Eloise MacDonald Is Given "Rave" Notices In Houston

Eloise MacDonald Snyder, Ft Worth lyric coloratura soprano who is one of the 5 artists "proposed" to be presented here by the Coryell Municipal Concert Association, really got some "rave" notices in Houston, according to Sunday's Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

We quote: Eloise MacDonald Snyder, Ft Worth lyric coloratura soprano who achieved outstanding personal success in the Fort Worth Civic Opera Association's production of "La Traviata" last November, has taken on a light opera role. She sang the part of Katherine de Vaucelles in the Rudolf Friml score, "The Vagabond King," June 26-28 for the Houston Summertime Light Opera Company in Music Hall. She sang opposite William A. Triggs, San Antonio tenor, in the role of Francois Villon.

"All aspects of the production were praised by the Houston press and Mrs Snyder, especially, was commended for her singing and her graceful portrayal of the 15th Century French Beauty."

(Editors Note: Eloise MacDonald is one of the artists due to appear here, maybe with the Coryell Municipal Concert Association, if about $650 more in memberships are sold. The five artists, and Uncle Sam cost slightly over $2000, with Sam getting his cut on each membership. Eloise can be heard in Gatesville for $1. Bet you couldn't hear her that cheap in Houston.

We spend 12 to 15 thousand on a rodeo, (physical); many thousands to churches, (spiritual). Can't we spend around $2000 on mental or esthetic, if you mest, Surely, Gatesville won't fail!

Fish Story No. 5 This'n's A Double-Header!

Now, anybody that catches a 34-pound catfish in my book is a fisherman.

But, when ONE person catches two 34-pound yellow cats on one line—what a man!

The tory was given us by Mrs. R L Homan, and her brothers, J. C and James Lowery of Mound did that little thing.

Here's the way we got it: They set out a throw lineor trot line, and these ewin cats were feelin' frisky the 4th, or nearabouts, and as twins will, sometimes, they jumped on a couple of cripples (bait of somekind). They were swimmin' so close together that only one hook separated them, and incidentaly, they didn't know a hook was imbeded in the bait. It was, and now, they ain't.

That's the way they were caught. Two 34-pound yellow cats on one line, with only 1 hook between them.

Samples of some of these fish stories would be in oorder We don't even own OEN hook

Drunk Driving Still Leading Traffic Problem Though Public is Aware of Danger in Drink

By W. Earl Hall
Chairman, National Committee For Traffic Safety

Drinking by drivers and pedestrians is a growing traffic safety problem. The most recent records of state authorities show that in one out of every four fatal traffic accidents, a driver or a pedestrian was reported as having been drinking.

Special studies bear out the belief of many authorities that the information on official accident reports understates the true picture. Surveys involving chemical tests of blood or other body materials of drivers tested who had been injured or killed in traffic accidents showed that half of the drivers had alcohol in their systems. About one third of all the drivers tested had sufficient alcohol to be under its influence.

Results show that the greater the concentration of alcohol in a person's system the greater the danger. A person with a blood alcohol concentration of over .15 per cent has a relatively poor chance of staying out of an accident. The average driver in this range is fifty-five times more likely to be involved in an accident than drivers with no alcohol!

The public opinion poll for the National Committee for Traffic Safety, each person interviewed were asked which of ten listed factors caused the greater number of accidents, in his opinion. Driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor ranked number one.

Perhaps the main stumbling block in getting better enforcement of drunken driving laws in most places has been the difficulty in determining whether the drivers actually were under the influence. So much difficulty has been experienced in some places in convicting drivers who are under the influence but not "staggeringly drunk" that enforcement has been directed at only the most obvious cases.

Many progressive enforcement agencies, however, have turned to use of chemical tests to provide the needed additional evidence. Such tests show definitely whether there is sufficient alcohol in the blood stream and brain to cause intoxication. Their use eliminates guesswork by showing whether a drinking driver has enough alcohol in his system to be legally under its influence.

