GATESVILLE, TEXAS FRIDAY, FEB. 16, 1940

NUMBER 17

HE'LL BE HERE

Thinking Out Loud

"A straight line is the shortest distance between two points."—Euclid.

BY LYNN LANDRUM

You may not have known him by his picture in Tuesday's issue of the News, but here's what he does, and it's in The Dallas Morning News every day on Page one. You won't always agree with him, but just like his quotation from Euclid, he don't pull his punches.

By way of introduction, this'll introduce Mr. Lynn Landrum, who will be the "headline" speaker at the Gatesville Chamber of Commerce Banquet which should be enjoyed here by at least 500 people, just to hear this columnist.

Musical Jamboree At The Grove

W. J. Dube Jr. and his Musical Mascots who need no introduction to lovers of "rural rhythm" will be the center of attraction at The Grove Saturday night February 17 when they "swing out" in their first home "Musical Jamboree" of the year.

The Mascots have a partly re-organized band with additional talent added and have been making quite a hit in the rural communities of the county where they have been making personal appearances. The greatest thing about the big Jamboree, however, is the fact that it's all free to the public and everybody is cordially invited to be on hand Saturday night in The Grove High School Auditorium when the curtain goes up for the fun.

COUNTY SCHOOL BOARD TO MEET MONDAY

According to the County Superintendent, W. D. Stockburger, the County School Board will meet Monday, February 19, at 2 p. m. in the courthouse.

Boy Scouts Continue Week's Program

Boy Scouts of Gatesville will culminate their observance of the nation-wide Boy Scout Anniversary Week with a special religious service Sunday afternoon at four o'clock. The public is invited to the service in which the Scouts themselves will take prominent part and which is under the joint leadership of the three local ministers.

Meeting in the Presbyterian Church, the Scouts will act as ushers and otherwise take active part in the service. The message will be brought by the Rev. S. L. Culwell, Rev. C. M. Spalding and Rev. Edward S. Bayless will also take part.

The Boy Scouts of America have been celebrating their thirtieth anniversary during the past week. As a part of the local observance, the local troops have met for a brief program each day; had charge of the program at the Lions Club last week; and have engaged in other special activities. Tomorrow night all Scouts and leaders, with boys under twelve who are prospective Cubs (of a pack to be organized soon) as guests will meet for the annual Scout chicken barbecue. The service Sunday afternoon will bring the observance to a close.

Gatesville boasts the oldest troop in the Heart O' Texas Council. Troop 2 was organized more than two decades ago by Mr. J. M. Witcher, who still is the Scoutmaster.

The other troop, number 72, is less than one year old. Mr. Ray Ealy is Scoutmaster.

Chamber of Com. Meeting Tonight

According to postmaster J. Hurl McClellan a general meeting of the Gatesville Chamber of Commerce will be held tonight in the City Hall starting promptly at seven thirty.

Several important issues are due to be discussed at this meeting and everybody is urged to be present.

They Threw Us A Curve This Time

Our jobbers who sell us paper threw us a curve, which, however, was not our fault.

We stated in Tuesday's issue of the News that the Friday Edition would be on Texas newsprint. We are going to get it yet, but not for this issue.

Several car loads of this paper were due in Dallas early this week in time for us to get it for our Friday edition, but something went haywire, and it didn't even get to Dallas.

We're going to get it yet, and we have just erred in the dates. It's coming.

Press Club Takes Over Tuesday

A complete editorial staff from the Press Club of the local High School will be "in the saddle" here for our Tuesday Edition of the News.

This will be the Third Annual High School Edition of the News, since we inaugurated this feature edition three years ago.

Of course, our same mechanical and advertising staff will handle the business end, but the editorial work will be handled by a selected staff from the Gatesville High School Press Club.

Wednesday 7 p. m. each week we study the prophecy of Daniel in our prayer meeting at Jonesboro. We invite the public to come and study with us. Study chapter ten and eleven.

Unanimous endorsement of a movement to emphasize church attendance during March was given by the local ministers meeting in the office of Rev. C. M. Spalding Tuesday morning.
While agreeing that no one time is better than another for attending church, the pastors felt that much could be gained by a concerted effort at one time.
Cards are being prepared which will aid each church in a "Roll Call" of members each Sunday during the month. Everyone is urged to go to church every Sunday during March. Maybe you'll get the habit.

BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE'S UNION

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

WHEN a kid is just starting to grow up, he asks some funny questions. I don't suppose anybody can answer them and then keep up with the kid's arguments. Seems like the kid does his thinking without any prejudice to get mixed up with the result, or something. Anyway, he stumps the dad and the mother, and I guess that'd be the case, even if the kid had the smartest folks that ever lived. The kid can think as fast as a lot of people, but he kinda cuts across lots and don't get lost quite so easy.

The worst questions kids ask is about God and heaven and hell and all that, and they don't never seem to understand quite all their folks tells them. One kid that I was told about today says, "Mama, did God make all them elephants we saw at the circus?"

"Yes, Yes, sure. 'Twasn't hardly any trouble for Him, neither." So the kid looks around awhile and then asks, "And say, who made all these flies?"

The mother says, of course, that God made them, too. So the kid thinks it over a while and then says: "Well, it was all right for God to make me and the elephants. But seems to me like making flies is kinda triflin' business."

SONJA HENIE EVERYTHING HAPPENS at NIGHT

"THE PICK OF THE PICTURES"

SONJA HENIE GETS "ACTOR'S DIRECTOR"

Highly important to the screen career of Sonja Henie was the assignment of Irving Cummings to direct her newest 20th Century-Fox picture, "Everything Happens at Night" which opens Saturday at the Palace Theatre. Significant to all moviegoers is Cummings' promise that he is going to deliver a "new Sonja Henie" to the screen.

Known to filmdom as an "actor's director" Cummings has a great knack of drawing out of his performers the full amount of their talent. Having been a stage star and screen player for many years himself, he knows by intimate first-hand experience just what makes and actor tick and how to keep him ticking with the greatest efficiency.

When Sonja Henie was first signed up by 20th Centruy-Fox, not much was expected of her in acting ability; all that was wanted was her genius for skating. But she soon surprised everyone by developing a screen talent and personality that clicked with the fans and from picture to picture she has had to depend less upon the supporting cast to carry the story while she concentrated on skating.

Now that she can be counted upon as an acting star in her own right, with her artistry on the ice as an added attraction, Cummings decided to cultivate that ability to its greatest degree.

"I learned that the principal thing Sonja enjoys in pictures is the fantasy of being someone else. She likes to play and her boundless energy helps her to accomplish anything she wants, but she doesn't like being driven.

"Consequently I try to keep the atmosphere on the set free of heaviness or the feeling of a job that must be done. We work as though it were all fun and Sonja responds to it."

Featured in support of Sonja in "Everything Happens at Night" are Ray Milland and Robert Cummings. Darryl F. Zanuck was in charge of production.

BETWEEN BOTTLES

By W. MAT JONES JR'S. "GHOST WRITER"

Folks, the "fan" mail has been coming in, that is, since St. Valentine's Day, and I've really made some mailing lists. Me and Mr. J. Hurl McClellan, the Postmaster, over at the Post Office have just about gone in cahoots.

These Valentine cards, as funny as they are, and as well smeared up with read and other loud colors, don't attract my eye, tho, nearly as much as the sound of a bottle warmer does to my ears, or the sight of Mom bringing me a bottle, topped by a soft nipple.

I'll just tell you, a little glass, rubber and milk go a long way to being "My World" so far. There just ain't anything better.

Pop took off and left Me and Mom flat. Last year Mom went with him to the Golden Gloves Tournament in Fort Worth and, believe it or not, she really enjoyed every minute of it, so she says.

Believe me, if that event is in Gatesville next year and if Pop goes to Cowtown to see the leather hurlers, he just as well count on three on this trip instead of one. He just can't get away with it.

Been steppin' out lately, and it's funny to listen to the ladies gush about "How Cute," and all that sort of stuff, but even Pop says it's all so, but, sometimes I give 'em a laugh and turn over and either start sleepin' or howlin'. Either way shoo's them away.

I get the "water bottle" once in a while, and that's when I put on an exhibition. They think I'm a monkey, as I work all fours, and can already bat that bottle half-way across the room. The stuff's bad enough inside, and a lot worse outside, specially, when your neck and ears come in contact with it. That's when I really buck.

