

HERE and THERE

By Joe
Quinn

I AM not certain as to the financial success of the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock which is now in progress but from the number of people that have been turned away at the rodeo gates it must be O. K. As for my part the whole thing is a huge success.

I took the trip as promised last week and saw everything that I possibly could see in the time that I had in Fort Worth, and it was well worth the trip.

J. M. North, editor of the Star-Telegram, and his co-hosts put the big pot in the little one. As guests of the Fort Worth newspapers and paper wholesalers, the Press of Texas was extended a royal reception. Beginning with a delightful luncheon on top of the Texas Hotel, transportation and passes into the Fat Stock Show ground and Rodeo, and tickets to Fort Worth's leading theaters, those who registered were accorded a full day of entertainment and amusement.

Since my return home I have learned to appreciate my visit to Fort Worth more so upon learning that a number of localities were unable to get tickets to the main show at the Southwestern Exposition and had to come home without getting to the rodeo. A complete early sell-out of advance tickets was responsible for their misfortune.

Even though my recent experience was the first of its kind for me that doesn't necessarily mean that my estimate of the 1934 Fat Stock Show is exaggerated. If I had seen it every year prior to this one I would still be just as highly elated.

What all of this means, dear readers, is that it's enough to look forward to with anticipation for 1935. My only advise would be that you get your tickets early and be assured of a real treat.

DAYTON BROWN SUSTAINS BROKEN ARM

Dayton Brown, son of Judge and Mrs. J. D. Brown Jr. sustained a broken arm on Monday of this week as he played in the yard at the family home.

Young Brown was taken to Waco where a specialist set the broken arm. He is doing as nicely as could be expected at present.

W. T. Caruth Enters Candidacy for Justice Of Peace Precinct One

To the voters of Precinct No. One: Due to solicitation by friends from various parts of the precinct and after due consideration it gives me the greatest pleasure to make formal announcement of my candidacy for the office of Justice of the Peace of Precinct One. I wish it to be understood at the outset that I hold no malice against anyone and shall positively refrain from mud slinging and characted abuse. I am not seeking entrance to this office through the demerits of someone else but am running on my own qualifications and the support of my friends and the many friends I hope to make during the campaign.

It shall be my purpose, if elected, to give you a business administration with efficiency and dispatch. I feel confident that I can measure up to the requirements of the office. My motto shall be a square deal to all and special privileges to none.

As a court I will see to it that all cases are tried upon their merits and upon the law and facts. I promise to both plaintiff and defendant a fair and impartial hearing as I have no friends to reward or enemies to punish.

Finally I promise to render courteous service to all and carry out the affairs of the office with zeal and fidelity.

My candidacy is subject to the action of the July Democratic Primary.

I earnestly solicit your vote and influence.

Very Respectfully,

W. T. Caruth

McDonald, Candidate For Governor Caller At News Office Wed.

Honorable C. C. McDonald of Wichita Falls, who is a candidate for Governor of Texas, was an affable caller at the News office Wednesday and in his pleasant and unassuming way presented his request for support.

Mr. McDonald was born on a farm in Fannin County and in his career has been a school teacher, a superintendent of schools, Secretary of State of Texas, Assistant Attorney General of Texas, a practicing attorney and as leader of the state forces in the fight for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Mr. McDonald is in the race on a platform of efficiency with economy, more strenuous laws to tax corporations, notes, bonds; a fair tax on depleted resources, tax on intangible assets; unemployment insurance, old age pensions, tax on labor saving machinery, submission and repeal of state prohibition and the Dean Law and a system of laws that will outlaw bootleggers, and saloons; better schools with cash salaries to teachers.

Two Are Injured When Truck and Sedan Car Collide

A Hubby-Reese Grocery van, driven by C. C. Burrage of Waco, and a two door Plymouth sedan driven by Dr. T. M. Hall collided at the intersection of Lutterloh and Saunders here last Tuesday afternoon at 2:30. Dr. Hall was driving west on Saunders and Burrage was driving north on Lutterloh.

Exact details are vague but it is supposed that Burrage swerved to the left to avoid a collision and that Dr. Hall swerved slightly to the right but the cars collided in a side-swipe. It is supposed that Burrage was thrown through the right door of the van when the automobiles collided and that the van struck the curb overturning and pinning Burrage beneath the wreckage. Both vehicles were seriously damaged.

Burrage was rushed to the Colgin Hospital at Waco in the Scott Ambulance. Dr. R. Bailey accompanied the injured man. Attendants at the hospital stated Thursday that Burrage's condition was unchanged. Burrage suffered a badly lacerated face, the loss of one eye, a crushed chest and it is believed that his back is broken.

Dr. T. M. Hall sustained a broken arm and severe bruises. He was taken to Waco Wednesday for medical attention.

Indications Growing More Promising for Oil in Ireland Area

By D. D. Grubb

IRELAND, Texas, Mar. 15.—(Spl)—T. K. O'neal, of Breckenridge, who has the contract to drill the prospective oil well at Ireland, states that the derrick which is now being built will be completed this week and all tools and machinery will be placed on the ground and that actual drilling will begin about Sunday, March 25.

O'neal hopes that by July 4 residents of this county will be celebrating the completion of a 10,000 barrel oil well and the opening of a Central Texas oil field, which has been anticipated for a long time.

RABBIDEER, MAY BE NAME OF NEW ANIMAL

If it had a name, or if a name should be given the newly discovered freak of nature, it might be called a "rabbideer". Such a mammal has never been seen alive and the only evidence at hand is a taxidermist's mount now on display in I. O. Scott's store window.

The odd looking mount appears to be a cross between a jack-rabbit and a deer. The head is a perfect rabbit's head yet it has horns—two beams with three points on each. It's hard to believe but it's there just the same.