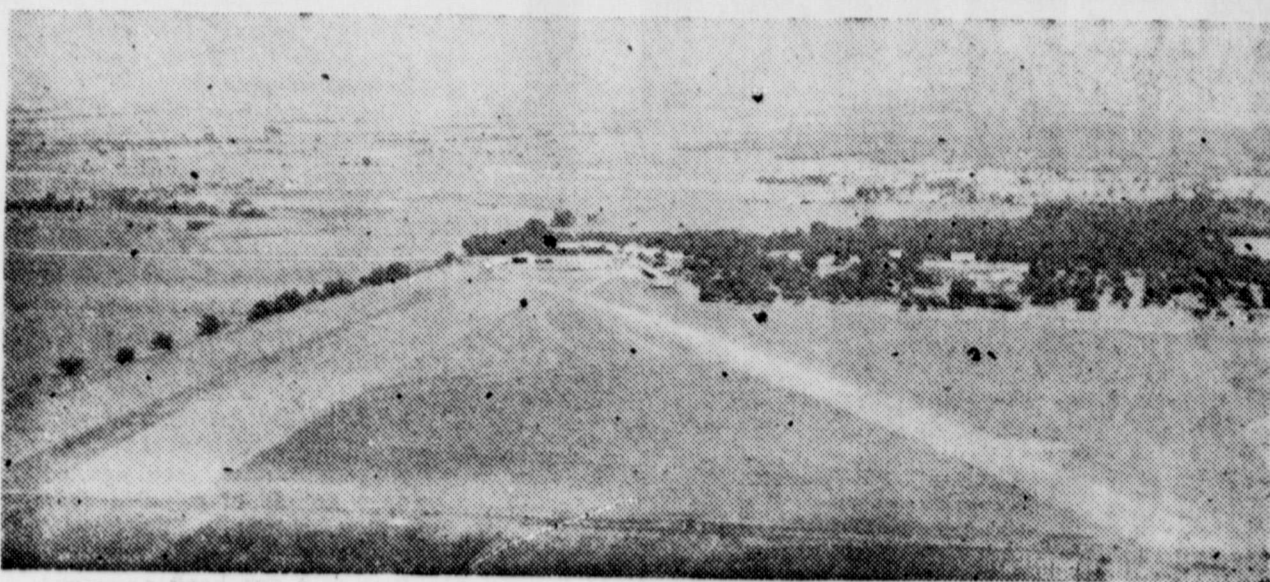

Test results do not measure how much a person has been drinking—they show instead how much has been absorbed in the blood stream and how much gets to the brain. It is the concentration of alcohol in the blood stream and brain and not the amount in the stomach, which bears a definite relationship to degree of intoxication.

The use of such scientific tests was recommended by the President's Highway Safety Conference of 1946. National organizations which have long advocated use of chemical tests for alcoholic influence include the American Bar Association, American Medical Association, Federal Bureau of Investigation, International Association of Chiefs of Police, National Safety Council and the National Conservation Bureau.

Despite the technical and promotional work of these groups, there are still jurisdictions which regard chemical test evidence in somewhat the same light as the lie detector—a "new-fangled gadget". Many cities however, notably Cincinnati, Cleveland, Milwaukee, Kansas City, Detroit, Washington and Indianapolis, use chemical tests as routine practice. A recent tabulation showed 62 cities over 10,000 population reporting use of such tests for enforcement purposes, with 20 state enforcement agencies likewise reporting their use.

Use of evidence obtained thru chemical tests is now officially recognized in state laws in Maine, New York, Indiana and Oregon. Model legislation on interpretation of chemical test results, as recommended in Act V of the Uniform Vehicle Code, has been introduced in legislatures of several states this year.

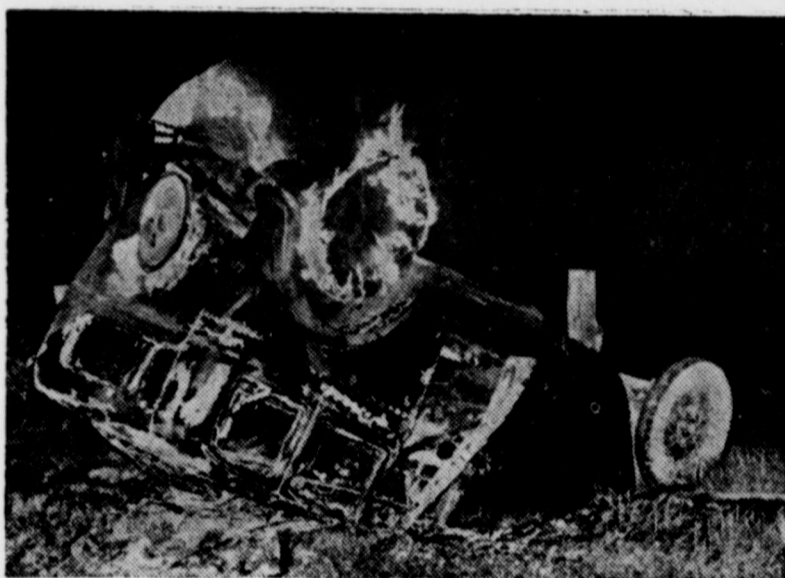

A chemical testing program has many advantages. There are more

A driver who was not breaking any law, and two passengers with him, burned to death in this inferno when a reckless overtaking motorist tried to pass their car where the way was too narrow. His engine ramed into the gasoline tank, setting it afire, and the car was knocked off the road, end over end into a fire, where it quickly turned into a molten furnace. The lawbreaker himself was not injured—such is the irony of highway accidents. National Conservation Bureau safety specialists report that improper passing ranked fifth as a cause of motor vehicle deaths last year; most often it was combined with excessive speed which accounted for at least 8,000 fatalities.