Three hours have passed, and here's another 5 ounces—they're giving me "hush-ounces" now.

Spaghetti goes to a Party as a hot buffet dish

By Dorothy Greig

MEN are really responsible for the swing in party food from fluff to good honest dishes—at parties at which men are guests. At gatherings for "the girls" the food is something else again, which is all right, too. We can bear with each other's flights of fancy, and enjoy them.

A big bowl of spaghetti and another one of meat sauce come together as a hot buffet dish.

Men, however, are different. We all know how gingerly they poke at an unaccustomed dish and with what frank suspicion they view it. So a smart hostess caters to her men guests by serving foods they recognize and enjoy. Almost any good food is likely to turn up at a modern party.

One gay young hostess we know scored a big hit recently with a spaghetti dish served quite informally from a buffet. Accompanying it was a tomato and meat sauce, blended with keen seasonings and cooked down until it was thick and rich. Over that spaghetti it was wonderful.

This is how she made it:

Spaghetti, Italiane Style

Meat Sauce:

- 4 tablespoons olive oil
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 3 tablespoons garlic, finely chopped
- 2 medium onions, chopped (2 cupfuls)
- 1 pound beef, ground
- 2 cups mushrooms (sliced)
- 2 cans condensed consommé
- 2 cans condensed tomato soup
- 2 cans tomato paste (6 oz. size)
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper

Cook the finely chopped garlic and onion in the butter and olive oil until soft, but not brown. Add the ground beef and mushroom slices and continue sauteing until they are brown. Then add the consommé, tomato soup, tomato paste and seasonings. Cover and simmer 20-30 minutes to blend thoroughly the flavors.

Spaghetti:

- 2 boxes spaghetti (9 oz. size)
 - Grated Parmesan Cheese
- Cook the spaghetti in boiling salt water until tender.
- To serve:—Serve a generous portion of spaghetti on the plate with a large spoonful of meat sauce poured over the spaghetti. Sprinkle with Parmesan Cheese. Serves 12.

Another spaghetti dish that would be good for an informal occasion is this one: (It serves fewer people.)

Italiane Spaghetti with Chicken Livers and Mushrooms

Sauce:

- 4 tablespoons butter
- 4 tablespoons olive oil
- 5 cloves garlic, finely chopped
- 1 onion (chopped)
- 1/2 pound chicken livers, sliced
- 1 cup mushrooms, sliced
- 2 cans condensed tomato soup
- 1 can tomato paste (6 oz. size)
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper

Cook the finely chopped garlic and onion in the butter and olive oil until soft, but not brown. Add the sliced chicken livers and mushroom slices and continue sauteing until they are browned. Then add the tomato soup, tomato paste and seasonings. Cover and simmer 20-30 minutes to blend the flavor.

Spaghetti:

- 1 box spaghetti (9 oz. size)
 - Grated Parmesan Cheese
- Cook the spaghetti in boiling salt water until tender.

To serve: Serve a generous portion of spaghetti on the plate with a large spoonful of sauce over the spaghetti. Sprinkle with Parmesan Cheese. Serves 6.

And as a final kindness to guests, cut the spaghetti down, say, from yard lengths to foot long lengths. Guests can then wind them forkwise in the traditional method, but they don't have to work so hard at it.

Hornets Win County Championship; Trim Irish Quintet 24-19

The Gatesville High School Hornets registered their 2nd straight victory in as many starts over the Ireland Cardinals when they clashed in the Ireland gymnasium Wednesday night, giving the local team two victories out of a possible three and the championship of the county.

Both teams played a wild and ragged game throughout the fray and the Hornets were trailing 7-3 at the first quarter and 8-9 at the end of the first half. In the second half, however, the Gatesville quint settled down to work and by the time the third quarter had elapsed they were out in front 14-9, thus holding the Irish lads scoreless in the third stanza of the game.

Lemmer of Ireland who played so brilliantly in the first game here Tuesday night again starred for the Cardinals and Ward was high for Gatesville with ten points. Moore also turned in an excellent game and Scheonewolf sparked on the defense.

