Camp Hood, Texas

(Note: Most of Camp Hood IS in Coryell County, and the opening of the new northern part, will make it more, more and more, an institution of Coryell County. We think by now it can safely be claimed as Coryell County's).

This column will be the local of every bit of information we can get about Camp Hood itself, construction, oddities, or whatever may pertain in any way to this "biggest business in Coryell county", Camp Hood. Here goes!

No. 19, of the Officer Candidate Classes of the Tank Destroyer School was registered and processed November 28 and 29, and instruction started the 30th. The class is composed of 166, coming from 33 different states and 44 organizations. California and Pennsylvania have 20 each, New York 17, Texas 14.

Lt. Colonel Charles B. Frederick, Director of the O. C. S. Department, Tank Destroyer School, addressed the new class at the opening exercises.

8th Class Graduates

One hundred fifty-eight of the 8th OCS was graduated December 4, with 158 candidates. Exercises were held at the 37th Street Theatre at 11 at which time Brigadier General H. T. Mayberry, Commandant of the TDS presented the commissions and certificates. The address to the class was made by Col. O. A. Gorder, Commander of the 1st Training Brigade, Tank Destroyer Center.

If you remember correctly, the first OCS started in Gatesville last Summer, and we suppose you would call Gatesville the "Birthplace of the Tank Destroyer Officer's Training Schools," as well as the OCS.

COUNTY MEMORIAL HOSPITAL OPEN FOR BUS. BUS. WANTED

According to "Cy" or, S. L. Bellamy, of the Coryell County Memorial Hospital, they're open for business.

So far, there is no business, but if this weather keeps up there could be.

Well, anyway, it's open, and a mighty fine hospital it is, too.

Tom L. Robinson Jr. of Victoria spent the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tom L. Robinson Sr.

Cotton Belt Brings In Track Workers For Yards, Switches

Yesterday, twelve work-train cars of workers arrived in Gatesville, to assist in laying the new spur to Camp Hood, and also increasing the yard space at Gatesville.

Already, long switches or sidings have been laid out, but as yet, there is not steel laid on this new track space.

Just where the new spur will be is not definite, but it will be somewhere close to Mound, or between there and Gatesville. A steel bridge will be brought over from Tyler to cross the Leon river.

Things are already popping here, and many families have, and are moving out of the Ewing part of the new camp area.

VICTORY COOKING SCHOOL OPENS AT COM. PUBLIC SER. CO.

How to feed the family for buoyant health, physical stamina and morale, how to save food values and keep down the family food bills, and how to use household equipment efficiently and economically and make it last "for the duration" are among the topics which will be covered in the Victory Cooking School and Home Conservation Clinic, to be held in the local office at 2:30 o'clock on Wednesday, December 9, 1942. This program, sponsored by Community Public Service Company, will be in charge of Miss Isabel Herndon of the company's home service department. The educational program will tie in with the Consumers' pledge issued by the United States Government to be signed by Consumers: "As a consumer in the total defense of democracy I will do my part to make my home, my (Continued on last page)

Landlords Must Be Registered By December 15th

Landlords in the Temple-Killen Defense Rental Area which includes all of Bell and Coryell counties, are warned by Paul C. Beresford, Acting Rent Director, that all registrations must be in by December 15, 1942.

Federal Rent Regulation provides that failure to register within 45 days after the Regulation becomes effective is a violation and subjects the landlord to sever penalties.

Deadline for rooming house and hotel registration is also December 15.

NEW MACHINERY QUOTAS ARE ANNOUNCED

More new farm machinery and equipment than was expected will be made available to Texas farmers for next year's production.

Break down of state quotas, which include plows, harrows, cultivators, tractors, mowers and binders, got underway in the State USDA War Board office this week.

So far, according to N. Foote of the local office, quotas for Coryell county have not been received.

New Date For Filing Temporary Gasoline Rations

Since the time has been too short, and there's been confusion and misunderstanding about the Certificates of War Necessity issued by the Office of Defense Transportation, the closing date for temporary certificates has been changed to February 1, according to N. Foote.

Information that is needed for these Certificates are the following covering a period of seven consecutive days: 1. The origin and destination of each trip. 2. The miles operated on each trip. 3. The total units of freight carried on each trip. 4. The commodity transported and the use to be made of the commodity. 5. The maximum capacity of the vehicle for the commodity transported on each trip. &

These animals covered by the order are cattle, sheep, lambs and hogs.

OFFICIALS GO TO SCHOOL

All over Washington, grown men are going to school again. More than 500 officials of a dozen different departments are doing "home work"—learning vocabularies, drawing maps, and studying charts. It's the latest phase of the Good Neighbor policy. The government is teaching itself to know Latin-America.

