HAMILTON IS CAPTURED

SHERMAN, April 25—Ship-pery Raymond Hamilton, bank robbing expert of the notorious Clyde Barrow gang of outlaws, fell into the hands of officers here late today while trying to escape with the loot of a small town bank—his favorite prey in a spectacular career of crime.

Fast driving—the tactics used by the Dallas desperado so successfully in former getaways—failed to keep him out of reach of the law and he was abruptly halted at the little farming community of Howe, seven miles south of Sherman.

U. S. SILENT ON JAPAN

The strained international situation caused by Japan's pronouncement of a "Monroe Doctrine" policy toward China was brought before President Roosevelt yesterday but Washington remained silent.

It was one of the subjects scheduled for discussion between the chief executive and Secretary of State Hull.

What step, if any, the United States would take on the delicate question was awaited anxiously in London, Tokio, Nanking and other capitals.

BOY SCOUT JAMBOREE AT TEMPLE INCLUDES NOVELTIES

Two Pueblo Indians, Wayne Wolf, Robe and Blue Sky Eagle, will judge the fire by friction contest at the Boy Scout jamboree in Temple on the 28th. Wolf, Robe is an honorary member of the St. Louis Council of the Boy Scouts of America and is interested in the promotion of Indian lore among the scouts. He and his brother, Blue Sky Eagle, will participate in the court of honor by giving several dances in full costumes of the Pueblo tribe.

The jamboree events will start at two o'clock at Woodson Field. They will include fire lighting with flint and steel and a bow drill, semaphore signaling, Morse Code signaling, first aid, string burning, scout pace, and knot tying. Each troop will furnish a minimum team of six scouts. Ribbons for first, second, and third places in the events will be awarded, as well as a ribbon for the grand championship.

Rifle and archery tournaments will start at nine o'clock Saturday morning. The rifle shoot will be held at the National Guard armory and a silver loving cup will be given to the team of three scouts making the highest score. They will have ten shots.

Neighboring Schools Highly Recommended By State Inspector

E. W. Brooks, deputy state Superintendent of schools, made his final inspection of the schools at Turnersville and Oglesby. These schools had applied for affiliation on part of their high school courses. This year is the first in which an effort has been made toward affiliation of these schools. Mr. Brooks has recommended affiliation on 13 units for Oglesby and 16 units for Turnersville. Each of these schools were highly commended on their English departments.

Schools of the county which have standardized and will receive certification are: Evant, Jonesboro, Flat, Purnela, Pearl, Plainview, White Hall, and Coryell City.

Elementary schools which have standardized seven grades are: Bigham, Enterprise, Turnover, Davidson, Crossville and Stringtown.

'round the square

By
The Snooper

Harold Cunyus deserves honorable mention this week on account of the recent arrival of that fine boy, James Anderson. It's a hard proposition to keep in touch with all the "measleites" but when a youngster like Douglas Aments is absent from the square he is greatly missed. Knox Williams gave localites a distant view of his home-made airplane Wednesday as he flew not 'round the square but over it. Ben E. Cement is a distinguished looking gentleman and a great character. Otis Chambers can talk automobiles and look for prospective buyers at the same time.

Graduation Exercises For Seventh Graders Planned for May 8th

The annual county-wide Seventh will be held in the Gatesville High School Auditorium at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning May 8. This exercise is an honorary affair aimed at promoting a unified county. The exercises will include the seventh grade graduates from every school in the county. There will perhaps be a free moving picture show in connection with the affair.

Miss Edgar Ellen Wilson, second assistant State superintendent of public instruction, has been procured to bring the commencement address. It is anticipated that there will be much interest in the affair this year. No certificates will be presented at this function as some of the participants will not have earned them until school close at a later date. Certificates will be presented by the teachers of the several schools at the close of the school terms.

County Superintendent R. W. Stephens is the originator of the county wide graduation move and has won the support of every school in the county to the move.

SUFFERS PAINFUL BURNS WHEN GAS EXPLODES IN STOVE OVEN

Bill Ament suffered painful burns about the face and neck when the gas cook stove at the Cozy Cafe and Confectionery exploded Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

An employee had already turned the gas into the oven and attempted to light the stove but failed. Later Ament opened the oven door and allowed the pent up gas to make contact with a burning jet on top of the stove. The resulting conflagration enveloped Bill's head and shoulders leaving painful, though not serious, burns. He was able to be back at work on Tuesday afternoon.

