The Big Spring City Council began its road show Tuesday evening by conducting a regular council meeting in the gym of the Lakeview Headstart School in District 1. The council will also be in the other districts of the city in the future. In the photo at left, Stacy Rawls addresses the council, talking about ordinance violations on the west side of Big Spring. Rawls spoke of weedy lots, abandoned houses and other hazards residents face.

West End residents rip council

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Shoddy upkeep and neglect of parts of the city's West End was thrust into the spotlight Tuesday at a Big Spring City Council meeting held in the neighborhood.

Better code enforcement and maintenance was requested by Stacy Rawls, one of two citizens who addressed the council. City officials say improvements have been made and efforts are increasing but more citizen help is needed in community cleanups.

"The West End is not an extension of the landfill and we will no longer accept being treated that way," Rawls said.

"We don't have the finances to do everything that needs to be done," said Mayor Tim Blackshear, who wants more citizen involvement in cleaning up.

Fifteen citizens attended the meeting, held at the Lakeview Headstart Center in an effort to make the council more accessible. It was the first of 12 monthly council meetings scheduled in each of the city's six council districts.

Rawls, who presented a petition to the council, flipped 57 pictures to council members showing vacant buildings and vehicles in ruin, weedy lots and trash dumped along roads and in fields. One shows asbestos strewn on the ground, another an exposed water pipe in a street. Rawls said city officials have been slow to respond or haven't responded. The pipe's been exposed a year, she said.

"No longer will we be silent, forgotten and abused," Rawls said. "We pay taxes and for services and what we ask for in return is better road maintenance, replacement of water lines, police and fire protection. The West End has more unpaved roads than any area of the city."

She accused District 1 City Councilwoman Stephanie Horton of being concerned about the Northside and not the West End. Horton replied she's only been on the council two months but in the past has helped get improvements on the Westside, including recent paving of streets south of Third and Fourth Streets.

"I've called you and you didn't have time to talk to me," Rawls retorted.

"I have gotten things done for the West End, you just need to look around," Horton said.

Blackshear pointed out the city has limited resources. For example, the city maintains streets but does not pave unless it has received grant funds for a paving project. Condemning and demolishing vacant buildings is expensive and foreclosing for delinquent taxes - a time-consuming process - many times puts empty lots in hands of taxing entities, which don't pay taxes.

"It all comes back to the dollar," Blackshear said.

Trustees propose shortfall budget

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

Big Spring Independent School District trustees hope to deal with budget shortfall without raising the current tax rate of 142.2 cents per $100 property valuation.

The total proposed budget for the 1993-94 school year is $19,457,586 - $606,078 less than fiscal 1992-93 spending.

Tuesday, the school board finished two evenings of budget workshops, compiling a tentative budget.

A public hearing on the budget is scheduled for Aug. 31. Depending on what information is gained during that hearing, amendments could be made to the budget, according to Superintendent W.A. McQueary. "Everything is subject to change," he said.

The board worked with budget shortfalls of more than $1 million, the majority of that amount - an estimated $800,000 - attributable to out-of-district income the BSISD received from the County Education District funding system. The remainder, officials noted, was primarily due to a decrease in property value.

Trustees, McQueary said, are committed to keeping the current tax rate and not adopting an effective tax rate to make up for the loss in property value.

The board cut almost $1 million from the budget, but added some items, such as a $227,000 step increase in employees salaries.

Even with these cuts, the current budget indicates a $190,000 deficit.

However, because of conservative revenue estimates and overestimation of costs, board members still expect to end next year in the black, although barely, according to McQueary.

A substantial fund balance is in place to cover catastrophic expenses. This provides a safety net, trustees said, which allows the board to budget this tightly.

In trimming the budget, trustees went as far as eliminating some personnel deemed unnecessary.

Some high-expense items were added to the budget, including additional paving at the Big Spring High School, near Blankenship field and at Kentwood Elementary, estimated at $75,000; a second $20,000 van needed for school trips; and 10 microscopes costing $8,500.

Trustees decided to cut funds for building a new bus wash building and bus shed, saving about $15,000.

High-expense items in the budget include $80,000 for two new school buses, $28,000 for two half-ton pickup trucks, $35,000 for a new back hoe, $20,000 for a new shop truck and $12,000 for a new driver education vehicle.

Hearing nearing for teen charged in toddler's death

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

A 14-year-old, charged with the death of a local two-year-old last month, awaits a hearing possibly in the next two weeks, an official said.

Results of an autopsy report this month alleged delinquent conduct on the part of the youth, said Howard County Attorney Hardy Wilkerson.

"The autopsy ruled the death a homicide as a result of injuries to the abdomen," Wilkerson said. "The charges are murder with the alternative charge being involuntary manslaughter."

After police responded to a 911 call at 1:30 p.m. June 7 in the 1500 block of Tucson, the two-year-old was taken to Scenic Mountain Medical Center, suffering from severe trauma to the abdomen.

The toddler died later that day in a Lubbock hospital. Reports indicated the child had been in the teen's care when the incident occurred.

The teen-ager remained in the custody of juvenile authorities until June 29, when officials allowed the 14-year-old be released.

The judgement followed a series of hearings every 10 days to determine the placement needs of the youth. "The judge ruled that alternative placement was available," Wilkerson said. "The youth was discharged to relatives."

Year-round school gaining popularity throughout state

The Associated Press

DALLAS — Charles McCasland has heard all the complaints about year-round education: It deprives kids of a summer vacation. Parents can get stuck with kids on both traditional and year-round schedules. It's a plot to destroy the family.

But for the Plano principal, putting Carlisle Elementary School on a year-round schedule was the best thing that ever happened to him as an educator.

"I've never done anything that felt so right before. ... It sure makes a difference in the whole atmosphere of the school," he said Tuesday.

Carlisle is one of several campuses across Texas that started a year-round schedule Monday.

The Plano campus is entering its third year on the alternative schedule. McCasland, past president of the Texas chapter of the National Association for Year-Round Education, said Carlisle parents voted to go year-round to improve academic achievement.

Since then, Carlisle pupil and teacher attendance has improved, as have standardized test scores. "This was a high-performing school to begin with and we've been able to improve even on that," he said.

Pat Pringle, TEA's acting associate commissioner for field services, said 45 districts across Texas, involving 65,000 students, used some form of year-round education in 1992-93. About 50 districts are involved in 1993-94, but he could not estimate the number of students.

Joey Lozano, a spokesman for the Texas Education Agency, said none of the districts has every one of its campuses on the schedule.

Districts move toward year-round education as a way to alleviate overcrowding, delay construction of new buildings and better use their existing facilities, Lozano said.

Year-round schedules can be on a single track, where all pupils are in school and on break at the same time; or multitrack, where students are on staggered schedules and only a portion of the population is in school at once.

Proponents say the frequent breaks help students retain more of what they learn. Authorities acknowledge that the proof, at this point, is merely anecdotal.

It appears that students who are limited in their English proficiency or whose academic skills are less polished fare better without the long summer break, Lozano said.

Pringle added that the short vacations provide opportunities for educational enrichment classes and remediation. Helping students throughout the year seems to work better than waiting until a summer break, when they've fallen so far behind that "they might not ever catch up."

In the Fort Worth Independent School District, eight campuses started year-round education for the first time Monday. They joined W.J. Turner Elementary School and two special-needs campuses that started the calendar last year.

Turner Principal Cynthia Davis said her campus went year-round for continuity of learning by English as a Second Language pupils, a more stable free lunch program and the enrichment available during the mini-vacations.

Ms. Davis said she was involved with the implementation of the program at the new schools, whose administrators and parents wanted the schedule for different reasons. But all seek the improved attendance, morale and discipline the schedule seems to provide, she said.

Hermit tree crabs off to races

The Associated Press

PORT ARANSAS — Mario Andretti cracked under pressure.

The hermit tree crab, whose name befits his swift scuttle, burrowed in his seashell. He made an appearance only after Mutt, a competing crab, placed his pincers on the finish line.

