'Round These Parts

They say there's a Rodeo and Frontier Celebration coming to Gatesville and Coryell County, and here's a few of the highlights as we received them from City Secretary Eiland Lovejoy.

Everett E. Colburn, moves the World's Championship Rodeo stock to Gatesville, which is the big show at Madison Square Garden, New York.

"Hell's Angel" one of Colburn's horses was voted the World's Greatest Bucking Horse by rodeo promoters and producers, sponsored by Levi Strauss & Co., manufacturers of rider's pants.

Other "wilduns" will be Home Brew, Top of the Windmill, Harry Tracy, Walter Winchell, Brown Jug, Dizzy Dean, Red Gold, Black Diamond, etc.

The Brahmas are said to be as bad as they were last year—if you remember just how bad that was.

The Parade, too, will feature parade horses silver mounted saddles, Flags, floats, etc., etc.

Clyde Kline, nationally famous rodeo clown of Beggs, Oklahoma, who has played shows in Sidney, Iowa, Little Rock, Arkansas, Tulsa, Oklahoma City, will present his mules, Charlie McCarthy and Mortimer Snerd.

Contracts and entry blanks have been mailed to all top hands in the USA and the prizes are to be high enough to assure their being here. Too, the local association is registered in the National Rodeo Association, or whatever it is, and there'll be no conflict in dates.

John Jordan, announcer, recently announced the Houston and San Angelo shows, and also worked New York last fall. He won the North American Championship trophy as a bronc rider at Calgary, Canada. He'll know what he's talking about when he gets before the speaker.

An added feature will be the horse back quadrille which will feature such riders as O. Carter Ray and C. of P. F. Farquhar, and a number of local riderettes.

WORD RANKIN IS OUT FOR COUNTY CLERK OF CORYELL

To the people of Coryell County: In the announcement column of this issue of the Coryell County News will be found my name as a candidate for the office of County Clerk of Coryell county.

I have given mature consideration to the matter of making this race and have discussed it with numerous friends throughout the county, and I appreciate the words of encouragement that I have received. With the training I have had, and twenty years business experience, I believe I am qualified to discharge the duties of this office in a manner that will merit your approval.

Eight years ago I was a candidate for Tax Collector of this county, and I will ever be grateful to the people of Coryell County for the support I received and the courtesy shown me during that campaign.

It is my intention to make a close canvass of the county and personally solicit your support and influence. However, if I should fail to see anyone I want you to give my candidacy your fair and honest consideration; and I assure my friends and the voters throughout the county that I shall appreciate any word or act done in my behalf, and if elected will endeavor to render efficient service and to be courteous at all times.

Thanking you all for your earnest consideration of my candidacy, I am

Sincerely yours,

It was A. L. Mann's. It's back in.

Anyhow, Mr. Mann, deserves this, and we're tickled to give it to him, and emphasize that he's still in the race for District Clerk.

CORYELL 2ND IN STATE-WIDE SWINE IMPROVEMENT CONTEST: BURLESON 1ST

Coryell County came out second in the Texas Swine Breeders' Association state-wide swine contest, and Burleson county 4-H Club won the $100 first prize. Practically every county in the state entered the contest.

The Burleson boys, by their Registered Hog Association nosed out th Coryell boys, and they are registering this year, 1400 pigs. This Burleson association is the only one of its kind in Texas, and each boy is required to pay one dollar for each sow or gilt they own at the time of application for membership. They also deposit one dollar in the association's treasury each time they sell a pig for breeding purposes. This money is used for advertising their pigs and for purchasing outstanding boars with which to improve their stock.

One of the Burleson county boy's hogs was Wave Line II which won the National Grand Champion in 1937.

Thru an extensive advertising campaign, the Burleson county Registered hog association has sold pigs in nearly ever section of Texas, and a large number have been sold in New Mexico, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana. Last year they sold $8710 worth of breeding hogs.

Coryell's second place netted $50.00, and Lubbock, 3rd made $25.00. Coryell won first place in 1939.

