WASHINGTON NEWS
FROM OUR CONGRESSMAN
W. R. POAGE

The chief topic of conversation in Washington this week has been the question of rationing and priorities. We have registered for sugar books just as you at home have, but next week every car owner in Eastern United States, as well as in the far Northwest, will be required to register for gasoline. After May 15 it will be impossible to buy gasoline here without a ration card, and it seems probable that we may be able to get only two gallons per week then. This is not due to a shortage of gasoline. There is, of course, much more oil and gasoline in Texas and Oklahoma than the Nation can use. The difficulty is transportation. Oil has long moved from Texas to the East Coast by ocean-going tankers. Today so many of these ships are needed to supply our armed forces in distant parts of the world, and the German submarines are sinking so many of those that are left in the coastal traffic that it is simply impossible to deliver the oil and gasoline that is needed. Of course, some gasoline can be and is being moved by rail in tank cars, but several trains of tank cars are required to move as much as one large tanker. Many people are surprised to learn that there is no direct pipeline from Southwestern oil fields to the East Coast. The reason is that in normal times it is cheaper to transport oil by water than to pump it through a pipeline. Now it is not a matter of cost and we would gladly pay twice as much for gasoline if we could get it. A pipeline would, however, require so much steel that is now needed for the war that it seems to me that it would be impossible to build a line at this time, unless we can take up some of the pipelines that are now no longer needed from some of our old oil fields. I have suggested that it might be possible to dig up some of the old pipelines in the Southwest that are no longer moving much oil, and in that way get enough pipe to lay a line from Texas to the East Coast without using any material that is needed for the war. I think it is very important to get some means of moving oil. Texas needs to sell it. The East needs it, not only for gasoline, but also for fuel for this next winter.

I believe that we should all accept the inconveniences of rationing without complaint, but that we should always try to improve our national situation so as to make any kind of rationing unnecessary just as soon as possible. Therefore, I not only want to work out a practical method of getting oil to the East Coast; I also want to increase our sugar supply. I want to reclaim every possible ounce of used rubber, iron, etc., as well as to develop any possible new supplies. I realize that the Army and the Navy do not have time to conduct salvage drives, but I am firmly convinced that those of us who are at home can help a great deal by using every reasonable effort to make the supplies we have go as far as possible and by then collecting and salvaging used articles. I know that in many cases the administrative agencies of government have seemed uninterested in these undertakings, but I have made it my business to contact a number of the war agencies in an effort to interest them. I think that this is but another example of the fact that our Texas people realize the seriousness of this war much better than people from many other sections of the Nation.

This morning I was furnished with a summary or "box score" showing how every member of congress had voted on the eight "Preparedness Bills," beginning with the fortification of Guam in 1939, down through the repeal of the Neutrality Bill in November, 1941. These are the bills that are now recognized as being the tests of whether or not we were ready to take the necessary steps to prepare our country for the attack that was made on us or whether the members believed the promises of Germany and Japan that they would never attack us. A comparison of the votes of representatives from different sections is most interesting. There are 28 members of the House from Texas. Sixteen of us, including the writer, voted for every one of the preparedness measures. In other words, we have a 100% record. No member of the Texas delegation in the House has less than 80%. On the other hand, Wisconsin, with ten members, had six who did not vote for one single defense measure, and only one member of the Minnesota delegation of nine has a grade of as much as 60%. Indiana has 12 representatives. Two of them have a grade of 87½%. None of the other ten show better than 25%. With one exception, the Kansas delegation has no grade better than 37½%. I am proud to belong to a delegation that has stood so solidly for preparedness.

Religious, Patriotic Movies Coming to Baptist Church

The life of Paul is portrayed in a dramatic story form in a talking movie to be shown at the First Baptist Church, Thursday, May 21st, at 8:30 p. m. This movie includes the stoning of Stephen, on the road to Damascus, the fortune telling girl, mob scenes, the Philipian jailor, a thrilling earthquake, the way of salvation, and Paul before Felix and King Agrippa.

This picture, produced in England by a professional cast, is under religious direction. It is a film with a great emotional, as well as intellectual appeal, and is suitable for all ages. See it!

A patriotic film will precede the above, with special arrangement of the flag, the fall and invasion of some conquered countries, the bombing of Pearl Harbor, speeches of the President and various other interesting things.

The program is being brought here by Rev. J. A. Williams of Dallas and Rev. Woodie W. Smith of Ft. Worth. The public is cordially invited, no admission charge. Members from all churches, and those of no church, are invited to attend with us. It is a country wide program, for all.

BERT DAVIS IS OUT FOR TAX ASSESSOR-COLLECTOR, CORYELL

I am a candidate for the office of Tax Assessor-Collector of Coryell county, Texas. Usually people like to know as much about candidates for office as possible.

