fancy and playfulness of imagination."

Tourists who visit the famous cemetery of Montmartre come upon a modest tombstone, flanked by monuments erected to the memory of personages whose pedigrees are given at great length. This simple stone bears not a date, only the one word: "Pamela."

Historians ask, "Who was she?" And so does the world. But no one knows.

What Became of FATHER GAPON?

N POLTAVA, southern Russia, there lived a poor peasant lad, George Gapon. Although his actual knowledge of the world lay within the boundaries of the fields chiefly in the tonsils but also in wherein he earned his daily pittance, his soul demanded expansion.

and gained such a reputation among occur. his neighbors for scholarship that his parents saved enough to send him to the University of Kazan. Here he joined a student body of Socialists and, their propaganda becoming revealed to the authorities. Gapon was expelled. He next entered a theological school, but his views were too liberal for the priesthood. He was next heard of as an evangelistic free lance, working among the poor of the slums. He became a leader in the union labor movement and organized such organizations among the poor.

Although exhorting them to resentment against the aristocracy, he from personal responsibility for their misery. He always preached the doctrine of peace, advocating the pen rather than the sword as the best weapon for defeating their enemy. Predicting that the Czar would right their wrongs if he could ever be personally acquainted therewith, he organized his thousands of followers in a moneter procession dren, students, laborers and disgruntled people of all classes.

Led Into Trap.

Gapon, in the garb of a Russian priest, took his place at the head of this vast horde, which bore with it a monster petition addressed to the czar. The police were unusually docile while the procession was forming and seemed, in fact, to encourage its organization. But before Gapon's army had reached the palace it found itself caught in a trap. Armed Cossacks surrounded it on all sides and fired mercilessly into the throng of screaming women and children. And thus occurred the massacre of "Red Sunday."

Although other leaders of the movement were arrested, Gapon managed to make an escape, which many of his followers believed to have been the result of divine protection. Reaching Switzerland, he soon got down to the active work of engineering secret revolutionary bunds purposed to overthrow the Russian monarch. As soon as the excitement caused by "Red Sunday" had subsided he returned to St. Petersburg in disguise.

Father Gapon Vanishes.

Some time in the following April (1906) "Father" Gapon mysteriously disappeared. Through all the slums of St. Petersburg he was sought by the excited disciples. Then from some quarter was given out the statement that the revolutionary leaders-having discovered that he was a government spy who had purposely led the people into the trap on "Red Sunday"-had condemned him and that he had been carried to a Finland village and there lynched. But Gapon's disciples declared that this rumor had been inspiged by the government. As a matter of fact a body was found hanging in a house in Finland, but the face had been mutilated beyond identification.

According to many of the revoluby the government and was spir.ted away to some fortress prison, there to be subjected to an unknown fate.

A third theory is that the Greek church resented Gapon's assuming the robes of one of its priests and had him locked up in a monastery

Blisters and Pimples on Feet. FROM time to time you hear the old saying that the best specialty in medicine is that of the skin specialist because "his patients never die and never get better"-no worry and a regular income. Added to this is the fact that if he calls every skin ailment eczema he will be right in more than half his cases because eczema comprises at least half of all the cases with skin ailments. Lately there has been much in newspaper and magazine advertisements regarding what is called "athlete's foot," where the skin on and between the toes becomes reddish white and little pimples or blisters are present. Dr. Barton It has been shown to be contagious and in golf, athletic and other organizations fresh straw slippers are provided so that the feet may not come in contact with the floors used by those already suffering with this ailment.

The usual treatment is to keep the feet clean, dry the feet thoroughly after washing, and the use of various ointments containing mercury, salicylic acid and other substances.

From Tonsils and Teeth.

In some cases when there is present on the feet a type of little pustules-pimples containing pus very similar to ringworm on the hands and feet, Drs. G. C. Andrews and G. F. Machacek in Archives of Dermatology, Chicago, state that some of these eruptions persist despite treatment because of infection. The infections are located abscessed teeth. Conditions such as ulcer of the first or upper part of the small intestine, chronic inflammation of the large intestine He read what books he could find and rheumatism (arthritis) often

> Of a total of twenty-four patients, nine have been entirely cured by the removal of the tonsils. Three others were greatly improved after removal of the tonsils but there were slight traces of "scaliness" or scales on the hands and feet which, however, caused no inconvenience.