DELEGATES TO STATE DEMOCRATIC PARLEY NAMED: HARMONIOUS MEETING

"IT MIGHT HAVE HAPPENED" (AND IT COULD BE YOU)

(This is a purely imaginary story with purely imaginary characters. But "it might have happened." Indeed, something like it has happened, no doubt, many times. A second "might have happened" story will appear next week.)

The third day that Joseph Josephson was sick, they sent for the doctor. They waited as long as they could, because it costs $6.50 every time a doctor drives the ten miles out to their farm. When he arrived, the doctor found Joe in pretty bad shape. He had the "flu" he said, with symptoms of pneumonia. He'd be back tomorrow to see how he was getting along.

Mrs. Josephson did all she could but with the children at school she had to be out of the house a good bit tending to things and leaving Joe to himself. The neighbors would come in when they knew, but nobody had come in this day. It was a busy season.

Next day the doctor knew that his fears had been well grounded. Joe had pneumonia.

Money costs were now thrown to the winds. Everything must be done to save Joe's life. Friends would be in, to be sure; but Joe needed more expert attention; so a nurse was called. The doctor was out every day. Often there two or three trips to town in one day for extra medicine, sheets (it took to raining and clothes wouldn't dry), and other things. And one nite when things looked worse for Joe, two men rushed out and phoned the doctor at 2:00 in the morning. He came out, of course, and everyone felt safer.

Pneumonia is serious business. It was ten days before everything had returned to normal and Joe was on the road to recovery.

But the bills! The doctor had called nine times—and they had wished for him a dozen times besides. That was $58.50. The nurse had been paid, and that took $56. and of course this $114.50 didn't count medicine, gasoline for the trips to town, and all the countless little things that amount up so rapidly when sick folks are in the house. The hundred dollars just began to pay the costs.

Even so, however, Joe had been lucky. It had been less than a year since Bill, just six miles up the road, had died with the same thing. Everyone feels that if the roads had been good and it hadn't taken the doctor an hour and a half to get out one nite, Bill would be living today.

And then there was Joe's sister, who nearly died before they could drive those fifty miles to a hospital for the emergency operation.

Yes Joe was pretty lucky. But how much safer he would have been, and how much money would have been saved, if the Coryell County Hospital had been built then.

Joe knows this. He says that even tho he may never be sick again, he wants to feel safe, and feel that his family is safe. He is going to vote for the hospital bond issue on May 25, you may be sure!

Written by the Hospital Publicity Committee.

A committee composed of B. B. Garrett, H. K. Jackson and Dr. Ralph Bailey were named to name the delegates and the committee reported on the names of the delegates and they were ratified in open convention by a majority vote.

The convention voted to endorse the national administration of President Roosevelt and also the action of both Senator Tom Connally and Morris Shepperd.

N. W. BURTON PASSES AWAY AT CORYELL CHURCH

N. W. Burton, long time resident of Coryell Church community, died at the home of a son, Lesley V. Burton, Friday afternoon, May 3, at 5:30. While Mr. Burton had been in declining health for several months, he was a kind patient, always remembering to be most appreciative to those administering to his needs.

Mr. Burton and his wife reared a family of worthwhile citizens, all of whom had several years ago married and maintained homes of their own. It is impossible to obtain a list of the relative's names at this time, but there is a host of them and a goodly number of them were in attendance at the funeral services which were held at Coryell Church Saturday afternoon at 4:30 with the Rev. A. Loper of the State Training School bringing a message of comfort to the bereaved family that included the following of his own children, Mrs. Della Atkins of Waco, Mrs. Ethel Adcock of Eddy, Lesley and Luther of Coryell Church community, and Lee of Crawford, several grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Mr. Burton also leaves several sisters and brothers who were with him in his last illness. They as well as the other members of the Burton family endeared themselves to the whole of the Coryell Church community during the time of their stay among us.