SID GREGORY SUFFERS PAINFUL INJURY IN FALL

Sid Gregory, employee of the local light company, fell and strained the tendons in his knee Tuesday morning while walking to the company's line from Oglesby to Gatesville.

C. H. Wallace, manager of the light company, went to the accustomed place of meeting Gregory, at the end of the line east of town, and when Gregory failed to arrive Wallace started down the line in search for him. Gregory was attempting to make his way to the meeting place but could hardly move.

Since this is the last meeting of the year this program will be largely of a business and informational nature.

The first grade pupils will render a program after which the meeting will go into a business session at which time reports for the year will be given and members informed as to the status of the organization. A report from the nominating committee will be given and officers for the ensuing year elected. The installation ceremony will probably take place at this time also. No out of town speaker will appear on the program but various members of the local organization will make brief talks. This is expected to be one of the most interesting meetings of the year.

Services were concluded at the Cemetery with the Masonic order in charge.

"Dinner at Eight," With All-Star Cast Coming to the Palace

Described later its sensational opening at the Astor Theatre in New York City as the greatest piece of motion-picture entertainment of all times with a cast, the like of which in draw names and acting ability has never been assembled before to be photographed by a camera, "Dinner at Eight" Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's filmization of the Broadway play hit, will be shown at the Palace Theatre starting Sunday for the first time at popular prices.

It is almost unbelievable that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was able to gather together for this one picture such outstanding film names as Marie Dressler, John Barrymore, Wallace Beery, Jean Harlow, Lionel Barrymore, Lee Tracy, Edmund Lowe, Billie Burke, Madge Evans, Jean Herscholt, Karen Morley, Louise Closser Hale, Phillips Holmes and May Robson, together with a supporting cast of eleven players.

One phase of the picture deals with Lionel Barrymore, who is worried over the collapse of his shipbuilding concern the while his wife, Billie Burke, blithely arranges a dinner for a pair of visiting British aristocrats. It is into this aspect of the story that Marie Dressler is introduced as a retired trouper of the "gay nineties" and an old flame of Lionel. Also concerned is Lionel's daughter.

ter, Madge Evans, who is in love with John Barrymore, a "has been" movie star.

Fails at "Come Back"

The tragedy of this movie star who tries desperately to make a "come back" presents a new angle. His intrigues with his agent, Lee Tracy, to appear affluent before Jean Herscholt, a theatrical producer, and the tragedy which results when he fails to get a coveted part in a Broadway show, also involves Miss Dressler and Miss Evans.

Then is presented the domestic picture of Wallace Beery, the hard-boiled business racketeer who is responsible for the upheaval in Lionel Barrymore's shipbuilding interests. Beery is married to the flashy Jean Harlow, who carries on an affair with Edmund Lowe behind her husband's back and whose social ambitions bring her into contact with other principals at this all star dinner.

WALTER W. HOLLINGSWORTH

When he came into the world he cried and they laughed at him. When he passed he left a smile upon his character while others shed tears at his going.

When the time comes for an old man who has passed many full years to go into that eternal slumber there is a sadness sweetened by the truth that the time for rest is due. The old man passes to that repose in which the elderly life finds comfort and tranquility. But when a man who is at the full tide of his natural powers and influence is taken away, grief gropes without satisfaction.

And so it was in the early evening of the last Sabbath day, future dreams were ended and hopes banished, as a shining star in a clouding sky, the earthly brilliance of an inspiring life dimmed, faded and ceased to be. Walter W. Hollingsworth passed away.

Though his passing left undone dreams of future achievement, his past was well spent. A bold spirit and a humane heart had been devoted to a duty placed in his care, and for the past twenty years he had fulfilled that trust. He had found the opportunity to build confidence in the hearts of Coryell county people. He maintained peace through law and order for the good of the country he called his own.

Walter W. Hollingsworth leaves no marble edifice as a memorial to his name, but a greater remembrance in the work he accomplished among fellow-men.

Men, women and children loved and honored him. Men, women and children mourn his going. His presence will be greatly missed by those who knew him.

SOFTBALL SYMPTOMS

By A. C.

Softball continues Monday night with the usual amount of increased interest and with very few exciting moments. The Baptists fell from the grace of their winning streak when they met Arnold's team, the latter winning a one-side victory of 12-4 over the churchmen.