In the first game of the Championship series the Hornets were hosts to the "Irish" quint and a full house saw the locals march to a thrilling 25 to 20 victory. The Ireland team sparked by Lemmer, sensational scoring forward, put up a hard fight and at no time during the game did it look like the victory was in the bag for the Hornets. Every man on the floor turned in a creditable performance with Lemmer of Ireland and Wittie, Koch and Moore of Gatesville sparkling on the offense.

Scoring honors went to Lemmer who rang up 14 points during the game and Wittie was tops for Gatesville with 7. The game was exceptionally close during the first half with the first quarter ending 6-5 in the Hornets favor and the half 13-9.

A complete schedule of the games that will be played in the district meet is being worked out and as soon as it is available it will be presented in the News for the benefit of the sport fans over the county who wish to follow the Hornets in their fight for district honors.

Miss Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Miller, has been riding since she was three months old. Her ancestry dates back to the early days of the cattle business in Texas.

Plainview Jr. Lose To Jr. Hornettes

The Gatesville High School Jr. Hornettes coached by Charlie Barton annexed another victory by downing the Plainview Jr. Girls 16-22 in the local gym Tuesday night. Getting off to an early lead the Gatesville Juniors had very little trouble with the Plainview Lassies and kept the ball on their end of the court during most of the fray.

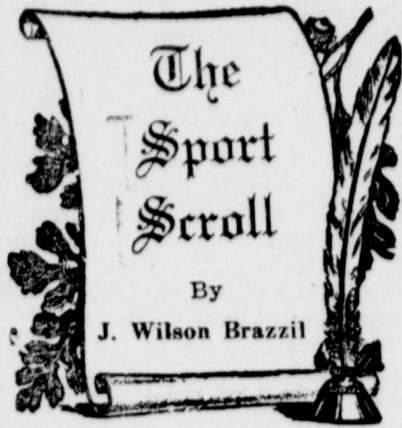

Williamson of the local team sparkled on the offense and tallied 12 points to capture the scoring honors. Scott was next highest for Gatesville with seven. Whisenhunt, Shoaf and Tumlinson turned in a good game at the forward positions on the Plainview team but were handicapped by the expert defense work of the Gatesville guards. Tumlinson was high for Plainview with 11 points.

Here's the lineups: Gatesville; Williamson, Scott, Johnson, White, Turner, Featherston, Hill, Chandler, Miller and Scott.

Plainview; Whisenhunt, Shoaf, Miller, Hayes, Lengefeld, Newton, Curry, Hogan, and Tumlinson.

CEMETERY WORKING AT PURMELA

Monday, February 19, the Purmela community is going to clear up the brush in front of the Smith cemetery. Everybody who is interested is asked to come, and bring your axe and rake.

The sport spotlight was focused on Fort Worth last night as approximately 160 boxers, including the eight winners from the local Lions Club Golden Gloves Boxing tournament started "batting it out" for the championship.

Six Bell county boys, Jack Baker, Dick Jackson, George Blaylock, Cotton Brisbin, Brownlow Miller and Alvin Lueck who practically carried away all the trophies at the Gatesville tourney, left for Fort Worth yesterday morning.

In the Bell county group, Lueck seems to be the most promising pugilist of the lot, and is expected to make a nice showing in the Fort Worth show. Preacher Jones of Baylor also showed up fine in the Gatesville Tourney and regardless of the fact that he is a new comer in the ring he'll probably cause a lot of trouble before he is eliminated from the running.

The class B girls basketball tournament which will be held at Jonesboro this week end is due to draw quite a crowd if weather conditions prove favorable as most of the teams competing for the championship seem to be on equal grounds.

The Gatesville High School Hornets annexed the County Championship by defeating the Ireland Cardinals in the first two games of the Championship series. Ireland who was quite a "dark horse" in the basketball race until they eliminated Jonesboro in the Class B tournament at Oglesby last week, put up a stiff battle for the championship but lost the two opening games of the series one of which was played in the local gym and the other at Ireland. Had a third game been necessary a coin would have probably been tossed to decide the location of the final game.

Jonesboro Lassies Trim Ireland

Monday night at Turnersville the Ireland sextette collided with the Jonesboro girls and lost 22-18. Hampton of Ireland is credited with one of the best performances of the evening and put up a classy battle all the way. Both teams have nice records thus far this season and will be in the thick of the battle when the Class B tourney gets underway at Jonesboro Friday of this week.