Mr. Burton was more than 81 years of age at the time of his going. Those of us who knew this man admired him much for his good traits of character, and we would say to all his family and friends to try to live as he did. The floral offering showed this esteem.

Active pallbearers were, Theon Hall, Claude Knight, Walter Smith Nevitt Boyd, Bud Johnson, and Willie Roe. Lee's of McGregor was in charge of arrangements. Interment was made in the Coryell cemetery. Written by Mrs. Ruth Wood Shomell.

THE OUTLOOK FOR THE DEMOCRATS

The Democratic National Convention, meeting in July at Chicago, will await the word of one individual before choosing the nominees of the party. The decision of President Roosevelt about a third term will determine the actions of the 1,094 assembled delegates.

With 305 pledged delegates at this writing, Mr. Roosevelt undoubtedly can have the nomination uncontested if he wants it. If he declines to run again, he probably can dictate the ticket for 1940. That, in brief, is the present status of Democratic politics.

During May the Democrats will choose at least 329 more delegates in 18 states, leaving a sizable number to be selected in June.

With all intraparty opposition crushed or compromised, the new deal group has successfully surmounted the first obstacle toward the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt. Obstacles to be hurdled are a "yes" answer from the White House and the general election in November.

To intimates, Mr. Roosevelt has confided recently that he does not intend to run again. But this does not mean that he will not yield to the blandishments of his friends strong organized support thruout the country for a third term, and the possibility of the war abroad engulfing new territories.

Cordell Hull continues to be mentioned as the outstanding possibility to head the ticket if the President declines to run. Mr. Roosevelt would approve of a ticket headed by Hull, but personally would prefer to have Attorney General Bob Jackson as the nominee. If Hull is named for president, Jackson will be advanced by the new dealers for the vice-presidency, where he will clash with the ambitions of one Jim Farley.

Senator Wheeler of Montana is another strong possibility for the Democrats. He would meet the definition of "liberal" enunciated by the President, but the personal antagonism between the two engendered by the court fight may prevent the approving nod from Mr. Roosevelt.

Although professing optimism about the election, the third terms are greatly concerned over signs of Republican resurgence throughout the East and Middle West.

The most recent poll by Dr. Gallup, for example, gives the Republicans majorities in a Mid-western area embracing Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, and N. Dakota. In these states 54 per cent prefer to see the Republicans win this year. Only 37 per cent will vote for Mr. Roosevelt if he runs.

In Illinois and Wisconsin, 55 per cent favor the Republicans; in Nebraska, 51 per cent. This sentiment represent a shift from 59 per cent Democratic preference in 1936 in Illinois, 68 per cent in Wisconsin, and 58 per cent in Nebraska.

These states are all traditionally Republican. In 1916, 1932 and 1936 they joined the ranks of the Democrats and now hold the balance of power between the two major parties. Now, it looks as though they are shifting to the GOP again. Local elections as early as 1937 showed the trend gaining for the Republicans. The 1938 congressional elections verified the shift and recent by-elections prove the momentum of the drift.

In the Illinois presidential primaries this spring, the Dewey vote plus the anti-third term vote of Garner exceeded the Roosevelt vote by 20,000. This did not take into account all the 150,000 Republicans who were prevented from voting in the republican primary in Chicago but will be voting in November.

In 1938 Pennsylvania shifted back to the Republican column by a state-wide majority of 400,000 votes after going for Roosevelt in 1936. This year, in the primary races, the Republicans took 55 per cent of the total votes cast.

Against this revived Republican strength the Democrats must launch their forces for the November drive for votes.

SECOND ROUND OF BASEBALL LEAGUE STARTS SUN.: FOUR GAMES SCHEDULED

The second round of the Coryell County News Baseball Cup Race gets underway Sunday afternoon, May 12th with four interesting games scheduled to take place.

The Blackfoot Indians, one of the strongest prospects in the league go to Topsey where they are expected to chalk up their second straight victory in as many starts. Last Sunday afternoon in their opening game of the season they took a 7-5 decision from the Mound club on the Blackfoot diamond while Topsey lost to the strong Pidcoke "Cokers" at Pidcoke. McBroom and Barton who hurled the Indians to victory last Sunday will probably get the call again in this game while Roye is due to start for Topsey.