"Aw-riiiight Mutt!" yelled owner Bill Sahn, cheering from the sidelines of the sand-topped speedway in Bobby Ray's bar. "Mario got a flat," a spectator groaned.

On Wednesday nights, this Port Aransas hangout is crawling with hermit tree crab owners and their palm-size pets.

Here the crabs are for racing, not eating. But if the crowd wants steamed crabs, owner Bobby Ray will douse a crab with water when it plays dead at the starting circle. Steam rises because the racing crabs are warmed by a heat lamp. A spritz usually revives a shy crab.

The owners bring the crabs in brandy snifters, to-go cartons or palm tree-lined aquariums. But the crabs' real homes — and novelties — are their colorful seashells.

The hermit tree or land crab, not to be confused with the native marine hermit crab, is a Caribbean import. The eight-legged pets are available at souvenir shops in Port Aransas.

In the Caribbean, hermit tree crab racing is a gambler's sport. Betting is illegal in Texas, so Ray holds tournaments. The winner takes the pot of $3 entry fees.

A champion crab like Cannibal can bring owner Sahn as much as $100 on a crowded night. But victory has its price, said Sahn, displaying slits and scratches on his fingers.

Every Thursday night in Port Aransas, hermit crabs like the one pictured here crawl out of their shells for the fast life at Bobby Ray's Bar. After a series of double elimination races, a winner eventually emerges.

"Cannibal likes to eat meat — mine," the 40-year-old deck hand said.

Bart Murnam, another Port Aransas deck hand, said a fast crab knows how to handle its shell. "A good one will pick up its shell and not drag it," said 26-year-old Murnam, who owns Mojo, Wednesday's tournament winner.

Murnam credits Mojo's new shell. "Look at those pretty colors."

Bar patron Jeremy Meerscheid used to keep hermit crabs as pets. But he never thought about racing them.

"I think it's pretty cool," he said, watching a shell-to-shell finish in the fifth round. "You know what they like to eat? Pepperoni."

His girlfriend, Kim, said the racing was "weird." Ray keeps an aquarium of rental crabs at the bar. The nocturnal scavengers dine on crushed pretzels and chips in scallop shells.

"How about a little alcohol to wash down that bar food?" a visitor asked. "After all, crabs already walk sideways."

Deficit talks hit late gas tax snag

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Democratic lawmakers' efforts to draft a compromise deficit-reduction bill are hitting late hurdles as deals on a gasoline tax increase and spending for social programs remain elusive.

As House-Senate bargainers searched for a package they could get past both houses and send President Clinton, the key unresolved question was how much the 14.1-cent-a-gallon federal gasoline tax should be increased. Western lawmakers are particularly leary of any big boosts, but others want the increases to pay for tax breaks for business and the poor and for spending programs.

Liberals were concerned that proposals emerging from the talks to raise spending for social programs were too low.

The proposals were changing by the day. But participants, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the latest proposals would increase the tax credit for low-income workers by $22 billion or less, below the $28 billion Clinton wanted; limit Clinton's proposed $7 billion increase in food stamps to about $3 billion; and hold tax breaks for companies in some deteriorating communities to $3.5 billion. The House had approved $5 billion.

Despite the problems, Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, predicted, "We are going to be able to pass the (final bill) ... through the House and Senate next week."

And Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., one of the Democrats' chief vote counters in the House, said, "We're hearing a lot of muttering, but that's par for the course right before a negotiation is completed."

The House had last offered a 9-cent increase and the Senate a 4.3-cent rise in the gasoline tax. Some Democratic senators, led by Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., were threatening to abandon the plan Tuesday if the final figure exceeded the Senate offer by much.

Clinton has been meeting with lawmakers as the House-Senate conferees continue to negotiate in an attempt to reach a compromise on Clinton's deficit reduction plan before their scheduled recess early next month.

"You'd begin to lose senators who had supported the bill" if the increase reaches even 6 cents, Baucus predicted.

Shortly before Baucus spoke, Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., said the evolving package "does not do enough to put our economic house in order" and said he might oppose it unless additional spending cuts were included.

Boren even called for a summit of Democratic and Republican leaders to draft a new plan, saying the problem of the deficit demands a bipartisan solution. That idea drew immediate criticism from the administration, which said such talks would lead to needless delays.

"You delay it a couple of months, you are going to have less deficit reduction, higher interest rates, more fragility, uncertainty in the economy, more consumer confidence going down," Clinton told reporters at the White House.

But with the objections from Baucus and Boren — who both supported the bill when it cleared the Senate by one vote in June — it was clear that the Senate would be the tougher obstacle to sending the measure to Clinton.

To bolster their chances in case of defections, the administration has been wooing some of the six Senate Democrats who voted against the original bill.

Meanwhile, negotiators discussed tax breaks for business that could help win conservative support. These included breaks for investors in some small businesses and an increase — to $17,500 from the current $10,000 — in the amount of purchases small companies could write off in the first year.

Clinton already asking for more flood relief

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton wants the Senate to expand the House-passed flood relief bill to $4.1 billion and says he may ask for still more before the waters recede.

The House sent its $3 billion relief package to the Senate on a 400-27 vote Tuesday after Democratic leaders persuaded the lawmakers to put off fractious debate on how to cover the cost. Even as their debate was beginning, Clinton was asking for more.

The House bill would provide $1.9 billion for crop losses and direct aid to flood victims. The remainder would go for jobs; repair of housing, highways and flood-control works; loans; and a variety of other relief.

The money for crop losses also could be used to compensate victims of drought in the Southeast as well as hail and other weather disasters elsewhere.

NOAA records indicate year of dangerous living

Weather happens. It's a pretty fundamental concept — you could ask Noah, or you could ask NOAA (National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration) and they'd tell you pretty much the same thing: It rains, it floods, it's the weather.

You could even look up the word "weather" in Webster's New World Dictionary, Third College Edition, and the second definition would say: "Disagreeable or harmful atmospheric conditions; storm, rain, etc."

In other words, if it wasn't for bad weather, we'd have no weather at all.

OK, fine. But isn't enough enough? Over the past year, most Americans would probably agree, there has been enough weather, and more than enough weather, and then some. There was Hurricane Andrew in Florida, Hurricane Iniki in Hawaii. There were record snows in the West and floods in the Southwest. There was the Great East Coast Blizzard. This summer, there's been a drought in the Southeast and no summer to speak of in the Northwest.

And of course, there have been the Midwest floods.

Any one of these extreme weather events would be noteworthy — Hurricane Andrew and the Midwest floods are, after all, two of the worst natural disasters in U.S. history. THE worst in terms of financial loss.

But it's the combination that makes us wonder: Just what's going on here, anyway?

We could ask a tarot reader or a crystal ball gazer or a doomsday preacher — heck, we could ask a groundhog. But the honest-to-God, scientific fact seems to be that nobody really knows.

Foxes pose problem for Alaskan golfers

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — Golfer Roger Evans had just hit a near-perfect drive when a hazard more tenacious than the worst-placed sand trap got in his way for the second time.

A fox trotted across the fairway, picked up the ball in its mouth and scurried back into the tall grass Saturday.

Two foxes have stolen about 200 balls since the North Star Golf Club opened last month.

"Normally if you lose a golf ball you're penalized two strokes," Evans said. "Well, what do you do when a fox takes your ball?"

The ruling, from club owner Jack Stallings: A fresh ball may be placed where the old one disappeared.

Evans, like other golfers, is amused but puzzled.

"Foxes do eat eggs," he said, "but he's got to know by now these are not edible."

Levees hold in KC; mood still grim

The Associated Press

PRAIRIE du ROCHER, Ill. — Kansas City withstood a twin onslaught from the surging Missouri and Kansas rivers, but people there and in other Midwest communities under siege can only wonder how long the levees will hold.

With swollen rivers pressing for weeks against levees built to withstand only temporary strains, residents across six states say another disastrous break is inevitable. The question is whether it will strike a big city like Kansas City or St. Louis or a small one like this hamlet near the Mississippi River.