Program Outlined for County Meet Here on Next Thr. Fri. and Sat.

The following is the program of the Coryell County Meet. Thursday evening playground ball and volley ball will be held at the Fair grounds. All Tennis contestants are to report at the High School tennis courts Thursday evening unless they have a conflict with playground ball or volley ball, if so report at High School tennis courts Friday morning. Friday all track and field events for both boys and girls will be held at the High School Athletic field. Saturday all basket ball games will be held at Fair ground. All Intellectual events will be held at the school buildings. Each teacher and contestant should study the program and learn when and where the different events will be held. By doing this they will make the meet more pleasant and agreeable. Failing to understand always brings confusion, events will be forfeited when contestants are not present according to the program.

Dr. A. G. Livingston of Hamilton Enters State Representative Race

Dr. A. G. Livingston of Hamilton has authorized the News to announce his candidacy for the office of State Representative from this district which is composed of Coryell and Hamilton counties.

Dr. Livingston recently resigned his place as County Chairman of the C. W. A. in Hamilton county and was suggested by Hamilton people as a prospective State Chairman of that work when Director Lawrence Westbrook resigned. His formal announcement will appear in a later issue of the News.

Coryell Farmers Net $223,000 in Crop Reduction

Following are some pertinent facts garnered from an interview with County Agent D. W. Sherrill.

The corn and hog reduction campaign will close tomorrow. The results of the campaign have been gratifying as there are 1,000 acres retired from corn production and a promised reduction of hog production by 1,100 head. This program will net Coryell county farmers about $23,000.00.

The wheat reduction campaign has re-opened and those who wish to sign on this program may contact the county agent.

All cotton option checks except eight have been received. Those holding option contract who wish to sell outright must ask for extension of time or the contract will be exercised and expense will be started. The initial cost will be forty cents per bale. The cotton reduction campaign resulted in a reduction of 35,000 acres in 1,700 contracts bringing about $200,000.00.

Those who have signed a cotton reduction contract on part of the land they own must get permission from the county committee to plant cotton on the uncontracted acres.

Those who still wish to sign a cotton reduction contract and can show good reasons for not having done so already may yet sign the contract at the county agent's office.

'round the square

By
The Snooper

Think I didn't get a surprise yesterday? Well, I did, when I ran into Hon. C. C. McDonald, gubernatorial candidate making it round the square renewing old acquaintances and making many new friends. Mrs. Minnie Battle gave me the big head when she stopped me to say that if the Semi-Weekly was ever discontinued she would not have anything more to do with me. I took for granted she meant she liked the paper. Bayne Perryman was another reader I was glad to see. He has a certain way of making a fellow feel like somebody is countin' on him. I don't know who bought the coffee but it was Feno Straw and J. A. Hallman bending over a couple of cups. I wonder if being a newly-wed is responsible for the derby hat Horace Blanton is wearing. Lindsay Belle Dickie looked to me as though she had just finished a hard day at school but on the other hand she always looks as neat as the proverbial pin.

Monday of this week was rightly named "Blue Monday." Some students came to school with long faces and some with red faces, but we were glad some few chanced to wear a smile. They were the ones who didn't attend the District Meet at Turnersville. The long faces were the results of the lost games and the red faces, the presence of "Old Sol." Even if we did fail to get what we went after, we enjoyed the fine hospitality of the Turnersville people and extend our thanks to them.

We are proud of the fact that the girls volley ball team played finals at the District Meet and are sorry the girls lost when only two points would have won the game. We hope the boys' severe case of the "big head" is cured too.

Baseball

Baseball fans of several years ago will remember the baseball organization in the county. Plans are being made to reorganize the league. Games will be scheduled in advance and each team's standing will be published at the end of the week.

Agriculture News

The agriculture class has run terrace lines on the school ground and terraces will be built this week. These are for the purpose of turning the water from the ball courts and school ground.

Several weeks ago the boys cleaned the ground for a garden and this week, they are building a fence, ridding the ground of weeds, and cultivating the plot. Planting will be started in a few days.

Home Economics Notes

The class is making an extensive study of the calories required to maintain the human body. A record was kept of all the food that was eaten for a week and the record checked with experiments to see if they had eaten more than was really necessary. Upon checking and double checking, we found that some members were over eating and others not eating enough. We also checked up on our over and underweights. We found, as we expected, that over eating and over weight ran side by side.

The class is making plans to enter the foods and clothing exhibit to be given in connection with the Interscholastic League at Gatesville.

Third and Fourth Grades

The Third Grade has just finished a cotton poster in Geography and starting maps showing where fruit grows.

Assembly

The 7X class presented an interesting program at the assembly period Friday. C. H. Wallace gave a talk on "Courtesy of Great Men". The second number was a playlet entitled, "Courtesy Wins". The characters were Louise Mayes, Lena Mac McCoy, Doris Ament, Helon Chamlee, John Mings Davidson and Josie Lee. The last number was a piano solo by Anita Lowrey.

Wilma Franks was the announcer. Julia Ann Melbern's name was omitted from the honor roll printed in last week's paper by mistake.

District Meet

In the District Meet held at Flat last Friday the boys playground ball team won first place by winning the game played with Flat. The star players were Atlas Beck, C. H. Wallace, and Oliver Tatum.

The girls playground ball team and the boys volley ball team suffered defeats.

The eliminations are being held in other events this week to decide who will enter in the regular County Meet to be held next week. The eliminations in junior spelling was held Tuesday and Harold Diserens and Marguerite Kelso were chosen to represent our school with Hulon Thompson and Bessie Lee Roberts as substitutes. Wilma Franks will represent our school in essay writing, and Nettie Jane Thomson will be the substitute. Helon Chamlee and Alma Louise Murray will be the junior spellers.