Plainview coasted to an easy victory over the Coryell City aggregation in their initial clash and will be pitted against Pidcoke at Plainview Sunday. Both teams are fairly evenly matched but Pidcoke is recognized as a slight favorite to win. A feature attraction in this contest will be a pitching duel between Rutherford of Pidcoke and Hall of Plainview, a couple of youthful hurlers who will be struggling desperately for mound supremacy.

The Mound team plays host to Jonesboro Sunday and this game is also expected to create quite a sensation, Marion "Scaley" Holcomb, Flat high school hurling ace will try to redeem himself after losing to Blackfoot last Sunday, and with a little luck the Jonesboro sluggers are likely to find their hits few and far between. Jonesboro, however, has several old time diamond greats on their lists and the brilliant schoolboy may have to put out a little extra to pull these seasoned sluggers. Whaley and Wicker may also see service on the mound.

The fourth battle of the day is due at Turnersville when Turnersville meets Coryell City. Turnersville lost to Jonesboro in their opening game and Coryell City lost to Plainview and this probably will be a jam up game as both teams are anxious to break into the win column. Turnersville appears to have a slight advantage in the pitching staff and is therefore favored to win.

HUBERT DAVIS TO GRADUATE FROM OGLESBY HIGH SCHOOL

Hubert Davis, formerly of GHS, but since enrolled in Phillips High at Birmingham, Alabama, Byrd & Forest Park in Shreveport, La., in Crawford Public Schools, and last in Oglesby High School, our neighbor high school, will graduate this spring.

He says, "Last but not least in importance is Oglesby High", but he also says that maybe it would have paid him to have stayed in one school and not have been the product of so many, as he is the highest ranking student of the Senior class so far as average for this school year goes, but—no, he won't be valedictorian since he has not attended there four years. Hubert now lives in the Coryell Church community with his mother, Mrs. Ruth Shomell, and rides a bus into Oglesby.

Plainview Wallops Coryell City 12-3

Here's a brief report on the Coryell City-Plainview baseball game that was played at Coryell City Sunday afternoon which was received too late to be published in Tuesday's issue of the News.

Not hits and no scores were made in the first inning but Coryell made two runs in the second and one in the fifth. The Plainview club put their first run over the plate in the fourth inning and continued to pile up throughout the remainder of the game.

Tooter Hall and Johnnie Bell did the hurling for Plainview, holding the Coryell City lads down to eight hits. At the end of the 7th Coryell City called it a day and the final score read; Coryell City 3, Plainview 12.

We are indebted to E. R. Johnson of Gatesville Route 3 for sending us the statistics on this game.

Flat Yellowjackets To Play Hornets

One of the most colorful high school baseball games of the season is due to take place at Flat next Wednesday, May 15 when the Flat Yellowjackets meet the Gatesville High School Hornets. These teams are old diamond rivals and each has quite a large number of fans.

Flat has practically cinched the High School race and so far this season are undefeated. The Hornets also have had a very successful season and though they are likely to defeat the youthful Flat it will not effect the league standing, as several of the Hornet regulars are ineligible.

HOME IN CORYELL CHURCH COMMUNITY BURNS

The home on the farm of Charlie Maetlage in the Coryell Church community was completely destroyed by fire Tuesday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Lesley V. Burton were living there at the time, and had been residing there for several years. It will be remembered that Mr. Burton's father passed away this week.

This family saved very little of their household furnishings. The community gave them a shower Wednesday and replaced some of their loss.

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

THEY tell great stories in books and papers about tenderfoot guys that came out west and got thrown off horses. Seems like there ain't anything funnier than getting thrown off a horse, if the guy that gets bumped is a tenderfoot from the east, according to these cert writers of books and things. Now I never could see much fun in anybody getting thrown real hard. It really ain't as much sport as you might think, even for a salesman from the east. And, as a matter of fact, no cow man with any sense would let a tenderfoot climb up on a real bad pony. These cowpunchers don't like funerals half as well as a lot of fiction writers think they do.

