Schools Still Start: Hubbard, Newland Mon. Schley, Friday

First thing you know, there won't be a kid in sight, at least, between the hours of 8:30 and 4:30 or what ever hours schools keep. Schools are really opening, just like the cotton isn't.

Therein lies the whereof and why of the schools Hubbard, and Newland starting yesterday, and being closely followed Friday by Schley. Statistically speaking, we believe the CPA would say that's a total of 5 which have issued their calls for Mama's and Papa's best so far this year, and there'll be plenty more soon.

WESLEY CHAPPEL TO PRESENT MUSICAL FEST NEXT FRI. NITE

They didn't tell us when! When they announced the Wesley Chappel Musical Fest to be held at the City Auditorium, with Mrs. Tanza Whiteside, as Directress, they didn't tell us when.

Now, they've told us, it's NEXT Friday at 8 o'clock, and they tell us it'll be an extravaganza, including choir selections, spiritual, classical and humorous numbers.

It's an all-colored cast, that can sing only as these folks can. There's a small admission, which no one will pay any attention to, considering the good quality of this program.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Arnold and R. M. Arnold Jr., left Saturday for Tahoka where they will visit relatives.

We Do Get Around! They Even Want It In Minnesota, Yah!

We aint "bane from Minnesota", but Minnesota vant vone of our copies of our All-Out Edition, and have 12c to pay for it, which, too, is rather good.

We got a letter recently from a Mr. Freemont of Duluth, Minnesota, asking for a copy of this particular edition.

He didn't say what he wanted with it, and we just suppose by that, it was none of our business, especially not, since he sent the dough.

We just thought you might like to know that you really get readers when you advertise in the News.

IRAN INVASION EXPECTED

Ankara, Turkey, Aug. 24 (AP)—Hope for a peaceful settlement of Iran's dispute with Britain and Russia over an Allied demand for expulsion of German agents was declared by competent foreign sources here Sunday to have been virtually abandoned.

Monday's radio said Russia and England has entered Iran.

JAP AGGRESSION, STOP!

London, Aug. 24 (AP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill, describing Adolf Hitler as surprised, startled and staggered at the bloody cost of German invasion of Russia, declared in a broadcast Sunday night that Britain would join the United States in action against Japan, if the Japanese persisted in aggression.

Gourds, Gourds: It's Gourd Time In Coryell

At least, that's what Mrs. B. T. Whitt of Pearl said that big thing in our window was. It certainly looks like a "long drink of water" to us. And, it looks to be better than a rolling pin, more like an Irish persuader.

Anyway, it's one of those things they raise in Coryell county and no doubt, Mrs. Whitt doesn't have any trouble with friend husband. Mrs. Whitt said she had 6 more just like 'em on the ground. Also, she, or someone else, brought in another different shaped gourd which looks more like the "water drinking" kind.

I tell you, it'd just surprise you what the good old soil of Coryell can raise, if it is just tried, and not left "laying out".

First Bale Brings $96.00: C. of C. Buys Bale, Premium

If cotton growers could sell all their bales to the Gatesville Chamber of Commerce, they'd really "get along".

This body of non-cotton growers just paid $96,000 for Edwin Riddle's bale, which, weighing 480 pounds, brought this figure. The "market" at the time the bale came in Friday, was reported to have been 15c by one source, and 16 1/2c per lb. by another. Mr. Riddle got 20c.

Powell and Caruth ginned the bale—that's the gin next to the old cotton yard (athletic field) and it was grown on Mrs. Gilbreath's place near Coryell Church. If we knew Mr. Riddle's address, we'd give him a one year's subscription to the News, just as we always do the First Baler.

FENO JONES KILLED IN ACCIDENT NEAR McGREGOR: ENROUTE HERE FOR FAMILY

Feno Jones, of West Columbia, and formerly of Gatesville was instantly killed in a traffic accident about 5 miles south of McGregor on the McGregor-Moody highway, Sunday morning about 12:45 when he was enroute to Gatesville for his wife and baby, who had been visiting friends and relatives here.

Mr. Jones, with a fellow employee, Roy Brady, of the Community Public Service Company of West Columbia, were driving north, and had just passed the Valley Mills coach and another man, and, after passing this car, attempted to get back on their side of the highway, and were. At this instant, a car with 6 negroes, headed south, evidently struck the back end of Mr. Jones' car. His car catapulted lengthwise and turned over and over about 75 or 100 feet. Mr. Jones was thrown out and killed instantly. Brady was uninjured, except for a small scratch over his left eye.