I am thirty-eight years of age. I married Miss Madge Wicker in 1937. My wife died in 1941. We have one son, Bertran, thirteen years of age. He and I are now residing on a farm near Arnett, Texas. I was born and reared in Coryell county. I finished high school and have completed two years of college work. I feel that I am qualified for this office, and if elected will put forth every effort possible to serve the public efficiently and to your satisfaction.

The present incumbent has served well and efficiently, as far as I know. The office pays a good salary and affords an opportunity for service to the public. I believe that where conditions are equal and the public can be efficiently served, that we should make changes in our officers to give others an equal opportunity to serve.

On account of the tire shortage it may not be possible for me to make a house to house canvass of the county. I shall put forth every effort to see each voter personally and shall appreciate your consideration, vote and influence.

Respectfully,
BERT DAVIS,
Candidate, Tax Assessor-Collector.

Preaching in the morning begins at 10:50 each Sunday. The evening service begins at 8:30 each Sunday day.

The Woman's Society of Christian Service begins at 4:00 p. m. each Tuesday. All women of the church are invited to participate.

Prayer meeting begins at 8:00 p. m. each Wednesday. Choir practice begins at 8:30 each Wednesday evening.

The Methodist Church invites all visitors to town and all Service Men and all others who have no church connections to attend the services regularly.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Morning hours of worship are regular a the First Presbyterian Church for Sunday, with Sunday School at 9:45 and morning worship at 11:00 o'clock. The congregation will join with that of the First Baptist Church, in the latter church, for the evening worship at 8:30. Edward S. Bayless, minister, will preach at both morning and evening worship.

Sermon topics for the day will emphasize the person and character of Jesus Christ. Topic for the morning sermon is "God Made Visible." The evening sermon will be on "The Humanity of Jesus."

Members and friends of the church are reminded of the "church family night" each Wednesday, beginning at 7:15. Supper, worship, and fellowship constitute the program of the evening.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

A special service of recognition of and prayer for men in the armed service of the country and in defense work, is being planned for the morning of May 24, at the hour of morning worship in the First Presbyterian Church, according to Sherrill Kendrick, chairman of the Defense Service Committee of the church.

Names of men from the local church will be read and inscribed on a wall plaque, as well as other names requested by families or friends.

Music and sermon appropriate to the occasion will feature the worship of the hour.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH Lawrence Hayes, Pastor

Milton an Bayless Supply Baptist Pulpit

In the absence of Pastor Lawrence Hayes, who is in San Antonio attending the 97th annual session of the Southern Baptist Convention, Rev. John Milton of Waco will preach at 10:50 Sunday morning at the First Baptist Church. Rev. Mr. Milton supplied for Dr. Dawson at First Baptist Church, Waco, recently, and reports indicate he proved a most popular supply. During his Baylor days, Dr. Milton won national recognition in the oratorical and debating field.

At the evening hour, 8:30, Rev. Edwin S. Bayless of the First Presbyterian Church will supply the Baptist pulpit, transporting his congregation in mass and thus visiting with and preaching for the local Baptists.

Visiting friends are extended a cordial welcome by both the pastor and church.

LONE MOUNTAIN BAPTIST CHURCH

Rev. H. L. DeVaney, Pastor
Sunday is our regular day for worship. We give everyone a cordial welcome to come and worship with us. Mr. Hilmer Schaub is in charge of Sunday School and invites those who will come and visit the school.

We are glad indeed to report that the Sunday School is growing, and meets every Sunday at 10:30. Our pastor and his wife are to be with us this Sunday, and we are looking for a large attendance. The morning worship service begins at 11:30. The subject will be "Gethsemane." The pastor wishes the presence of every member of the church that they might hear this soul-stirring message. At the evening hour, 8:15, this service will be in honor of all the mothers present, the subject being "Old Fashioned Mothers."

Remember, you are always welcome at Schley. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."

SAMUEL GOLDWYN presents
Jascha HEIFETZ
They Shall Have MUSIC!
 ANDREA LEEDS, JOEL McCREARY
 GENE REYNOLDS-WALTER BRENNAN
 Directed by ARCHIE MAYO

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:
 Leaving home when his stepfather, Ed Miller, threatens reform school, Frankie wanders into the Lawson School for Music, managed by a charitable professor and his lovely daughter Ann. Recognizing Frankie's inherent musical genius, Professor Lawson offers him free tuition and shelter. When Frankie understands that the school is to be sacrificed to creditors, in spite of the loyal efforts of Ann's fiance Peter, he organizes a small orchestra on the street beside Carnegie Hall. When Jascha Heifetz comes out, Frankie appeals to him for help, and obtains a smiling half-promise.

Chapter Four

Ann was amazed and delighted over the story Frankie told. The whole venture—fund-raising by the children on their own initiative—moved her, and when she told Peter he knew what she was feeling.