Well, one of these tales that I heard was about a fellow from New York that landed on a ranch down in Texas, and he was kinda smart about it, so the boys found him a right bad little pony, and was inviting him to get on and take a little canter out to see the cows.

"I don't want to get on so very bad," says the guy from New York. "If I thought the pony was a going to kick or anything, I'd just walk over, because I don't mind walking. You know this is my first attempt to ride."

"Don't mind that a bit, Bud," says the rough guy, "because this here pony ain't got a thing on you. It's his first attempt at being rode too. You can both start out together and learn."

my son!
FROM THE BEST-SELLING NOVEL BY HOWARD SPRING
MADELEINE CARROLL

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:
William Essex and Dermot O'Riordan, young roommates living in the slum district of Manchester in the early 1890's, are trying to establish themselves in their respective professions: Will as an author and Dermot as a cabinetmaker. Essex bitterly resents his poverty and resolves that if he ever has a son, he will give the boy all the things life has denied him. He finds a job in old Mr. Moscrop's bake shop, "living in". Moscrop's daughter Nellie, a prim and deeply religious girl, takes a great liking to Essex, though disapproving his lack of devoutness. When Moscrop dies suddenly, leaving Nellie alone in the world, Essex decides to marry her, as much from sympathy as from affection.

Chapter Two

Significant as the event was in my life, the arrival of the printed copies of my first published book was overshadowed by something even more portentous. For on the same night Dermot O'Riordan's son was born.

This, in my own envious eyes, caused my accomplishment to pale almost to nothingness. Arriving while Dermot was polishing the beautiful new cradle he had carved and keeping a constant ear cocked upward toward Sheila's bedroom, I almost forgot to mention my book. Yet Dermot was vastly delighted at it, and even more at the dedication: "To my friend, Dermot O'Riordan, without whose good advice and bad language, this book would never have been started."

As soon as the child was born I hastened home to tell the good news to Nellie, who had refused to accompany me to the O'Riordans because it was Chapel night. Sitting up in bed in her high-necked, long-sleeved nightgown and two braids of hair lying along her back, she must have been stirred by my excited awe at the thought of Dermot's having a son. She smiled a little shyly, looking down at the bedclothes.

"I didn't mean to tell you so soon, Will...but you needn't envy Dermot. Not for long." Overcome with joy, I determined then and there that my son (and I never doubted it would be a son) should be born away from the slum in which his parents had been reared. I would sell the bakery, move to the seaside, make my living by writing books and more books — I would work my fingers to the bone so that my son might be reared in decent, clean, respectable surroundings and have every advantage that poverty had denied me in my childhood.

After the bitter exhaustion of my early youthful struggles to write an acceptable novel, the composition of more books came comparatively easy to me. My maiden book sold a few copies but won me a respectful reception at the hands of the critics. My second did only a little better for me pecuniarily, but established me more solidly in literary circles as a young author who stood on the threshold of fulfilling marked promise. And when my third book was published, it soon became evident that I had at last hit the mark — that this effort was being taken to the bosom both of the critics and of the reading public.

We sold "The Beeches," the little tree-bordered suburban house where Oliver was born, and in partnership with Dermot and Sheila we purchased "Heronwater," a good-sized estate perched high on a rocky cliff overlooking a sandy cove in Cornwall. Oliver was now eight, just a few months younger than Dermot's boy, Rory; and a year older than the little girl, Maeve, whom Sheila had born to her husband.

Nellie and I had frequent little encounters over the rearing of our son. Her leaning was all toward the firm but just hand, the prim correctness, tinged with devoutness, that had been the keynote of her upbringing. My ceaseless delight in the child, my joy in the mere fact that I had a son for whom I planned every happiness I myself had missed in my childhood and youth — these were things beyond her ken or without the orbit of her sympathies. And she noted (though she said little about it) the thousand little ways in which I spoiled the lad.