The negro car continued south, and their left front wheel came off, and they struck the Coach's car, tearing off the right front, and rear fenders on his car. All three cars were badly damaged. There were no injuries, except to Brady and Jones.

Constable Wheat of McGregor and a Highway Patrolman investigated the accident and no liability for the accident has been reported. Brady, the uninjured boy with Jones, was suffering from shock for several hours after the accident.

Funeral services were held for Mr. Jones yesterday at 2:30 at the Oglesby Baptist Church, with Rev. John Lewis of Oglesby, assisted by Wallace Gooch, Gatesville Church of Christ minister. Interment was in the Post Oak cemetery near Oglesby.

Mr. Jones is survived by his wife and daughter, his mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Jones, a number of brothers and sisters, and many relatives and friends. Mrs. Jones is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Humphries of Oglesby. A complete account of the funeral and the survivors will be carried in Friday's issue of the News.

Count 'Em! Too Many Accidents Since Friday, Eight

Starting the week end's accidents, Homer Laxson, riding with Albert Ware, crossing the highway west of Gatesville by a doctor from Santa Anna, about 9 o'clock Friday morning. Mr. Laxson suffered head injuries and bruises, and Mr. Ware got out with a few bruises and scratches.

The doctor's car had the front end caved in. Laxson and Ware had a cow in a trailer behind a light model car. The cow was uninjured as the other car struck the back end of the car, and the trailer, tearing them both up badly.

Harold Patterson, Houston, had a front end collision with Earl Donaldson about 1:15 a. m. Saturday, and Patterson's car's front end was rather banged up. Donaldson's car was also badly damaged. He had two young boys and girls with him. The accident happened 3 miles north of McGregor on the Crawford highway. No one was injured.

Eleven a. m. Saturday was the brother, R. M. Cummings.

NAZIS SINK 25 SHIPS

Berlin, Aug. 24 (AP)—The German high command announced Sunday night, Nazi warships and U-Boats had sunk 25 merchantmen totaling 148,200 tons, including 21 freighters out of a single British convoy traveling from England to Gibraltar.

Monday via radio, Britain said only 7 were sunk.

FOOD PRICE FIXING BY '42

Oklahoma City, Aug. 24 (AP)—Price fixing in the food industry might become a reality by the end of the year, Gerrit Vander Hooning, food consultant for the office of production management, predicted today.

time for the next. An Army nurse from Abilene, started around two cars one pushing the other, and a right front tire blew out, and the nurse received a gash on her head. All the cars in this one were going west, about 3 miles out of Gatesville.

A soldier, driving east on U.S. 84 turned his car over between Greenbriar Creek and Coryell Creek, and was treated for a gashed head.

Friday night early, a car said to be driven by a man named Walters from near Oglesby, hit the rear end of a light delivery driven by Otto Yates, about 4 miles east on U.S. 84, and damaged the light car, bending up the front end of the other. Yates received head injuries, his son, J. W., was bruised cut, and said to be injured internally, and another younger son received a nasty head wound and hip injury. E. W. Wilson, riding with Mr. Yates, was cut and bruised. It is not known whether Mr. Walters was injured or not.

J. W., was taken to a Waco hospital where he is reported doing nicely.

E. D. Wilson was slightly injured when his car and a Greyhound bus driven by C. D. Montgomery crashed Saturday. Rain was blamed for the accident.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis M. Jones driving up from Alice Saturday morning about 4 o'clock, hit a 200 pound hog on the highway, denting in the front end of their car, and killing the pig. No one in the car was hurt.

It finally got home. "The writer" as we say in the papers backed out of Mrs. J. B. Graves' garage Saturday afternoon about 6:30 and left a left front wheel hanging about 5 feet in the air. It took a wrecker to get it out.

We, "the people" ought to watch what we are doing. Mine was just — carelessness. Wouldn't say that about yours.

That's all we've heard about. There may have been more. And, at that, the information on these, was scarce. "Doc" get the "Who, When, Where, How and | or Why" We've got to know those answers to give you the news.

Georgia Com. Of Agriculture Presents The Case Of Cotton

(Note: This article which we think will be of interest to "real" farmers in Coryell county, and is not necessarily the opinion of this paper. It does present a "cotton angle" we've never, among other things, heard of. It is a result of a recent meeting of agriculturists of the South. The conclusion are left to you.)