Census Practically Completed Here

Mrs. Blanche Walker and John M. Witcher, enumerators for Coryell county in the Business and Manufacturers Census, have completed practically all the county except for Gatesville, and they are winding up their work in this city now, District Supervisor Carlton Smith of Waco reports. They expect, at the latest, to have their final schedules in by shortly after the first of March.

Coryell county has the distinction of having one of the two women enumerators chosen in the whole district, says Smith. Mrs. Walker and Mrs. R. V. Ferguson of Bosque county are the women, and he commends their work as being as thorough, accurate and quick as that of his men enumerators in Coryell and the other four counties of District No. 11 Smith as well as Mrs. Walker and Mr.

Witcher, compliment Coryell county business men on cooperating with them for a careful survey of business here.

For the Population and Agriculture Census, a number of inquiries from this county as well as from other counties of the district have already come into his headquarters in the Federal Building at Waco, says Supervisor Smith. He will not know definitely what the plan of action is to be until his return from a supervisor's school of instruction at Dallas the latter part of March. There he will learn how many enumerators he will be allowed, what provisions will be made for training them, and what compensation will be paid them for their work.

The survey of population and agriculture must be completed in the month of April, however, says Smith. Towns and cities will be completed within the first two weeks and rural areas by the end of the month, as enumerators have to fill out farm as well as population schedules for those living in the country. The farm schedules ask for information about crops, acreage, livestock and farm income.

On his return from Dallas, Supervisor Smith will select from those whose formal applications are on file in his office at Waco a number of people whose ability, education and experience make them seem suitable candidates for enumerators. They are required to take instruction and undergo a series of tests, which will be sent to Washington for final grades. Showing that candidates for enumerators' positions make during this school of instruction will largely determine their suitability for the work. The Bureau of Census has asked that particular care be taken in the selection of census-takers, as it hopes to point to the 1940 census as the most accurate ever taken.

GERMAN ECONOMIC STRESS Part II

Realizing that the sea blockade cannot be 100 per cent effective as long as Hitler has access to supplies in Southeastern Europe, the Allies have taken measures designed to deprive Germany of materials in this region.

The Allied strategy is to purchase all surplus supplies of neutral states selling to Germany paying gold in exchange. Herr Hitler has difficulty in counteracting this form of blockade, as his main difficulty in the economic field is that he has virtually no cash. He must depend upon barter.

This policy has worked to the Allies advantage except with the one commodity which Hitler needs most of all, the product which is imperative for the continued functioning of his industrial and war machines—oil. Oil, in the opinion of Allied military strategists, may in the long run prove to be one of the deciding factors in the defeat of Germany.

Germany, it is estimated, requires a minimum of 12,000,000 to 15,000,000 tons of oil a year. She produces a maximum of only about 3,000,000 tons, synthetically and from Galicia.

Under a new agreement concluded in December with Rumania, the Germans are to receive 2,280,000 tons a year, which includes shipments to make up for included non-deliveries.

Russia's promise of 1,000,000 tons of oil for Germany within a year has not been fulfilled, less than half that quota having been delivered.

That leaves Germany 6,000,000 to 8,000,000 tons short of minimum requirements. There is no other oil to be had in all of Europe.

And the Nazis cannot now be assured of continued deliveries of Rumanian oil because of physical and diplomatic obstacles.

The Danube delta has been frozen for weeks, preventing the shipment of oil to Germany by barges and river tankers. The German canal system is disrupted by the coldest weather in over ten years. German railways, deteriorated by years of neglect under the Nazi regime, are totally inadequate to meet the normal war needs and to bring in large quantities of imported oil. As a consequence, the Germans are receiving only a small trickle of the oil contracted for.

Furthermore, the Allies are exerting strong diplomatic pressure on Rumania to curtail shipments of oil to the Reich. Since approximately 80 per cent of Rumanian oil production is owned or controlled by British, French and other foreign interests, the Allies are unwilling for the Germans to use Rumania as a supply house for her oil requirements.