With funds from the Rockefeller office, a school has been set up, known as the Inter-American Training center. Dr. Henry Grattan Doyle took a year's leave from George Washington university to run it.

When Morris Cooke was asked to head an economic mission to Brazil, his experts attended Doyle's school before flying down to Rio.

The treasury department has 28 lawyers dealing with Latin America. All are boning up with Dean Doyle and his faculty.

Luncheon conferences are held all over town to discuss Latin America—usually in Spanish. Doyle provides a Latin expert for each luncheon.

WAR DULLS POLITICAL AXE

The fact that Economic Stabilizer Jimmy Byrnes is not letting politics creep into his job is evidenced by the appointment of bald, mustachioed Ralph E. Flanders, as one of the two management representatives on his advisory board. For Flanders, who is president of the Jones and Lamson Machine company of Springfield, Vt., has been one of the President's severest critics.

In fact if he could get his hands on a certain letter he wrote during the 1936 campaign, undoubtedly he would lose no time burning it up.

The letter was sent to Joseph Leib of South Bend, Ind., founder (in 1930) of the first Roosevelt-for-President club. Leib had written Flanders asking if he thought business would receive the "breathing spell" promised by the President during the campaign.

The Vermont manufacturer replied, August 25, 1936, that it was "increasingly difficult" to support New Deal policies, chiefly because of the tax bill of that year, which, he said, "makes it practically impossible either to pay dividends or to lay aside reserves to meet future conditions of unemployment."

"I can only conclude," Flanders added, "that there is no such thing as a 'breathing spell' so long as Mr. Roosevelt is President."

Early in 1941 Flanders was appointed to a key job in the Machine and Tools group of the OPM priorities division. His company also has received several substantial contracts from the government. Taxes are a lot higher than in 1936, however, and there will be no breathing spell for profits.

But when Leib again wrote Flanders asking if he still held to the views expressed in the 1936 letter, Flanders replied:

"Since we are now at war, much of the misunderstanding of the peacetime situation no longer holds."

SYNTHETIC CHRISTMAS

This December 25—one year after Pearl Harbor—will be a wooden Christmas with a synthetic Santa Claus. The spirit will be the same, but the form will be different.

Skates, scooters, sleds, electric trains, rubber balls—these will be scarce everywhere if not absent entirely. Only the stores which placed their orders early last January will have the usual toys, and these probably will be sold out by Thanksgiving.

Experts of the commerce department have made a survey of the toy situation. They find that three types will be especially short—rubber toys, wheel toys, and metal goods.

A WPB order stopped production of children's bicycles last April. Velocipedes, scooters, baby carriages, "flexies"—all will be short. Clearly it will not be a rolling Christmas.

Makers of electric trains are 90 per cent converted to making materials of war. There may be 50 per cent of the normal train supply this year, but they are disappearing fast. Ice skates and roller skates are almost unobtainable, and lead soldiers are practically extinct.

4-H Girls Are Farm Workers

Meanwhile, warlike toys are appearing everywhere—toy bomb-sights, tanks, bombing planes, and even bomb-banks for the dimes and nickels instead of the old piggy bank.

In all this there is one consolation—for the girls. The war has not disturbed the production of dolls, except for those made of rubber.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Uncensored reports from the Solomon islands, when finally published, will show that the U. S. marines fought with even greater heroism than we realize. It will be one of the great epics in American naval history. The marines at Solomon islands were relatively unseasoned—only about eight months. The man who deserves chief credit for seasoning them is efficient Dan Barbey, U. S. navy, who supervised their training as a task force at Solomon Island, Maryland.

The Coryell County, 4-H Club girls are helping at home with the farm labor. In her own words, Viola Hopson of Flat tells, "I helped set out peppers and tomatoes, planted potatoes, carrots, lettuce, beets, and cucumbers. I have hoed cotton and corn and am driving the tractor for them to gather corn". She has received her 4-H bronze pin for completion of her goals in this year of 4-H Club. She is doing much toward the Victory Demonstration goal of "Producing food, feed, and fiber". Another 4-H Club girl, Maxine Seward, who lives near Ewing served as an industrious cotton picker and in addition to this chore, she has done yard improvement to the extent of a fence, vines, and flowers. The arrangement follows the recommendation to keep the flower and shrub beds in line with the fence and next to the foundation of the house instead of dotting them over the yard. A fence seems to be a big job for a little girl but her friends helped dig the post holes when they came visiting her so perhaps digging post holes can be made "home-made recreation".

twice its height at the front. The length should be regulated by the number of cows and whether they have horns. Dehorned animals need 30 square feet of floor space each, but those with horns should be allowed 45 square feet. Dairy cows require somewhat warmer shelter than fattening steers. They have no protecting fat, their coats are scantier and their hides usually are thinner than those of steers.
 "It is not possible to get maximum milk production unless cows are sheltered from cold," Eudaly explains. "It is not necessary to build anything expensive—a shed which will keep the cows dry and warm will do. But it will not do much good to give the cows shelter and no roughage to eat. Cows were made to eat roughage—meaning silage and hay—and best production cannot be had without it. Texas is short of milk. It is highly important to keep the cows on the job this winter."