Statement by Tom Linder, Commissioner of Agriculture, State Capitol, Atlanta, Ga.
HOW MUCH LONGER CAN THE AMERICAN FARMER LAST

AT THIS?

The average national income for the five years from 1925 to 1929 inclusive was $79,217,000,000.

This means that the total income of all kinds of all the people of the United States totaled this figure during those five years.

The average cash income to farmers throughout the United States was $10,006,000,000. The farmer received 12.6% of the total national income.

During the five years from 1935 to 1939 inclusive, the national income dropped to an average of $65,039,000,000 per year. Of this national income the farmers received an average cash income of $6,212,000,000, which amounted to 8.8% of the national income.

In other words, from 1935 to 1939 the farmers received only two thirds as much of the national income as they received during the five years from 1925 to 1929.

For the sake of argument I have included all government benefits of all kinds received by the farmers during the latter five year period. To show just what has happened to the farmers, I call your special attention to the last column in the following tabulation showing the percentage of national income received by the farmers in different years.

Statement showing gross farm income, with and without government benefits also percent of national income received by farmers for the five-year average 1925-1929 as compared with the period of 1935-1939.

Column 1 of the above tabulation sets out the gross income received by the farms each year during the two five year periods. The government, in arriving at the figures in the first column, charged the farmer as an income all farm products consumed on the farm by man and beast.

The amounts charged to the farmer as an income for farm products consumed on the farm are set out in the second column of the above tabulation.

A casual consideration reveals that farm products consumed on the farm do not constitute an income at all. It costs the farmer just as much to grow the products consumed on the farms as it does to produce the products that are carried to the market and sold.

For this reason, I have subtracted the amount set up by the government as products consumed on the farm from the gross income.

Column 3 of the above tabulation carries the total amounts of government benefits of all kinds paid to the farmers during the latter five year period. I have also subtracted these in order to give a fair comparison of the real cash income of the farmer from 1935 to 1939, as compared to the cash return to the farmers during the five year period from 1925 to 1929, during which period there were no government benefits paid.

Column 4 shows the actual cash return to the farmers for crops produced.

The actual cash return to the farmers for the five year period from 1925 to 1929 averaged $10,006,000,000 per year. The actual cash income for the farmers for the latter period from 1935 to 1939 averaged $5,738,000,000 per year.

During the five year period from 1935 to 1939 the farmer received 57% as much cash income as he did during the first period from 1925 to 1929.

The national income for the first five year period averaged $79,217,000,000, while for the latter period from 1935 to 1939 the national income averaged $65,039,000,000.

This means that the national income during the latter five year period was 83%, while the farmers income was only 57% of the former period.

With the national income cut to 83%, it looks like the farmer would have been hurt enough if his income had also been reduced to 83%; but instead of being reduced 83%, it was actually reduced to 57%.

The percentage of the national income received by the farmer during the first five year period varied from 13.7 in 1925 to 12.6 in 1929.

The percentage of the national income received by the farmer during the last five year period was as follows:

1935	9.4%
1936	9.2%
1937	9%
1938	8.5%
1939	8.1%

It must be kept in mind that the percentage given for 1935 to 1939 include all government payments to the farmers.

From the ten year period 1920 to 1929 until 1941 the price of farm products declined about 33 1-3%.

The percentage of the farmers income decreased exactly 33 1-3% and the actual income was reduced exactly 33 1-3%.

In my previous communication I demonstrated that the minimum prices that would represent parity for the horse and buggy days were as follows:

Cotton $.24
Cottonseed Oil12
Corn99
Oats56
Wheat 1.64
No. 1 Hogs12
No. 1 Steers14
No. 1 Veal14
No. 1 Lamb16

No. 1 Sheep03
In that communication I suggested that Congress should add at least 25% to these prices to take care of reduced acreage, protective tariff, high labor costs, and rural education.

The above tabulation demonstrates that the increase added, instead of being 25%, should be 33 1-3%. This would put the price of these farm products as follows:

Cotton $.32
Cottonseed Oil16
Corn 1.32
Oats74
Wheat 2.19
No. 1 Hogs16
No. 1 Steers 17½
No. 1 Veal 17½
No. 1 Lamb 21
No. 1 Sheep11

The facts are that the congress has set up a controlled economy.

The further facts are that this controlled economy does not control anybody except the farmers.

The natural result of a controlled economy which does not control anyone except the farmers is to continually rob the farmer of more and more every year of the things he produces for the benefit of those who do not farm.

