HEADIN' EAST

New York and "West"

Up until noon yesterday, we thought we'd seen the most beautiful country. Well, it was hard to beat, but Virginia, south of Winchester did just that.

Passing along the Shenandoah National Park, which also has a skyline drive which we didn't have time to make, we came to Staunton, the birthplace of Woodrow Wilson, and saw the place (on the highway) where he was born. Staunton is also the locale of a famous military academy by the same name. Next was Lexington, and we here saw the home and tomb of the great General Robert E. Lee. Also this town has the tomb of his famous horse "Traveler", as well as the home and tomb of Stonewall Jackson, and the birthplace of these great men: Matthew Fontain Maury, General Sam Houston of Texas history fame, Cyrus McCormick, inventor of the reaper and James E. A. Gibbs, inventor of the sewing machine.

Lexington is also the location of two famous universities. Virginia Military Institute, called the "West Point of the South" and Washington and Lee University. George Washington himself, gave the first important endowment to this college, and General Lee, was the President of the school until his death.

Then, on to Roanoke, another of the beautiful southern towns, all of which feature the old southern mansions, and in nearly all of them, there are historic spots, and old colleges and universities.

This part of the country, too, is the great apple raising district, and thruout the entire country, were beautiful apple orchards, in addition to the many other fine crops of corn, grain, clover, and fine blue grass country.

At Pulaski, we went over the hump, at least it was a small one, and we went up about 2300 feet, and say the beautiful valleys from both directions. Pulaski is down on one side of the mountain on a river, and we immediately started climbing to the summit. On the otherside, rather at the crest of the mountain, was a place to look over to the broad valley below.

As we began to leave Virginia, the stock in farm beauty gradually went down, and the Tennessee profile of Mother Earth doesn't look nearly so well as that of Vir-

Temple Daily Wins 1st Place in N.E.A. Contest

In the Community Service Contest, Daily Division, Frank W. Bayborn, Publisher and Walter Humphreys, Editor of the Temple Daily Telegram are to be congratulated on winning First Place in this contest, which was participated in by dailies thruout the United States.

We wished we could have won one of these beautiful plaques (it's in our window), but we did not get the job done in competition with some 500 weeklies and semi-weeklies thruout the United States. Most of these are, however, from larger cities.

The Mission Times won a place, as did the Menard News.

This plaque won by the Telegram will be delivered to them Sunday as we volunteered to "bring home the bacon" for them.

The Community Service Contest is a promotion contest of civic promotions, and included in the case of the Telegram Soil Conservation Work, Vocational training in the high school, a Texas Youth Festival, Central Texas Pioneer's Club, Telegram Santa Pals, Bell County Spelling Bee, Annual Swimming School, a handicraft exposition, and others.

These are "promotions" which create intense interest in localities, but which, in many instances there is a "fear" the newspaper will "make too much money" out of them. We don't imagine the Telegram got "rich" on any of these. These are services, which in the newspaper business, don't pay, directly, but only in community betterment.

BIDS ON 36 PROBABLY ACCEPTED ON SAT. OR MONDAY WHEN BOARD MEETS

According to County Judge Floyd Zeigler, the contract on the 3.6 miles of Highway 36, and the bridge over the Leon river, will probably be let Saturday or Monday, when the State Highway Commission goes into session.

It is said Dean Word has the low bid which totals around $142,000 is reported high, as compared to the estimate by the highway commission officials, but this is due to the advance in steel and other materials, which brings the bid up some $10,000.

For reason of this advance, there is no certainty that the bid will be allowed, but the District highway officials, according to Judge Zeigler, seem to think the Commission will take this advance into consideration, allowing it, and the contract will be let.

This will start the closing of the last stretch in Coryell county on Highway 36, and it is thought by all concerned that this entire stretch will be completed in "jig time" which now means, within the next few years.

When, and if the contract is let, of course, no date has as yet been set for the beginning of the construction which consists of the dirt work and building the bridge.

Final completion of this highway will make two trans-county highways, which will materially increase the ease with which traffic can get in, as well as out, of Coryell county.