The Methodists "also ran" Monday night in their game with the Highway bunch who gave the formers a 15 to 8 licking contrary to public opinion that the Methodists have been overtaken by the proverbial rocking chair, they gave fans a thrilling moment on a triple play, retiring three Highway men on one play. This was the first triple play of the season. Pitching difficulties mounted the Methodists camp and they were forced to wall three moundsmen to the pitchers box, Diserens, Hamilton and Gunn. Sasse, Highway ace pitcher showed more control but less speed since his last appearance. Tuesday night games were rained out, thus allowing one-half game won and one-half game lost for the State. Firemen, Roundtablers, and Wards club.

MRS. T. B. CANTRELL

Mrs. Sarah Franklin Cantrell, age 79, expired at the family home near Purmela on Tuesday. Funeral services were held at the Levita Cemetery Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock with Rev. J. W. Dunn officiating. Interment followed in the Levita Cemetery.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Seeking death by throwing herself from the summit of Lone Mesa, to escape dishonor, at the hands of a drunken desperado, Sonya Savarin allows herself to be rescued by her suddenly sobered and repentant attacker. The girl is a self-appointed physician to the Navajo Indians, living on an Arizona sheep ranch with her brother Serge, his wife, Lila, and their small daughter, Babs. For a year she has been engaged to Rodney Blake, wealthy New Yorker, but her heart is with the friendless Navajos and she evades a wedding.

Sonya laid her arm around the heaving shoulders of the wailing woman. She looked up at the man on the seat.

"Mr. Satter," she said, "don't you think you could leave them one? Just this little one, the baby? You know it's hard to give them up—any of them—and this is so little. Couldn't you? Please, Mr. Satter? Just for me? I'll go before the superintendent and make it right if you will. I think I can. Won't you please let them have the baby?"

There was in Sonya's voice all the guile of womankind since Eve, a coaxing quality that had wrought on the hearts of men since she was born. Her long black eyes pleaded gravely. Satter moved on his seat, flicked his whip, looked at her and down at his boots.

"Well," he said, "I was sent to get 'em."

"But only two. You didn't even know there were three," she coaxed. "Come on—let me give them back the baby."

"Oh, well—" he said reluctantly. Instantly the girl reached in and pulled the baby clear of the wagon, the mother with it. It was not really a baby, being a fair-sized youngster, but the least of the three. With her arms across the two she pushed them away from the wagon. Then she began speaking rapidly in Navajo.

It was the white man's law, which was above tribal law, she told them, that the children go to the schools where they would learn the white man's ways, where they would be fed and clothed. They would become wise and above their station at the present time, being better for the knowledge they would get. And she, the mother, would have them back soon for a visit, hearing all about what they had learned and eaten in the meantime. The littlest one she could keep now, provided she would go back to her hogan in peace. If not, it too would go.

Would she listen to the white man's law? Would she take her one child instead of losing three—for a little time only?

The man spoke, and the woman, with her tragic eyes on the little scared faces in the wagon's tail, hugging her baby, nodded.

"O. K., Mr. Satter," Sonya said guardedly.

Satter struck his near horse, and the buckboard bounced away.

Turning in stark and tragic resignation, the two bedraggled figures moved off toward the canyon's mouth, the woman's eyes still strained back across her shoulder where her children were disappearing in the distance. The tall man looked back at Sonya, and his eyes spoke—like Two Fingers' had.

Blinded by tears, the girl climbed back to her saddle. She had forgotten Rodney Blake entirely. It was not until they were well out on the desert's floor that she remembered him.

"Rod," she said then, "do you see now why I cannot leave them? There is so much to do for them.

They need me."

"Yes," he said coldly. "I see."

There was something in his tone which caused the conversation to languish, and they rode for miles through the early day without speech. Then Sonya stirred in her saddle and looked at Blake.

"Did you say you are leaving the day after tomorrow, Rod?" she asked.

"I did, but I might as well have kept the information, for all the impression it made."

"Oh, no, dear. I'm just so—so full of troubles, you know. I didn't mean to seem careless. You know I didn't."

"I wish to heaven I did, Sonya!" the man said passionately. "Well, remember the rest of the things I said—particularly that no man or anything shall get you from me, that I mean to have you for my own if it's the last thing I ever do in life. Just remember that, my girl."

A flush came into Sonya's face. "I suppose I should be flattered," she said sharply, "but I am not. There is something about this attitude of yours, Rod, that angers me—a seeming of command that goes down hard with me. One's life is his own, marriage or no marriage, to a certain extent, you know. I'm not the type of woman who can be completely absorbed."