Recently King Carol's Government instituted authority over the oil companies in such a way as to force them to supply fuel for the Reich's military machine. The oil companies have already been forced to accept a reduced price, since a German-Rumanian economic agreement has established the exchange rate for German purchases of petroleum products, wood products and cereals.

In retaliation, Britain and France have warned the Rumanian government that they may be forced to discontinue economic relationships with her unless there is a satisfactory solution of the oil conflict. The Allies are understood to have informed the Rumanian cabinet that if Rumania persists in the plan to force French and British oil companies in that country to furnish oil to Germany, all trade relations may be broken off.

What will Hitler do to bolster his internal in order to procure adequate war supplies for his armies? The next few months will most likely provide the answer to this question, perhaps in a desperate "blitzkrieg" designed to break the allied resistance.

CHAPTER I SYNOPSIS

Johnny Potter, Annapolis man kicked out of the Navy, is shanghaied aboard a submarine which his friend, Skipper Joe, has outfitted for pearl fishing. When they fight with a native chief, the two are forced to flee. The submarine's oil supply runs low and they put in to an uncharted island. The drunken Johnny is amazed to find that the island is inhabited by a beautiful white girl, Dea, who was shipwrecked ten years before, and her pet chimpanzee, Koko.

CHAPTER V

JOHNNY closed his aching eyes and tried to think. What was he doing in this jungle pent house? How had he gotten there? Where was Joe? And how did this beautiful girl happen to be on this otherwise uninhabited island?

Noting his silence, Dea feared he had fainted. Gently she attempted different interpretation on Johnny's words. "Koko!" the girl called. "Help me."

As Dea and the chimp started loosening his bonds, Johnny instinctively drew away from the big ape. Dea laughed. "Don't be afraid. You're my friend, so you're Koko's friend. Show him, Koko." The chimp obediently thrust out a hairy paw.

Johnny looked at the girl's serious expression and decided he had better go through with these foolish gestures. Shaking Koko's hand ceremoniously, Johnny said: "It's a pleasure to know you, Koko. And how is Mrs. Koko?"

"He's Mrs. Koko," Dea giggled.

"I get it. Just a couple of bachelor girls."

"What does that mean?"

seized the rope and started down hand over hand. "Thanks and goodbye," he called.

Dea frowned and bit her lip as she watched Johnny nearing the ground. Then she signalled Koko. The ape understood. Seizing a couple of heavy stones, Koko stepped into the other basket. As Koko dropped, Johnny was yanked back to the tree-house platform. In his swift ascent a branch of the tree caught in his clothing and tore a huge rip through both shirt and trousers.

Johnny surveyed himself disgustingly. "I thought a branch clipped me in that non-stop flight," he muttered. "Hey! I can't go around like this," he added, clutching his torn clothing.

to roll sack an eyelid. At the touch Johnny jumped. "Ouch!" he bellowed. "That's my eye!"

"I'm sorry," Dea was really contrite. "I thought you were sick. But you act the same as Pop."

Pop? When does he show up?"

"He's gone," Dea explained sadly. "He put me on this raft"—she gestured toward an ancient rubber life raft—"it was in a typhoon."

Johnny realized that he had been too flippant. "How long ago was that?" he asked sympathetically.

"Oh, I don't know—but I was little then." With her hand she indicated her height when she had reached the island. Looking at her, Johnny suddenly realized that mentally she was still that little girl of ten years before.

"And you've been here all alone, ever since?" he asked.

"Only the first year. Then Koko came. He and I built this house from shipwrecked things we found on the beach. It took us a long time." Her mind suddenly swung to another thought. "Why were you drunk? It wasn't raining."

A queer little kid, Johnny thought. Better not be too grown up with her. "Why was I drunk? It wasn't raining—" Johnny repeated to himself.

"Pop always got drunk when it rained—and I tied him up, just as I tied you up."

"And when it quit raining and he got better, you untied him?"

Dea nodded. "Well, I'm better and you can see it isn't raining," Johnny pointed out, "so I'm fit to be untied."

"You won't start breaking things when you get up?"

It dawned on Johnny that "Pop" must have suffered from fighting hangovers. "Your Pop must have been a wonderful guy," he grinned.

"You bet," Dea agreed, putting a

"You'll see when the tidal wave comes." She grinned. "Up here we'll be safe and dry."