RANCH PROBLEMS ARE STUDIED IN CORYELL COUNTY

According to a "hand-out", range problems and methods of solving them, and pasture development with special reference to conservation practices and complete pasture utilization, were the subjects studied in Gatesville the 21st thru the 24th by students and instructors of a special Agronomy Short Course being taught at College Station.

Coryell was chosen because of its possibilities for range and pasture development and because of the program already well under way, which is being carried on here by the SCS, the Extension Service and the AAA.

Reports are they found the work so interesting in Coryell county, that instead of two days, they used four.

Among the places visited were H. O. Bargainer Ranch, with Charlie Maynard, operator, Tony Wallace, Adrian Foote ranches and that of Ernest Chitwood.

Also they visited the L. C. Mehar farm.

The trip was made under the supervision of Dr. W. G. McGinnies, Chief of Range Research, Southwestern Forest and Range Experiment Station, Tucson, Arizona, who is teaching the special agronomy course. Mr. McGinnies was assisted by Dr. Ide P. Trutter, Head Agronomy Department, and Mr. R. C. Potts, Assistant Pro. Department of Agronomy, Texas A. and College. The class was composed of Z. C. Dameron, Assistant Soil Conservationist, SCS., Balmohrea, Texas; W. E. Roane, Jr., Soils Technologist, SCS, Balmohrea, Texas; A. R. Cheek Jr., Texas; C. Q. Williams, Area Range Examiner for the SCS, Perryton, Texas; A. L. Lockredge, Assistant Agronomist, Marfa, Texas; R. R. Lancaster, Pasture Specialist for Extension Service, College Station, Texas; A. F. Vandergriff, Voc. Agriculture teacher, Lawn, Texas; L. V. Lehman, Game manager, Region 3 for State Game, Fish and Oyster Commission, Victoria, Texas; P. T. Marion, Animal Husbandry Dept. of Texas A. and M. College; T. M. DeRouen, Animal Husbandry Department of Texas A. and M. College; and W. B. Miller, A. B. Yearwood, E. L. Wilde, J. D. Reives, Monty Mitchell, and R. G. Evans of College Station, Texas.

And the tax payers pay the bills.

GATESVILLE BUSINESS HOUSES TO CLOSE THURSDAY, JULY 4TH

According to Mayor C. E. Gandy most of Gatesville's business houses will close their doors next Thursday to celebrate July 4th.

No celebration is scheduled for this city but rodeos and picnics at Belton, Mother Neff State Park, Hamilton and other points of interest in surrounding counties will likely attract hundreds of Gatesvilleites who are getting all seamed up for a big time.

Further announcement concerning this matter will be carried in Tuesday's issue of the News.

C. H. Wallace Sr. spent Thursday in Fort Worth, where he attended a meeting of the general office personnel of the Community Public Service Company. Mr. Wallace spoke on the program.

COTTON RESEARCH MEET OPENED IN WACO YESTERDAY

Another attempt by the State-Wide Cotton Committee of Texas to boost "cotton" is being tried at Waco where The Cotton Research Congress opened yesterday and continues thru Saturday.

From the program, it looks like all the cotton experts in the United States, or most of them will speak, including the heads of many of the government agencies of the United States that "handle" farm problems.

CALIFORNIA EDITOR IS GATESVILLE VISITOR WITH TORBETTS

Bob Leffen, editor of the San Bernardino Evening Telegram, while visiting in Texas was a visitor in the J. S. Torbett home in Gatesville, and also with Dr. Torbett in Marlin.

Mr. Leffen has been making a tour of the states, and is now enroute to his home in California, where he is expected to be by July 1.

AUTHORESS WRITING "BELLS OF TEXAS" WANTS INFORMATION

Mrs. Bessie Lee Fitzhugh of Waco, a member of the staff of the Waco Public Schools was here yesterday seeking information on historic bells of Coryell county, to include in her "Bells of Texas", a historic book which she is now writing.

Mrs. Fitzhugh had been to Lampasas and San Saba chasing the will o' the wisp, history, of famous bells of Texas.

If you know of any old bells, or have one, she'd like to know about it, and, incidently, so would the News.