The national income for the next 12 months is bound to be at least one hundred billion dollars. The government itself is going to spend thirty to forty billion dollars.

During the five year period of 1925 to 1929 the farmers were somewhat below parity with the horse and buggy days of 1913.

But even on a basis of the five year period of 1925 to 1929, giving the farmer an average of 12.6 of the national income, the farmer in the next twelve months should receive a cash income of around 12 billion dollars.

If the farmer is put on an actual parity with 1913, and then we add 33 1-3% to give him buying power to live at the standard of the present day, the farmers income during the next twelve months would run around eighteen billion dollars, or 18% of the national income.

This would be in line with the income that the farmer did receive prior to the enactment of high protective tariffs.

WHY ON EARTH DO THEY DO IT?

... buy and use expensive hobby equipment... and not insure it

People who own a lot of expensive hobby equipment like cameras, fishing tackle, guns and the like, carry a lot of worry unless they have good sound insurance to shoulder the loss if something valuable is broken, stolen or lost.

Moral: Pass this worry on to a good sound insurance policy. We can take care of you to perfection.

Over City Drug Phone 190

We are coming to the close of a most hectic and history making week. The House has been engaged in consideration of some of the most important legislation of the session. Tonight we have disposed of all of the important legislation that is out of committee. In normal times we would expect to adjourn as soon as the Senate could wind up its business. However, in view of the tense foreign situation Congress will not adjourn but will follow the practice of last year and remain in continuous session. However, it has been agreed that for the next four weeks no controversial business will be taken up in the House unless some emergency makes it necessary in which case the Speaker will notify all members. Various committees will continue their work. The Senate is expected to act on the tax bill, and in this way very little actual time will be lost, but the bulk of the members will try to get some rest. The nervous tension of long drawn out sessions always begins to tell at this time of the year. The number of deaths in Congress has been very high during the past weeks and the number of members who are ill is quite high. I shall not write any news letters until regular work is resumed.

The house and Senate agreed on a Conference Report that provided that all of the cotton and wheat now held by the government should be kept off the market except for export, for use in the National Defense program, or for relief. Of course, the purpose of this provision was to keep this great mass of cotton and wheat from being sold in competition with the crop the farmers are putting on the market this fall. As to cotton, it was thought that it was better to let all of this 1941 crop move into the trade even if we did not deminish the government held surplus than to sell some of the "government cotton" and probably break the price and then have the government make new loans on the same number of bales of the 1941 crop. Had we voted against this report it would surely have broken the cotton market just at the time our farmers were about to get some cotton to sell. I voted for the report. I hope the President does not veto the bill as it has been suggested he might.

I realize that it would have been better had it been possible for us to fix a limit bearing some fair relation to "parity" so that if cotton were to go to world war levels that it could be sold, but unfortunately there has been some tragic miscalculation of "parity" and until the Department revises its figures it seems clear that we cannot use this as a basis of determining a fair price. "Parity" should fluctuate with the general price level. It should be high when farmers' living costs are high and lower when farmers' expenses go down. Some how the Department of Agriculture has figured that parity on cotton and wheat is lower today than it was four years ago. I do not believe that this can possibly be true. I feel that the Department has made some mistake in its calculations, or that it has adopted an incorrect formula. I have introduced a resolution to call on the Department to come before our Committee on Agriculture and explain how they can insist that the farmer can buy more things with the same amount of money now than he could in 1937. I don't think he can. I believe true parity for cotton today is well above 20 cents.

Of course, by far the most domestic action in the House this past week was the remarkably close vote of 203 to 202 by which the bill extending the period of service for American military men was passed. The final vote was taken some time after dark. The House chamber and the galleries were packed. There had been many long hours of serious and often bitter debate. Feelings were at a high key. There had been several votes on amendments and a motion to recommit all of which had indicated that the final vote would be close, but I am sure no one dreamed that it would be as close as it was. When the vote was announced a recapitulation was demanded. The names of all those voting "Aye" were called. The names of all those voting "No". Members were given an opportunity to correct any errors. No errors existed. Everyone agreed that the vote was fairly and correctly counted, and I think that it is great tribute to the American way of life that the majority vote was accepted as a matter of course.

In view of the action of Vichy, France in accepting full German control, and the obvious plans of Japan to strike on the least show of weakness, I cannot but feel that had this vote gone other than it did this nation would very probably have already been drawn into the war in the Far East. I think the least show of fear or hesitation on our part will be fatal. No one wanted to keep the men another day, but it would have been no service to the men or to the country to order their release at the cost of a war which would make it immediately necessary to call them back along with millions of others. I therefore voted for the bill.