"Forgive me," Blake said quickly. "Perhaps I do seem dictatorial, but my excuse must be that ancient one which covers a multitude of sins—great love."

"I wonder," said Sonya.

They rode together into the ranch yard, and for the next thirty-six hours she devoted herself as much as possible to this man who loomed so large on the horizon of her life, a little sorry for the rift between them, searching her heart for sympathy with his cause, wondering if she had been careless of his comfort or his happiness. But, search as she would, the face of Little Moon came before his, the eyes of Two Fingers drifted across his eyes, the soft guttural blurred his clipped speech in her ears.

Sonya made a hurried trip next day to Chee wash and found the woman much better. "So," she told her happily, smoothing the gaunt young cheek, "we make the good fight together. All is well, little mother."

And Two Fingers smiled his slow smile, and the young doctor rode away.

Sonya spent that last evening in the patio with Rodney Blake, alone under the stars, swinging in the fringed hammock, her hand between his palms, his low voice in her ears, speaking of the future. Serge and Lila, sensing the strain between them, had retired early. And Sonya put her arms about Rod's neck, kissed him, and took his kisses, and felt happy.

It was late when they separated in the living room, tiptoeing in like a pair of sixteen-year-olds, laughing in whispers, and early when they all gathered again for breakfast. It was quite a drive down to the little town where Rod would take the train for New York, and Sonya, who was driving him, wanted an early start.

The last moments on a station platform are always filled with strange emotions, forebodings, and vague fears tinged with the sadness of parting, and Sonya was genuinely close to tears as she watched the handsome Rod about his ticket-buying, his trunk-checking. For one panicky second she wished she were going with him, a marriage certificate in her bag. Then she shook herself indignantly, ran with him down the platform beside the slowing train, kissed him fervently, watched him go away across the desert.

There was a little mist in her dark eyes, but she was surprised and a bit dismayed at the odd feeling of lightness, of freedom, which came over her.

"Ingrate!" she told herself, "you don't deserve a good man's love. I begin to suspect you're a splintered, selfish and lazy, and due to take on that in ways some day as punishment!"

CHAPTER III

A Man Leaves and Another Speaks.

THE little town, close on the border of the Reservation, was typical of all desert towns, lonely and bleak and washed continually with wind and sand. It held a store or two, a blacksmith shop, a tiny station on the railroad line, and the customary tanks of water. Sonya parked the car in front of the general store, and taking her handbag from the seat beside her, climbed out and entered. The store boasted two clerks besides the owner. This owner was a bland fat man by the name of Parks, a man whom Sonya disliked instinctively, but who never allowed anyone except himself to wait on her.

"Why, Miss Savarin!" he said unctuously, "what can we do for you? Like some nice fresh fruit? Got in some right good oranges and grapefruit this week."

Sonya spent some time in the store, buying a fair supply of the oranges, thinking of Little Moon, and of more staple things for Lila.

As she walked briskly about selecting this and that, there was the stir of arrival at the high board porch outside. Three men were coming in, and Sonya looked up from her task casually, as one does in such circumstances. Instantly she felt the annoying prickle of her skin, the odd anger that had seared her before, for one of the newcomers was the tall bronze man of Lone Mesa. The two with him were dark and rough men, of secret eyes and narrow lips, in appearance the worst of the Border types which Sonya knew, and she prided herself that she had seen them all in this man's country. Bad hombres, she told herself, after that first swift glance, fit companions to that drunken libertine who had dragged her from her horse on the top of Lone Mesa.

She strode forward, head up, eyes straight, and had to pass within five feet of the three men who had entered. As she did so she was conscious of the eyes, under the tilted hat-brim, on her face. It was as if a strong magnetic current pulled her in passing, as if some inarticulate power focussed all its strength upon her that she might look aside. So strong and compelling was this that to save her life she could not help the flicker of her eyelids, the almost unbearable desire to turn and look. But she did not turn. Angry to her boot heels, both with her outraged memory and with herself, she walked to the door and out. So stirred was she within herself that she sat slumped in her seat, her hands thrust in her sweater pockets, and did not turn even when she heard Parks, or who she thought was Parks, come out across the porch with her box of supplies.

"Put them in back," she said, nodding over her shoulder, "and thanks."

As she reached for the gearshift she stopped in the act, arrested by a voice that was not Parks'.

"Miss Savarin," it said, "can I speak to you a minute?"

Sonya straightened up and looked at the owner of the voice. Straight in the eyes she looked him, her mouth shut hard again.