FRIENDSHIP BAPTIST CHURCH

Rev. H. L. DeVaney, Pastor
Everyone is invited to come to Friendship this Sunday for worship and praise. This being the fifth Sunday, we surely hope to have a good turn out. Mr. E. E. Autrey, the Sunday School superintendent, is asking for every member of the School and Church to be sure and be on time and bring someone with him or her who is not in the habit of coming to church. We all try to give to everyone a hearty welcome that they can't resist from coming back.

Sunday School starts at 10 o'clock with classes for all ages. The subject of the morning message at 11 o'clock by Rev. DeVaney will be "Christ—The Good Shepherd". The evening service starts with the song service at 8 p. m., followed by the message with the subject "Sin—Remedy for Sin".

"The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord". "For God so loved the World that He gave His only Son."

IN MEMORY OF GRANNY HOWE

Dear Granny, we miss you so, but God saw fit to take you after so many scores and ten, we know Heaven today is brighter, and that from us you had to go. We pray that God will save us so that we can see you face to face again. We know that the little home will be so lonely and beside the window there will be a vacant chair all the travelers will miss your smile and silvery gray hair. But we have one consolation if we follow the steps of Jesus we will be prepared to meet you there. Dear Granny we felt that you were just a flower plucked so Heaven would be made brighter, you were so kind and generous, doing good for all, seems as if you were just living, to meet your companion at the Master's call. Children, relatives and friends put your trust in Him who died for the sins of all, so you will be ready to meet Granny at the Saviour's call.—Written by Irene Burgess.

Banff and Lake Louise Expecting Thousands Of American Tourists in 1940 Despite War

WAR may be raging in distant Europe, but this will not deter thousands of American travellers from visiting the Canadian Rockies during the summer. King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, of England, set the example when they visited this region in 1939, spending two days at the Banff Springs Hotel. The royal couple drove in a buckboard wagon up Sulphur Mountain, with Jim Brewster, Banff's leading citizen, in the driver's seat: while to a Banff naturalist, Dan McCowan, fell the honor of acquainting them with the plant and animal life of the region. These same discoveries await every visitor to Banff or Lake Louise. Banff provides trout-fishing, pony riding over mountain trails, tennis, golf on a sporty 18-hole championship course, swimming in hot sulphur pools, archery, and dancing in the evening. All are followed in a breath-taking atmosphere of mile-high mountain peaks—a perfect backdrop for every outdoor recreation. Forty miles from Banff is Lake Louise, one of the show places of North America. Here, set amid great glaciers like some precious jewel, the lake itself defies description, its limpid, jade-green depths never appearing quite the same to any two people. On the lake shore, set amid Iceland poppies and other flowers, is the Chateau Lake Louise, its glass-enclosed swimming pool, perfect dance floor and smooth orchestra all doing their part for the entertainment of the vacationist. One of the most interesting routes to California for visitors to the Golden Gate Exposition, San Francisco, is to travel via Banff and Lake Louise over the Canadian Pacific Railway Stopovers at these resorts can be arranged, and this "circle tour" will enable the traveller to cover two countries instead of one.

HUNDREDS OF FANS EXPECTED TO SEE MOUND-JONESBORO CLASH SUNDAY

Hundreds of Coryell county baseball fans are expected to flock to the Jonesboro baseball diamond Sunday to see the league-leading Jonesboro Eagles tangle with the hard-hitting Mound nine. Thus far this season the Eagles have lost one game but they are due to get a run for their money against Mound, Sunday, if the latter team will turn out the brand of ball that they are capable of playing.

Mound has suffered several defeats this season, and they'll be fighting desperately to stay in the running. Should they hit their stride early in the game and manage to hold the high-flying Eagles down for a couple of innings they have an even chance for a victory. This is far easier said than done, however, as the Jonesboro lineup is generously sprinkled with seasoned sluggers of the Lou Gerhig type, who have been knocking the old apple clean out of the park in almost every game that they have played this season.

Just who will toe the rubber in the opening stanzas for the Eagles is quite a riddle, which probably won't be solved until the starting

In the initial game of the 1940 city softball league the Coca-Cola Bottlers pushed ahead to a 11-2 victory over the Red and White Food Store team. Both teams fought on practically even footing during the greatest part of the contest with the Bottlers finally hitting their stride and walking away with the game.