pleas of guilty, and fewer cases necessitating jury trial, with the attendant expense. There is less chance of a miscarriage of justice—the non-drinker and the mild-drinker are spared the embarrassment of unjust arrest. These tests actually "free the innocent and convict the guilty."

The organizations making up the National Committee for Traffic Safety look upon drinking and driving as a safety problem. The Committee is concerned in seeking to develop greater public acceptance of the responsibility for avoiding the social tragedy and economic waste caused by traffic accidents. As far as liquor is concerned, we urge only: "When you have been drinking, don't drive." Even two or three drinks may affect your judgment in driving and contribute to an accident # can be FATAL!

12,200 pedestrians were killed by automobiles last year—1,340 more than the year before. Two out of every three violated traffic laws or committed unsafe acts which contributed to their deaths.

And believe it or not—many of these fatal accidents actually happened less than six feet from the curb—only a step or two from safety!

Between intersection accidents accounted for more than one-third of all pedestrian fatalities last year. These victims carelessly rushed out from behind parked cars, or simply jaywalked themselves into traffic—and death. Others even ignored the safety of lights and traffic officers at intersections to save a few seconds—and lost their lives.

Never take safety for granted. Cross at intersections within the crosswalks. Wait for the light or the policeman's whistle. Be alert for the inconsiderate driver making a right turn, or the reckless one beating a light. On open highways, allow for the speed of approaching cars. Walk to the left, facing traffic.

Whenever you cross, look both ways. One step can be fatal!

Gallup Poll: Revolt in 1948

Wallace Party Might Injure Democrats

By GEORGE GALLUP
 Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 30.—The Wallace third party threat is not a unique phenomenon in recent American politics nor does it represent a groundswell of popular protest, judging from public opinion soundings just completed by the institute.

In the last decade there have been several third party booms with approximately the same political support as a third party formed by Henry A. Wallace would likely get today. Such a third party would, at present, draw support from a little over one-tenth of the voters.

Nevertheless its importance as a threat to Democratic chances to win the presidential election next year should not be underestimated. If the new party were able to get on the ballot in key areas, such as the big cities, it could prove acutely embarrassing to the Democrats. For the Wallace party if formed would draw about five times as many converts from the Democratic ranks as from the GOP.

The popular appeal of such a party was measured in a forty-eight-state survey in which interviewers questioned a cross-section of voters on the following:

"If Henry Wallace starts a new liberal political party, do you think you would vote for the presidential candidate of that party in the next election?"

Yes .....13%
 No .....68%
 No opinion .....19%

The 13 percent is made up of 10 percent who say definitely that they think they would support a Wallace party, plus 3 percent, who say they probably would, depending on its policies and other factors.

How does this compare with other third party movements in the past?

In 1944 in New York State the American Labor Party-Liberal Party ticket polled 13 percent. Two years before that the American Labor Party candidate for Governor of New York polled 10 percent.

Shortly after our entry into World War II, a poll by the institute found 16 percent of the country willing to join a Keep-Out-of-War Party if one were founded. In 1938 when Robert and Philip La Follette of Wisconsin announced their intention of starting a National Progressive Party, one out of every eleven voters who had heard of the party wanted to join it. In 1935, when Huey Long's fame was at its height, 10 percent of voters questioned by the institute indicated sympathy with a third party.

T. R.'s Performances

Going back to 1924, Robert La Follette the elder, polled 17 percent of the total vote for President. But that was far below the performance of Theodore Roosevelt's Bull Moose ticket which polled 27½ percent of the total vote in 1912.

Today's survey reveals these important facts about the type of voters to whom a Wallace third party would appeal:

1. One in five (19 percent) of the people who voted for Roosevelt in 1944 say they would support the new party. If they actually did it would mean some five million votes—but only if the new party succeeded in getting on the ballot in all states, which is unlikely.

2. A Wallace party would draw its strength more from labor union members than from any other major group. Among union members polled, 22 percent say they would be for such a party.

It would have least appeal to farmers, despite the fact that Wallace has a farming background, and served as Secretary of Agriculture as did his father before him. Only 6 percent of farmers in today's poll say they would support a Wallace party.