SYNOPSIS
 Scotland Yard is encountering unusual difficulty in attempting to solve the mystery of a thief known as The Amateur Cracksman. Inspector Mackenzie is put to work on the case with the order to find the criminal or else! The criminal happens to be the suave, debonair, handsome A. J. Raffles, society man and extraordinary amateur cricketer. He has fallen in love with Gwen Manders, younger sister of Bunny Manders, who was Raffles' best friend at school. Because of his midnight profession, Raffles tries to avoid declaring his love to Gwen.

Chapter Two

Raffles saw Gwen home and, as he had feared, the worst happened. In an impetuous, uncontrolled moment, A. J. Raffles, sportsman and amateur thief, society butterfly without ties or commitments, proposed. He returned home in a high state of exhilaration, announced to his perfect "gentleman's gentleman," Barracough, that he had lost his wrestle with fate and would "go straight." Barracough failed to comprehend, disapproved in no uncertain terms and returned in a moderately high dudgeon. But Raffles, undaunted, took out his peck of cigarettes, emptied it, slipped the stolen brace-from the crowds of villagers, was Lady Melrose with her two room-mates, attended by Gwen and a few other chosen ones. Lady Melrose detested cricket and boasted about it, but tolerated it for the sake of humoring her husband. She usually spent the time in view of the game feeding and tending her dogs.

 A little apart from the groups stood two men, outsiders. The younger, dressed and rather shifty in appearance, moved off to meet a woman who nervously nodded him and slipped him a piece of paper. She was Wilson, Lady Melrose's maid. "Did the old girl down the whole lot?" asked Harry. She nodded.
 "Harry," she pleaded, "won't please give it up? I'm frigid. If we're caught it means prison."
 "Now, now," he reassured. "No one's going to be caught going to marry you, are you when we've got this little job? Now get along, and don't y-

With Raffles on their side, the villagers won hands down. "goodness!" exclaimed Lady Melrose. "We shan't have to go that for another year! And we can enjoy Mr. Raffles' in peace."
 The women remained behind, the men went away to the and dress after their afternoon.
 At the first opportunity, he cornered Raffles. "The game"

asked Raffles. "Trouble?"
 "Into it, and printed on his little card his swan song: and never understand why I'm leaving this. Farewell. The Amateur Cracksman."
 The next morning Gwen called and caught him in bed. "Is it trouble?" she asked. "Or Aristocracy?"
 "No," laughed Raffles. "Well I do think a girl has the right to know the name of the man she's going to marry. You'll have to tell the clergyman, won't you?"
 "What time is it?" he countered. "Twelve o'clock."
 "Twelve? You mean to say the whole morning's gone, and we haven't met yet? When can I see you?"
 "I've got to go to the Melrose's. Two promised. Why don't you come? Lady Melrose would be thrilled to death."
 Raffles hesitated, then agreed. In the meantime, however, Inspector Mackenzie had received the stolen jewels, and on the cigarette pack had discovered an important clue which Raffles was ignorant of having furnished him. It was on the same little wrapper that Lord Melrose had placed his paper to write his telephone number, and the impression of his sharp pencil, made through the paper, was still there. Mackenzie, on a wild surmise, decided to follow up the telephone exchange and spend the weekend at Lord Melrose's.
 The weather was glorious, the cricket match in full swing and the contest sharp. Lord Melrose, a champion of 20 years ago, and his party were giving stiff opposition to the villagers under Raffles' banner in the annual Gentry vs. Tenantry match. Bunny, however, who seemed to be agitated by some mysterious problem, was not very effective with the cricket bat. "I must see you later, A. J.," he whispered to Raffles. "Important." At the pavilion, a little apart to you, A. J."