Holt, one of the league's outstanding pitchers, pitched for the bottlers and Whatley did the hurling for the Red and White crew.

In the second game of the night the Dixie Gas team with Loer in the box lost to the Boosters by a count of 15-0. The Dixie team is composed of mostly youngsters who are seeing their first season in the city league while the Boosters, a team sponsored jointly by J. A. Painter and T. K. O'Neal, have a fair lineup of experienced players. Gohlke pitched for the Boosters.

Wednesday night the Firemen clashed with the CCC aggregation and went down in defeat by a score of 17-10. The CCC lads pounded Cliff Rankin the Firemen's starting pitcher for 10 runs in the first inning, two of them circuit clouts by Ingram and Boyd. In the second frame the smoke-eaters settled down to a certain extent and collected several runs off of Scarbrough the CCC pitcher. Doc Ray relieved Rankin on the mound for the Firemen early in the game but Scarbrough went the full route for the CCC.

In the second clash of the night the classy Arnold Electric team ran wild to defeat the local NYA team by a count of 28-2. The electricians slammed out hits almost at will and were never even threatened during the entire game. Rutherford, Arnold's ace hurler pitched for the Electricians and Miller toed the rubber for the NYA.

Jonesboro Defeats State 9-4, Wed.

An interesting baseball game was unreel on the State Training School diamond last Wednesday afternoon as the Jonesboro Eagles downed Rabon Balch's State nine by a score of 9-4.

In the box for the State nine was Millsap, who was credited with an excellent performance but was unable to throttle the Jonesboro lads who clouted out nine scores before the final bell. Williams pitched for Jonesboro.

Texas oilmen drilled 41 per cent of all the wildcat oil and gas tests drilled in the entire United States last year.

Texas oil workers each year buy $60,000,000 worth of farm and livestock products supplied by Texas farmers and ranchers.

Pidcoke to Meet Plainview Club Sun.

Another league game that is due to attract plenty of attention is the Pidcoke-Plainview game which will be played at Pidcoke Sunday. The Cokers are one of the top ranking teams in the race but the team that they will meet Sunday has shifted its lineup and reports from the Plainview crew say that they are going to be plenty hard to take.

According to the new manager, W. A. Rucker, Jack Thornton, Ernest Vannoy, F. E. Rucker, Lee Butler, George Schaub and Rooster Rogers have been signed by the Plainview team and these new additions are expected to greatly improve the strength of the entire team.

Schoolboy Rutherford is favored to open up the contest for Pidcoke while either Bell or Hall will start for Plainview.

Turnersville Loses To Jonesboro Sunday

The Jonesboro Eagles turned on the heat in the county baseball cup race Sunday afternoon at Turnersville by turning back the Turnersville nine by a score of 5-2.

Both teams played jam-up ball during the entire nine inning of the fray and it was anybody's ball game until the final stanza. Walsh hurled the Jonesboro club to victory in this interesting contest and McCallister, Turnerville high school star, was on the mound for Turnersville.

Pidcoke to Play Pottsville July 4th

Next Thursday, July 4th, the Pidcoke Cokers will meet the Pottsville baseball nine on the State Training School diamond. Pottsville is one of the teams in the Cowhouse Basin League and have been playing an extra good brand of ball this season.

The "Cokers" are one of Coryell County's leading teams and this game should attract quite a number of fans.

VOLUME VIII GATESVILLE, TEXAS, FRIDAY, JUNE 28, 1940 NUMBER 55

HEADIN' EAST

New York and the "West"

Where we left off don't make much difference, we've been so busy and so far, the traffic has been so terrible that we had all we could do to keep things in motion. It'll be a thousand years before Texas knows what traffic is like it is in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York and the far eastern states.

Our last days in New York were spent in the regular convention routine, which included more notable speaking, including Mayor La Guardia of New York City, and Admiral (Rear or somewhere) Woodward, who of course, told us how very badly our Navy was as compared to others, and that it took from 4 to 6 years to complete a battlewagon that he could hold inspection on. Notice by the papers they're going to have a two ocean Navy.

As for the rest of the folks, one of them went to the top of the Empire State Building, and we all took off and took a ferry ride to Staten Island, past the Statue of Liberty, Ellis Island, the immigration island, receiving station, and on out to the Island.