Flat School News

Teachers, pupils, and parents are all overjoyed with the splendid record made by the school in the district meet held here on the past week end. Flat won first place in Junior Boys Declamation, Girls Playground ball, Rhythm Band, and Junior Chorus. We won second place in Senior Girls Declamation and Senior Chorus. Both Junior and Senior Girls Basket ball teams will enter the County Meet.

The play, "The Red-headed Stepchild" was a huge success as it was staged Saturday night. The door receipts amounted to about $25.00. This money is to be used in paying for the light plant recently installed.

The Choral Club and Rhythm Band are busy at work to perfect themselves for the county meet. These groups of students are doing excellent work and are deriving great benefit from it.

The class in Home Economics has just completed their made over problem and are beginning work on a child's garment. Several students are busy at work on garments for county meet.

Ireland School News

School Activities

Like all other schools in Coryell county, Ireland school students and teachers are very busy and therefore happy in their work. Monthly reports and the county section Meet at Turnersville made last week a live one. The competition at Turnersville was keen but generous and magnanimous.

With eliminations over Ireland students are due to go to the County Meet at Gatesville; senior boys and senior girls Volley ball, senior girls basket ball; junior girls basket ball; rhythm band; arithmetic; picture memory; music memory; essay writing; debate, boys and girls; extemporary speaking, boys and girls story telling, foods and clothing. Also general track and field events.

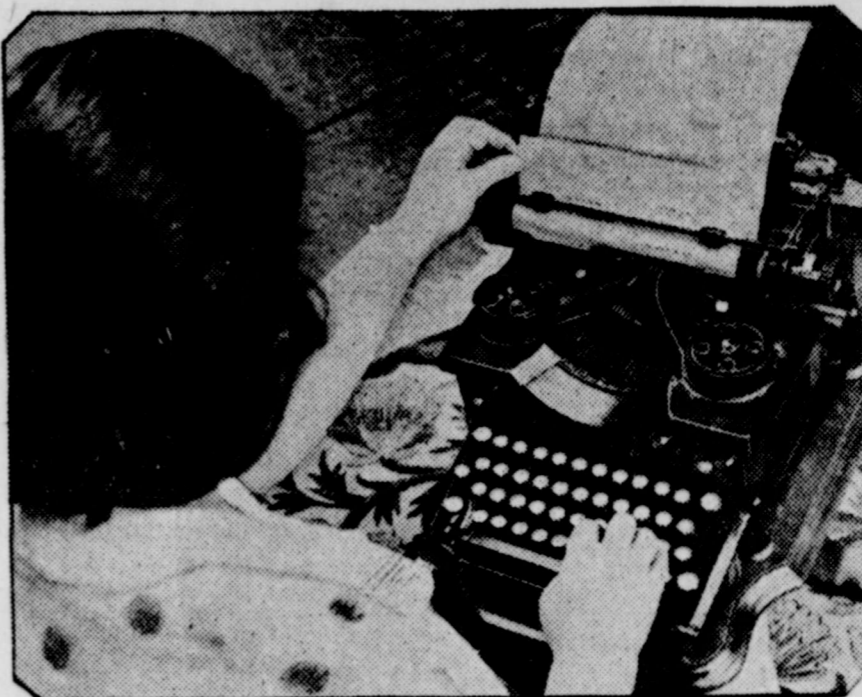

Interscholastic league work is very helpful in developing inter-community spirit. It also creates a general enthusiasm in aggressive school work.

There will be an all day "All Star" basket ball tournament at Ireland school grounds on Saturday March 17. Those in charge expect twelve or fifteen teams to participate. Any all star team may take part by notifying Mr. J. O. Edwards in this way, by post card or telephone and by paying the customary fee of one dollar on Saturday before playing. Good referees have been secured and an enjoyable day is expected. A basket ball will be given to the winning boys team and if as many as five all star girls teams take part a ball will be given to the winning girls team.

El Paso—Two lanterns and a wet mash enabled D. H. Graham of Ysleta, El Paso county to double the egg production of his flock of 80 white leghorns during January. He asked the county agent to cull his flock, but instead the agent recommended wet mashes and longer working days for the hens. Two lanterns were placed in the house every morning at 4 o'clock, and wet mashes fed in addition to dry mash in hoppers. Production picked up in one week and had increased to 40 to 50 eggs daily in three weeks.

SUPPORTING THE SOLDIERS' BONUS

In the face of a possible veto on the part of the President Democrat members of the House dared Monday to pass the bonus bill and went on further to form a caucus to send the $354,000,000 in veterans' pay on to the senate where it is hoped a compromise will be reached with the President.

It is interesting to note that Congressman O. H. Cross, voting in behalf of the people of this district, cast his ballot favoring the proposed bill. On the other hand, Congressman-at-large Joseph W. Bailey cast a dissenting vote, showing his opposition to ex-soldiers' pay.