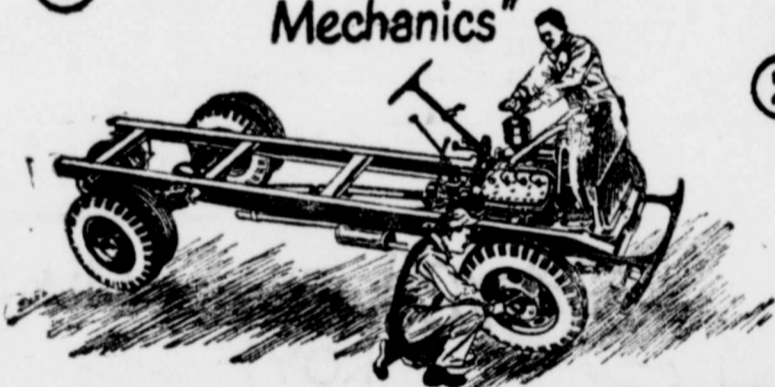

3. It would appeal more to young voters, especially veterans, than to the middle-aged and elderly.

4. People who say they would support a Wallace third party have very different ideas from the rest of the country on Russia and on labor legislation. They favor a softer policy toward Russia than the rest of the country, and a majority of Wallace supporters familiar with the Taft-Hartley bill were opposed to it, whereas among the general public the measure was approved by those who had heard or read of it.

June 27, 1947.

Dear Friends:
Although I have just come from a turbulent session of the House—session at which tempers began to respond to the rising temperature outside, I can not but recognize that that very debate and difference of opinion is one of the most precious of American rights. This will reach you just one hundred and seventy-one years after the Liberty Bell pealed out its message of independence to the people of Philadelphia.

In no other Nation can the people celebrate such a far-reaching declaration of personal as well as national independence. Nowhere else do the people possess the freedom of thought, speech and action that is enjoyed in the United States of America. Unfortunately, while citizens of other lands are fully alive to the advantages of American citizenship, too many of us take it for granted.

People opposing our form of government can rent a hall and criticize to their hearts content. If they can't afford a hall, they can speak on the the public street and our government will protect them. In many other lands, they would be lucky to go to a concentration camp. I think that such freedom is worthwhile. I don't want to lose it simply to cure some minor ill. I want us to in the future as in the past to give close attention to our fundamental rights and to recognize that they are more valuable than the temporary gains that certain groups might make by ignoring these rights. On this Fourth of July, let's take inventory of our blessings. Let's realize again just how fortunate we are to live in America. Let's resolve that the Spirit of 1776 shall live forever.

Yesterday I discovered that the Vice President of the Texas Power & Light Company had gone to REA and looked over the file of the Brazos Transmission Cooperative and had then gone to the Senate Appropriations Committee and made an extended attack on the Brazos Transmission Co-ops power plant between Temple and Belton. Of course, if officials of the farmers cooperatives should go to the Electric Bond & Share in New York and ask to see their file on the Texas Power & Light Co., they would get exactly no information. The T. P. & L. asked a question that the Brazos Project be stopped although their statement said that they have decided since January to add 30,000 kw of capacity to the 130,000 kw that they then stated they were going to build in Central and North Texas. Still they feel there is no need for the 10000 kw that the Brazos people propose to supply.

An interesting feature about this hearing was that the representative of the power company was given an opportunity to make a long statement and then to extend and revise his remarks and to put in all the figures he wanted to. When I appeared to answer his charges, the Chairman, Republican Senator C W Brooks of Illinois, insisted that I only take a few minutes and then utterly refused to allow me to quote any figures for the record. This treatment reminded me of the fact that when this appropriation was before the House that the Chairman was a Republican Congressman Everett Dirksen, also of Ill. and that he allowed only 15 minutes for the discussion of the whole REA program. These incidents should pretty well prove what these Republicans think of the whole REA program and should let those of you at home realize just how difficult it is for those of us who are interested to get favorable action.

I am, however, gratified to be able to report that the Appropriations Committee has recommended $4,625,000 for Whitney Dam on the Brazos. This project fared better than most any other flood control project, and I felt highly gratified as I have worked for this for years. This dam will give a great deal of protection to the City of Waco and the entire Brazos Valley through Bosque, McLennan, Falls and Wilam counties. The protection will be very effective down the mouth of Little River, but until the dam is built at Miller Springs, the lower Brazos and all of the Little River Valley in Milan, and Bell counties will still be subject to flood damage. The bill does contain a substantial sum for advanced planning of authorized projects, and since we have the Leon Dam authorized, I am hopeful that we can get the Engineers to give preferred attention to that project.

With best wishes, I am

Your Friend,

W. R. POAGE.