Next day, we rode the 5th Ave. busses out Fifth Avenue, Broadway, etc., and then, we took a subway to Coney Island, hired a board walk chair and rode up and down the board walk, finally catching a pleasure boat back to the city. This was about an hour's ride by boat and only cost us 25c a piece.

We passed up the annual banquet of the NEA and checked out of the hotel Friday about two, and went by East Orange via the Washington bridge, and a hundred all run-together towns to visit the Gates'. Mrs. Gates is a daughter of the late Mrs. J. F. Ellison, who was well known in Gatesville.

Leaving the Gates', Saturday morning, we went down highway 11, thru the most beautiful part of the United States these eyes have ever seen, and that includes it all. Old brick homes, bigger barns, with all tools, implements, etc., inside, perfect lawns, clean as a pin, with electric lights, silos—places that would make anyone who wanted to or not before, want to be a farmer. Houses, barns and equipment must cost 30 to 40 thousand dollars, and thousands of them. Holstein cows, with immense udders attested to the value of livestock. It really shows what CAN be done on a farm, if the desire is there. Of course, it has taken TIME and WORK to get all this done. Many of these places remain in the same families for generations, each generation adding to it's beauty and utility. The towns, towns that you've never heard of, range in population from 10,000 to 50,000 and are all beautiful.

This includes the part from New Jersey, all thru Pennsylvania, Maryland, West Virginia, and now where we are now, in Virginia.

Yesterday, we went from Harrisburg, capitol of Pennsylvania, down to Gettysburg, where a guide said there were some 16,000 acres or square miles of park and monument to look over. We only had time to drive thru the town, and on out to Chambersburg. It would take two weeks more or less to read all the inscriptions, view the monuments, see the different battlefields for each day during the battle. Too, there are memorials to each regiment of the various branches of each army, and many other attractions. It was just too much for a fast trip like we're having to make.

From Gettysburg, we drove back on our way to Chambersburg, and all thru the way on U.S. 11, it's just as historic as your American History book.

We were only in a little tip of Maryland, and also West Virginia, and finally tied up at Winchester Virginia for the night.

The proximity of the farming district of the Lehigh valley to the larger cities, of course, makes their products more easily to sell and dairying seems to be the main money crop, altho there is plenty of fruit and everything else, barring cotton. It was haying time in the Lehigh valley, and especially the clover, made the trip "smell" good, especially, since there had been a little rain on it after it had been cut. Up in the valley, they use, mowers and then, drive the wagons with big draft horses, sometimes 4, and have a loader on the back which ushes the hay on the wagon from the rear. Of course there is one man on the wagon to drive, and one to place the hay. There are none to "pitch-up" like we have in the Texas grain fields. Also, at a number of places, they were baling the hay.

Of course, this too, is one of the biggest manufacturing sections of the country, and we saw many of the factories of well known products which we buy daily at home—the Bethlehem and U. S. steel plants, linoleum or congolem plants, Ingersoll Rand Air Hammer, etc., and of course, many that we do not remember off hand.

Today, it's another day of remarkable beauty, and we're in Old Virginia, having, Suh, again, and still in the "horsey" section of Virginia, having just passed, the Sun Brail Manor, the home of Sun Beau, the World's leading money winning horse, according to a sign. Anyway, it's Virginia's beautiful Shenandoah Valley, one of the beauty spots of the country, and a really big spots at that.

Harrisonburg, Va., is one of the prettier little towns we've passed thru, and yet, it's not so small at that, say, about 10,000. Perfect lawns, with the old Southern atmosphere. Hollyhocks, roses, flowers, hedges, and everything, including the myriad of Antique shops, all designed to euvre the traveling public's money.

This too, is an apple country, and they make apple cider, syrup and many other products out of this great fruit. In fact, thruout the entire country along the Lee highway, which is the one we are on, they do all they can to make their places attractive. In most of the little towns like the one we are in now, they have no sidewalks, and the houses are built with a big rock fence or curb in front of them, many of the houses built like old English homes, coming right on the street, with a

BRACKETED

By BRACK CURRY

AT PHILADELPHIA

The Republican National Convention will do more than nominate a presidential candidate and write a platform for the 1940 campaign. It will determine the course of American political thought and of our form of government for decades to come.