"There's just one guy who knows when it's going to happen, and he ain't talking," said C.E. "Buck" Stirnman, police chief of rural Ellisgrove, working on loan to Prairie du Rocher.

As he spoke Tuesday, 40 volunteers labored in 97-degree heat and punishing humidity to build a sandbag-banked lake to equalize the pressure on a porous levee. If the dike gives way, 27,000 farm acres could be flooded and hundreds of homes could be lost.

The story was the same in other river towns. In New Canton, Ill., volunteers and National Guardsmen reinforced the southern portion of a levee after the northern section blew out Sunday, flooding 44,000 farm acres and forcing 2,000 people from their homes.

The sandbagging was tiresome and, in some cases, dangerous. In Prairie du Rocher, officials took down the names of volunteers in case of a tragedy so that rescuers would know who was out there.

The forecast gave reason for hope.

Roger Wellman, a grain-elevator employee in Hull, Ill., stands on the roof of the scale house to get a perspective on the flooding Tuesday. Hull is under water from the Mississippi River that broke through the Sny Island levee.

Give it a try

Republican leaders in Congress have asked President Bill Clinton to call a budget summit to explain and discuss his spending and budget cuts.

The idea of a summit between the two parties to iron out differences is not a bad one and one Clinton should give serious consideration.

Clinton's spokeswoman has said because of partisanship in Congress, a summit probably won't be considered.

Partisan politics has always been around in American politics. It is something every new president needs to learn to work around.

A summit of this nature would give Clinton an opportunity to work Congress around to his way of thinking. This is something the most effective presidents have been able to do.

Partisan politics or not, give a summit a chance, especially if the bill is worth passing.

Volunteer gets rewarded

It seems like the "meanest cat on four paws" might be mellowing just a little bit.

I had to leave Big Spring for several days to attend the West Texas Press Association Conference. It was a good conference, picked up a little more knowledge and an award for Patrick Driscoll - a second place in news writing for his coverage of the 9-1-1 problems last year.

So, that was good. I didn't worry overly much about having left the monster cat more than two days - someone had volunteered to take care of him. Volunteers to watch over this cat are few and far between.

Actually, they are non-existent. One time is enough for most people, who are not masochist. Who really wants to deal with a hissing, growling, spitting ball of fur?

No one! So I was surprised when Debbie volunteered to watch the monster again.

The first time should have been enough. She did the feeding but Pippin allowed her husband to do the petting.

Sometimes I just give up on understanding this cat. He usually can't stand the sight of any male of the human or feline species.

So what does this have to do with mellowing?

Maybe it is not mellowing exactly but a growing accustomed to a face?

Yeah, that's right. The monster cat allowed himself to be petted by another person. And, this time it was the person who was feeding him while I was gone.

Hey, cats can change or else it is just a miracle. Or that was his way of saying thanks for taking care of me. Usually, he forgets to say thank you no matter how hard I try to train him.

DD Turner

Not that he was the nicest cat about it. A couple of strokes, growling all the while. But, it was a caress along his silky fur, which he seems to enjoy.

Actually, given his propensity for being a nasty cat, I am lucky he hasn't been worse to kind and gentle people stopping by to feed his body.

I put up with him, but then he has been around me for 11 years. That is many a long year for a little furry being to be around one of the human kind.

Personally, I hope he continues to mellow in his old age. He is a beautiful cat, it would be nice if he finally got the personality to go with the nice body.

But, I know the transformation from "meanest cat on four paws" to nice kitty won't be complete. The more he gets to know people, the better he reacts with them.

Reacting with them, in Pippin's mind, is staying in the same room, watching them constantly and never turning his back on them.

Which is ok. It is better than seeing a flying blur of black high tailing it out of the room as soon as someone new says hi.

Symphony needs your helping hand

Editor:

On behalf of the Board of Directors of the Big Spring Symphony Association, I want to inform the citizens of Big Spring that we sincerely regret not being able to present a July 4 symphony in the Comanche Trail Amphitheatre this year. This decision was not an easy one, nor was it made in haste. The Symphony Association has been pleased to offer a free concert to the public for the past two years. Although the concert is free to the public, it is by no means "free."

The total cost each year was near $12,000. No orchestra can afford to give free concerts without some sacrifice somewhere. Since the cost of this concert is absorbed into our annual budget, we chose not to present the concert and thereby avoid an increase in ticket prices and advertising costs for our regular symphony patrons. Through local contributions and foundation support, we hope to be able to present free concerts in the future. Our Big Spring Symphony is for everyone, and we welcome your financial contributions. If you have not previously donated to the symphony and would like to, you may send your tax deductible contribution to Symphony! Box 682, Big Spring, TX 79720. We are proud of the history and reputation of our Big Spring Symphony, and we look forward to being a viable part of Big Spring's future. SUZANNE HANEY Public Relations, Chairman Big Spring Symphony Association involved. Call, write, pester your council member to be active in your district and your neighborhoods. Organize clean ups of vacant lots, dilapidated houses and buildings, and junk cars. The ordinances are public record and can be found in the Howard County library. Please help! It will take all of us working together for a better, cleaner Big Spring. We can do it! Mandela: Another politician

I liked Nelson Mandela a lot better the first time he came to Atlanta. He had just gotten out of a South African prison after 30 years. He was a martyr. A freedom fighter. He stood so tall. He personified dignity.

All those years as a political prisoner, but he stood up there, still with the strength and courage to say what he thought was the right and true thing to say.

He spoke to and mingled with the masses, and they turned out in masses to see him, hear him, touch him, and adore him.

Nelson Mandela came back to Atlanta last week. He arrived on a corporate jet that belongs to Coca-Cola. The company he used to criticize.

He stayed at the Ritz. He wanted money.

Nelson Mandela is running for president of South Africa, in that nation's first free election which, of course, is a misnomer. There is nothing free about an election, which is why Nelson Mandela was looking for money. It hurts me to say it. Nelson Mandela is now a politician.

He didn't deal with the masses this time. He schmoozed with the big boys, the mayor and the former mayor and the Rev. Joseph Lowery, professional black leader.

He went to fancy luncheons and asked for money. He even went to churches and asked for money.

This time, he didn't seem so tall, and there is nothing that will sap a man of his dignity like asking for money to put him into political office. Nelson Mandela, this time, was just another politician.

Maybe if it hadn't been for the corporate jet. Maybe if it hadn't been for the Ritz. Maybe if he'd flown in on Delta coach and got himself a nice room at a Holiday Inn somewhere, I would have felt differently.

And I supposed some of this is because of the actions of so many politicians in this country. I'm just naturally suspicious of anybody riding around in corporate jets, staying in the fancy hotels, and asking for political handouts so he or she can help his or her oppressed constituents.

And why is it that somebody entering politics seems to take such a short time to learn how to summon such perks and work the fundraising trail?

It takes years to learn to become a doctor. You can't learn brick masonry overnight, either. And how many golf balls did Jack Nicklaus have to hit before he could win all those tournaments and all that money?

But somebody enters politics and he or she seems to know immediately how to wheel, deal, and find the best $250 haircut in Beverly Hills.

There was something else I didn't like about Nelson Mandela this time. I didn't like what he said about allowing the minority whites in South Africa, once they're out of power, to have their own territory.

I heard Nelson Mandela say on television they might also be allowed to be in control of their own school and transportation systems.

Whoop-de-doo.

Isn't this a lot like the old comment, "Why don't we just give 'em Utah and Wyoming, and forget about 'em."

I want to be fair here, however, so after what I've said about Nelson Mandela, allow me also to say I liked Ollie North a lot better, too, when he wasn't running for whatever he is running for or may run for in the future, and showing up on my television preaching from somebody's pulpit.

I wish Nelson Mandela the best. I really do. And there may even be an argument that, because of what he had to endure and because of apartheid, he deserves a few perks—like a jet and the Ritz.

