1,349,404 POUNDS OF SCRAP IRON MOVED UP 'TIL DEC. 31

According to Max Hoffman, buyer of junk metal for National Defense, 1,349,404 pounds of scrap metal of various kinds have been moved out of Coryell county up to December 31, and he says, "Boy, it's still moving, and plenty fast."

Mr. Hoffman states that he is working night and day to keep this iron moving. He also said: "The people of Coryell County have certainly responded to this patriotic call."

Keep this good work up, and bring your scrap iron into Gatesville to Bailey's Wrecking Shop.

A. LINCOLN

Lincoln said to soldiers of his time, admitting he did not possess the polish of formal society, the following: "I am not accustomed to the language of eulogy. I have never studied the art of paying compliments to women. But I must say, that if all that has been said by orators and poets since the creation of the world in praise of women were applied to the women of America, it would not do them justice for their conduct during this war. (Civil War) I will close by saying, God bless the women of America!"

Believe Abe wasn't so bad. Wednesday is Abraham Lincoln's birthday. He was one of THE Presidents of this United States, standing out as a man, well above them all. An "Honest Abe" is a rarity in the history of the United States.

Coryell's No. 1 Egg Comes From Copperas Cove

From Ed Meissner's hens at Copperas Cove comes a hen's egg that Eddie Winfield brought in. Now, that hen must have been part ostrich, and after laying an egg like this one, stuck more than her neck in the sand.

From our Office of Facts and Figures, comes from the fertile statistical wizard the following figgers, to wit, as is egg, and etc. The egg requires a 6<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4</sub> belt (circumference); it is 8<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub> inches around the long way, and the weight—our feeble scales wouldn't do it, so we took it to the public weigher's and got a "ticket" reading as follows: <sup>3</sup>/<sub>8</sub> of a pound, and the way some of the "occupied" countries are eating now, is calculated to last one person almost a week.

In the Food for Freedom idea, if the eggs in Coryell were this size, Coryell would certainly get some kind of a medal for super-production. The egg's in our window, if you're from Missouri.

CORYELL MAN WAS SOLDIER UNDER "CAMP CORYELL" OFFICER

James Shults, Route 4, Killeen, was a visitor with Col. Ray C. Montgomery in the Temple tank destroyer forces offices last week.

Mr. Shults was in Battery C, 340th field artillery during the last war, serving with the Colonel in 1917, 1918 and 1919.

Colonel Montgomery was a captain then and Mr. Shults served under him as a horse-shoer. Friday was the first time they had seen each other since they were in Germany with the army of occupation.

Mr. Shults recalled that Colonel Montgomery "was both a gentleman and a soldier, and there was only one thing I know of that he attempted to do and failed... that was to make a soldier out of me."

"FARMERS ADVISED TO VACATE: WILL NOT BE ABLE TO MAKE COMPLETE CROP"

This story from The Killeen Herald, which we understand held up its publication Friday until definite information could be received from Army officials.

The story is as follows: "The long period of uncertainty for the people living in the camp area has come to an end. This week the army advises all in the camp area that the land will be purchased and the area taken over for military purposes. All people living in the area should seek new locations and make preparations to move as there is little probability that they will be able to harvest any kind of crop before the land is needed, NOT EVEN AN OAT CROP."

The area effected includes the territory bounded on the west by the Copperas Cove-Pidcocke-Gatesville road; on the north by the pipe line; on the south by the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe railroad and on the east by the Gatesville road from Killeen to Palo Alto, thence east along the Brookhaven road to the Elm's Crossing road and thence north to the pipe line.

In a very short time all people in the area will be contacted by agents of the government with an offer of settlement for property and work done on the land. It is the policy of the government to make outright purchase of the land and improvements and there will be no leasing as some have thought.

No definite time has been set as the date when the land will be required but in all probability troops will be using a great deal of the territory in the area for training purposes by June."