For it is a maxim of political dynamics that democratic government can function only so long as there is a strong minority capable of vigorous and intelligent criticism of and opposition to the acts of the majority.

This county was without that opposition from 1933 to 1939, and in that period progressed further toward state socialism, toward a modification—to say the least—of our basic economic, political and social institutions than in all the previous years of our history.

Whether the Republicans can win in November or not, they can render a great service to this nation by functioning as the "loyal opposition," subjecting the administration in power to a critical though constructive review of its program and basic policies.

It was not alone the small size of the Republican representation in Congress during the fateful years 1933-1939 that prevented its fulfilling the functions of the minority party. The Republicans lacked a program of their own during those years—they had no alternative proposals to offer to administration policies.

This week the Republicans are to adopt a program to present to the American people.

In writing their platform and choosing their candidate, the 1,000 Republican delegates at Philadelphia must be motivated by higher considerations than mere political advantage. These are not times when personalities are of primary importance; issues are what now count.

The Republican delegates must subordinate their personal preferences, their prejudices, and name a candidate who is capable of offering vigorous though dignified opposition to the Roosevelt record, who can continue to lead the party even if he is defeated in November.

For the American people to give to any president—Republican or Democrat—another "mandate" to revamp our governmental, economic and social structures at will would be a deathblow to our democratic form of government. Whichever party wins the election in November, the imperative need of this country during the next four years is for a strong minority both in the halls of Congress and in the country itself.

Whom will the Republicans nominate?

Will it be Dewey, Taft, Vandenberg, Willkie, a dark horse who will emerge from the convention carrying the presidential toga of the Good Old Party?

For the first time since 1924, no one possibility has the Republican nomination assured before the convention convenes. Dewey and Taft have been the pace-setters in the pre-convention campaign, but neither has within 200 of the 501 votes necessary to win the nomination.

With more than half of the 1,000 delegates legally uncommitted after first ballot courtesy votes for doorway with a small porch in front and steps going down on either side to the sidewalk. Others are further back from the sidewalk and have a small well-kept lawn.

Yesterday it was cool, but now, we're beginning to feel the cool air fade and the sun is bearing down. We wore coats yesterday, for the most part, and had most of the windows on the car up.

This will about catch it, until tomorrow, which will probably be the last, at least until we get in good old Gatesville.

favorite sons or for state primary winners, the convention will be free to survey the field of active and dark horse contenders and to arrive at a deliberate, reasoned choice.

Realization of the sharp blow dealt Republican chances of victory by the foreign situation should make the GOP delegates more cautious and critical of the qualifications and potential strength of the candidates for the nomination.

District Attorney Dewey and Senator Taft are the acknowledged pre-convention leaders for the nomination. At this writing, each is assured of about 300 votes on the first ballot.

Both of these candidates will be given trial runs by the convention. If either, on successive ballots, steadily increased his strength to, say 400 or 450 votes, he will virtually be assured of the nomination, as there is always a bandwagon element ready to swing to any certain winner.

If either Mr. Dewey or Senator Taft fails to gain or loses on the second, third and fourth ballots, he will automatically be eliminated as a possibility and the convention will then give trial runs to other candidates.

One possibility arises in connection with these two contenders. As Mr. Dewey and Senator Taft between them control a majority of the delegates, they may effect a trade whereby one would receive the presidential nomination and the other the vice-presidential nomination.

Mr. Dewey is weaker than Senator Taft, not only in delegate support but in relation to the general political situation. His political inexperience, his vulnerability to attack by President Roosevelt, failure to sell his candidacy to the Republican political leaders—these constitute almost insuperable obstacles to his nomination.

Lacking in personal appeal, Senator Taft's ability and sincerity are unquestioned even by his political opponents. But it is doubtful that he would fare any better than Mr. Dewey against the squire of Hyde Park.

R. B. Creager, national committeeman from Texas, will be floor manager for Taft at the convention, insuring the Ohioan support of the Texas delegation.

With only 69 first ballot votes and with a congressional record sullied by an unpopular stand for isolation, Senator Vandenberg ranks among the darkest of the dark horses.