I hope our people can realize just how serious the world situation is and just how hard and how successfully (so far) your President and your Congress have worked to keep the United States out of war. Had either the President or the Congress desired to get us into war, as some so cruelly and foolishly declared, we should certainly have been involved long ago. Had the policies of the Administration been so destructive of peace as had been charged, it would have been impossible for America to remain at peace during two full years of world war. My friends, your President and your Congress want peace. We are doing all we can to maintain peace. The policy we have followed has maintained peace long after "Col." Lindberg and Sen. Wheeler said it would lead us to war.

utes; drain and put piece of butter in pot, about 2 tablespoons. When water has drained out of spaghetti, put it under cold water and just let it run over it for a moment, which washes out excess starch; then immediately put spaghetti back into pot in which you placed the butter. Then pour over the spaghetti the boiling hot sauce and stir to thoroughly mix. Serve with freshly grated Parmesan cheese.

SAUCE

- 1 large can Italian tomatoes
- 1 cup Italian dried mushrooms
- 4 tbsp. olive oil
- 1 large onion, chooped fine
- 1/2 lb chopped round steak
- 2 tsp. chili powder
- 1 can beef bouillon or chicken consomme

Salt and pepper to taste
The Italian dried mushrooms should be soaked for 3 or 4 hours; pour boiling water over them and allow to soak; then drain that water and refill with fresh water. The water should be changed several times. Stew the tomatoes very slowly for 30 minutes. Meanwhile, cook slowly in a skillet the olive oil and the onion for 10 minutes; then add the chopped beef, formed into 3 or 4 flat cakes. Drain the mushrooms and cut them into very small pieces, and add. Cook slowly until the meat is well done. Then mash the meat with a fork and mix thoroughly with the onion and mushrooms. Add the tomatoes by pressing through a sieve with a spoon. Add the chili powder, the bouillon, salt and pepper. Then simmer very, very slowly for about one hour.

Blind-Lead-Blind

"Fuehrer—Fuehrer!" "Duce—Duce!" Excited masses crowded into public squares, hypnotized by sound and color, misled by lies and propaganda endlessly repeated.

Not for us, in America. We believe that NO fuehrer—leader—however wise, can be as wise as all of us together, calmly considering the road before us, seeing all the facts, deciding which way we shall go.

FREE if we were kept in darkness.

The British public cheered Chamberlain to the echo when he returned from Munich. But it kept its right to know how his appeasement plans came off. And kept its right to reject him when it decided HIS judgment had faltered.

The American public, patient, tolerant, softhearted though it is, clings to its right to KNOW THE FACTS.

This public says to its congressmen, its merchants, its teachers, its publishers and to all others alike:

"Show me your wares. Let those who think they have better wares show them also. As long as I have the FACTS and the right to make MY choice, I do not fear any of you.

"None of you is perfect; each has his blind spots. But with ALL of you free to see and to warn and to lead, none amongst us need be blind."

Each day the news and advertising columns of FORTY MILLION newspapers in America furnish the great Town Hall where all may speak. While that forum is kept open and in use we are protected against blind masses crying out in their blindness for "Leader—Leader—Fuehrer, Duce!"

A letter from those of you who share our views will hearten us. A letter from those of you who disagree will chasten us. And newspapers, if they are to serve you well, need both the heartening and the chastening of an alert readership. Address the publisher of this newspaper.

With prices of basic farm products as set out on page five and price of other farm produce in line with these, assuming that production is equal to the average production of the last five years, the farmer would receive a cash income of around eighteen billion dollars.

Any legislation that does not provide actual parity on a basis of today for the American farmer is class legislation.

Any legislation which says to the American farmer, "You must produce food and clothing for the balance of the people at a price which does not give you equality with people in other lines," is nothing short of legislating the farmers into peonage.

The farmers of America are the most patriotic people in America. They are willing to make any sacrifice needed for National Defense.

But to single out the American farmer and legislate the greatest hardships on him, when people in all other lines are being paid a bonus to support the government in the war, is uncalled for, intolerable, and will not be forever submitted to.

We say today that the United States is giving seven billion dollars to England under the Lease-Lend bill, and that we are going to give them seven billion more in the next twelve months.

Can you name anybody in America today that is giving anything except the farmer?

Do you know anybody else in any line of business that is working below parity?