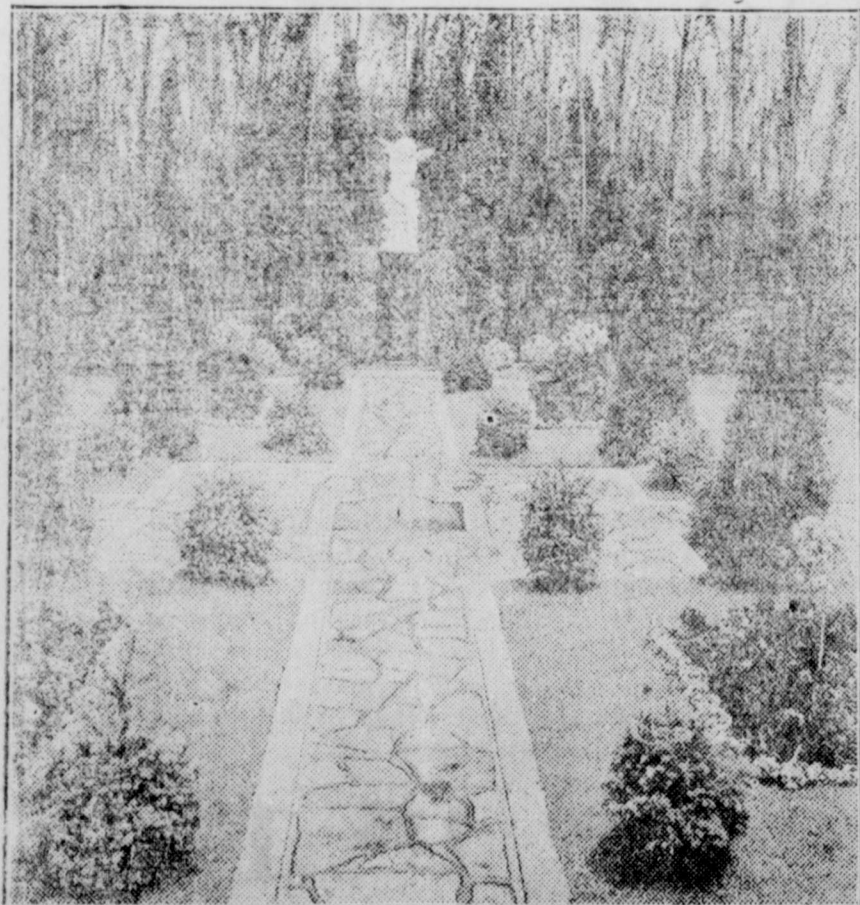

The News favors the bonus measure and the stand Congressman Cross has taken on the side of World War veterans. It is the contention of this paper that early payment of the bonus bill will pay off an obligation that exists within our own territorial boundaries. It will not only enlarge buying power in Coryell County but will practically create a new power of purchasing for a long time. This will be done without any form of graft or politicking on the part of selfish individuals.

There are a number of communities in Coryell County that are beginning to suffer since C. W. A. appropriations have been greatly reduced. The fact is that many of the recently discharged CWA workers in this county are ex-service men. There are some several veterans in this vicinity engaged in farming who have never been on the CWA payrolls but who have suffered great need in their actual existence.

This section is a representative community in which many ex-service men now reside, and many of whom are actually in needy circumstances.

Early passage of the bonus measure would invariably end the bonus question for all to come and at the same time provide remuneration for World War veterans at a time when it will never be needed more.

SHOULD YOUNG PEOPLE GO TO COLLEGE?

By
LEONARD A. BARRETT

The question is frequently asked, "Is higher education a necessity?"

Estimating the cost plus the four years spent in acquiring a college education many young people seriously question if that money and time could not otherwise be placed to a better advantage. The argument is frequently advanced not only by young people but by parents as well, why not start one's career with only a high school diploma? As evidence of the wisdom of such a plan, reference is made to persons who made a great success in life never having seen the inside of a college. True, but success in life to be measured only in terms of economic value? A college degree does not guarantee a financial success. In truth it may influence one to underestimate the value of money by disclosing the contentment to be attained in cultivating an appreciation of the more permanent and cultural things

A college degree may not be economically necessary but is a great advantage. The most important asset in college life is experience. A campus is a miniature world, where in are enacted the very same experiences we meet in the larger world of daily toil. Wisdom and the ability to handle people and live with them is one of the tremendously important advantages of college life.

When we contemplate the professional career, a college course is not only indispensable, it is required. Our professional schools are becoming more rigid in their entrance requirements, admitting only on rare occasions students who have not had a college course. To pursue a professional course of study these days requires a trained mind. Let no young man remain away from college because of the lack of funds. There is usually some way of overcoming that difficulty through a scholarship and opportunity for part time work.

"Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom."
"Better to get wisdom than gold."

PROCLAMATION

By The Mayor

The week of April 2 to 8, inclusive, has been designated as SPRING FIRE PREVENTION CLEAN-UP WEEK.

There are many reasons why the Spring Clean-Up Campaign this year should receive the enthusiastic support of every man, woman and child. First, because the Fire Prevention Clean-Up Campaign this year is of particular importance, as it can be combined with general welfare work, and be of particular benefit to the unemployed. Second, because every dollar in property destroyed by fire, which so frequently is the result of "careless" housekeeping in the home and in the average place of business, is a serious drain upon our present economic condition. Third, every citizen should have a wholesome pride in his home city, its streets, playgrounds, parks and buildings. Homes and surroundings freshly painted, with well kept lawns and gardens, increase property values and intensify community interest. Cleanliness creates cheer, courage and confidence. Fourth, because in the past ten years entirely too many of our citizens have lost their lives due to carelessness in their daily use of fire, and the preservation of human life is an important matter.

Now, therefore, I, M. W. Lowrey, Mayor of the city of Gatesville, Texas, do hereby designate the week of April 2 to 8, inclusive, as SPRING CLEAN-UP WEEK and most respectfully call upon all departments of the city, the Chamber of Commerce, Civic Clubs, Patriotic Clubs and our people in general, to take an active part in the Clean-Up Campaign.

I further designate the Fire Marshal and Fire Chief as a committee of two to work with the city officials in selecting active committees to carry on this Campaign and ask the cooperation of all our people in the enterprising campaign for a clean city.

In Testimony Whereof, I hereto sign my name and seal of office, this the 14th day of March, 1934.