The ebullient, aggressive Wendell Willkie must be classed among the political phenomena of the century if he wins the nomination.

The most colorful figure to seek the GOP nomination since Teddy Roosevelt, Willkie has skyrocketed to national prominence in a few months and today rates second for the nomination among the rank and file of the Republican Party with opinions, according to the Gallup poll. In the May 3 tabulation of the poll, Willkie was favored by only three per cent of the Republicans. Now he has 29 per cent and ranks above Senator Taft (Mr. Dewey has 47 per cent).

Like Mr. Dewey, Willkie suffers from disadvantages that will be difficult to overcome. He is a former Democrat, a utilities magnate and a non-politician. He is opposed by a majority of the Republican leaders, including most of the GOP members of Congress. But he is popular with the rank and file of the party and recently has added some powerful supporters to his banner.

His name will be submitted to the convention by Rep. Charles A. Halleck of his native Indiana. Rep. Bruce Barton of New York, where Willkie has his voting residence, will second the nomination.

In an article appearing in a national periodical last week. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson wrote that should Willkie be nominated by the Republicans "he would be the public's candidate without a shadow of political or other obligation to any man."

Gen. Johnson added, "if he is nominated he will make a powerful candidate; if elected a great president."

In an editorial entitled "We Hope It's Willkie," the Scripps-Howard newspapers last week announced that they would support Willkie for the nomination.

"In our opinion Willkie is the only candidate with whom the Republicans have a chance to win, as the prospect appear on the eve of the convention," the editorial said. "If the Republican Party wants to provide real opposition—and that is its duty—it will nominate Willkie."

Despite the open hostility of party leaders, Willkie will be given a trial run if Dewey and Taft fail to win in the early ballots. He is assured of 69 votes on the first ballot, largely from Indiana, New York, New Jersey, Missouri and Minnesota.

If several of the outstanding party leaders should endorse Dewey or Taft or Willkie, that one would surely win the nomination. The power of this group—including such figures as Hoover, Landon, Martin, McNary and Pew—will be particularly potent if a deadlock ensues among the leading candidates, necessitating the choice of a darkhorse.

The Pennsylvania delegation, dominated by Mr. Pew, and committed to a favorite son, Governor James, on the first ballot, may be the decisive factor in determining the nominee. Twice before, in 1920 and in 1928, Pennsylvania votes determined the nomination. And again this year the 72 votes of the Quaker State may swing the nomination at the crucial time.

Fortunately the Republicans do not minimize the immensity of the task before them in the election of their candidate. They realize that another Hoover or Landon debacle must be averted at all costs if the Good Old Party is to survive as a strong political factor.

IN MEMORY OF T. A. GRAVES

T. A. Graves was born at Coryell Church, August 13, 1878. He was the fourth son in a family of ten children. He lived with his family there at Coryell Church until August 16, 1896 when he was married to Miss Ada Dukes. To this union six children were born, namely: Lillard Graves and Mr. Woodley Basham of Pidecke, Alton Graves of ESI Paso, Norris Graves of Gatesville, Mrs. Sumner Warren of El Paso and Opal Graves who preceded her father in death.

The entire family moved to Pidecke in the year 1914. Tom Graves became a stock inspector of Coryell and Bell counties. While thus employed he became acquainted with the people of these two counties and made many friends throughout each. He became an employee at the State Training School in Gatesville in the year 1935. There he remained happily employed and a jolly friend to all until his death May 31, 1940.

He was a faithful member of the Baptist Church. He was a splendid type of citizen and had many friends in all walks of life. We know of one one man that could enjoy his family and relatives as did Tom Graves. He was an enthusiastic promoter of family reunions or social gatherings.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
Undeterred by the fact that her father, Judge Smith, is conducting a campaign for the Presidential nomination, Mary Smith falls in love with a cowboy at a Palm Beach rodeo and marries him on a boat en route to Galveston. She goes home to break the news while her bridegroom, "Stretch" Willoughby, proceeds to the Montana ranch where he works, to prepare a home for her. The news of Mary's cowboy elopement is a bitter blow to her father, who fears the effect on the public and on boss Henderson, political bigwig who is coming to a reception at the Judge's home which will decide his political fate. Mary promises to keep her marriage a secret until after the reception.