And he is not a young man. Still, I had more respect for him before he became a politician, which reminds me of the time I asked a man who had decided to enter politics and risk everybody disliking him, why he would do such a thing.

"Hell," he said, "I was already a lawyer."

House Speaker Foley's 'hot issues'

Scripps Howard News Service

Given the human instinct to curry favor with the powerful, both houses of Congress restrict the gifts their members may accept. No single source, for example, may cross the palm of a representative with presents worth more than $250 in a single year.

Even from bona fide personal friends, lavish gifts require an exemption from the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct. Such constraints are intended to seal off avenues for corruption.

Against that background, it is dreary to learn of an unusual financial arrangement supplementing the income of House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wa.. First reported by the Capitol Hill newspaper Roll Call, this fabulous deal brought the speaker about $100,000 in the last four years.

Foley, we hasten to state, has reported this income in detail on disclosure forms. He insists that his exceptionally lucrative quick-turn-around investments merely reflect the skill of his broker, a high-school friend.

Those learned in the ways of Wall Street, however, offer another perspective. The virtually risk-free transactions undertaken on Foley's behalf (he made money on a remarkable 40 out of 42 trades since 1989) are rarely available to small investors like the speaker. Normally these highly sought-after "initial public offerings" or IPOs go to big clients who bring in commissions and referrals.

Foley's broker, Peter de Roeth, says he steers "hot issue" IPOs to the speaker's account out of simple good will and without consultation. Foley says de Roeth has never asked him for a favor.

One wonders, though, how de Roeth comes by such a steady supply of hot issues. Do the companies offering IPOs know that Foley will benefit? If they do, when the day comes that they want access to a leading legislator, the conduit will be obvious: the de Roeth-Foley lifelong friendship sweetened with cash.

Perhaps the speaker, who is respected for his fairness, believes his investments are uncommonly lucky — not that he gets special treatment because of his power. That isn't how it looks.

The Committee on Standards should take up the matter and tighten its rules to prohibit stock deals unavailable to private citizens. Whatever the truth of Foley's case, such deals have been used to buy politicians before.

Enough of the amateur ACTS

Scripps Howard News Service

In a few days, NASA will throw a $600 million party, some 15 years in the planning, more than 22,000 miles up in space. Alas, none of the "better people" are attending.

Indeed, all the big names in satellite communications — Hughes, TRW, Loral — are sending their regrets, even though NASA is charging no admission to its Advanced Communications Technology Satellite. Back in the 1970s, government planners believed that ACTS would allow U.S. firms to test space-relayed communications in the far virgin ranges of the electromagnetic spectrum, the place where radio waves bounce tens of billions of times a second. Breakthroughs here, it was reasoned, would give American companies a big edge in a gold-mine technology.

Oops. While ACTS plodded through the bureaucratic process, nimbler forces were at work. Firms like A.T.&T. and TRW independently looked at ultra-high-band transmissions — and found them not worth pursuing. (For one thing, a rain cloud knocks the bejabbbers out of a 20-gigahertz signal.) Japan and Europe launched their own versions of ACTS, coming up empty-handed. But, most important, fiber-optics technology arose from private capital to handle advanced communications needs, rendering ACTS a dinosaur unwatched.

No wonder NASA can hardly give away lab space on its 47-foot-tall craft. When Discovery soon launches ACTS into orbit, all of its experiments will be sponsored by academicians, other federal agencies, and a few small companies that evidently want to jazz up their annual reports with a little space-flight glamour.

ACTS provides a cautionary tale to those who would invest

Russian lawmakers try reversing policy

MOSCOW (AP) — Hard-line lawmakers sought today to cancel the Central Bank's controversial decision to invalidate billions of old rubles, but the bank chairman insisted only he had the authority to reverse course.

Chairman Viktor Gerashchenko told the ITAR-Tass news agency he would meet with legislative leaders later in the day to discuss the currency change, which the bank said was aimed at slowing inflation.

The Supreme Soviet legislature oversees the Central Bank, but Gerashchenko and Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin both said the ultimate decision was up to the bank.

The Central Bank decision, announced Saturday, provoked a nationwide currency panic and provided ammunition to President Boris Yeltsin's critics, who have accused him of evading responsibility for the fiasco.

The new policy stunned Russians out of their political apathy, but it remained unclear whether they would blame Yeltsin — and if so, whether it would threaten his free-market reforms.

The order struck hardest at ordinary people who are paid in cash and make most of their purchases in cash. Many rushed to spend their old bank notes before stores stopped accepting them Monday, and long lines have formed at banks throughout Russia as people tried to trade in old rubles.

Central Bank and Cabinet officials have said the decision to revoke bills printed before 1993 was aimed at fighting inflation and mopping up billions of old rubles outside Russia's control in other former Soviet republics.

Explosions rock Milan and Rome

ROME (AP) — People cried out in panic as bombs ripped through Rome's ancient center, just minutes after an explosion killed five people in Milan. Dozens were injured in the attacks.

There was no immediate indication who may have carried out Tuesday night's attacks. Officials said they were an attempt to sow panic on the heels of two bombings in May, including one that damaged the Uffizi art museum in Florence.

The two explosions in Rome, just before midnight, heavily damaged two magnificent churches, one from the 6th century and the other the pope's seat as bishop of Rome. Twenty-four people were hospitalized.

Italian news agencies said extra policemen were posted this morning at the edge of Vatican City. Pope John Paul II returned from Castel Gandolfo, his summer retreat south of Rome, for his general audience and planned to go immediately afterward to St. John Lateran church to view the damage, the Vatican said.

The Milan explosion went off about 11:15 p.m. (5:15 p.m. EDT) on the Piazza Scavour, about a half-mile from La Scala opera house in front of a modern art gallery.

Three firefighters, a policeman and a man sleeping in a nearby park were killed. At least seven other people were hurt, none seriously. Windows at the gallery were broken but no damage to art works was reported.

The ANSA news agency reported early today that a caller claimed responsibility for the Milan blast on behalf of the November 17 Armed Phalange Group. But authorities have given little credence to claims by callers using that name in previous bombings.

Bosnian Serbs say talks going in right direction

GENEVA (AP) — Bosnian Serbs hoping to translate their battlefield gains into political reality say talks on their plan to divide Bosnia along ethnic lines are headed in the right direction.

The negotiations, which began Tuesday, continued today with Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic sitting down with Croat leaders. That session was to be followed by one with top Serbs before all the parties meet together.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic told The Associated Press today that he was optimistic after Tuesday's opening round, in which he talked face-to-face with Izetbegovic for the first time since the war began 16 months ago.

Israeli army soldiers hold their ears while a 155mm self-propelled howitzer fires at a Hezbollah target in southern Lebanon Tuesday. Katyusha rocket attacks by Hezbollah guerrillas along Israel's northern border continue as Israel bombards suspected Hezbollah and radical Palestinian strongholds in Lebanon from sea, air and ground.

Israel attacks Lebanese villages for a fourth day

The Associated Press

SIDON, Lebanon — Thousands of Lebanese fled the southern ports of Sidon and Tyre today after Israeli gunboats opened fire and further assaults were threatened.

At least 77 people, most of them Lebanese, have been killed and more than 403 have been wounded since Israeli jets, helicopters, gunboats and howitzers began striking at suspected guerrilla bases across Lebanon on Sunday.

Israel's offensive, its biggest operation since the 1982 invasion of Lebanon, was in retaliation for an escalation in guerrilla attacks on Israeli troops in the Jewish state's "security zone" in southern Lebanon.

Guerrilla attacks have continued since Sunday. The violence comes as the United States tries to keep Middle East peace talks on track.

Four Israeli missile boats opened fire this morning on Sidon, Lebanon's third largest city, where the population of 300,000 has been swollen by refugees.

Some of the refugees frantically packed up again and streamed in car convoys toward Beirut. Panicked families crowded into cars, trucks and buses turned Lebanon's coastal highway into a four-lane traffic jam.