FORD TO BUILD HUGE EXPOSITION AT THE 1934 CHICAGO WORLD'S FAIR

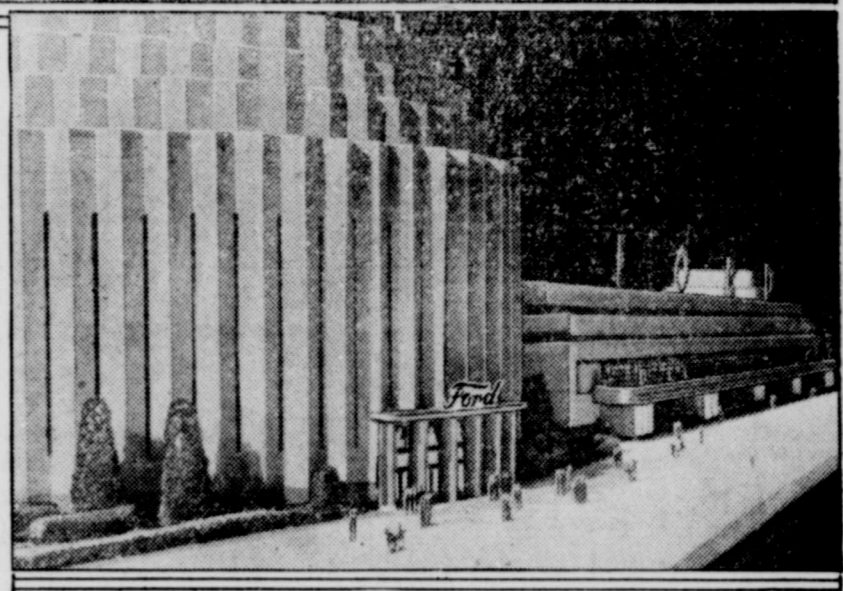

A GREAT Ford Exposition, portraying the tremendous part the arts, sciences and virtually every other industry plays in the manufacture of today's motor cars, is planned by the Ford Motor Company for the 1934 World's Fair.

The Ford Exposition will be housed in a giant building 860 feet long to be built in the heart of the fair grounds on an 11-acre plot bordering Lake Michigan and flanking the main fair boulevard. Construction of the building will start Mar. 1.

In the dominant central building will be housed Henry Ford's "Drama of Transportation," depicting the development of wheeled vehicles from the chariots of ancient Egyptian kings to modern motor cars. Every model of Ford car made since 1903 will be included.

In the smaller building to the left will be housed some of the priceless historic exhibits from the Edison Institute at Dearborn, Mich., including the one-story brick workshop, complete with the original tools, where Mr. Ford in 1893 built with his own hands his first motor car. This first car will be displayed inside the shop.

The main exposition building will

Henry Ford and Edsel B. Ford show to Rufus C. Dawes (center), president of the World's Fair, the scale model of the giant Ford Exposition building to be built at the 1934 Fair. (Lower) The Ford building as it will be seen from Leif Eriksen drive. Opposite the building will be a huge park bordering Lake Michigan.

display an imposing array of exhibits, most of them in action, show how steel, aluminum and other metals, soy beans, corn, wool, cotton and other farm products and the products of myriad industries are converted into car parts. The building also will house displays of cars and a big movie theater. Along the east side will be an open-air balcony equipped with chairs and lounges where hundreds may relax.

Across the drive fronting the lake will be a big Ford Park, beautifully landscaped and also fitted with seats and other comforts for fair crowds.

THE WEDDING MARCH MURDER
by Monte Barrett
Copyright, 1933, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co. WNU Service.

"That's possible, of course," Peter admitted. Kilday returned to his former theory of the crime. "After all," he declared with much earnestness, "After all, who do we know tried to stop this wedding? Webster Spears. Rylie Carmody, too, of course, but his action was instigated by Spears. Both Doctor Abernathy and Nick Royce talked with Franklin after the senior Carmody left the study. Choo Choo Train was the last person we know of that saw Franklin alive. Royce saw her step into the study with him a few minutes before the crime was committed. And yet it doesn't seem possible that she could have delivered the death blow. Added to that, we have the fact which she, herself, pointed out. She was known to be his mistress and she knew Royce had seen her enter that room with him. It doesn't seem reasonable to believe that she would have committed the crime under these circumstances. She was too openly inviting suspicion to be contemplating a crime. "Doctor Abernathy was in the church. We know that. Daniel Bullis had a motive, but he evidently had left before Ambrose Carmody was admitted to the study. Of course," the detective admitted, "he might have returned later, but I hardly think so. He, too, had walked in there openly, and every one knew he and Franklin were enemies. That wasn't the way he would have gone about it if he had had Franklin's revolver in his pocket and was planning a murder.

"Of all those we know to have been back there, that leaves only Nick Royce, Callis Shipley and the woman in blue. Whether we want to or not, we'll have to leave the woman in blue out of our present calculations, because we don't know who she is. As for Royce, what motive did he have? And Callis Shipley," the detective shrugged, "you know what I think about her. She's lying. Why? To protect some one? Then it must be Rylie Carmody, whom she admits she loves, or Webster Spears, who she says is only a good friend. Nevertheless we know that she visited him at his house last night, although she denies it.

"Peter," the detective continued earnestly, "your theory in regard to the finger-prints is a good one to follow concerning young Spears. You declared that the man who left finger-prints either didn't know a crime was about to be committed, or else he was a fool. The same thing goes for the people who visited that room. The person who visited Franklin openly certainly didn't know that a crime was about to be committed. To do so only invited suspicion. The man who killed Franklin slipped in the rear door, unseen.

"And no one saw Webster Spears enter that study. No one even saw him in the sacristy. But we know he left the church, just before the crime.

"That's why I'm going to have him arrested, without any further delay. He had the motive, he had the opportunity, and he was trying his utmost to stop that wedding. We've been blind not to see it from the first."

"And Callis Shipley?"
"You can't arrest anyone for telling a lie. That's all I've got on her, so far. First she tried to protect Rylie Carmody, then Webster Spears. But I've been thinking about that angle. If this girl knows so much, maybe young Carmody is in on the secret, too. From now on I'm going to have him shadowed."