The movie which Heifetz had loaned the school came the next afternoon, and the amazed old Professor found in it an excellent training medium for the children. During the entire showing, not one of them made a sound, and he could see pudgy fists and fingers working in imitation of the master of the violin. The fascination of great music played by a great musician was complete, all-pervading.

"I gotta see Heifetz — I just gotta," Frankie said.

Flower was waiting for Ann and Peter when they left the classroom. Peter managed to put up a stiff "front," but when he confronted the man the starch had left him. Then, inadvertently, he managed to impress Flower into complete retirement—with the name of Jascha Heifetz. The man who had brought the film asked for a receipt, saying that Heifetz had insisted upon it.

The mere mention of the violinist's name, plus Peter's deliberate underplaying of the whole affair, sent the creditor off with assurance. Peter decided to secure the approaching concert.

He told Flower that Heifetz had promised an appearance, as he had heard Frankie say.

With the concert but one day off, the school and all concerned with it were in a fever of excitement. Requests for tickets poured in, and Flower was delighted.

But Peter, when he phoned Heifetz, found that his manager had never heard of either the school or the promise to play at its concert. Peter knew that he would have to stall—to try any tactic to ensure the concert. Peter told Frankie, who felt himself responsible, and was miserable. Frankie decided to see Heifetz himself.

Willie, meantime, had put Frankie's outraged gang—Dominick, Fever Jones and Rocks Mulligan—on the trail of their one-time leader. They came to see him, that same afternoon. They had a debt to collect, too.

Frankie, terrified by the possibility of being found by his stepfather and the reform school authorities, promptly fled. The others gave chase, which ended when Frankie fell, hurting his ankle severely. They bore him to the old hangout on the waterfront barge, and treated his hurt leg, and were kind to him, as though he were one of them again. Which he was, and always had been.

The next morning, on the day of the concert, Frankie could hardly walk. Fever greeted him. "Sorry about what happened last night, Frankie. How's it feel?" Dominick inspected the hurt ankle.

"Gosh, it's swell," he commented.

"Just needs a tight bandage—so I can step on it," said Frankie. "I gotta go see Heifetz—"

"No, Frankie," Dominick declared. "You can't go no place. The cops is layin' all over fer you—"

"But I gotta talk to him!"

"Maybe we can go!" Dominick offered, and Rocks added:

"Yeah—whadda you wanna say to this guy?"

Frankie leaped to the suggestion.

"Gee, fellers, would you? That's swell! Look, here's where he lives—I got it outa the papers— Tell him on account of him promise! the school's in a jam—and if he don't come down tonight there's a feller gonna take the instrument's away—and they can't give the receipt—and the school's flat broke—and . . ."

Somehow, the three boys managed to get into Jascha Heifetz's apartment. When they arrived, breathless, Heifetz was resting, and his manager was talking heatedly with a man they did not know. The man was Flower.

Rocks burst into their conversation.

"But we gotta see him, mister—it's very important! It's about a school for kids—"

"Some more about a school for kids!" the manager shouted. "What is this—a conspiracy!"

"All I want to know," demanded Flower, "—is Heifetz going to this concert tonight?"

"No! Definitely no! He knows nothing about this school—and he has an engagement to play somewhere else tonight!"

"I thought something was fishy," said Flower quietly. "Goodbye."

The manager turned to the business of ejecting the boys, which proved to be difficult, until he threatened to call the police. On the way out, Dominick bumped into a table upon which a violin case rested. He took it, for Frankie, knowing Frankie would be disappointed over their failure.

He was, but he played for them upon their gift.

And the newspaper headlines screamed:

"HEIFETZ' $70,000 STRADIVARIUS STOLEN."

Flower, furious over being duped, arrived at the Lawson School with a truckman. After explaining to Ann and Peter that he had been thoroughly made a fool, he ordered the truckman to take away all the instruments. Peter, desperate, blocked the man's way. The man shoved him aside, and as Ann cried out, Peter pulled him back and hit him a furious blow on the chin. In the sharp exchange which followed, the man fell off balance toward the door, which Ann opened. The man continued through, to the street.

Flower was panic-stricken, and backed away.

"This is gonna do you no good, young man," he whimpered. "I'll get an order from the sheriff's office—"

Peter threw him out. Then he went to the auditorium, where six mothers of the children were watching the last rehearsal. Peter called them aside, and his voice was grave.

"Now, listen—you all want this concert to take place tonight, don't you?"

They all nodded, equally serious. "You wouldn't want the school to go out of business, would you?"

"No!"

"All right! Then stand outside that door and don't let a soul come in who doesn't belong! That goes for creditors—sheriffs—police-men—or the marines. Nobody understand! I'll see you later—I'm going to get Heifetz if I have to drag him down by the hair!"