From the Temple Daily Telegram, we get the following: "The Government is proceeding with the purchase of land for the cantonment and training ground area for the Tank Destroyer Tactical and Firing center."

"It was learned that the government (Thursday) bought 22,000 acres of land Wednesday and was speeding up acquisition of the balance of the area needed for the new camp."

"News of the purchase means that the government will acquire the entire 108,000 acres needed for the camp by purchase."

"No word was available here Thursday, however, on when bids actually will be called for on the camp's construction, although this action is believed due within the next few days."

From local sources, nothing was reported.

MAJOR LEONARD M. CROWLEY ARMY REAL ESTATE DIV. HERE MON.

Major Leonard M. Crowley, Engineer Corps, Division Real Estate Director, was a visitor in Gatesville Monday.

Major Crowley is stationed in Dallas, and was here looking over the purchasing of land for the Tank Destroyer Division camp situated in Coryell County.

He was "in" during the last war, and has since been a real estate man. His home was formerly Tucson, Arizona.

Sell Your Scrap Iron For Victory

"REMEMBER PEARL HARBOR"

Search every junk pile, fence row, creek and wherenot. You want to help, now sho whow much you really mean what you say. Scrap iron is more useful than gold. See what you do to give the boys something to fight with. Remember that every pound will count.

Keep all the bolts and spare parts that you may need, then let the junk dealers have the rest. The Government, thru the OPM and the OPA has put a strict control on the price and handling of all scrap iron, so you may rest assured that it will go where it will do the most good.

May we suggest that you carefully consider buying Defense Bonds or giving to the Red Cross as a place for the money received from the sale of your scrap iron; then you will be helping in two ways to win the war. We are sure that you do not realize the seriousness of the situation, but let us remind you that we have already lost territory to the Japs and may lose more, and that some boy you know may lose his life helping to protect you because the supplies to fight with are not available. Let us not have the blood of our own countrymen upon our hands just because we were unwilling to make the little effort to make the scrap iron available. We are not making this appeal for ourselves, but for our country, as you well know we pay you for this iron.

HORNETS PLAY TITLE TILT TONITE

Meet Groesbeck
For District Crown
Tonight at 8:30

By JOHN FRANK POST

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1942

A talented quintet of roundballers from Groesbeck, al-victorious in conference contests in the northern half of the district, invade the local gym tonite to do battle with Gatesville's vaunted Golden Boys, who marched through all competition with ease to cop the championship of the southern half of the circuit. This championship tilt will begin at 8:30 (Daylight Saving Time).

Both these fine clubs have come thru strenuous schedules with only two defeats chalked up against them, and both have been winning most of their games by wide margins. The battle tonight should be close all the way, for the district championship, for which both teams have been primed since the opening of the season, will be hinging on every shot.

Hornets Win Two From Cats

Last Thursday the Hornets won two games from Itasca's Wampus Cats to win the title of this section, but the Goats are publicized to be a thirty-point better ball club than the Itascans. The contest tonight defies the dope, and it would be foolhardy to try to predict the winner. The second and third games, if necessary, will be played at Groesbeck. Friday and Saturday, so tonight will be the local fan's only chance to see these two great club in action against each other.

Locals Upset By Evant

In their last outing, the Hornets were the victims of an upset win inflicted on them by the hustling Evant Elks in Evant's invitational tournament this week end. The Elks edged past the listless and slow Hornets, 21-19, in a fray that saw several of Gatesville's expected weaknesses crop up. Manning and Blanchard, the local's two veteran hot shots, failed to bucket their shots in their usual manner, although several of their tries rimmed the hoop and fell out. Most of the time it seemed as if the basket started moving when the yshot. Big Thornton, on whom the strength of the whole ball club depends, failed to show the fine form he displayed in earlier contests. Lousy is the only word we know that will give a befitting description of his play Saturday. The hustling Elks took the ball away from him under the backboard time and time again, although he was a head taller than most of them. His defensive play was miserable, for he never seemed to untrack himself and stay with his man. He was even slower than in the Itasca games, although fans who saw the games will be inclined to doubt that statement. This elongated cageter has the natural ability to be a great player, but he does not have the fiery zeal and the will to play that characterizes the play of his mates. If he goes well tonight, the Hornets are due to win, but if he does not improve over his Evant performance, the local five is due to suffer an ignominious defeat.