Chapter Five

Stretch, in a state of high excitement, busied himself about the ranch. It was the day when Mary had said she would join him, and now the train from the East was almost due.

He poked his nose through the ranch house kitchen door.

"Ma! Ma Hawkins!"
The adopted mother of the cowhands turned around with good-natured ire. "What's bitin' you?"

"Your father," Henderson was saying gallantly to Mary, "has magnificent qualities, but I must admit I was never aware of them until I met you."

"Mr. Henderson, you're a dangerous man," coquetted Mary. "Enough to turn any girl's head," put in Ames, one of her father's campaign advisers.

"Oh, no," pronounced Henderson, "not this one. If all the young ladies in the country were as safe and sane as Mary I'd feel a little more secure about our future!"

In the adjacent kitchen Katie the cook, aided by her friend Elly. It was only her long schooling in surprises that prevented Katie from dropping the platter of filets mignons when Stretch marched into the room through the back door of the house.

"W-w-well! Wh-what do you want?"

"Hello. Where's my wife? Where's Mary?"

"Oh. Er—she ain't here," said Stretch, looking around. "Will you tell her I'm here—just got in town. I was worried about here, so I thought I'd come and take her home."

"She don't work here any more," said Elly, the quick thinker.

Stretch, more concerned than ever, demanded to know where Mary lived. But Mary, it seemed, was very close-mouthed about such things. Then Stretch had an idea.

"It's from Mary," he said slowly. "She ain't comin'."

"It's about those thingamajigs—those new curtains for her room." "New curtains," snorted Ma. "Ain't gonna be no new curtains. Think I'm gonna do over the whole house just for her?"

She pushed him out the door—to confront a ranch hand who gave her away by asking, "Hey, Ma, where you want these new curtains hung up?"

"Get out—both of you!" shrieked Ma. "How many times I got to tell you not to come bustin' in to my kitchen?"

Stretch continued making an exuberant nuisance of himself around the ranch. And then the telegram arrived. Ma Hawkins handed it to him and watched him while he read it. He slowly crumpled it, no longer playful, and threw it away.

"It's from Mary," he said slowly. "She ain't comin' today. Next week, maybe."

It seemed to Mary as though the day of her father's reception would never arrive. But here they all were at last, sitting about the Judge's festive table—the self-important members of the National Committee and their even more self-important wives. And at Mary's right hand sat Oliver Wendell Henderson, the boss supreme, who could make or break an aspirant for office. At Mary's other side sat her beloved Uncle Hannibal, a debonair college professor, aging in years but young in spirit, whimsically cynical at his brother's Presidential ambitions, but sympathetic just the same because the Judge was, after all, his brother. And at the head of the table presided Judge Smith, nervously pompous, acutely anxious as to the result of the reception, full of nervous forebodings about his

He would go in and ask Mary's boss where she could be found. And before they could move a muscle, he was striding into the dining room.

Stretch brushed aside the expostulating butlers and went toward the dinner party at the other end of the long room. Then he espied Mary sitting at the foot of the table, and stopped dead—completely at a loss. Mary sat watching him, white-faced and rigid, making no sign of recognition.

"This is the home of Judge Horace Smith, sir," repeated one of the butlers, overtaking Stretch. "I'm quite sure you've made a mistake."

Stretch was beginning to see it. "Yeah, I guess I made a mistake all right," he agreed ironically. Slowly, thoughtfully, he turned to go.

But Uncle Hannibal the sophisticate—Hannibal the quizzical iconoclast, had sized up the situation and decided to have some fun. He called to the young cowboy.

"Wait a moment, young man! Why don't you sit down and have dessert with us?"

Henderson, amused by the idea chimed in. "Yes, of course! I'm certain our host wouldn't mind."

"Those men," pursued Hannibal "are in politics—always interested in talking to the people. You might," he added meaningfully "be able to get a few things of your chest."

Stretch, his hurt indignation slowly turning into a cold fury decided to accept the challenge. He came and sat down in the place they made for him opposite Hannibal, while Mary, torn between shame at herself, sympathy for him, and loyalty to her father stared straight before her.