CHAPTER VIII

An Unexpected Appeal.

ASIDE from the arrest of Webster Spears, there were no new developments that afternoon. The newspapers, of course, made much of the arrest. Whatever else he had done, the sergeant had placated the press. And there seemed to be no doubt in his mind concerning Spears' guilt.

With Peter Cardigan it was different.

"Let's go back to St. Matthew's," he suggested, as he and Kilday were returning downtown. "It's only a few blocks out of our way."

"We've been over that place with a fine-toothed comb," the sergeant demurred. "There's nothing more to find there."

Nevertheless, he accompanied his friend for another visit to the scene of the crime. Except for one circumstance, he had been correct. That was the empty scabbard which had contained the knife with which Franklin had been killed. It still hung where Peter had first seen it, on the west wall of the rector's study, just to the right of the door leading into the sacristy and about eight feet high, on the wall.

Peter whistled tunelessly as he surveyed the room, his eyes finally coming to rest on the scabbard.

"H'm," said Peter. Then, turning to his friend, "If Spears is guilty," he said, "he entered through the rear door. We know that, because there was some one in the sacristy all the time and we have been able to account for every one who came in the other way.

"Let us try to reconstruct the scene. You move over to the rear door. There. Now I'm Jim Franklin, standing here in the door leading into the sacristy. Nick Royce was standing out there. This door is open, and my back is to you. I'm looking toward Royce. Now open the door, Sergeant, just as quietly as you can."

The detective cautiously turned the knob. There was no sound. But as the door swung slowly back, it creaked, mournfully. Cardigan smiled.

"At least we know the murderer didn't surprise Franklin," he declared. "But we haven't thought so, all along. All right, I turn and see you standing in the doorway. I recognize you, don't I? You don't think Franklin was alarmed by the sight of his visitor, do you?"

"Franklin knew Webster Spears," was Kilday's laconic rejoinder. "I don't think the sight of him would have frightened him."

"Regardless of who it was," Peter declared emphatically, "Franklin wasn't alarmed. We know that because Nick Royce, his best man, was only a few feet away in the sacristy and the door between was ajar."

"All right," Kilday agreed. "Neither of us believes Franklin was alarmed."

"Now, one of these two men had Franklin's revolver," the novelist continued. "I think it was the murderer. If Franklin had had it, he surely would have tried to use it, when his assailant reached for that dagger on the wall. Remember, the murderer had to come all the way across the room to get that knife. In addition, you could hardly have expected Franklin to be carrying a weapon to his wedding, unless he had very unusual reasons for believing his life to be in danger. If he had thought that, surely he would have been alarmed when the murderer entered."

"That's part of my case," replied the sergeant impatiently. "I've told you—the man who came here to murder Franklin didn't want to be seen. He wasn't taking any unnecessary chances. Those people who entered the other way deliberately destroyed any possible alibi in advance. That's why I'm inclined to believe they didn't do it. Besides, we know that Spears left the church just a few minutes before the murder occurred. He just had time to get back here."

Peter glanced again at the empty scabbard, high on the wall. "That's the only way I can make it fit."

"More proof," observed the sergeant, "that the murderer either knew Franklin intimately, or else knew some one who did. Otherwise, how could he have obtained the revolver?"

"All right," Peter continued. "So far we agree. Now, when did the murderer change his mind about using the gun and decide in favor of the knife?"

"When he came through that door. The knife was hanging exactly opposite the back door. He probably figured it was quieter and would give him a better opportunity to escape. Incidentally, that proves he did come through the back door."

"We still agree," declared the novelist, "but from this point on, we differ. Let me tell you why. In my opinion, only a large powerful man would have abandoned a revolver in favor of a knife. It seems to me that was the action of a man who had considerable confidence in his own strength. Remember, Franklin was a big man. Webster Spears is comparatively small, not more than five feet nine."

Kilday stroked the bristles on his chin thoughtfully. "Usually, that would be right," he admitted cautiously. "But other elements entered into this. The dagger was quiet. The revolver would make a noise. That was a powerful argument in favor of the dagger, one that would upset these other calculations of yours."

WEDDING MARCH MURDER—

"Possibly," conceded Peter. "But in times of stress, men are more apt to run true to form than otherwise. And I have reason for believing Spears could not have been the wielder of that knife."

Kilday showed his skepticism. The novelist walked to the wall, reaching toward the empty scabbard. Had the dagger been there, he could have withdrawn it without any great difficulty, although it was fully eight feet from the floor.

"But I am six feet two," he pointed out. "While it wouldn't have been any great trick for me, or for anyone six feet or more in height, that's quite a stretch for a man of Spears' build. Had he been able to reach it at all, he would have had to stand on tiptoe. What would Franklin have been doing while he was stretching for that knife? It doesn't fit, Kilday. I can't picture Webster Spears as the murderer."

The detective smiled blandly. "You'd better join the other side," he said. "You'd make a good witness for the defense. But how are you going to explain Spears' attempt to halt the wedding? We know he did. We know he had a motive for the crime. The Shipley girl gave some damaging evidence against him, although she changed it after her visit to his house last night—a visit, mind you, which both she and Spears deny, but which we know occurred, nevertheless."

"Oh, I know," he shrugged, "that we can find a motive for a dozen people. But Spears is the only one who appears to have been doing anything about it. He and Rylie Carmody. The guilt lies somewhere between those two and I think I have the right one."

"Then you don't attach any further significance to the woman in blue—or to Daniel Bullis?"

