Ask You "Sign-Up" Today, Tuesday

Due to the fact that final exams are in progress at Gatesville Public Schools, Principal Earle Worley asks that all those who possibly can register for sugar rationing cards TODAY. More than 2,000 registered yesterday, using the entire faculty.

If it is impossible for you to register today, you can still register Wednesday or Thursday, but it would be to the school authorities' advantage if you could do it to-

Cables For News From The "Land Down Under"

It's the truth! And, that's something, when they go cabling for a newspaper, they certainly must want it.

Well, that's exactly what Joe Reese Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom L. Robinson, did. He's in Australia and sent them a cable Saturday, and included the request for the News, and it's started to him.

CORYELL CO. BOYS TO RECEIVE DEGREES FROM TEXAS A&M

Officers Get First Taste Of School: More Due In City

Officers with gold bars, silver bars, 2 silver bars, gold maple leaf, silver maple leaf, and a few eagles have arrived in Gatesville and "recess" is already over, and they're in an intensive Tank Destroyer School, which is scheduled to run for a month. Included in the men who have arrived are three colored officers. Where these men are from, what posts, is not for publication, but almost every spot claims one or more.

Gen. A. D. Bruce was scheduled to welcome the officers at 7:30 Monday morning, but had not returned from an out-of-the-state trip, but is scehuled to be here this morning at that hour. Colonel H. T. Mayberry did address the men in General Bruce's stead, and a welcome to Gatesville was extended by Mayor C. E. Gandy, and County Judge Flayd Zeigler extended a welcome to the entire county.

Following these brief formalities, the officers boarded trucks and left for Camp Hood for furthr instruction.

The men have been "billeted" in Gatesville homes, and the process of locating them is not yet completed, altho it started Friday morning, and the officers have been arriving by cars and bus since that time, and are still coming.

The previously announced number of 285 has been cut slightly, and some substitutions have been made, but it is thought the final number will be about 250.

The public is NOT invited to the Camp area during the school, and repeated warning have been given that NO civilian traffic, in or thru the camp, will be had during the month's training period, unless an-munity, east of Waco in early childhood. In 1874 they moved to the Coryell Church community in this county, where they resided on the same farm until her death April 16, 1942.

She was married December 1, 1878 to Felix Boyd, who preceded her in death 14 years and 2 days. To this union ten children were born. Surviving are: Mrs. T. F. Simmons of Crawford, Mrs. Dewey Rattan of Abilene, W. P. Boyd of Dallas, J. S. Boyd of Austin, Fred, Claude and Miss Minnie Boyd of Oglesby. One daughter died in infancy. Henry and Tom Boyd passed away within the last three years. She is also survived by a sister, Mrs. John W. Boyd, of Gatesville; 25 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Boyd was converted in early life, uniting with the Osage Baptist Church. In 1891 she, with her husband, united with the Coryactive in all church activities as long as health permitted. She taught the Beginners' Sunday School class for a number of years, and in some instances she taught

That she was loved and respected was evidenced by the long concourse of friends attending the funeral and by the elaborate floral offerings, as well as the scores of friends who visited her during her illness. The doors of her home were always open to her friends and the friends of her family, especially to preachers and orphan children. Her home was often referred to as "the preacher's home."

During her married life she had a very active part in caring for 18 orphan children, quite a num-ber being at her bedside during her two weeks' illness. One living farthest away to attend the funeral was W. T. Foster of Winters, Texas. The Christian influence of this home is being reflected in the lives of their children, who are all Christians. Three sons have served a number of years as deacons in their respective churches, one son preaching the gospel, one daughter having served as clerk of Leon River Baptist Association for fourteen years. The others have held responsible places in church life.

My Dear Family:

How are you all? Not surprised to hear from me, I'm sure. Well, I just couldn't write. You know I would have written if I could. I know what you are going to say: Where is he? Well, I can't tell you where I am, dad burn it. I am saving my money. You can't possibly spend it here.

It's been so long since I've written you I've forgotten your address. I'll have to look at one of your letters. Well, how's old Gatesville after all this and that? Boy, do I wish I could tell you where I am. Pete, Jr., isn't far away. Did you say, Mama, the last letter you got from me was the 6th of January? That is the day I left San Diego. If I hadn't been such a fool I could have told you everything the 5th or 6th. I'm in a machine gun company, 30 caliber. Doesn't that sound swell? I'll be so glad when I can hear sounds of civilization oncejust once more. Hmmm! Sounds like Im begging, doesn't it? Sounds like I'm going crazy, fresh cow milk for breakfast every morning.

I'll weigh 170 pounds now. Mosquitoes are bad here, and its hot as the dickens. On the letter was where he'd smashed one) and it rains about 196 inches a year; 300, I'd think. Well, this is the fall of the year here. Winter is coming on. I wish you could see me now. How can I whip the Japs when they won't come over here and fight? Tell Frecks to take it easy on the Japs. I don't think they are very thick at San Diego, are they? If he was where I am, he would not be so pert.