"I forgot you haven't been around." Johnny thought silently for a moment. "Look," he said at last, "not that it's any of my business but how did I get here?"

"We brought you."

"I must have been in great shape." The last of the ropes dropped away and Johnny stretched his cramped muscles. He tried to rise and would have fallen if he had not thrown an arm over Dea's shoulders.

The physical contact had a startling effect on Dea. She stared at Johnny for a moment and then pushed him away. Still dazed by his hangover, Johnny completely missed the significance of this incident. "I need a drink badly," he muttered.

Dea nodded. "I know—Pop always did, too." She picked up a ripe coconut, tapped it and handed it to Johnny. "Drink that. It's good."

"But that's cocoanut milk," Johnny protested.

"That's all there is here," Dea insisted.

"You may be a babe in the woods but you ought to know about people like me, if your Pop was as good as you say he was," Johnny growled. "When us boys need a drink, we need a drink." He crossed to the hole in the platform through which Dea's primitive elevator operated,

Dea laughed and crossed to a battered sea chest, salvage from some long-lost vessel. Opening the box, the girl selected a bolt of brightly colored cloth. "Watch. I'll make you a pareu," she said. For a few minutes she worked busily, tearing and sewing the cloth.

Johnny surveyed the completed garment with disgust. "Can't you make long pants?" he demanded.

"Go over there and put it on. You'll get used to it," the girl insisted.

"All right. You win," Johnny said.

Dea pointed to a crack between two planks of the floor. "Walk the line," she ordered.

Johnny stared at her in annoyance. "Games are all right," he muttered, then stopped as the truth dawned on him. "The sobriety test! Uh-uh. Not me."

"Pop used to do it."

"Your Pop was a sucker ever to put you on that raft," Johnny muttered angrily. He stared down at the ground. "Of all the silly things! A jungle pent house! What's the matter? Can't you stand the noise of traffic?"

"Traffic? What's that?"

"What are we doing fifty feet in the air?"

"It's safe," the girl explained. "Safe from what? Tigers? Lions? Elephants?"

"Water."

"Water! Way up here?" Johnny was incredulous.

"You'll see when the tidal wave comes." She grinned. "Up here we'll be safe and dry."

"Dry is right. Are you sure you haven't got a drink?"

Dea shook her head and handed Johnny another freshly opened coconut. Johnny regarded it in disgust but drank at last.

Dea smiled happily to herself.

Log-Cabin Birthplace of Garner Backgrounds His Sturdy Character

Log cabin still standing in Blossom Prairie in Red River County, Texas, where John N. Garner was born.

"I WILL ACCEPT the nomination for President. I will make no effort to control any delegates. The people should decide. The candidate should be selected at primaries and conventions as provided by law, and I sincerely trust that all Democrats will participate in them."

John N. Garner

UVALDE, Texas—(Special)—Deep-rooted patriotism, straight thinking and rugged honesty are three of the salient characteristics of Vice President John Nance Garner, who may be the last of America's log-cabin presidents. The other day, when Mr. Garner, in a terse, pungent, statement of 44 words, announced that his hat was definitely in the presidential ring, the life of Uvalde's leading citizen drew the national spotlight. It was pointed out that the log cabin in Blossom Prairie, Red River county, Texas, where Mr. Garner was born, is still standing.

Garner's statement made it plain that he was a presidential candidate for himself alone and had no interest in delegates any further than that he stressed the sentence: "I will make no effort to control any delegates."

The Garner statement followed a nationwide radio address by E. B. Germany, co-chairman with Miss Clara Driscoll of the Garner-for-President committee. Mr. Germany, whose headquarters are in Dallas, predicted that Garner would accept the candidacy and become active for the nomination.

A boyhood crony of the vigorous vice-president recently was asked whether Garner would accept the nomination. To the question he replied: "He ain't said yes and he ain't said no. But he ain't never failed us yet." Today the world has the answer to the question.

Friends and supporters of the distinguished Texan predicted today that the United States was ripe for the Garner brand of leadership. "He's a conservative liberal," one of them indicated, "he's the kind of a conservative that would preserve liberalism and save us the best things from all recent liberal movements and eliminate some of the unworkable things. He'd maintain the ship of state on an even keel, and that's what we all want."