No! The only two classes of people who are actually giving today are the farmers who raise the food and clothing and the boys who have got to carry the guns and do the fighting.

Statement showing (1925-1929) five year average prices of basic farm products compared with (1935-1939) five year average prices, also comparison of total farm income for the two five-year periods.

Commodity	Average Price 1925-1929	Average Price 1935-1939
Cotton	.19	.12
Cotton Seed Oil	.10	.09
Wheat	1.46	.94
Corn	.90	.74
Beef	.14	.12
Hogs	.11	.09

Farm Income 1925-1929 5 Year Period
1925	$10,581,000,000
1926	10,580,000,000
1927	10,700,000,000
1928	11,089,000,000
1929	11,221,000,000
TOTAL	$54,171,000,000

Farm Income 1935-1939 Five Year Period
1935	$6,138,000,000
1936	8,012,000,000
1937	8,621,000,000
1938	7,538,000,000
1939	9,769,000,000
TOTAL	$40,078,000,000

$14,093,000,000

The total farm income for the 1935-1939 five-year period INCLUDES all Government benefit payments paid from the U. S. Treasury.

From the above we find that the total farm income for the 1925-1929 period was $14,093,000,000 more than for the latter five-year period.

According to Statistical Abstract of the U. S. Department of Commerce 62nd number issued 1940 the total farm mortgage debt in 1935 was $7,645,000,000.

This shows the loss in farm income during the 1935-1939 five year period amounts to enough money to have paid off all the mortgages on all the farms in the United States twice.

Statement showing the average price of six basic farm products for 1913 and the ten year average price 1920-1929 and the percentage increase necessary to give the farmers same purchasing power in 1941 as in 1913 and 1920-1929 respectively.

The average price of six basic farm products for the year 1913 are set out in 1st column of this table

From 1913 until 1941 the average price of the manufactured products the farmer buys has increased 92%.

If we take the 1913 prices of the six farm products and add 92 percent to them we find that the parity price of these farm products in 1941 must be as follows to give the farmers same purchasing power in 1941 as in 1913.

The average price of these six basic farm products for the ten year average period 1920-1929 are set out in the fourth column of this table.

From 1920-1929 ten-year average period until 1941 the average price of the manufactured products the farmer buys has increased 11%.

If we take the 10 year 1920-1929 prices of the six farm products and add 11 percent to them we find that the parity price of these farm products in 1941 must be as follows to give the farmers same purchasing power in '41 as in the 1920-1929 ten year average period.

WASHINGTON NEWS
FROM OUR CONGRESSMAN
W. R. POAGE

Matters have been moving rapidly in Washington during the past week. The House finally passed the bill after adopting the only amendment that was permitted under the rules—the amendment struck out the requirement for joint income tax returns between husband and wife. I voted for the amendment and against the mandatory joint return clause. I then voted for the bill as amended. It is now expected that the Senate will spend a month or six weeks holding hearings and debating this measure.

Early this week both houses passed a Conference Report on the "Property Seizure" bill. This is the bill which provides for the seizure by the government of any industrial plant essential to national defense if the management of such plant fails or refuses to cooperate with the government in the production of needed defense articles. There was not much opposition to the original bill, but there was an effort to add a provision authorizing the government to take any plant over if production was stopped by any cause (including strikes). Personally, I think that the government should have exactly the same right to insist that labor cooperate as it has to insist that industrial management cooperate. I, therefore, voted for the proposal to make the bill cover all stoppages of production. However, as I have heretofore explained, there are a great many members of the House who are afraid to vote to require labor to do its part, and therefore the amendment was defeated. The vote this week was only on the original proposal. Of course, I voted for that because I believe every plant and every citizen should be required to do his part to defend America.