SIDE GLANCES ON TEXAS HISTORY
 By Charles O. Hucker
 University of Texas Library

A TEXAS EDITOR LAUGHS AT THE INDIAN MENACE

"An opinion has been for some time prevalent in the United States, that Texas contains many powerful and formidable tribes of Indians, and that the settlements of the country even at a distance from the frontiers, are constantly subjected to their depredations. This is a gross error."

That assurance was given the American people in 1840 by one of the Texas Republic's most outstanding editors, Francis Moore, Jr., of the Houston Telegraph and Texas Register. It appeared in a little book entitled "Map and Description of Texas," published in Philadelphia and New York, which is one of the best-written old books in the extensive Texas Collection of the University of Texas Library—even if, perhaps, a little over-enthusiastic.

Moore had no patience with talk about the Indian menace to the Republic; there was no such thing, he said. The Comanches, of course, were strong, and they dominated the Indian situation in Texas. "The only tribes that have been permitted to remain west of the Red River," he wrote, "are such as were too weak and too imbecile to excite the fear or jealousy of the Comanches."

THE COMANCHES

But even the Comanches, he hastened to say, weren't so bad. There was a Comanche population of about 11,000 in the state, he estimated; but if all the scattered Comanche groups came together he saw no possibility that they could muster more than 1,000 warriors. And it seemed to him that they had been so often and so disastrously repulsed from the Texas settlements that by 1840 they were content to "confine their depredations to the Mexican settlements west of the Rio Grande; where they find an enemy more cowardly than themselves, and who has long been accustomed to permit them to ravage the country with impunity."

To the others—the "weak and imbecile" tribes—Moore gave little attention. Strongest among them were the Lipans and Tonkewas, each capable of raising possibly 150 braves. But these two tribes, he pointed out, were friendly to the settlers, as were the Coshatees, the Alabamas, and the Bedias, whose 220 braves busied themselves peaceably in hunting and fishing for the Texans.

The remaining tribes—the Keachies, Ienies, and Wacos—numbered no more than 120 warriors together and, Moore believed, could hardly be thought of as formidable foes. The Keachies, especially, he wrote, "are now in an exceedingly destitute condition."

NO MENACE AT ALL

As a matter of fact, he went on, all of the Texas Indians of his day were "in a very wretched and destitute condition." They are generally armed only with paltry bows and arrows," he wrote, "and are despised and often insulted with impunity by the few roving Shawnees, Caddos, Cherokees and other Indians from the United States, who often frequent the prairies of Texas for game."

So that, according to Moore, was the truth about the Indian menace in Texas. "Even if the Comanches and all the tribes of Texas were united in hostilities against the citizens of the country," he summed up, "they could retard the extension of the frontier settlements only for a brief period; for the citizens have become so fully convinced of the weakness and cowardice of these Indians, that they now rather despise than fear them."

Men with the Colors!

Monday, May 11, the Senior Class of the Gatesville High School sang their swan song to the accompaniment of the 893d T. D. orchestra in the form of an informal dance, sponsored by Mrs. Robinson.

Soft lights and sweet music, with the golden voice of Jackson Williams adding a final pleasant memory for the grads, was the piece de resistance for the major part of the evening.

Came twelve o'clock, and sparked by Johnny Fichette, the demon of the Steinways, the boys knocked themselves out of the jam on the solid side. Rich Richards played tenor like a reincarnation of Chu Berry; Jake Schwent rapped the hides; John Weilgos thumped the dog house; Sam (Old Man of the Mountain) Lillibridge dedicated his life to the purpose of blowing the ends off of cornets; Bobby Derr tore the house down with Sugar Blues as Clyde McCoy would play it. George Thomas, W. C. A. U.'s gift to the armed forces, added a bit of subtle humor; Mrs. Hall's son, Bob Jackson, Bill Roberts and a couple of unidentified guest artists added a mellow background. Joe (Sterling) Beath, Issy Hurst's favorite boy, was on the ball making with the feet a bit of a tap.

After soaring around in the came to earth and wound the festivities up with the band's theme, "Deep in, etc." It is a subject for debate as to who had the best time, the dancers or the boys in the band. Your scribe is betting on the band.

OPEN HOUSE

Here's one for the boys of the 893d and the 753d—in fact, an open invitation to all the men in the armed forces to attend the weekly broadcasts of the 893d T. D. Battalion's orchestra.

These sessions take place at five thirty to six every Saturday over station KTEM in the Kyle Hotel at Temple. A large room adjoining the broadcasting room has been fixed up by the station manager to accommodate a great number in order that they may see and hear the broadcast.

All are cordially invited to hear the "Hoodmen" do a little "solid sending" each Saturday night.

SOFTBALL NOTES

With four games having been postponed due to inclemency of the weather, a revised schedule for the balance of the first round will be published by Lieut. Albarano, Athletic Officer. At this writing, "C" Company and Headquarters are occupying twin berths at the top of the league.