One evening, while I was putting Oliver to bed, Rory burst into the room, towing his father by the hand. Over Dermot's laughing protests, the boy insisted upon recovering from Oliver a book he had lent him — "The Irish Kings."

"Oh, Rory," protested Oliver, "you're always losing things. You know I haven't got your book." But Rory insisted with a simple earnestness that could not be denied.

Finally I suggested that we look around for it. I ran my eye quickly over the books on Oliver's shelves, until I espied one that looked unfamiliar. It bore a paper cover on which a childish hand had lettered the title, "Adventures." Opening the book out of curiosity I discovered that it was Rory's "Irish Kings". Surprised and disturbed at Oliver's subterfuge, nevertheless said nothing immediately, but returned the book to the shelf and permitted the search to end in failure. But after Dermot and Rory gave up and left the room, I hurriedly slipped off the paper cover, stowed the book under a seat cushion, called them back and pretended to find it there on a last sudden chance.

As they withdrew again, the boy clutching his book happily, Nellie came into the room. I confronted Oliver sternly.

"Oliver, why did you steal Rory's book?"

"Steal it? But I didn't steal it!" "It was in the bookcase. You must have put it there. And you said that Rory had taken it away with him. Wasn't that a lie?"

"Yes, it was a lie. And I know I shouldn't have told it. But I didn't steal the book."

"If that isn't stealing," I said, becoming almost angry at him for the first time in my life, "what do you call it?"

Oliver explained patiently, with disarming candor. "Don't you see? I took it because it was Rory's. I love Rory, and I wanted to have something belonging to him — something that he loved. You believe me, don't you, father?"

With a vast sigh of relief I put my arm about him. "Yes, I believe you, Oliver."

During all this Nellie listened silently. But when Oliver went off to the bathroom to wash his face, she turned to me grimly.

"What are you going to do about this?"

"Why, there's nothing to do. It's all settled."

"Whether I'm anything to you or not, I'm the child's mother. Do you think it doesn't matter to me that he's growing up a cheat and a liar?"

"Oh, it's not that bad," I said. "Oliver got his sense of right and wrong a bit muddled. Natural for a child — but these things are easily straightened out with understanding and love —"

"I'm not blinded by what you call love," she interrupted. "Bringing up a child to think he can do what he likes! I think Oliver should be thrashed for what he has done."

"I don't," I replied quietly. "And if you have no other suggestion, I may as well go." I left the room and started down the hall to my own room, realizing only now how much the incident had shaken me.

As I stood staring out of a window, a series of sharp, agonized cries came from Oliver's room.

"No! No! Don't! Don't!" I dashed back into the room and seized from Nellie's hand the cane with which she was punishing the child. As I wrenched it from her grasp the boy suddenly turned upon me and drove his little fist into my face with all his strength, crying "Don't hit my mother!"

Although the blow was a puny one, I staggered back as though I had been dealt a mortal injury. Astonishment, grief, anger crowded one another in my confused thoughts. That he should take Nellie's side against me — against his father who had been both mother and father and good fairy to him — was something I could not grasp. Oliver and I stood facing each other for a moment, then I turned and walked blindly out of the room.

Nellie joined me a little while later.

"I'm sorry for — for what happened," she said, her voice shaking a little; "but I had to do and say what I believe to be right."

"I know — I know. The best thing for all of us now is to try and forget it."

"No. We've got to have an understanding about Oliver. You've always made his upbringing your business. It's always your son — your son!"

"Nellie," I said slowly, "why did you ever marry me?" I continued as she looked at me, bewildered and anguished in her eyes. "We're miles apart on everything — on the kind of books I'm to write, on where we are to live, on how to bring up our child — everything! I don't mind for myself — but I mind for Oliver."

"Oh, Oliver!" she cried almost fiercely. "That's the root of it! Everything for Oliver! Everything!"