"I can't take it any more," said Mansour Mandour as he prepared to leave Sidon. The 80-year-old man had fled the village of Jibsheet to the east and said the town of 5,000 was now nearly abandoned.

In Israel, radio monitor Micki Gurdus quoted the Voice of the South as saying Israeli troops have taken a break to allow the evacuation.

Voice of the South, which is operated by an Israeli-backed militia, ordered residents of the southern-most port of Tyre to leave by 9:30 a.m. (2:30 a.m. EDT) or "be subjected to Israeli fire." Tyre is home to some 150,000 people.

U.N. officials said residents of Tyre began fleeing without stopping to pack food, clothes or bedding.

When the deadline expired, Israeli jets and helicopter gunships began pounding the Rashadiyah refugee camp on Tyre's northeastern edge and 175mm howitzers opened up on nearby villages.

One missile hit a three-story building in the village of Qleileh where some 20 tenants were sheltering in the basement. U.N. officials said two people died and 18 were pulled from the rubble with serious injuries.

Starting before dawn Israeli jets bombed the southern towns of Nabatiyeh and Mashgara and the hills of the nearby Apple Province, Lebanese radios reported.

Shells rained overnight on more than a dozen villages, they said.

Israeli officials have said the plan is to drive civilians to Beirut, where their presence as refugees would put pressure on the Lebanese government to either rein in the guerrillas or call on Syria to do so. This would also enable Israel to target guerrillas without causing a lot of civilian casualties.

The attacks "will force (the) population there to express its views, whether by mouth or foot, to the Lebanese government and its overseers," Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said.

Israel's Air Force commander, Gen. Herzl Bodinger, said at a news conference Tuesday: "The idea was to create the situation where as a result of fire near them, civilians would realize it was worth their while to evacuate these areas."

Israel wants Lebanon and Syria, which has 40,000 soldiers in Lebanon, to rein in the guerrillas. The militia fighters have been allowed to continue operating against the security zone because the Arab states consider it an occupation.

Israel carved out the 440-square-mile zone in 1985 to protect its northern border from infiltration. On Tuesday, some families huddled in their homes in south Lebanon while hundreds of others fled north.

More than 335,000 Lebanese have been displaced, the United Nations said Tuesday.

The guerrillas have responded to the Israeli bombardment with Katyusha rockets against the security zone and northern Israel. Reports from Jerusalem said that four landed in northern Israel this morning but caused no injuries or damage.

Two Israelis have been killed and at least 26 wounded in Katyusha barrages since Sunday.

The earlier barrages had forced some 150,000 Israelis into bomb shelters. Some moved to safer areas.

Israel launched the offensive in retaliation for the deaths of seven Israeli soldiers in the security zone starting July 8. An eighth soldier was killed in an ambush Monday.

There are fears that the violence could undercut the U.S.-backed peace process, which began in Madrid, Spain, in October 1991.

Drug abuse seminar scheduled

By GARY SHANKS
Staff Writer

Understanding the fundamental, biological causes of chemical dependency is the basis of an upcoming workshop, sponsored by Big Spring care providers.

The Pharmacology of Chemical Dependency and Dually Diagnosed Disorders is an all-day seminar to keep area care givers up-to-date on the latest research into chemical dependency. The course also provides continuing education credit hours, necessary for maintaining state licenses.

The course is scheduled for Aug. 30 at the Big Spring State Hospital's Allred Building and later at the East Room of the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Presenting the seminar are William H. Riffe and John Huntsberger, both of Austin.

Riffe is a professor of pharmacology and director of the Learning Resources Center of UT's College of Pharmacy. His research has concentrated in the areas of teaching and presentation of information.

Huntsberger is an associate professor at UT's Science Education Center. He also has researched areas of teaching and information retention.

The seminar is open to many professions, from doctors, pharmacists and nurses to adult probation officers, Watkins said.

The day will be divided into three workshops. Workshop I begins at 9 a.m. at the Allred Building and is entitled, Basic Science Principles for Understanding Addiction; Neurotransmitters, Receptors and Sites of Action. It continues until noon.

Workshop II begins at 1:30 at the Allred Building and is entitled, Pharmacotherapies of Addiction: Treatment of Dually-Diagnosed Disorders — Theory vs. Practicality. It continues until 4:30.

Workshop III begins at 7 p.m. in the East Room of the coliseum and is entitled, New Developments in Overcoming Problems of Addiction and Mental Illness. It continues until 8:30.

If all programs are attended, a professional can receive either six or 7 1/2 continuing education credit hours, depending on the kind of professional license they hold, according to Watkins.

City's preliminary budget mixed bag

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Preliminary city budget figures for fiscal 1993-94 indicate expenditures may drop about six percent while garbage rates are likely to increase.

A garbage rate increase is needed to pay for federal landfill mandates. City Manager Lanny Lambert said in recent months that garbage bills could be as much as double. Property taxes are going up seven or eight cents per $100 valuation to pay for the $1.1 million in street bonds approved by voters in October. Otherwise, no other tax increases are planned.

The budget, discussed at a Big Spring City Council budget workshop Tuesday, may include two new landfill employees, three new firemen, a new $130,000 fire truck, five new police cars, a new $150,000 computer system and 500 dumpsters. A pay raise for department heads was discussed but no agreement was reached. Non-management employees received a five percent raise in May.

Figures outlined at the workshop show projected expenditures totaling $12.9 million, down $755,812 from projected spending this year. Those figures do not include costs and revenues involving the city's private prison.

"It's the same as last year. I don't think there's any difference," Lambert said. He plans to finalize a recommendation in two weeks.

A raise in garbage fees is needed to bring in $241,000 to pay for two new landfill employees, scales to measure incoming garbage, methane gas monitoring and daily cover of garbage. The changes are mandated by federal law.

"We'll bring you a plan," Lambert told the council.

Council members criticized the federal mandates. "I just don't think they can continue to put this kind of load on the citizens," said Councilman Ladd Smith.

Lambert said he may recommend most of what department heads asked for in capital outlays. His suggested list so far totals $223,000.

It includes: $20,000 for annual payment on a fire truck, $20,000 for fire department building repairs and equipment and $74,000 for three new firefighters to be paid out of surplus airport funds;

Other requests include $80,000 for five police cars; $20,000 for annual payment on a computer system and $5,000 for personal computer and other items for the finance department; a $3,000 for personal computer and printer in the personnel department; $20,000 for streets; $20,000 in golf course improvements; $50,000 for 500 trash dumpsters; new utility trucks; $15,000 for a machine to lift caskets at the cemetery.

In addition, Lambert asked that $300,000 be placed in contingency for emergencies and other unknown needs. One unknown was realized at the workshop, an estimated 10 percent increase in electric rates. Lambert predicts at least part of a 15 percent increase TU Electric is seeking will be granted.

The case will be presented to a grand jury on Aug. 11, according to LULAC officials.

District Attorney Al Schorre was not available for comment Tuesday.

Gonzales is one of three men who have died from positional asphyxia in Texas in eight months. All had been restrained by hog-tying.

The Gonzales family has obtained an attorney and plans to file a lawsuit, Rosales said.

MIDLAND - League of United Latin American Citizens waited for a response from the United States and Texas Attorney Generals' offices to continue their probe of the death of a 41-year-old Stanton man who died four days after collapsing July 5 in the Midland County Detention Center.

However, he said, help from citizens in periodic organized cleanups is sadly lacking. A community cleanup Saturday was attended by less than half a dozen people, he said, including members of his family.

"We intend to do a better job of code enforcement, junked vehicles and street maintenance," said City Manager Lanny Lambert. "But the first step is recognition by those living in the neighborhoods."

Councilman Chuck Cawthon, who owns a business in Jones Valley on the Westside, agrees the neighborhood is in bad shape and needs improving but said that a decade ago it was "100 times worse."

City Councilman Mark Shedy, referring to a report given at the same meeting by delinquent tax attorney Drew Mouton, said, "There is action being taken on those properties."