Probably starting line-up for the Hornets will be Manning and Blanchard at forwards, Thornton at center, Wilkinson and Giebler, guards.

IRELAND AND JONESBORO START TITLE PLAY-OFF WED.

The two arch rivals of Coryell County basketball, Ireland and Jonesboro, open a two out of three game series Wednesday night to bring the tight county Class B championship race to a final decision.

The playoff series will be opened in the Ireland gym Wednesday night, with a second game being scheduled for Friday night at Jonesboro. If a third game is necessary to decide the winner, the time and site will be decided after the Thursday night game.

Both clubs are in top shape and both will be ready to go tonight.

Werner Lemmer, Cardinal sharpshooter and one of the best cagers in the county, is in fine form. He is the boy on whom Ireland's victory hopes are pinned.

Coach Lemmons says his Eagles are in their best shape of the season now. In their last conference outing, they trimmed Pearl 20-6, while Ireland beat the same club 17-16 only a few days later.

These two clubs have met three times previously this year, and Jonesboro came out on top in every tilt, although every time it was by a slim margin.

What Helps
Business Helps You!

As you know, from time to time our good Congressman, Honorable W. R. "Bob" Poage allows various ones of us here in his office to give our views of the situation here in Washington. Because his time has been so completely taken by visitors from home, and by visit to governmental departments in behalf of people who could not get up here, he has permitted me to write this week. Mr. Poage is attending the session of the House this afternoon, but I don't know what is going on over there, so I thought I would write about Washington in wartime.

Those who have been here in years past would hardly recognize Washington as being the same place. Of course, all the old landmarks are still standing, but since the emergency started the government has been required to employ so many hundreds of thousands of people, that due to the lack of office space, they have had to erect many new temporary office buildings all over the city. Every available vacant lot in downtown Washington is being used as a site on which to build office buildings for some agency of the government. Even the beautiful parks here are dotted with long two-story buildings. The government has also gone out into the residential sections and taken over many apartment buildings, thereby making it much more difficult for newcomers to Washington to find living facilities. It is now nearly impossible to find a decent place for a family to live, and those few places available are practically prohibitive in price (in spite of the rent control law).

The Civilian Defense organization here is quite active. Every person living in Washington has been presented with a questionnaire as to his family, the type of construction of the building in which he lives, what first aid material he might have, etc., and giving instructions as to what he should do in case of an air raid. Air raid sirens have been installed throughout the city and wardens have been assigned to every locality in town and are empowered by law to force entry into anyone's home to enforce the blackout law during a raid. There are no lights shining on the Capitol building whatever, and most government buildings have either had all windows painted over with black paint or had light-proof paper pasted over the glass. All street lights, of which there are many thousands in Washington lining each side of every street, have been dimmed, and many have been painted black on the top portion of the globe to prevent the rays of light shining up into the sky, but allowing some light to shine downward on the street. I have seen many automobiles lately with blackout shades and lense on the headlights. All in all, everyone here is conscious of the danger of an air raid, and surely we must recognize that Washington presents a most attractive object to the enemy, with all of the vital pulse-lines of every branch of our civilization centered here.

Every precaution is being taken against sabotage and spies in our Federal buildings here. All employees of the government are required to wear in a conspicuous place on his clothing a picture of himself, his position-title and where he works. He cannot enter the building unless he wears this identification. Visitors have an unusually difficult time in gaining admittance, and must be recognized by some authorized and responsible party in the building before he can be admitted. All packages, suitcases, briefcases, etc., must be inspected before entrance; this of course is to prevent allowing a time bomb to be placed in any building. Anti aircraft and large caliber machine guns are mounted and manned by soldiers on the top to most buildings constantly.