The House failed by two votes to muster the necessary two-thirds vote required to override a veto when it considered the President's veto of the military roads bill on Thursday. I voted to over-ride the veto as did every member of the Texas delegation who was present and voted. This was one of the most peculiar and interesting votes I have seen in the House. The veto was sustained very largely by the votes of the president's enemies, including almost all of the leading Republicans. This bill was introduced and passed after the President himself had asked that provision be made for the development of necessary military roads. It seems to me that if we are to be able to use the army we are training to defend this country we must be able to transport it quickly all over the country, and particularly from point to point along our frontiers. Long ago the War Department worked out a nation-wide system of strategic highways which involves every state in the Union. The construction of these roads is most clearly a "defensive" investment. They never can be used for offense. Everyone also realizes that in order to care for the necessary traffic in the neighborhood of the camps and defense industries there must be a great number of "access" roads built that have no relation to the normal needs of civilian traffic. The Congress therefore passed a bill providing $185,000,000 for access roads, emergency repairs and flight strips (strips along and adjoining the highways for the use of military aviation). The expenditures and allocation of these funds was left in the hands of the president because there was no proper yardstick whereby it could be apportioned to the several states by Congress. However, the $125,000,000 provided for strategic highways was by the terms of the bill to be apportioned among the States in a way to assure each State of some work on the strategic network of roads. Inasmuch as the War Department has already decided on the roads that properly make up the strategic network, it seems to me that it was only proper for Congress to see that the money was fairly apportioned. As I see it, this is the only way we could make sure that we would not see a repetition of the situation that has existed in regard to the establishment of defense industries. The War Department and the OPM have often given out public statements that they were going to decentralize industry and yet the great bulk of all of the defense money has been spent and is still being spent in the same old industrial centers and the concentration of industry is becoming worse. Therefore, in order to prevent a repetition of this sort of thing it was necessary to put a provision in this bill assuring a fair distribution of funds. The President felt this to be unnecessary and insisted that Congress make no allocation of the funds. He also objected to the provision that Federal funds might be used to repair State roads that were injured or destroyed by troop movements. To my mind, this provision to reimburse the States for losses brought about by the Federal government is so obviously fair that it needs no discussion. As a matter of fact, most of those who voted to sustain the veto were those who did not want any appropriation for military roads.

The House has today begun the debate on the bill to extend the period of service for our troops. It will be several days before any vote is reached.

LOCAL HOME ECONOMIST TAKES NUTRITION TRAINING FOR DEFENSE

Denton, Texas—Brushing up on her home economics training to fall in line with the nutrition program in the National Defense movement, Miss Nelle Goodall, Gatesville home economics student has just completed a community nutrition project in a three-week refresher course in home economics at Texas State College for Women.

Fifty-nine home economics teachers, home makers, WPA lunch-room supervisors, dietitians, and demonstration agents were enrolled in the course offered at the college for the first time.

Centered around promotion of the Texas Food Standard, set up by the Texas State Nutrition Committee, the course included discussions tying journalism, radio, teaching, and art in with nutrition advancement, motion picture films showing the important role of nutritionists in periods of national emergency, and food demonstrations. A reading room, supplying the latest books, magazines, and pamphlets on nutrition, was provided for the class.

Each home economist enrolled in the course was urged to work up a project that she might put in use the following year.

CHAPTER FOUR SYNOPSIS
Beautiful Jerry Brooks and Allan MacNally, young attorney, have a disagreement at her sister's divorce trial. They meet later and Jerry realizes that Allan isn't so bad. They fall in love when Allan visits her on her grandmother's farm.

CHAPTER V

IT HAD been a wonderful Summer for Jerry and Allan. They had been engaged since that Spring day when Allan had come out to her grandparent's place. And although they had both worked hard all Summer, they had looked forward to the Fall, and their wedding, and the time when they would have a place of their own.

Jerry had kept on with her job until she was married, and would have continued at it, but Allan flatly refused to let her. Together they made a bargain. Jerry wouldn't work, and Allan, as long as he lived, was never to handle a divorce case. He had passed his Bar Examinations and gotten a job as law clerk with a reliable, stolid I'd feel better if I could feed my wife . . . if only at rare intervals," he ended.

"I'm sorry, MacNally," Buell came back. "But if you youngsters will insist on plunging so recklessly into wedlock, yours are the consequences. Good night."

Allan slumped out, dragging his chin after him. He would like to have gone to a bar and had several stiff drinks before facing Jerry. Then he realized that if he could afford to go to a bar there wouldn't be any problem to take him there, and the thought did not cheer him up. Heading for the elevator, he heard someone call him. Turning, he saw Erskine Brandon, who looked as though the law profession could sometimes be exceedingly profitable.

"It's good to see you, Mr. Brandon," Allan said.

"How is the law business with you?" Brandon asked.

"Oh, fair enough. I see where you made the headlines again with darned cute, he noticed, although she hadn't had a new dress since they were married, and had given up hair dressers and all those other things that are supposed to make gals glamorous.

"How's my old lady?" he said as gaily as he could, slipping an arm around her waist.

"Your old lady's mighty fine and how's her old man?" Jerry responded after kissing him.