One case of interest was where there was some doubt as to the tonsils being the cause; but suction of the tonsils (pumping them out with a special pump) showed that after each suction the skin condition improved; when suction was stopped the eruption became worse. Two weeks after the tonsils were was careful to absolve the Czar removed there was a complete cure which has lasted two years.

In this type of infection it is not usually the toes and in between the toes that are affected, as is the case with athlete's foot or ringworm.

Barbital Drugs.

It would seem that almost every week a new drug to ease pain or to composed of men, women and chil- cause sleep appears on the market, all of which are spoken of as "safe" because they contain no morphine or other drug containing opium.

One of the most helpful drugs to ease pain, quiet restlessness, and induce or bring on sleep is what is known as barbital. It is used a great deal in mental institutions; and as a means of preventing epilepsy it is the greatest boon yet discovered for this distressing ailment.

However, like other powerful drugs it may be obtained by anybody, anytime, anywhere, and the results in many cases have been disastrous. Just as morphine and other dangerous drugs must be obtained by a physician's prescription, so also should the barbital drugs be obtained. Mental institutions, public and private, now have barbital addicts to treat.

Sir William Willcox, in the Journal of the American Medical Association taken from the British Lancet, repeats his warning that the "barbiturates" have a powerful action on the nervous system and that care is required in their daily use. Even in the usual doses symptoms such as mental depression, drowsiness, "visions", dizziness, unsteady gait, indistinct speech, squint, sideways movements of the eyes, and paralysis of the limbs are common results.

Some idea of the way the barbital "habit" is increasing is shown by the figures of the hospitals in Budapest. From 1909 to 1914, 35 cases of barbital poisoning were admitted, while in 1932 one hospital alone admitted 87 cases of barbital poisoning and in addition 80 cases of poisoning from pheno barbital.

To prevent the overuse of barbital tablets some physicians have powders made up containing ipecac and sugar of milk in addition to the barbital. The ipecac produces vomiting if too much be taken.

The treatment of barbital poisoning consists in washing out the stomtionists Gapon was finally trapped ach, using enemas, food by the stomach tube every six hours, and full doses of strychnine.

To help fight off the barbital "habit," the withdrawal of the drug, confinement in an institution and the use of strychnine has brought about recovery in a number of cases.

JOHN LARDNER

He landed a right hook to my face on the way home, necessitating the removal of two teeth.

By JOHN LARDNER

WE STUDENTS of anthropoid culture - we scientists who dabble with the ape and his relation to man and his whole whimsical slant on life-dwell in a little world of our own. At least, nobody else seems to hear the things we hear, or read the things we read in the newspapers, or follow the developments in our racket.

For instance, the other day I ran into Dr. Pete Bohnesack, the weasel-skinner, and said to him, full of "Bohnesack, old man, what do you think about the statement that Dr. Yerkes made in the paper? Ain't that sump'n?"

To my surprise, the great scientist (there is not a bigger man in the entire field of weasel-skinning) gave me a blank look:

"What Yerkes are you talking about?" he said. "What does he do? Does he dissect stoats? Is he a ferret-tanner? What Yerkes do you mean? I never heard of him." So I sped home to the laboratory and gave a piano lesson to O'Gung III, my chimpanzee.

Apes Are Getting Lower.

Now, what I was getting at in my conversation with the great weasel-skinner was simply this. Dr. Robert M. Yerkes, the comparative psycho-biologist who runs the Yale scientific ape plant, had made a squawk in a magazine story and also in the newspapers. He said that the study of apes in this country was going to the dogs. He said it in a more scientific way, but that was the gist.

According to the doctor, not one captive ape in twenty is put to the proper use. The wastage is terrific. A scientist gets hold of an ape and experiments to see how long the animal can stay alive under water. When the experiment is over, and the ape is dead, he has to get a new ape for his next experiment. You can see how that would play hob with the ape supply.

Well, I agree with Dr. Yerkes that an ape should be made to last a long time, for his own sake and for the benefit of science. I believe that this theory applies equally to gorillas and chimpanzees.

Now, in the case of my chimpanzee, O'Gung III, I think I have acted absolutely for the best.

O'Gung III, as his name indicates, is the third O'Gung. His father, son of the original O'Gung, was born in Africa in affluent circumstances, the old man being one of the biggest shots of the neighborhood. But the younger O'Gung married below his station, and was cut off without a shilling, as they say in England. This preyed on his mind so much that he and his wife were easy victims for the first trapper that came along.