Mouton reported two properties foreclosed and taken over by new owners in recent years. Those two properties are among as many as 600 citywide in which owed taxes and charges are worth more than the property, making it difficult to collect. A total up to $300,000 in back taxes on such properties, double or triple that with penalties and interest, is owed to the city and other taxing entities.

A plan to systematically foreclose on those properties will be presented by next year, Mouton said. The city and other taxing entities could end up owning some of those properties.

There are some 900 other delinquent accounts, but they appear collectible, Mouton said. That's down from about 5,000 a decade ago due to collection efforts. Collectible delinquent accounts, behind because of an area economic crash in the 1980s fueled by dropping oil prices, may be caught up in four or five years.

This year about three to four percent of owed taxes were not paid, about $534,000, while collections within the last year on past delinquent accounts came to $634,000. The biggest unpaid account is for machinery previously thought to be owned by IBI Industries but apparently owned by a Caribbean company, on which up to $60,000 is owed for two years.

Cora L. Autry, 85, died Tuesday. Services are pending.

"We haven't received a response from the honorable (U.S. Attorney General) Janet Reno or (Texas Attorney General) Dan Morales," said LULAC state director Rosa Rosales. "We are in the process of speaking to the (National Association for the Advancement of Colored People)."

"Peaceful protest rally details are not finalized and this is not the end of our investigation."

Spokespersons from the attorneys general offices were not available for comment Tuesday.

LULAC state and regional officials meet with Tomas Gonzales' family two weeks after his death. Rosales, speaking on the behalf of the family and LULAC officials, said they "strongly believe" Gonzales' civil rights were violated.

Gonzales went to jail July 2, continuing to serve a first-offense DWI sentence on weekends. He was convicted in January. His death is attributed to a combination of positional asphyxia and alcohol withdrawal.

After the death, the Texas Rangers and the FBI conducted on investigations. Midland County Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine ruled the death as accidental.

Concluding its initial investigation, Texas Ranger Capt. Gene Powell presented a report to the Midland County District Attorney's office. Earlier,

Farewell and good luck

Naomi Hunt leaves Howard County for El Paso

Living today

By CONNIE SWINNEY
Staff Writer

Howard County Extension Agent, Naomi Hunt, one of the most sought after information specialists in the county, bids farewell to the community Thursday.

A day-long reception is scheduled at the Howard County Courthouse.

For 11 years, she has worked with area schools, civic organizations, media groups, the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce and human service groups, offering her expertise in home economics.

"Basically, I've been a teacher for groups such as those. It's informal education," she said. "The teaching I've done with them runs the whole gamut of all the things a person does to run a household."

"That's what 'extension' is all about," she added. "That person extends information. Agents teach representatives of each club, and they take the information or skills to others."

Hunt accepted a position in El Paso as county extension agent for home economics.

During her tenure, Hunt fostered relationships among groups by providing information and teaching tools.

One example is a course on nutrition Hunt taught twice a week since 1989 to indigent health care recipients who are diabetics.

"We are friends, so it's difficult to leave them," she said. "There was lots of one-on-ones, demonstrations, hands on activities."

"Some changes have happened in their lives. With diet and care of their diabetes, they are preventing or postponing the possibility of kidney dialysis," she added. "In turn, the county is saving money."

Another group with which Hunt worked closely was the Howard County Extension Homemakers.

"I'm going to miss their friendship. I acted as a teacher, consultant, adviser to them," she said. "They have grown in leadership and expanded their subject matter; we've discussed all aspects of what a person needs to know to run a household."

Hunt recalls one member whose life was changed because of the Homemakers.

"One woman said in all the things she's learned, she feels she's got an equivalent of a liberal arts degree," Hunt said. "She feels she has become a specialist in that area, and she's started her own business."

She said her work with the Home Economic Program Area Committee kept her in tune with the needs of the community.

"We looked at the needs or issues Howard County residents will be facing. I monitored census data like what's going on in Howard County," she said. "We understood that we couldn't just pick issues we deemed important."

"We identified issues where the community exhibited the most need," she added.

Hunt's speciality, management consumer science, was reflected in her work with area schools and the 4-H Program.

"I've seen a generation of 4-Hers grow up," she said. "I've seen shy little kids, who couldn't talk, think on their feet and become experts in their areas and blossom."

From foods, wild life and photography in 4-H to "Sheep, Cattle and Cotton in Howard County" in area schools, Hunt co-developed and/or administered enriching programs.

"A lot of kids learned a lot of things about those topics," she said. "We train teachers and provide resources, so that teacher can take that and build on it."

"If I can train someone, they can train someone else and go farther with it," she added. "I'm a resource."

She disseminated information in the media on areas including nutrition, diabetes, adult health care and child abuse.

Born in Missouri, Hunt received her bachelor's from Colorado State University and her master's from Texas Tech University. She is scheduled to receive her doctorate from Tech in December.

'Personal shoppers,' latest fad sweeping stores

Scripps Howard News Service

Embassy personnel, visitors to the United States from the Middle East and working women have something in common: They often use "personal shoppers."

Personal shoppers are employed by many of the nation's department stores to help cater to valued customers. Usually, the helpers have worked in sales and often have built up their own clientele.

"Personal shoppers are really an extension of our sales force," says Cheryl Engstrom, head of corporate media relations at Nordstrom. They are employed in the "Personal Touch" departments of each of the Seattle chain's 52 stores.

Bonnie McLaughlin, the personal shopper at Hecht's, in Washington, D.C., says most of her clients are "women who need professional clothes, Saudi and Iranian men who come in about twice a year to buy clothes for their wives and daughters, and embassy officials."

Like other personal shoppers, McLaughlin, who helps her clients select complete wardrobes, keeps profiles that include descriptions of their height and weight, hair and eye color, age, size and brand preferences.

"We're not here to change their style, just to enhance what they have," she says.

Patty Cumming, spokeswoman for Bloomingdale's, says many customers do their shopping by phone.

"We have a lot of women who don't come in," she says. "Some are simply wealthy and others are working and just don't have time to shop." People do not have to be wealthy, however, to have a personal shopper. "There's a balance between the woman who buys three or four Chanel dresses every season for about $15,000 and the working woman who spends between $2,000 and $4,000 a year on her wardrobe," Cumming says.

Donna Robinson, manager of "Personal Touch" at Nordstrom's store in suburban Washington says she deals with customers who spend from a couple of hundred to a couple of thousand dollars a season.

"Our customers run the gamut — from secretaries to company presidents," she says. "Everybody is value conscious. Even those who have lots of money don't just drop it."

Robinson says that while a sales person on the floor might deal with 20 or 25 customers a day, a personal shopper "might work with two customers in a day."

The personal shopper works "in depth" with a customer, she says, so that "customers will be completely accessorized when they leave."

Peachy-keen eats

The peach is the third most popular fruit in the United States (the first is apple, the second, banana). It is a member of the prunus genus, as are nectarines, apricots, plums, cherries and almonds. Peaches were once called Persian apples. The peach tree is native to China where it has been used for thousands of years for its fruit and decorative flowers. The Chinese consider the peach a symbol of long life and paint peach blossoms on porcelain as birthday gifts to express the wish for many happy years.

The Spaniards brought the fruit to the New World and they were grown in Mexico in the late 1500's. The French planted trees in Louisiana while the English settlers grew them in the North.

It will not be long before fresh-off-the-tree ripe, juicy peaches will be inundating us and create the need to find interesting ways to prepare and serve.

Another of summer's delightful experiences, this luscious fruit is a good source of potassium, vitamins A & C, and naturally low in calories which also makes it a perfect snack.

There are many types of peaches, but basically the two main categories are freestone and cling. Both can be used interchangeably in most recipes.

Peaches make a quick salad when sliced and served over cottage cheese, or cut in half, placed on lettuce leaves, and topped with cottage cheese.

For a quick, easy dessert mix sliced peaches with blueberries, place in pretty glass stemware and top with milk or a dollop of whipped topping. What could be easier?