She watched him as he hung his coat in the closet, flipped on the radio, and sat down, lighting a cigarette. She couldn't decide what his mood was. He seemed to her neither gay nor gloomy, but rather apathetic. She couldn't wait any longer to know. He had promised today was the day he would ask for that raise.

"Did you do it, darling?" she asked hesitantly.

"Yes," he answered, with more despair than she ever knew could go into that one little word.

Jerry didn't pursue her questioning. She realized now how wretched Allan felt, and she didn't want him to feel defeated. Quietly she went to him, slid onto his lap, and put her cheek next to his, in a tender, comforting way. They didn't have to say anything. There was all the trust and love in the world between them, and confidence in each other too. Jerry knew it wouldn't always be like this, petty nagging money worries. And Allan knew that she knew it. In a sudden convulsive flood of emotion, his arms were about her and he was covering her face and her neck with kisses.

"Look, darling, we're still eating, so I don't know what we have to fuss about," Jerry finally said. "Come on out into the kitchen and help me fix dinner."

They jumped up, and as short memorized as two children tore into the tiny kitchen and went to work. Allan, tackling the potatoes, thought he would have at least one try at sounding Jerry out on Brandon's proposition.

"Who do you think I ran into today?" he asked her very casually. "I don't know, dear, who?" she said.

"Your old friend, Mr. Brandon," he answered, watching to see how she would take it.

Jerry stiffened at the very mention of the name.

"What did he have to say," she asked lightly.

"Oh, we just sort of chatted," Mac told her evasively.

"I mean what did he have to say?" Jerry demanded suspiciously.

"Well, he did sort of offer me a job," Allan confessed. "I'm rather sorry now that I made you that promise. I mean about never handling divorce cases," he continued with a laugh, half in fun and half serious. Then he saw he had gone a little too far. Jerry was staring at him outraged.

"You know I was only kidding," he said quickly.

"I hope you were, Mac," she answered, more serious than he had ever heard her. "You promised me you'd never get smeared up with the divorce racket, or tie up with Brandon, or anyone like him. And that's about the only promise I'll ever hold you to."

"All right, honey," Mac said, wanting to end the whole discussion. "But just the same, somebody's got to handle that kind of work."

"It can be somebody else's somebody—not mine," she told him. "And just remember this for the record. If you throw in with Brandon, you and I are through!"

(To be continued)

"Look darling, we're still eating, so I don't know what we have to fuss about," Jerry finally said.

firm, that handled only the most respectable sort of civil cases.

Together, Jerry and Allan had exhausted their savings by furnishing their small apartment. They had figured, blithely enough, that they could manage on Allan's salary of one hundred dollars a month, but it hadn't taken them long to discover that they couldn't. Things were really tough, and Allan was determined to try for a raise. Mr. Buell, the senior partner, had agreed to see him, and as Allan straightened his tie, and ran a comb through his hair, before going in, he swore to himself he wouldn't leave Buell's office until he got it.

Buell talked first about the weather, then about two recent Supreme Court decisions, and then about the firm of Buell and Ellinger. As he went on, Allan lost more and more of his nerve. Finally, deciding to take the plunge, he bluntly said he needed more money. Mr. Buell appeared to be shocked.

"Of course, if you're not satisfied here, young man, I assure you I can find plenty of young lawyers who would be glad of your opportunities," he told Allan smugly.

"Don't misunderstand, Mr. Buell," Allan muttered feebly. "I just feel it's a question of merit. I'm getting the same money now I got before I was formally admitted to the bar. It doesn't seem right. And besides that Winslow alimony fight," Allan remarked for the sake of making conversation.

"Yes, I just collected my end of it," Brandon told him, and pulled out a check to prove it. The figures staggered Allan.

"How do you manage to collect fees like that?" Allan asked childlike.

"Bills of divorcement, my boy. The gentle art of milking discontented cows. I've had my eye out for an assistant for a long time, you know. I've mentioned this to you before. Any time you want to make a change, I wish you would call me," he told Allan earnestly. "Please think it over."

Allan decided to walk home. It would take him half an hour longer, but postponement of the unpleasant ordeal of telling Jerry was what he wanted. He knew she would take it gamely. Probably laugh it off in fact. But he also knew he had to figure some way to get some extra money into the family strong box, to replace the bills that were overcrowding it. If she would only let him take up Brandon's offer for a while—a year or so, until they got on their feet and some money ahead. But he knew he had to cross that one off the list. No sense in tantalizing himself with it.

Jerry flew to meet him as he opened the door. She looked so