Red Cross and first aid training classes are being conducted day and night in every agency of the government and by every civic and fraternal organization in order to better prepare our civilians to prevent disease, fire and unnecessary loss of life through injury in times of air raids. Everyone in the government is being urged and politely asked to buy defense bonds regularly every pay-day, and also to take part in our civilian defense work. In short, Washington is girding its loins for the worst, should it come, and I sincerely feel that such preparedness is doing a world of good toward keeping the morale of the people high. It not only better prepares us for the maximum defense of our homes and the lives of our loved ones, but it makes us feel that we, each one of us, has some part in our all-important defense effort. If our people would let themselves recognize the danger threatening our very existence and "get mad", if you will and actively DO something for our country, we all would

Chapter One

It was recreation time in the Convent of Sainte Cecile, and most of the little girls were playing in the large room set aside for that purpose. A few were reading in corners and one group was talking very seriously over the day's work. One girl stood looking out of a window; suddenly her interest was aroused by something she saw in the patio below; several of the others joined her, with them the Sister in charge.

Below them a beautiful, sad-eyed young woman stopped on her way into the Convent to pray before the image of the Virgin Mary. Her beauty, her expensive clothes and the sorrow in her eyes intrigued the girls.

"Who is it?" one of them asked the Sister.

"Why, that's Domini Enfilden—"

"Was she ever here?" another asked.

"Yes, she was like you — she couldn't do her sums correctly either."

"She doesn't look very happy," a girl said, studying the face of the stranger below.

"Is she married?" asked another.

"No, she isn't married," said the Sister.

"Is that why she isn't happy?"

"No, my dear. You see she devoted her life to looking after an invalid father whom she loved dearly."

"But why would that make her sad, Sister?"

"He suffered greatly for years—she gave up everything for him—and a few months ago he died—mercifully."

The girls continued to discuss the visitor until the Sister sent them back to their work.

Meanwhile the Mother Superior, apprised of Domini's arrival, went out into the patio to meet her. As she led her to the little cell that had once been her room in the convent, she, too, noticed the sadness in the beautiful eyes of the visitor. Domini admitted to her that she had not found happiness. Since her father's death she had traveled to Paris, Vienna, the Riviera—everywhere, but life had seemed to escape her.

Mother Josephine thought a moment.

"Why not leave the cities you have found so lonely and try something different?" she suggested.

"Perhaps the desert, for a time."

"The desert, Mother? What will I find there?" Like a child she looked up into Mother Josephine's face, wondering.

"There in the solitude—" The Mother Superior put her hand affectionately on Domini's head. "There you may find yourself. In the face of the Infinite, your grief will vanish—"

Domini rested her head on Mother Josephine's lap—"and you will realize life is larger, fuller than you dream."

Domini resolved to take Mother Josephine's advice and prepared to travel to Algeria, to the city of Beni-Mora, parish of Mother Josephine's friend, Father Roubier.

Meanwhile, at El-Lagarni, a Trappist Monastery outside Tunis, in Northern Africa, occurred a dramatic and unprecedented event.

The monks led a life so peaceful as to be almost entirely detached from the outer world. After completing their novitiate, they swore eternal vows of chastity, poverty and, most drastic of all, silence.

De Trevignac was about to leave the monastery, and took this occasion to explain for the first time why he had come at all. His mother, he told the Abbe, had always wanted him to serve the Church. She had died recently, and he felt that she would appreciate his devoting himself to God, if only for a little while.

A monk came in bearing a bottle of the precious liqueur called Lagarine.

"You must take this with you," the Abbe said, "A small token of our pleasure in your visit here."

"For me?" said De Trevignac, highly pleased.

"Yes. A bottle of the liqueur we make here in the monastery. We are very proud of it."

"You have every reason to be. I have tasted it. It is superb."

"I will call Father Antoine. The making of the liqueur is in his charge. Your praise will make him happy. Brother Gregory, call Brother Antoine from his work."