And at that straight look she saw again the wild blue eyes under the level bronze brows that had stared down in her face as she hung to the dead root of the pinon stump on the windswept face of Lone Mesa.

But they were vastly changed. The black pupils that had spread so wildly over the blue of the iris that day were normal now, the expression anxious.

"Well?" she said thinly. "Why should you talk to me?"

"Why—why, just because it seems I must. I want to—to tell you—to ask you if— Can you believe me when I tell you that I've never had a minute's peace since that day on the Mesa? I've never forgotten your face—or your hands—or the wind blowing your hair up around your head when you hung—there, I'm a bad lot, Miss Savarin, and not fit to speak to you or look at you, but no matter what I am I've got to tell you this—that there's enough white man in me to make me live in hell because of what I did—or tried to do—to you. I'm on my knees to you. Not asking your forgiveness—that couldn't be—but just down in the dirt and wanting you to know it. That's all. Thanks for listening."

He took off his hat and turned sharply on his heel, and as Sonya threw in the clutch and roared away she was conscious of the two dark strangers and Parks in the shadow of the doorway intently watching them both.

So he was in hell, was he? In the dirt, was he? Well, that was where he deserved to be, rotter that he was!

It seems almost impossible to believe that the close of school is so very near. Just three weeks—some of us like to think of it and some of us don't! For those who have places in the corn fields—school is the choice place, but when the streams and rivers are beckoning, isn't it hard to wait? Still, we have not forgotten our school work. We realize that the last three weeks count as much as those preceding. Maybe Father Time crept upon us but when he leaves we shall be able to say that nothing has been lost!

School Dismissed for Funeral

Coryell students and teachers regretted to hear of the death of Mr. Forrest's father, Mr. Jim Forrest of Purmela. School was dismissed in order that the teachers and pupils might attend the funeral which was held at the Baptist Church at Purmela on Wednesday, April 18th. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the family.

"The Ghost Chaser"

One of the biggest mistakes you can make is to miss seeing "The Ghost Chaser," a senior play, under the direction of Mr. R. B. Forrest. You'll find every character interesting and especially Maggie Saunders, who is of the underworld and posing as a maid. This part is to be played by Mae Florence Culp. This play is to be presented Friday night, May 4, in the school auditorium.

Sports

The Coryell team played Crawford Saturday. The scores were 13-5 in favor of Coryell. The club team played Oglesby Sunday and lost 5-4.

"Sunny of Sunnyside"

The fifth, sixth, and seventh grades are busy preparing some entertainment for you. It is in the form of an operetta entitled

"Sunny of Sunnyside". You won't regret seeing this stirring cycle of adventures. Among the many characters are the Quinn Twins, Leorora and Theodora, played by Dorothy Richards and Ona Haferkamp. They create lots of laughter along with the others which you will enjoy thoroughly. Watch for our closing week's program.

Fourth Grade

The fourth grade now has a "Blunder Box" in language. Each pupil puts all the English errors he hears in the box. It is opened on Friday and every one whose name is not in the box receives a star.

We were glad to have Elda Richter come back to school after a week's illness but were very sorry to hear that one of our classmates, Ellen Alford, was taken to a hospital Sunday.

Employees in the Century of Progress division of design and construction were so impressed with the similarity of the ground plan of the building to the larva of the lion ant that they fell into the habit of referring to it as the "doodlebug". Under the leadership of our very capable Superintendent, Mr. Edgar Langley, our Sunday School is progressing nicely. A cordial invitation is extended not only to the people of the Pidcoke community, but also to the surrounding communities that do not have a Sunday School, to meet with us and study God's word. Let us heed the words of Jesus as he said, "Learn of me for I am meek and lowly in heart and ye shall find rest unto your souls."

The B. T. S. meets in the different departments each Sunday evening at 7:30. Our very efficient and enthusiastic director, Mrs. Langley is carrying this work forward in a great way.

The adult union is to give a play next Sunday evening entitled "The Conversion of Farmer Brown to the Doctrine of Stewardship." Come and learn how to be a good steward for God.

The Senior B. T. S. social Friday evening was enjoyed by a large number of the members.

German Bethel Baptist Church

We have this from the pen of Horace Mann: "Lost! Somewhere between sunrise and sunset, two golden hours, each set with sixty diamond minutes. No reward is offered, for they are gone forever."

And this from Franklin: "Dost thou love life? Then do not squander time, for that is the stuff life is made of".