SCRUMPTIOUS PEACH PIE

- 1 baked 9-inch pastry shell
- 1 envelope plus 1 teaspoon unflavored gelatin
- 1/2 cup cold water
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 (12-ounce) can peach nectar
- 1 tsp. lemon juice
- 4 large fresh peaches, peeled and sliced
- 1 (8-oz.) whipped topping

Dissolve gelatin in cold water and bring to boil, stirring constantly. Remove from heat; stir in sugar and peach nectar. Chill until thickened.

Coat peaches with lemon juice; place in pastry shell. Pour gelatin mixture over peaches; chill until firm. Just before serving, top with whipped topping and garnish with additional peach slices. The beauty of this recipe is that, other than the baked pie shell, it requires no baking.

GEORGIA PEACH BREAD

- 3 cups peaches, peeled and sliced*
- 6 tbsp. sugar
- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 tsp. baking powder
- 1 tsp. soda
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1 tsp. cinnamon
- 1-1/2 cups sugar
- 1 stick butter or margarine, room temperature
- 2 eggs
- 1 tsp. vanilla
- 1 cup chopped pecans

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Grease and flour two 9x5x3-inch loaf pans. Place peaches in blender; add 6 tbsp. sugar and puree.* Combine flour, baking powder, soda, salt and cinnamon; sift. In mixing bowl, combine and cream sugar with butter. Stir in eggs and puree. Stir in flour mixture. Add vanilla and nuts; stir. Pour mixture into prepared loaf pans. Bake for 55 to 60 minutes. Cool 10 minutes in pan. Remove from pans to finish cooling. May be eaten immediately, stored in refrigerator or frozen.

*Mixture should yield about 2-1/4 cups puree.

EASY PEACH COBBLER

- 8 medium peaches, peeled and sliced
- 2 tbsp. flour
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 1 tsp. cinnamon
- 1/4 tsp. nutmeg
- 1 tsp. almond extract
- 2 tbsp. butter
- 1 package ready to bake sugar cookies, refrigerated type

Mix peaches, flour, sugar, cinnamon, nutmeg and almond extract together. Put into an 8 inch square baking dish; dot with butter. Slice cookies into 1/4 inch slices; place over peaches. Bake at 375 degrees for 45 minutes to 1 hour.

Cowboy shows off good side of rodeo

By DAVE HARGRAVE Sports Editor

Dane Driver is only 19, but he's already the best ambassador rodeo could have. Since he started in rodeo at age 7, he's won countless awards, but that's not what draws attention at first. Driver's politeness, his down-home friendliness, grabs new acquaintances immediately. This is a guy that calls his parents "sir" and "ma'am," something most sons don't do at any age. He calls a reporter he's never met "sir." Ask people who know him, and they'll tell you he treats his horses with the same respect.

When asked about his courteous manner as he drove a reporter to his practice pen, Driver shrugs and smiles. "A lot of people just see the bad side of rodeo," he said. "We have to do what we can to emphasize the good side."

Driver is on the brink of an all-around championship in the American Junior Rodeo Association, which makes its annual stop in Big Spring tonight through Saturday. In his age group, he's second in the all-around, and he's winning the steer wrestling event. Driver will be on stage Friday in Big Spring's Rodeo Bowl, and a strong performance in front of the home folks could give him the all-around lead going into the AJRA finals, which start Monday in Sweetwater.

"Rodeo's been in my family from my great-grandfather on down. It's kind of a way of life, I don't know any better," Driver said. "It does get tiring, but when you love it you get used to it. It's a lot of miles, late-night driving, but I wouldn't trade it for anything. It's kind of an addiction."

The highlight of Driver's 12-year career is the two trips he made to the national high school rodeo championships ('89, '92) while he attended Forsan High School.

Driver's parents, Skipper and Wanda, were once in junior rodeo, so Driver always has someone nearby to talk rodeo. Driver values any advice he can get from his family, and he was fortunate to get help early in his career from Toots Mansfield, an eight-time world champion calf roper.

"Our long drives home gives my father and I plenty of time to talk about what I did right and what I did wrong," Driver said.

Skipper Driver said, "His mother and I taught him the basics, but he's done the major part of it on his own. In rodeo, you can show somebody how to do something, but everybody has their own style. No two people do the same thing alike."

Dedication is Driver's strongest asset, his father said. Driver spends six to eight hours a day in the practice pen. You can add intelligence to his asset list, said Mike Yeater, Driver's rodeo coach at Howard College.

"He really uses his head. He's a good performer, and he usually doesn't beat himself. Instead of trying to be fast, he makes sure he gets it done right. He lets the other people try to be fast and make the mistakes," Yeater said. "He takes care of business, in the classroom and in rodeo. You don't have to worry about him not being ready, mentally or physically."

Driver said he is excited about Friday night at the Rodeo Bowl. He knows what's at stake, and he's ready to put on a good show for Big Spring.

"You always want to do well in front of your home town, but you can't let the pressure get to you," he said. "I don't get really nervous, but I try to stay really focused on what I'm doing. After a run, if I think it's worth showing off a bit, I might. But I let the performance do the talking. That's what everybody comes to see."

Dykes: Too many players to go around

By The Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes has a formula to explain why it seems like some of the state's best high school football players go to college out of state.

"There's eight teams (in the Southwest Conference) and we each take about 25 players. That makes 200," Dykes said. "There's about 500 seniors playing football, so that means there's 300 that have to leave the state. They can't all stay — we don't have room for them."

Dykes spoke Tuesday at a gathering of Southwest Conference coaches. The news conference was part of the Texas High School Coaches Association's annual coaching school.

Later Tuesday, the state's best seniors of last season met in an all-star game at Texas Christian University's Amon G. Carter Stadium. The game ended in a 10-10 tie.

Thirty of the 70 players on the North and South rosters are remaining in the state to play for SWC schools, a ratio the coaches love.

Heart attack claims Lewis

By The Associated Press

WALTHAM, Mass. — Reggie Lewis, the Boston Celtics star who collapsed during a playoff game this season from a heart ailment, died Tuesday night when stricken while shooting baskets in a light workout.

The 27-year-old captain fell to the gym floor late Tuesday afternoon at the team's practice facility at Brandeis University. Local paramedics found him in "complete cardiac arrest." He was admitted in critical condition at Waltham-Weston Hospital at 5:41 p.m. and pronounced dead at 7:30 p.m.

"Reggie's infectious smile and joyous love of basketball were always evident to all of us who were fortunate to have seen him play," said Celtics president Red Auerbach, who is recovering from heart bypass surgery. "Those of us who knew him well knew a warm, kind, gentle and generous man."

At about 4 p.m., Lewis went to the Brandeis gym for a pickup game with a dozen local college players. Deo Djossou, a senior on Northeastern's basketball team, said Lewis had been taken from Brandeis when the players arrived. Amir Weiss, who was at the Brandeis gym, said Lewis was not doing anything too strenuous.

Confessions of a high school football junkie

Random thoughts while dreaming of halfback passes and suicide blitzes:

... The old Hank Williams Jr. blurb for ABC's Monday Night Football has been buzzing in my head the past few days.

"Are you ready for some football?" the musical question asks.

And the answer, at least as far as the Herald sports department goes, is a resounding, "Well, sorta."

My new friend, sports editor Dave Hargrave, is new to these parts, having just arrived from Indiana. As a Hoosier, he is probably an expert on high school basketball hysteria, but he is a comparable babe in the woods when it comes to West Texas high school football.

Boy, is he in for a treat.

I've been doing my best to prepare Dave for the inevitable, but then, there is really no way to prepare a neophyte for the madness (and magic, I must confess) of Friday nights in the autumn around here.

What could I possibly say to Dave that would give him a realistic idea about what he's getting into?

"Well, Dave, it's like this: If you combine a nuclear explosion with the Rose Parade, you'd have high school football in West Texas."

Yeah, that might do the trick. Football season around here is a unique mix of pageantry, elation, heartbreak, anger and almost any other emotion you might want to add.