Superiority of Man.

They were brought to this country and assigned to a research worker in New Jersey, where O'-Gung III first saw the light of day. I bought him at the age of three months. It was love at first sight. He landed a right hook to my face on the way home, necessitating the removal of two teeth.

"Ape, that was a dirty trick," I said. In an instant he had repeated, after me "Asequajhik," which is the closest a chimpanzee has come to expressing himself in English since 1907. And O'Gung III was only three months old - well, three and a half months. I'll give or take a week.

I had a son of the same age at that time, a bright and healthy tot, but precocious. This gave me a beautiful opportunity for research into the comparative development of man and ape. I let the two little fellows grow up together, dressing them in the same clothes, feeding them the same food, and making them play the same games. But after about five months the study was interrupted by an unfortunate incident. I quote from my notes of that date:

"June 7-Johnny is outdrinking O'Gung at rate of two bourbons to under various names in different one. Found O'Gung under table last cook books. Most authorities agree night, Johnny still conscious and singing loudly. Have to get rid of

So I farmed Johnny out to some people who were interested in chilof sodas and he was ready for fresh used.

It is the dream of every scientist - barring weasel-skinners -to find out whether a chimpanzee is capable of distinguishing and recred, blue, yellow, fuchsia, and maroon. With this in mind I gave O'-Gung III several strips of colored cloth and told him to show me some Groomed for Yale.

The result far exceeded my expectations. In fact, it wrote a new chapter in anthropoid history. Without a second's hesitation the manly little fellow snatched up the blue cloth, waved it over his head, whistled a few bars of 'Boola, Boola," and asked for the score of the Yale-Georgia game. He asked in sign language, but there was no mistaking his meaning. I had planned to send O'Gung III to Harvard when he grew up. Naturally, the color experiment changed my mind. I promptly entered him for Yale and made a tentative note that chimpanzees have a leaning in O'Gung III showed marked interest in sports from his second birthday on. He hated to participate in any game more strenuous than dime-limit stud, but he loved to watch football or baseball provided his seat was on the fifty-yard line or back of third base.

At the age of five the astute chimpanzee had sharpened his powers of mimicry to a razor's edge. For example, I marked out a stretch of level ground ten yards in length and proceeded to traverse it with a hop, a step, and a jump. O'Gung III, after watching my every move with almost human attention and understanding, fell asleep where he sat-a perfect imitation of something I had done a couple of nights

He's Learning "Prisoner's Song." It would be too great a task to describe all the experiments I have tried with O'Gung III in the last few years. I have tested his reaction to fire, smoke, beer, Greek literature, skiing, threats, kindness, capital punishment, light wines, union labor and parachute-jumping.

A few weeks ago I was playing a medley of old tunes on my banjo. O'Gung III suddenly jumped up on the piano stool, gave me a look of almost subhuman intelligence, and struck the first note of "Keep the Home Fires Burning." There was no mistake about it.

So now I am giving him piano lessons.

This is my one hundred and twelfth experiment on O'Gung III, with no repeating and with never a dull moment. I don't think I can be accused of wasting this chimpanzee. He has been with me eight years, and he will remain with me for another eight if I can just break him of his new (but scientifically valuable) habit of setting fire to my house.

But, as I started out to remark, all this is probably news to you scientists who have given your lives to skinning weasels and measuring snail tracks. I have written it for the benefit of fellow ope experts all over the world, and if any of them happens to have the price of a chimpanzee's bail I wish he would get in touch with me. O'Gung III is too delicate for life in prison, where he now awaits trial on an arson rap.

HOT SAUCES ARE EASY TO MIX UP

Use Proper Recipes and Follow Them Strictly.

By EDITH M. BARBER.

ONE of the most popular of the fine hot sauces with almost every one is the well-known Hollandaise. It is one of the easiest sauces to make if the proper recipe is followed. Too often, however, it is made uncuccessfully, although more pains than are necessary are taken in its production. Many recipes for Hollandaise call for washing the butter. Contrary to general opinion, this has no effect on the texture of the sauce. These directions originally were put into American recipes for this French sauce in the interest of flavor. Unsalted butter is commonly used in Europe and produces a sauce with a delicate bland flavor. In this country, however, a little salt in the sauce is generally liked. Why take salt out and then put it back? The egg yolks, lemon juice and half the butter should be put into a small saucepan, which should be held over hot water while the butter is melting and the sauce thickening and while you stir vigorously. The rest of the butter should then be stirred in and the sauce beaten until it again thickens. Warning! Do not use a double boiler for this sauce unless you are very careful not to allow the water to boil in the lower part. Warning number two! When the sauce has thickened, set it aside if you are not ready to use it at once and reheat it, stirring constantly, just before serving.