We must prepare to live here and hereafter. The hereafter will be just that what we make it to be while here. Christ said: "For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his own soul?" Matthew 16:26.

No reward is offered for lost souls, for they are lost forever. Dost thou love life? Then do not squander time for this God has given man that he might set his house in order for he shall die and not live.

At the church with the friendly smile you will find folks who are willing to give you every possible assistance. May we be of service to you?

Sunday School every Sunday at 10 A. M. with classes for old and young German and English speaking Americans.

Preaching in German at 11 A. M. and at 8:15 P. M. in English. The B. Y. P. U. offers every Sunday evening at 7:15 a service in English which is helpful, instructive and should prove a blessing to all who attend.

The mid-week Prayer-Service on Wednesday evening at 8:00 o'clock offers an opportunity for the soul to commune in a particular way with God.

Cash payment in the form of Government checks totaling $30,230 will come to 144 Ochiltree county farmers this year who signed corn-hog reduction contracts, the county agent estimates. They are taking 2015 hogs off the market.

What a small bit of rented cotton land can do toward living at home was illustrated last season by Mrs. J. H. Hitchcock, Laneview, Ellis county. From 25 cents' worth of pinto beans 9 bushels were gathered and 118 quarts of snap beans canned.

In Jones county the Expansion Committee of the county home demonstration council reports having helped 53 families can beets last winter, and having helped 11 families in making their clothing.

W. J. Caley, Brooks county dairyman, is in favor of the proposed dairy reduction program of the AAA but his cows have different notions. In two weeks in March they dropped 8 heifer calves.

Boston—Bowie county home demonstration club women have taken advantage of the cold weather in March to can 1557 quarts of meat, to cure 11,625 pounds of meat, and to make 504 pounds of American cheese, reports Miss Theo Jackson, home demonstration agent. The rain and cold have ruined many gardens, but this has not discouraged the women, Miss Jackson says. They are replanting their gardens as fast as possible. The average garden had fifteen vegetables growing in it before the freeze and soon will again. Four hundred and twenty-six fruit trees have been put out by these women at a cost of $8.52. This means the beginning of a better and more adequate supply of fruit in Bowie county homes.

Columbus—A one-act barnyard drama in Colorado county is described by W. H. Young, county agent. The first scene shows 104 disconsolate, lousy old hens, loafing in the barn lot, a total of 7 or 8 eggs per day in the egg basket, a discouraged young couple trying to pay grocery bills with egg money.

Scene two shows the county agent in response to a call for help directing the culling, de-lousing and worming of the flock. A quick trip to town and an all mash ration is put before the hens. It consists of 70 pounds yellow corn meal, 20 pounds shorts, 10 pounds meat scraps, 2 pounds bone meal, and 1 pound each of salt and oyster shell.

As the curtain goes up on the last scene, three weeks later, there are 54 contented, singing, happy old biddies; 45 eggs in the market basket each eventide, and a smiling and happy young couple—Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Schimck of Oakland.

Brady—Because drouth conditions prevented Theo Lyckman of Dodge, McCulloch county, from selling 92 lambs last December he fed them out in a 65-day demonstration with James D. Prewit, county agent, and cleared $344.08. They weighed 79 pounds when sold at Fort Worth and averaged $5.24 per head, in addition to 8 pounds of wool per head which brought $2.50 more. The total cost of lambs including beginning value and feed was $4 per head and the net profit $3.74 per head. The ration consisted of ground bundle feed, maize heads, cottonseed meal and an increased amount of corn toward the end of the feeding period. Self feeders were used. The lambs were treated with nicotine sulphate and bluestone at the start to rid them of stomach and tape worms.

Albany—Not only are planned crop production and planned land utilization being carried on in Shackelford county, but the garden demonstrators of the county are planning their gardens and planting according to the plan. Mrs. S. P. Boyett, garden demonstrator of the IbeX Home Demonstration Club, planned her garden to include 1000 feet tomatoes; 800 feet each of Irish potatoes and English peas; 600 feet cream peas; 400 feet sweet corn; 300 feet onions; 200 feet beans; 100 feet each of cabbage, rape, turnips, okra, lettuce and cucumbers; 75 feet spinach; 50 feet each of carrots, hot pepper, mustard, radishes and sweet pepper; and 25 feet of broccoli. Mrs. Boyett has already planted 680 feet of strawberries, blackberries, and dewberries in her garden, and has planned to standardize tomato juice as a product for her pantry this fall.