In short, it's sort of like a soap opera in pads and helmets.

I don't say all this to make light of the sport. After all, I am from this area and I have been just as guilty as the next West Texan when it comes to getting wrapped up in football season.

I still remember the first high school game I attended, way back (ha-ha) in 1963, when Big Spring traveled to Odessa to take on the Permian Panthers.

Back then, Permian had yet to establish its dynasty, and Mojo was nowhere to be found. The Steers, meanwhile, were at or near the front in the district race. John Kennedy was still president and Vietnam had yet to become a part of our vocabulary.

All of this was of no consequence to yours truly. All I knew was that my brother was in the Big Spring band. Halftime was what drew the Reagan family to the game.

My attitude began to change, however, as soon as I walked into old W.T. Barrett stadium. It was a cool night, not exactly cold but definitely on the crisp side — my favorite type of weather.

While I definitely rooted for Big Spring, I also recall being smitten by the twirler for Permian's band, who I thought was just about the loveliest girl I had ever seen.

Yes, I was shallow even then.

Anyway, the game that night was just great, if you happen to be a Big Spring fan. After Permian grabbed the lead late in the game, Albert Fierro led the Steers down the field before throwing the game-winning pass to Charlie West.

The Steers had won the game, one of the last they would ever take from Permian, and a certain 9-year-old became hooked on high school football.

Through the years, the Steers have alternately thrilled and depressed me. After the mid-'60s, the team gradually became the whipping boys of the district and seemed to find a permanent home at the bottom of the standings.

But, no matter where I lived in those years, I always found myself buying a Saturday paper and looking through the sports agate page to see how Big Spring did the night before.

Once a Steer fan, always a Steer fan.

Anyway, Dave will read this and undoubtedly wonder what the heck is so darned special about Friday night football.

Some things you have to learn by yourself, I guess.

Bass blast powers Astros past Cincy

By The Associated Press

Kevin Bass' three-run homer off Tom Browning powered Houston past Cincinnati, 6-5, at the Astrodome Tuesday night. Browning (7-6) pitched only 2 1-3 innings and allowed six runs and eight hits.

Winner Brian Williams (4-3) allowed five runs and seven hits in 5 2-3 innings. Doug Jones got the final three outs for his 21st save.

Braves 10

Rockies 5

Fred McGriff and the Atlanta Braves are doing their very best to keep up with the San Francisco Giants in the NL West.

McGriff hit two home runs, including an inside-the-park shot, and drove in four runs as the Braves beat the Colorado Rockies Tuesday night at Mile High Stadium. The Braves are 9-0 against the Rockies this season, averaging 8.1 runs a game.

Since being acquired from San Diego, McGriff has six homers in 35 at-bats and the Braves have won seven of eight. Atlanta, despite the streak, is eight games behind San Francisco in the NL West.

Giants 3

Dodgers 2

John Burkett became the NL's first 15-game winner with eight innings of three-hit ball in pitching San Francisco past Los Angeles at Candlestick Park. Burkett (15-4) held the Dodgers hitless for five innings.

Burkett gave up no walks and fanned six. Rod Beck pitched the ninth for his 29th save.

The Giants reached starter Kevin Gross (7-9) for three runs and eight hits in the first four innings, but twice left the bases loaded.

Phillies 10

Cardinals 7

John Kruk went 5-for-5 and drove in three runs as Philadelphia started its key series against St. Louis by beating the Cardinals at Veterans Stadium. The Phillies expanded their lead over the Cardinals to five games in the NL East.

Reliever Roger Mason (2-7) earned the victory with 2 2-3 innings. Mitch Williams got the last three outs for his 27th save.

St. Louis starter Joe Magrane (8-9) lasted just one-plus inning, allowing five hits and five runs.

Padres 8

Cubs 0

Andy Benes pitched a five-hitter and Tony Gwynn had five hits and drove in three runs, leading San Diego over Chicago at Wrigley Field. Benes and Gwynn are the only big stars left on the Padres after several cost-cutting trades this season.

It was the second shutout and fourth complete game of the season for Benes (11-7), who struck out eight and walked none.

Loser Mike Harkey (7-5) gave up five runs and 10 hits in three-plus innings.

Mets 4

Marlins 3

Jeff Kent's second home run of the game leading off the seventh inning lifted New York over Florida at Shea Stadium.

Dwight Gooden (10-10) pitched seven innings for the victory, giving up three runs and five hits.

Kent, who has 12 home runs, also hit a three-run shot in the fourth off loser Pat Rapp (1-3). Rapp pitched 7 2-3 innings, allowing four runs on six hits.

Expos 8

Pirates 6

Pinch-hitter Lou Frazier singled in the tiebreaking run in a two-run eighth inning off rookie Joel Johnston (0-1) as Montreal beat Pittsburgh at Three Rivers Stadium after blowing a 4-0 lead.

Tim Scott (3-1) got the victory with two scoreless innings of relief, and John Wetteland finished for his 22nd save in 26 opportunities.

One hit is all Rangers need in win

By The Associated Press

The Texas Rangers only got one hit Tuesday night, but they definitely made it count.

Texas' only hit was Rafael Palmeiro's home run in the seventh inning, which broke up Kevin Appier's no-hit bid and made Kenny Rogers (8-6) the winner. Texas won 1-0.

Appier (11-5), who struck out a career-high 11 in his third complete game, had retired 16 straight when Palmeiro hit a 1-0 pitch for his 21st homer.

Blue Jays 6

Orioles 5

It was billed as a clash of bitter AL East rivals with a simmering subplot hatched at the All-Star game.

First, the Mike Mussina-Cito Gaston feud died.

The Orioles' starter apologized for voluntarily warming up during the All-Star game, and the Toronto manager spent all day denying any bad blood existed.

Then, Toronto went out and secured a 6-5 victory on Pat Borders' hustling infield hit in the eighth inning.

The so-called Gaston-Mussina feud came about when the Toronto manager neglected to use Mussina in the All Star game at Camden Yards.

Baltimore fans took it as a slight, but it later became known that Mussina warmed up in the ninth inning without Gaston's approval.

Mariners 10

Twins 8

Ken Griffie Jr. extended his home

Texas Ranger starting pitcher Kenny Rogers fires a pitch last night in Kansas City. Despite getting just one hit, Texas defeated Kansas City 1-0.

run streak to seven games — one shy of the major-league record shared by Dale Long and Don Mattingly — with a 441-foot-grand slam, and Seattle held on after visiting Minnesota rallied from 7-0 and 8-3 deficits.

Griffie's fifth career slam highlighted a seven-run second, but it was Tino Martinez's sixth-inning single off George Tsamis (1-2) that won it for Rich DeLucia (3-5).

White Sox 7

Indians 4

Frank Thomas went 4-for-4 with two homers and five RBI, and Jack McDowell (16-6) became baseball's first 16-game winner as Chicago won its 13th in the last 18.

Thomas, 11-for-18 (.611) with four homers and nine RBI in his last five games, hit a solo homer off Jeff Mutis (2-4) in the sixth and a three-run shot an inning later to rally the White Sox from a 4-2 deficit.

Yankees 5

Tigers 2

Danny Tartabull's homer in New York's four-run second gave Jim Abbott all the support he needed to win at Detroit for the first time in four years.

Abbott (8-8) got help from Steve Farr, who pitched the ninth for his 21st save. Bill Gullickson (6-6) was the loser.

Brewers 3

Red Sox 2

Jaime Navarro snapped a five-game losing streak with his first win since June 16 and Robin Yount hit his 250th career homer for Milwaukee, which won its third straight for the second time this season.

Navarro (6-8) was hurt only by Mo Vaughn's 15th home run, a solo shot in the seventh. Danny Darwin (9-8) took the loss.

Angels 15

Athletics 8

Tim Salmon homered twice and drove in four runs and Chad Curtis had four hits and four RBIs as California ended its losing streak.

The Angels also got a three-run homer and three runs from Eduardo Perez.