Brother Gregory left the hall. When he returned, all eyes turned on him, for it was obvious that he was suffering some tremendous shock. So great was his agitation that he could not control himself. He broke his silence.

"Brother Antoine's gone!" he cried. "Gone out into the world. He's broken his vows!"

"Enough!" commanded the Abbe, rising and stretching out his hands to quiet the horror struck group. Then in tones of deep and troubled compassion, he said, "Do not condemn him. Pity him. Whatever has led Brother Antoine to take this awful step—we know that he loved God. Agony of spirit, remorse and terror will follow him wherever he goes. He will return. We must believe that. Let us not forget that for those who are weary—for those who have lost the way,—pointing to the Crucifix on the wall, "there alone is peace."

"Amen," they echoed.

She stood on the balcony outside her room, drinking in the beauty of the African evening.

valid father whom she loved dearly."

"But why would that make her sad, Sister?"

"He suffered greatly for years—she gave up everything for him—and a few months ago he died—mercifully."

The girls continued to discuss the visitor until the Sister sent them back to their work.

"The desert, Mother? What will I find there?" Like a child she looked up into Mother Josephine's face, wondering.

"There in the solitude—" The Mother Superior put her hand affectionately on Domini's head. "There you may find yourself. In the face of the Infinite, your grief will vanish—"

Domini rested her head on Mother Josephine's lap—"and you will realize life is larger, fuller than you dream."

Domini resolved to take Mother Josephine's advice and prepared to travel to Algeria, to the city of Beni-Mora, parish of Mother Josephine's friend, Father Roubier.

Meanwhile, at El-Lagarni, a Trappist Monastery outside Tunis, in Northern Africa, occurred a dramatic and unprecedented event.

The monks led a life so peaceful as to be almost entirely detached from the outer world. After completing their novitiate, they swore eternal vows of chastity, poverty and, most drastic of all, silence.

De Trevignac was about to leave the monastery, and took this occasion to explain for the first time why he had come at all. His mother, he told the Abbe, had always wanted him to serve the Church. She had died recently, and he felt that she would appreciate his devoting himself to God, if only for a little while.

A monk came in bearing a bottle of the precious liqueur called Lagarine.

"You must take this with you," the Abbe said, "A small token of our pleasure in your visit here."

"For me?" said De Trevignac, highly pleased.

"Yes. A bottle of the liqueur we make here in the monastery. We are very proud of it."

"You have every reason to be. I have tasted it. It is superb."

"I will call Father Antoine. The making of the liqueur is in his charge. Your praise will make him happy. Brother Gregory, call Brother Antoine from his work."

Brother Gregory left the hall. When he returned, all eyes turned on him, for it was obvious that he was suffering some tremendous shock. So great was his agitation that he could not control himself. He broke his silence.

"Brother Antoine's gone!" he cried. "Gone out into the world. He's broken his vows!"

"Enough!" commanded the Abbe, rising and stretching out his hands to quiet the horror struck group. Then in tones of deep and troubled compassion, he said, "Do not condemn him. Pity him. Whatever has led Brother Antoine to take this awful step—we know that he loved God. Agony of spirit, remorse and terror will follow him wherever he goes. He will return. We must believe that. Let us not forget that for those who are weary—for those who have lost the way,—pointing to the Crucifix on the wall, "there alone is peace."

"Amen," they echoed.

not only render a great service to Democracy the world over, but to our own country, our own State, our own town, our own family of loved ones and to the practically helpless children who will have to live in whatever peace they can find after the God-less dictators are gone. Let us all join in our greatest effort now and show some action and do our talking later when the danger is over. Let's not sit around with our hands folded and talk about how big and strong America is, and how wealthy our country is. Let's "Remember Pearl Harbor" and remember that our boys over in the Philippines are dying while we boast.

Yours sincerely,
James D. McAlexander,
Clerk to Congressman W. R. Poage