What's the Army think they can do at home leave? Like Huey has? Please make some more pictures and send me. I'll bet Cynthia can really talk now, can't she? Don't buy the kids a bicycle; I want to buy it myself when I come home. I'm sorry I couldn't send you anything for Christmas. I just couldn't get 'er done. I sent my girl something tho, didn't I? Well, I sent it early, a little. Does Jack

James Thomson, cousin of Mrs. Clifford Green of Flat, is on Corregidor, and a "pick-up" band of which he is a member there, is doing its part in the "morale" of the cornered Americans on this fortress. Lieut. Jonathan M. Wainwright, his chief of staff. Brig-Gen. Lewis C. Beebe, and other high ranking officers attended the"jam sessions" which Wainwright says do wonders in lifting the morale. In Thomson's band are men from Ohio, Wisconsin, Ariona, California and other Texas points. That's nice if they can kee the General's morale up, too.

Chapter One

These were the slim and dingy streets of New York...

These were the streets where boys played, but did not know the real laughter of boys, and were sage beyond their years. There was music of a sort: mostly it was the rhythm of steel on cobblestones. The music of the string and lute and horn, the music of limpid melody, they did not know. And when they saw it, they laughed. They had never heard it, inside.

Anside.

Young Willie, with clean, freckled face and trombone case beneath his arm, walked in terror of them. Frankie was their leader; he, with Rocks Mulligan and Dominick and Fever Jones, would watch for Willie returning from his music lesson and when they saw him, would give chase, Willie played music, so he was soft; he could be bullied, or beaten, into handing over his spare change as "dues" for a club to which he could never belong, or would ever want to join. And Willie wasn't the only one. his arm, walked in terror of them. Frankie was their leader; he, with Rocks Mulligan and Dominick and Fever Jones, would watch for Willie returning from his music lesson and when they saw him, would give chase. Willie played music, so he was soft; he could be bullied, or beaten, into handing over his spare change as "dues" for a club to which he could never belong, or would ever want to join. And Willie wasn't the only one.

Frankie's eyes were darkly brilliant, and his handsome boy's face drove out from beneath his black

"Heifetz."

The name meant nothing to them, so they hawked the tickets, until they saw the cop. Then Frankie made a decision. He handed the tickets to the man at the door, and the two ragged boys slipped into the dark and murmuring auditorium. Quickly, before they could take in the brilliance of the audience, the lights went dim. Then the figure of Jascha Heifetz, genius of the violin, came upon the stage, and the applause thundered, and echoed. Suddenly, Heifetz was playing...

The boy Frankie changed, became intent, and quiet. He could hardly understand why or how the preciative. The gang went to Carnegie Hall, where great music was played, at top prices.

On the sidewalk there, Frankie played the harmonica, Dominick danced, and the others chorused for both. A policeman's appearance brought the entertainment to a quick halt. Behind the pillar that was his hiding place, Frankie looked down. A pair of tickets, half out of their envelope, had fallen at his feet.

The price on them read "$5.50," and he and Dominick stared, unbelieving. Frankie tugged at the sleeve of a passing man.

"Hey, mister—what goes on in there?"

"Hetfetz."

The name meant nothing to them so they hawked the tickets.

The pawnbroker fawned - but top price was four dollars.

to the police!

to the police!

"Don't worry—it won't happen again. Here's your dime." Miller's voice was cold, and brutal.

When the woman had left, he turned to Frankie's mother, and bitterly berated her. With self-pity, with no remores, with the saywith no remorse, with the sav-agery of one who is far away from all that is youth, he cursed and shouted until the woman could only turn away. Then Frankie came in, playing on his harmonica. A rough hand tore it from his mouth. And a tore it from his mouth. And a rougher voice rasped in his ear, and sent him off without supper, into the cellar.

In the cellar, Frankie turned promptly to the business of escaping, as he had done many times before. As he climbed to the window, his foot broke through the top of an old, dusty trunk. He looked down and saw an old violin case, which he opened and found to contain a violin.

Frankie was out of the cellar quickly.

The pawnbroker fawned, and pretended to be genteel, but his top price was four dollars. There was a new fortune in the treasury, and the hands of Rocks and Dominick and Fever clutched for it.

Part in celebration, part in need for even more money, the gang walked up and cross-town, to a place Frankie had judged would be perhaps more liberal, and ap-mop of hair. He was a leader, and music moved him, but it did, and soon had to pay. A mother of one tears came to his eyes. He list-of the boys who had had his pockets cleaned came to Frankie's sound or movement that was made house, and spoke to his sweet, by the figure on the stage, by tired-faced mother, and to Frankie's stepfather, Ed Miller. The numbers went on, and the impatient Dominick left—but Frankie did not be staged by the migration to the stage of the stage of the stage. Frankie's stepfather, Ed Miller.

She complained.

"Every week the same thing!
They take his carfare away. And your step-son is the leader, Mr. Miller. If it don't stop, I'm going to the police!