 "What is it?" asked Raffles. "Trouble?" Bunny nodded. "Money?" Another nod. "Bad?"
 "About as bad as it could be," said Bunny grimly.
 "How much?" questioned Raffles. "A thousand." Bunny looked up apprehensively. Raffles whistled. "Yes, but that's not all. I gave a check—and that's not all, either. It wasn't mine—the money—it was mess funds I'd been taking. I had to put them back by Monday—an audit coming. I couldn't, so I took more to win it back."
 "You need a thousand pounds by Monday." Raffles was overwhelmed, but helpless. "I haven't got it." Bunny's face fell. "I haven't got a tenth of it, but that doesn't mean to say it can't be got."
 As they were pondering, a butler came in with drinks and the evening paper. Bunny took up the paper absently, waiting for the butler to leave the room, and Raffles smiled. "Do you mind?" by the picture of Raffles and Lady Melrose taken the night before. "You look as if you couldn't keep your hands off her throat. As if you wanted to choke her, or something," he laughed.
 Raffles stared at the picture. In it his eyes were glued to Lady Melrose's necklace. An idea came to him. He turned away. "Don't worry, Bunny. I think we may be able to manage things for you." Bunny's face grew radiant. "I'll be doing it for someone else as well as you, this time. How would you like me as a brother-in-law, Bunny?"
 "A bro—" Bunny was amazed. He jumped up and shook Raffles by the hand. "Do you mean it?" Raffles smiled. "Do you mind?" he asked.
 "Mind!" started Bunny. "Why, there's no one in the whole world I'd rather—and I promise you I'll go straight after this. I'll have to, A. J.—to be worthy of you." Raffles smiled ironically.

Betsy

The little girl tugged gently at her mother's sleeve.

"Now, Mother?" she asked. "Now can't we write my letter?"

"Why of course, Betsy," Mrs. Carson grinned. "Are you going to write it or am I?"

"Well," Betsy said. "Maybe you'd better kind of say it to me. Only I'd love to write it."

"All right, then, Miss Carson, take a letter," her mother said, walking slowly up and down the room. "Ready? Dear Mr. Morgenthau: The way I save money for War Stamp buying is to steer all the small household jobs toward my daughter, who is eight years old. She is so keen about buying War Stamps that I know all the money I might have paid to someone else for doing the jobs will go toward Victory when paid to her.

"Now make a list, Betsy. 'Windows washed, 60 cents. Apples picked from under the tree, 25 cents. Emptied trash cans, 4 cents. Sold string beans from the garden, 15 cents. Sold strips of spoiled film to children for sun-gazing, at one cent a yard, 20 cents. Total, $1.24. Yours helpfully,

"and then I'll sign it."

"I'm suffing like a gram-pus," Betsy's mother groaned. The tall, pale, motherly woman, with her hair pinned up, looked at the sheet of paper. Gravely Mrs. Carson took the pen to sign.

"Mother, would it be the proper etiquette if I signed it too?"

"Perfectly proper, I think," Mrs. Carson said without a smile, and handed the pen back to Betsy.

FALL WORK IN THE ORCHARD

A touch of frost is the green light to begin fall work in the orchard, says J. F. Rosborough, horticulturist for the A. and M. College Extension Service.

If the winter cover crop hasn't been planted there still is time. Use about 20 pounds of hairy vetch seed and put down 100 pounds of 20 per cent superphosphate an acre when the seed is planted. Be sure the seed is inoculated, Rosborough cautions. The county agricultural agent or seedman can furnish instructions on how to do this. A good crop of vetch turned under next spring will be equivalent to 300 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre.

Check the orchard for replacement and disease. Grub out and burn dead trees. Leave the holes open for new plantings. If the trees were killed by crown gall, which is identified as a wart-like growth on the roots, it is not advisable to replant in those openings, but leave them open for two or three seasons.

Examine each tree for scale, which first appears on the body and framework branches and has the appearance of ashes sticking to the bark. Lose no time in spraying with oil emulsion or concentrated sulphur. If only two or three trees are affected the trunks and branches may be washed with a concentrated lye mixture, applied with an old paint brush or mop. Two and one half teaspoonful to a gallon of water is sufficient. Lye is not recommended as a spray.

For the regular orchardist, oil emulsion using a 2 percent solution, or concentrated lime sulphur will put trees in good winter condition. For the latter use one gallon of liquid lime sulphur to 15 gallons of water, or 15 pounds of dry lime sulphur to 50 gallons of water. An extension Service bulletin on orchard management is available at the offices of all county Extension agents.

DEMOCRACY STREAMLINING

If the President and the country want to get a full realization of how democracy is streamlining for action they should think back to the summer of 1941, just one year ago, when, for what seemed like unending weeks, the congress stewed over extension of the selective service act.

Senate and house isolationists were haranguing the galleries on the iniquities of keeping the boys more than one year in camp; telling the public how the navy was already convoying ships; revealing in advance that Roosevelt had sent troops to Iceland.