"Why not?" I said slowly. "What else has our marriage brought me?"

For a moment we stood looking at each other, the veil between us rent. Then Nellie turned and hurried from the room.

We have just closed one of the most confused and confusing debates I have had an opportunity to observe. For more than a week we have considered amendments to the Wages and Hours law. Everybody seemed to agree that certain amendments were necessary to correct some of the ridiculous decisions of the Administrator. The American Federation of Labor, all of the large farm organizations, and the Labor Committee all agreed that the law should be amended. It has taken the Labor Committee nearly a year to bring out a bill, but they finally presented the so-called Norton Bill. In the meantime, Rep. Barden and Ramspeck had each introduced bills on the same subject. Finally the Rules Committee brought in a rule making it in order to consider all three bills at the same time. This is the first time we have ever had such a bill and it resulted in utter confusion. After amending the Barden Bill for three days, the House defeated it. It also defeated the Ramspeck bill. We then turned to amending the Norton Bill and after placing a great number of amendments on the bill the House finally defeated all amendments and came back to the original Norton Bill just as it was introduced by the Labor Committee. While I felt that some amendments to this draft of the bill were desirable, I also felt that the bill even without amendments was certainly a step in the right direction. Therefore, when the Republicans moved to recommit it I voted against the motion in the hope that we might, after all of the long debate still salvage something of value. However, many of those who had at first urged the Norton Bill now voted to send it back to the Committee (in this case equivalent to killing it) and the motion carried.

This is an example of lost motion which is inevitable in a Democratic legislative body. There are people who would have us substitute laws by the decree of some dictator because of the greater "efficiency" of that method, but for my part I prefer the freedom of debate that we have in this country and I think that the long and apparently fruitless debate on this bill proved that Democratic processes still operate our government. If we had the controlled government here that some people try to make us think we have, this full and free discussion could never occur. While I felt that the immediate decision of the House was a mistake, it was the decision of the people's representatives, arrived at after a full discussion, and so long as our governmental policies are so determined we can properly claim to be a representative democracy.

I am happy to be able to report at least two outstanding achievements for the benefit of Central Texas this week. For nearly a year I have been seeking to get the Department of Agriculture to place the "Food Stamp" program in operation in our territory. McLennan County was the first to apply. Nearly a year ago the Mayor and one of the Waco commissioners came to Washington and went with me to see the officials here in connection with this program. We have been working on it ever since. This week Secretary Wallace told me that the program would be put in operation by June 1. This program will be of tremendous benefit to our needy people, enabling them to buy more food and to get a better selection and under much nicer conditions than in the past. It will assure the merchants of orderly handling of all surplus food and finally it will help to remove some of the surplus of food crop that has been so injurious to our farmers. I realize that this program is not yet large enough to take care of our great wheat and cotton surpluses, but as the program grows it will help even in these cases. There is a separate cotton stamp program now being put into operation and a very fine cotton mattress making program, all of which, like the food stamp program, are based on recognition of the fact that the fundamental problem of surpluses is one of distribution. We could not have too much of any product that any of our people need if we had a proper system of distribution. Until we can get such a system we have to do what we can to control the creation of these surpluses which are so injurious to our price structure. However, we should never forget that the final solution must involve getting the extra bacon to some hungry mouth and the extra cotton on some ill-clad back. This is what the food stamp plan tries to do, and I am proud of our success in getting it started even though as yet it has not been possible to put it in operation in every county.

Our other outstanding announcement for Central Texas was the inclusion today of an authorization of $5,000,000.00 for Whitney Dam in the Flood Control Bill which the committee, of which I am a member, favorably reported at noon. If this bill is passed and signed by the President, this will authorize the commencement of the key structure in the Brazos Flood Control Project. I trust that before another year passes we will have a report from the Army Engineers that will enable us to seek authorization for dams on the Leon and the Lampasas Rivers so as to give flood protection in the valley of the Little River, as well as the main stream of the Brazos.