Helletz. The humbers went on, and the impatient Dominick left—but Frankie did not move. And when it was over. Frankie walked in the darkened night with the sound your step-son is the leader, Mr. of Helfetz and the violin in his ears. He lifted the harmonica, and its harshness shocked him. Then its harshness shocked him. Then he was lost within himself.

Mearer home, Frankie came upon the pawnshop he had used before, and he saw his violin in its window. He needed it, needed it again, pity, and he knew that he must have it says again for his own. again for his own. . . .

The next day, Frankie had the violin.

The treasury had been despoiled, The treasury had been despoiled, with the assent of Dominick, who pointed out that most of the money was Frankie's, anyway. Rocks Mulligan did not agree, and meant it. Frankie was no longer his leader.

At home, Frankie's mother heard the strange rounds from her card the strange sounds from her son's room; when she asked, he told her of the violin and of how he had found it, and she begged him had found it, and she begged him to put it away. It was his father's, and Miller would hate its presence. She told Frankie of how his father had taught him to play the instrument when he was a small boy, and of the wonderful nights filled with music.

Then Miller came. He saw the violin, and accused Frankie of stealing it. The boy's brain burned. When Miller tore the fiddle from him, smashing it, Frankie lashed out, and drew blood.

"That's the finish!" Miller shouted. "He's going to a reform school! Tonight!"

SIDE GLANCES ON TEXAS HISTORY

By Charles O. Hucker University of Texas Library

Of Galveston Before Lafitte

Except for San Antonio and Nacogdoches, which had long been Spanish outposts, Galveston Island is probably the only place in Texas which can race back a more or less continuous and active settlement to a time before the coming of Stephen F. Austin. Its early fame it owes chiefly to Jean Lafitte, of course; but even for a year before his establishment there the island was a hot spot in Gulf of Mexico politics.

Galveston apparently got off to a very early start in the development of Texas. Some historians believe La Salle touched the island in his wanderings of 1685 and 1686; in 1788, at any rate, its population was reported as having reached 268; and the next turn of the century found it famous as a buccaneer stronghold, according to H. S. Thrall's "Pictorial History of Texas," a University of Texas Library standby. But it was in 1816 that it finally assumed a real significance in Gulf affairs. Aury, Mina and Perry

In 1816 Mexico was embroiled in the revolution which was ultimately to bring it independence, and on September 12 of that year Galveston Island became an official port of entry of the unrecognised Republic, a base of Republican operations in the hands of three men-Louis de Aury, Xavier Mina, and Henry Perry.

For some time these three, with a combined force of about 700 men, were content merely to raid Spanish and slave-trade commerce in the Gulf. But in April, 1817, they led a Republican expedition against the defenseless Mexican coastal town of Soto La of Texas," was forced to turn else-Marina as the first step in a proposed invasion of the interior.

CAMP HOOD'S

893rd Tank Destroyer Battalion

By Frank Slamon

two days having been decided by Lungs) Lillibridge has been apa margin of one run, it appears that all teams are preparing for the home stretch of the first-half of the league. "C" Company still holds down the No. 1 position of the league by virtue of their four Corpus Christi visited in the s many starts. Lieut. Matheney's "A" Company team nosed out Reconnaissance Company in one of the best games to date by a score of 5 to 4. In a game featured by a comedy of errors and extra base hits, Captain Lavin's team got back to their winning stride by taking the Medics into camp to the tune of 16 to 3. The pitching of Johnny Hornyak of the "Pillrollers" had little or no effect on the Headquarters Company team who collected nineteen hits. Paced by Harry Sinclair and Rege Lehenny, the Hq. club knocked the ball lopsided.

The protest of Headquarters Company game was honored by Lieut. Albarano, Athletic Officer, and another meeting of these teams will be scheduled before the conclusion of the first round.

Off The Record

It appears that Ralph Piccolo, the rage of Reconnaissance Company, has another romance on his hands .. Mike Waselus, the boy who resembles Whirlaway in the home strect when the chow bell is rung, received a huge package of odds and ends from the good people of Nanticoke, Pa. .. The Athletic Officer has been approached by the right fielder of the "Pillrollers" requesting permission to use a bicycle the next time his team plays the Headquartres Team .. With the publishing of positions held held by the different men prior to their induction George (Swede) Carlson informs the reporter that he was an elevator operator in a one-story building .. in electrical appliances is more important than ever now!

ITH the manufacture of virtually all electrical appliances banned for the duration, it's going to be necessary to take good care of your present equipment. Make it do if you can, but if replacements are necessary, buy only best quality appliances that will assure you of lasting, trouble-free service. They may have to serve you a long time, so it's short-sighted economy to buy anything but the best.

Right now, you can still find nationally-advertised appliances of proven reliability in stock at your dealer's and in our showrooms. But the present supply is limited and most items cannot be replaced, so early purchase is advisable. Take advantage of present favorable terms by buying your essential needs now.