"Not unless the woman in blue was Callis Shipley," declared the detective grimly. "And as for Bullis—well, you just eliminated him yourself. Bullis was Franklin's enemy. Would Franklin have permitted him to enter without making an outcry which would have warned Royce of the situation? Yet you have just demonstrated that Franklin certainly must have known his murderer and thought the visit a friendly one. I think that lets Bullis out. No," Kilday persisted doggedly, "all trails lead to Spears. The only bit of evidence you have produced in his defense is that he might have had difficulty in reaching the knife. You have shown that the rear door creaks, which might have warned Franklin when his assailant entered. Yet we know that several persons previously left by this door—Bullis, the woman in blue and Choo Choo Train. They might have left it open. Spears might have entered silently, secured the knife before Franklin was aware of his presence, and struck him down before he had time to make any outcry. Everything you have developed here is purely along the line of supposition."

They left, Kilday to return to his office, the novelist to his apartment, but Peter was dissatisfied with the conclusions reached by his friend. In his own mind, there existed considerable doubt concerning Webster Spears' guilt. And yet the logic applied by the detective was sound. It was Spears who had attempted to halt the wedding, Spears who had involved Rylie Carmody, and probably he, also, who had been the author of those telephone calls to Choo Choo Train and Ambrose Carmody. He had quit the church in time to commit the crime, making some remark in regard to halting the wedding, and certainly he had not told the full truth when questioned. Opposed to these arguments, Peter had only the conviction that he could not have reached that dagger on the wall and a reluctant sympathy for Callis Shipley who was so inextricably involved in any case made against either Spears or Rylie Carmody. Peter thumped the arms of his chair and glared moodily into space. Had a disturbingly beautiful girl who was obviously trying to protect some one warped his judgment completely? Again and again he reviewed the evidence as Kilday had developed it. Each time he argued completely around the circle, arriving back at Callis Shipley. What had there been between this girl and Spears? Or Franklin? If Spears were guilty, hadn't his love for Doris Carmody been the actuating motive for the crime? If so, why was Callis protecting him? That didn't fit. But neither could he make the sympathy which this girl had aroused in him fit in with the fact that she had withheld the truth concerning her visit to Webster Spears. Nothing seemed to fit in this strange case.

His reverie was interrupted by the door-bell.

In spite of his effort, he did not know how well he succeeded in concealing his surprise. His visitor was Callis Shipley.

She looked past him, into the book-lined room, exploring it with a rapid glance before she spoke.

"I had hoped to find you alone. May I come in?"

"Of course."

Peter drew his own wide chair closer to the table for her and turned on the reading light. The waning afternoon had filled the room with shadows.

"I Had Hoped to Find You Alone. May I Come In?"

"I suppose you know Web has been arrested," she began uneasily.

He nodded.

"And Rylie is being followed by detectives."

Peter thought briefly how angered Kilday would have been, had he known the activities of his detective had been so promptly discovered.

"Do you think either of them had anything to do with the crime?" the girl demanded.

"Do you think so?" the novelist parried.

"It's unthinkable," declared the girl vehemently. "They aren't the sort who murder people. They are just nice boys, both of them. They aren't criminals."

"You ask me to have more confidence in them than you have," Peter pointed out. "You admit that you were afraid Rylie Carmody had something to do with it, at first. You were afraid to tell us that you rode home from the church with him. You attempted to deceive us about your visit with Webster Spears last night. And after that visit, you changed your testimony in regard to the remark Spears made when he left the church."

Two spots of color flamed in the girl's cheeks. The earnestness of her manner, as she leaned toward him, impressed Peter much more than he wished to admit. "That's why I am here," she declared fervently. "It is largely my fault that they are both under suspicion. I—I was trying to help Rylie. That's why I attempted to deceive you. And Web was doing the same thing. Oh," she caught her lip between her teeth, "you don't need to tell me how wrong I was. I've discovered that for myself. But Rylie didn't have any more to do with Jim Franklin's death than you did. Nor did Web. I'll answer all your questions now. I'll tell you the whole truth. I want to help. I want you to discover what a terrible mistake you are making. I did ride home with Rylie. I didn't admit it because—well, because I was afraid he might suspect and I didn't want anyone to know he had returned to the church. That's the truth. I was at Web's last night when you and Sergeant Kilday called, but we didn't want you to know it because we were trying to change our testimony so you wouldn't suspect Rylie any more."

"That's why I denied what Web had said at the church. That looked damaging for Rylie, too. Oh, I've been very foolish. I can see that now, but I was only trying to help Rylie."

"I'm not afraid to tell you the truth. I might be, if Rylie were guilty, but he isn't. I'm not afraid to ask you to help me. And I need help, now, Mr. Cardigan. Rylie is being followed by the police. They suspect him of the crime, largely because of what I have done. Web has been arrested, and I'm afraid that's my fault, too. You see, I'm the one responsible for the predicament they both are in. If I hadn't tried to twist the facts around, neither of them would be suspected now, I'm sure. It's my fault, and I must help them, some way. That's why I've come to you. You must believe me, Mr. Cardigan. And you must help me."

"You aren't asking me to solve the mystery, Miss Shipley," declared Peter soberly. "You're asking me to prove that these two young men are innocent."

"But if I know they are innocent—" she pleaded.

Peter braced himself against the wistfulness of the girl's appeal.

From the first, he had wanted to believe her, yet she had betrayed his instinctive confidence in her, not once, but several times. Now, trapped by these admitted discrepancies in her previous testimony, she courted his assistance. Probably she had sensed his sympathy from the first and relied upon its spell now. Was that why she was reluctant to submit to Kilday's questioning? He was angry, with himself as much as with the girl.

"What were you doing at Spears' last night?" he challenged.

"I knew it was he who told Rylie about that actress. That was why Rylie was so anxious to stop the wedding and I wanted to be sure Web didn't say anything that would increase the suspicion against him."

"What did Web really say when he left the church?" Peter checked another discrepancy in her story.

She hesitated only for an instant.