Finally by the thin margin of one vote, 203 to 202, and thanks to the sage generalship of Speaker Sam Rayburn, the selective service act was extended. Had it not been for that narrow victory, we should have had no army to rush to Australia, and the whole war effort would have received a tragic set-back.

But last week, a war-gearred house of representatives passed the 18-19 year draft extension act in three days; and it should be passed by the senate and signed by the President inside the week.

Politically and personally, nobody wanted the 18-19 year draft extension. It was the worst time to pass it, just before elections. But congress is doing a much better job than most people realize for streamlined democracy.

ATROCITY PICTURES

A strong debate is raging among propaganda chiefs over the question of atrocity stories and pictures. The government has received a lot of such material from Allied sources, especially the Chinese and Poles, including such horrible scenes as Japanese attacking Chinese women, and pouring oil on live bodies before setting the torch to them.

Opponents of publication argue that the atrocity stories of the last war were largely invented, and when so exposed left the public disillusioned; thus the people might now react unfavorably and charge the government with pulling the same tricks.

Other officials argue, however, that the material is authentic, that it is not posters and rumors, but actual photographs, and the public should know what sort of enemies we are fighting.

It is apparently a part of the German psychological warfare to treat British and Americans with reasonable humaneness in order to keep us lulled in a state of moderate warfare. They save their worst tricks for the conquered nations and the Russians.

The Poles and Chinese are urging use of the material as a necessary means of fully arousing the American public to the menace.

Elmer Davis' Office of War Information is set to go, once the debate is settled.

DAIRY MANPOWER

Fortnight Sen. Berkeley Bunker of Nevada had a long talk with the President the other day on the war manpower problem, in which he emphasized the need of swift action to meet the labor shortage on dairy farms.

"I'm from a farm area myself and I know what these dairy people are up against," said Bunker. "Unless we move fast we will have a serious shortage next year. Already, many farmers are beginning to slaughter their dairy herds because they can't get help to tend them."

The President admitted the problem was serious, and assured Bunker that the War Manpower commission was aware of it. He added, however, that he doubted any steps the government might take to relieve the farm labor shortage would be a complete answer.

"The government can't solve this alone," said Roosevelt. "We are going to have to depend on the farmers themselves for individual initiative. I'll give you an example of what I mean."

The President then told how a neighbor of his in New York state, owning a large dairy farm, had partly solved his labor shortage by

Ev'rybody Ev'ry Pay Day

6,000,000 Women Enrolled in War Savings Payroll Plan.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Women At War Week, opening Nov. 22, during which women will seek to sell the greatest single week's volume of War Bonds and Stamps will serve to put the spotlight on the mighty contribution women generally are making toward financing the war.

Six million women are on War Savings payroll plans. Their monthly deductions total $70,000,000.

The customers of 300,000 newspaper boys who have sold more than $50,000,000 in War Bonds and Stamps are mostly women.

Volunteer saleswomen run nearly all the Bond booths in theatres from Maine to California. They also are sparking the War Bond sales in retail stores.

Ralph G. Engelsman, Associate Field Director of the payroll savings section of the War Savings Staff, readily admits that without the support of women the phenomenal record of payroll savings enrollments would not have been achieved. Payroll savings plans are now in operation in 148,000 businesses and factories. Employees of twenty-five thousand of these firms are converting at least 10 percent of gross payrolls into War Bonds every payday.

Associate Field Director Engelsman says that women have contributed directly and indirectly toward this record. When a man devoted 10 or more percent of his pay envelope to War bonds, the woman at home has had a powerful voice in the decision. Her planning, her economies and her cheerfulness play their part in the success of payroll savings.

The Treasury Department is counting upon this woman influence in its current campaign to "top that 10 percent by New Year's." By the first of the year the Treasury hopes to enroll at least 3,000,000 women workers in a payroll savings plan and 5,000,000 more men with total deductions for War Bonds over the 10 percent mark.

VICTORY COOKING—community, my country, read, efficient, strong. I will buy carefully. I will take good care of the things I have. I will waste nothing."

Miss Herndon will tell how to purchase foods wisely, how to store them to preserve vitamin and mineral content, how to cook them and serve to save these perishable food elements which are vital to health, how to plan meals based on an optimum diet or daily food pattern recommended by the government for proper nutrition. She will make numerous suggestions for the care of electric appliances which will keep them in good working order and extend their usefulness indefinitely. She will also make suggestions for using these appliances so as to get a maximum of service for a minimum expenditure.

Sugar-saving suggestions and sugarless recipes will be given to visitors, and vitamin charts which show at a glance what foods contain each vitamin. The food which is prepared during the demonstration will also be given away.