There are many variations of this type of sauce. You will find them that tarragon vinegar, in which herbs have been woked, is used instead of lemon juice for Bearnaise. For a Mousseline sauce, heavy cream is beaten into Hollandaise. dren, and I concentrated on O'- For a Trianon, sherry, instead of Gung III. A couple of bicarbonate all or part of the lemon juice, is

A very delicate sauce, not unlike a Hollandaise, is made by combining egg yolks, sour cream and tarragon vinegar. This sauce may be cooked in a small double boiler until ognizing different colors, such as it thickens after a vigorous beating. For the lack of a better name I call this special sauce. It may be used with fish or vegetables.

The boiled salad dressings which may be served hot or cold do not belong exactly in any classification. They are thickened with a little flour but also demand egg yolks. The recipe for Bavarian sauce which I obtained in Germany is suitable to be used as a sauce for fish or veal or as a dressing for greens, over which it should be poured while it

A "Fixing Fold."

Lights out. Fuse blown. Hey, where's a candle? Got any fuses? Oh, heavens! Run over to the Browns and see if they have any.

It is just such crises as these that can make a pleasant home into rather a hectic one. We remember moments of sheer chaos resulting from blown fuses in the middle of a party. Other small but important details in the gentle art of keeping a home often can cause momentary headaches that seem pretty silly since a little planning might avert them.

We are strongly in favor of a "fixing fold" somewhere in the house. We have in mind a simple compact cabinet, preferably on the first floor, with such things as extra fuses, an electric torch, a screw driver and an assortment of nails and screws all ready to hand. You might even find space for it on the wall of the kitchen and we're certain that you could find the right -hands off except for emergencies. You might include strong twine and furniture glue in your list of "fixits"-thumb tacks, mending tape, good sharp scissors (woe unto little Margaret if caught using them for paper dolls).

We have a hunch that most hus bands who hate to work around the house are that way mainly because they never can find any tools. Flash a "fixing fold" on your own best half when he comes home this Saturday afternoon before you bring up that mile long list of little "please-fix-thises". First thing you know he'll be looking for some thing to tear up and rebuild! And he'll end up with a great deal more leisure time if the materials for mending and repairing household necessities are easy to find and ready to use.

And one more addition-a group of duplicate keys for all impor-tant doors in the house can be kept in this closet to smooth life's way By Betty Wells - WAU Service.

Division of Time-

nor the pursuit of happiness in beautiful room starts just that way. their own special ways, has seemed to reach its apex. Already there is a trend toward leisurely living, the sort that claims the right to dispose of hours not occupied in business or housekeeping, in ways of personal choice rather than of group determining.

Today, in the modern ways of square room are oyster white and living, time is divided into two units, one of which is work, the other diversion rather than play. As soon as work is over, or can be interrupted, the time is given over to diversion. Some persons work most of the time and some persons spend most of their time in diversions. The division of hours between these two things is uneven, but however divided, no waking time is left.

Spare Time.

While each of us should work part of our time, it is the matter of how we spend the rest of our time that is now coming under special consideration. There is a growing discontent that seems to bode good. Why should any of us be bound to do in time which is our own, what this or that group is doing because at the moment it is the popular thing? Can we have no evenings to ourselves? Home Diversions.

Shall the rare pleasures of home be invaded? Or shall we decide to spend some quiet evenings in reading favorite books or delving into those new ones we realize would be liked? Shall we have time to devote to needlecraft, to music, to studying some language,

THE rush of life that leaves per- to pursuing some hobby or doing some no time for deliberation, anything to enrich ourselves or to make something beautiful?

Enriching Diversions. All these things are diversions from necessary work, but they are the sort that repay us by making life more worth living, and not the kinds that merely absorb attention for the time being, and leave us depleted rather than replenished. If we wish to master time rather than be mastered by it, we must use at least a portion of our time when work is through in following out our own personal preferences in our diversions

Leisure.

When we do this we have real leisure, one definition of which is, "time available for some particular purpose, spare time." One great cause for being rushed is trying to do what everyone else is doing, rather than determining for ourselves what we will do.