"He said, 'Where's Rylie? If he were here, there wouldn't be any wedding.' You see I told you the truth the first time, but after Web and I talked it over, we decided that remark was very damaging to Rylie. We both agreed to change it a little, for that reason."

"Rylie had told you that he intended to stop that wedding, hadn't he?" Peter was struggling against the growing conviction that she was telling him the truth now. The manner in which she was able to warp his sympathies to her side made him doubtful of his judgment.

"Yes, But," she hastened eagerly to explain, "he was trying to stop it by informing his father about this actress. If he had planned a murder, would he have gone to the church, where he quarreled with Franklin before two witnesses? Would he have left him there to hurry home in search of his father? Those aren't the actions of a murderer, Mr. Cardigan. Murderers don't leave a trail as plain as that."

"Not usually. Not unless the murderer was a last resort, after everything else had failed."

Callis restrained a gesture of impatience. "You admit that he was trying to stop the wedding by other means. That's why he hurried home in search of his father, Mr. Cardigan. And if he returned to the church in time to commit the crime, he was there in time to see his father and stop the wedding by more peaceable means. Even if he had been ready to commit a crime to stop that wedding, it wasn't necessary. Can't you see that? All he had to do was see his father and his purpose would have been accomplished."

It was a telling argument, as far as Rylie Carmody went. But it did not absolve Webster Spears of complicity in the crime. Why had he, as was shown, left the church at the last minute? Was this girl's first interest really in young Carmody? Was that the sole reason for her surreptitious visit to Spears' home the previous evening? Peter hazarded a shot in the dark.

"Where did Webster Spears go when he left the church, Miss Shipley? Why did he leave, just when he did?"

Uncle Bill Kinsey Tells Story of Pioneer Days

In the fall of 1857 at the age of six years, W. F. Kinsey made his first trip to Coryell County with his parents, from Hopkins County, Texas. They settled at the head of Shoal Creek.

The reached the log cabin home of Uncle Bill's Grandfather the night before Elam was killed by Indians. That, I am sure will be well remembered by all Coryell pioneers.

The following day old Grandad Kinsey rode down the Cow House River a few miles to where his nephew's were making boards. On his way he rode on to a group of Indians. His rush upon them frightened the Indians and hindered their shooting until he had passed. When he was out of their sight he decided to go back and shoot at them but, when he came from behind a thicket he saw more Indians had gathered and he knew Indians well enough to know, that, meant get out of the way.

Hardships were plentiful in those days with a scarcity of everything but meat. Doctors were few and far apart. Indians raging through out the country. Most of the homes were miles apart.

In November, 1862 Uncle Bill's father was kiled by lightning.

A few weeks after the death of his father, Uncle Bill with his mother and the younger children left for Titus County. He was eleven years old then. They left early in an ox wggon. They drove study all day and just before sun set camped where the Tiji King farm is now. It was a cold night and when they had finished their supper he put hobbles on the horse they were leading. The next morning the horse was gone. He wanted to go back and look for it and his mother told him to let it go.

At the end of the third week of dreary days this brave mother with her children reached her destination. Uncle Bill stayed with his mother in Titus County four years. In 1866 he came back to Coryell County. November 10, 1872 he was married to Elizabeth Kathryn Tipton. To this union were born eight children, all in Coryell County, and all in the same house except one. Mrs. Kinsey died September 19, 1930.

Uncle Bill was born January 11, 1851. He is 83 years old now, and has lived in Coryell County 73 years. He thinks this is a record with all the family living except his wife and one son.

Guthrie—The terracing of 10 King county farms in January was a real accomplishment according to R. L. White, county agent, who says landlords had to over-ride tenant objections to get the job done. County machinery was used at a cost of $17.50 per day and an average cost of about 40 cents per acre terraced. Tenants are satisfied after finding they had little additional work to do in finishing the job, Mr. White says.

Fort Stockton—Seven creep feeders for beef calves on the El Senora Ranch in Pecos county have proven profitable this season, H. H. Matthews, ranch manager, has reported to L. E. Bailey, county agent. With no rain for several months the mothers are not in good condition but the calves are in fine shape, he says. Creep feeders permit nursing calves to eat grain and cottonseed meal and thereby get a fast start in life.

P. M. What is a Christian? The Christian in Conflict a Soldier. This will be the fifth sermon on the above Question.

Come and worship with us at the church with a friendly smile. You are welcome!

W. H. Buening, Pastor

First Methodist Church

While the pastor nor presiding elder sent out any official call, yet a well represented gathering assembled at 7 p. m. Monday for the second quarterly conference.

Mrs. Pat Holt, Mrs. Leake Ayres and Mrs. M. M. Chunn selected a well chosen number of faithful women to aid them and by the time all had gathered the banquet hall was arranged in fine style for an oyster supper which was handled in a most satisfactory manner. The pastor furnished the oysters and the women saw they were prepared. Next time perhaps we can catch enough to call the whole church.

Hear the sermon next Sunday on the very challenging subject so often ask by you. What about God? Your belief about him is what? 11 a. m., "Finding the Right View of God". At 7:30 another question often arises about Why we suffer? What does it all mean? This will demand attention so hear this on "Mystical Suffering".

The pastor meets the Young and the Intermediate Department

Peoples Department at 9:45 a. m. at 10:05 a. m.

Midgetville

A corner of the Midget Village, where "little people" from all over the world congregated to bring fun to the 1933 World's Fair. It will be one of the attractions of the New 1934 Century of Progress.

Sets World Record

Mrs. Joan Radtkin of Cleveland, Ohio, has a right to smile broadly, for she set a new world's record for women bowlers, making 775 in a three-game series. The former record was 759, made in 1927 by Mrs. Floretta McCutcheon.

GABBY GERTIE

"Many an actress has refused to play in serials because she thought they were breakfast food films."
