"FUSTEST WITH

THE MOSTEST"

Little 'g' gatesville, Texas

The 'big 'uns' dlip the 'little 'uns'! It's always!

• Maybe, not intentional— but always!

• The big 'uns gain is our loss!

• Now, the Railway Express is asking to have the office and agency closed up here, and 'service' (?) Gatesville and Corvell from Temple. That stinks!

• Some would say: "Don't sweat it!" But, by gosh, if we don't sweat something, there ain't going to be much to sweat. Suppose we could move the post office to Temple without much loss in 'service', or, they could move the danged thing to Washington and just have ONE postmaster.

• Some smaller 'points' as the guy in the plush, air-conditioned, furnished out-of-this-world offices say, do not pay, but, the fact remains, 'over the system' they're still declaring dividends. That goes for all utilities, transportation, communication. The TVA has done that in the light business in Tennessee. Suppose we could pay light bills and gas bills direct to Dallas or Ft. Worth, and eliminate these offices here. A tour thru Tennessee and TVA-country revealed to us years ago, the small towns didn't like the feature of the TVA—they moved the light offices and agencies.

• Already, objections are building up here, but an 'object' from a small town don't have much effect on the Texas Railroad Commission, soo'h-sayer in these matters. That's the route we took to lose the Cotton Belt to Hamilton, Stephenville, Dublin, etc., and also the Western Union Office, and now, the Railway Express Office. We gotta fight, fo'ks! What next?

• By-the-way, maybe The Waco News-Tribune or the Temple Daily Telegram would be glad to consolidate with the Corvell County News, or more likely visa-versa, and, we might like that too.

• None, we ain't fur it! It'd just take other families out of town, truck expense, rent, lights, water gas, phone, taxes, and a lot of o'her things we just don't like to lose, and, if nothing else, the identification of having a Railway Express Agency. We'd hate to have to tell tourists and visitors: "They ain't none here!" Don't do this to us Uncle Olin!

MARTIN FOSTER GETS EYE DAMAGED WHEN USING A STEAK KNIFE TUES. NOON

Martin Foster, 6, son of X R. D. Foster Jr., seriously damaged his right eye at noon Tuesday when he was using a steak knife to cut leather. The knife slipped and pierced the eyeball of his eye. He was taken immediately to Waco and then to Temple to a hospital, and so far, reports of the condition of his eye are not known.

He had attended Vacation Bible School, doing leather work, and decided he'd do some at home. He'd borrowed his father's hunting knife, and the family got it. He then, while his mother and another woman were in the wash shed, got a steak knife and started to work on the leather when the accident happened.

Judge and Mrs. R. B. Cross are vacationing in Colorado.

The budget is available for inspection at County Clerk A. W. Ellis' office, and the formal hearing will be Aug. 22, after which it will be adopted.

Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. — (Romans 5:1)

We have faith that the sun will rise tomorrow; that when we turn them on, the electric light, the TV and the radio will work... belief in the operation of powers we cannot see or comprehend. Why, then, does our faith in God often falter? Without it, we can have no peace.

Management in Home Laundering
Want to make those laundry jobs easier during these hot summer months? If you do not have an automatic drier, try following these suggestions.

Sort articles as you take them out of the washer. Hang all the starched items together as well as the flannel pieces, which will be folded as they are taken from the line. Hang all items together that need to be removed before they are completely dry. Press while damp.

Hang clothes properly. Take ten minutes before you pin them on time to shake out items and straighten the line. This will make ironing or folding a much easier job. It eliminates many wrinkles and protects fabrics' firmest part, usually at the seams.

Use stretchers where possible. Rustproof stretchers and hangers are available for trousers and other garments.

Bleaches are important in laundering to remove stains and stubborn dirt. They differ in action and should be selected to suit specific fabrics.

The most common bleach is a liquid solution of chlorine. It is effective on white and colorfast cottons and linens. Too much of this type of bleach however will injure even sturdy fabrics.

Powdered chlorine bleaches are now available. Used in the same way as liquid chlorine bleach, they are equally effective. The powdered form is easy to store, handle, and measure.

An entirely different type of powdered bleach has sodium perborate as the bleaching agent. It will not harm silk or wool, and can be used safely on delicate materials as the action is mild. Fabrics allowed to stand in this bleach are not weakened.

When using either liquid or powdered bleach, follow directions on the container carefully. All than in cool water.

Measure the liquid or powdered chlorine bleaches carefully. Excess may be hard on fibers and it adds to laundry cost.

WORKING WITH

Wood For Fuel

Almost everyone enjoys the cozy heat of a fireplace in the winter and each of us prefers a certain kind of fuel wood for his fire.

General preferences of long standing frequently lead to misconceptions regarding wood such as the notion that oak and other hardwoods have a higher fuel value than pine. Such is not the case. In fact pine, pound for pound, will generate more heat than the hardwoods. However the heat from the resinous woods produces a hot, quick fire which consumes the wood and releases heat quickly. As a result it is difficult to maintain a uniform temperature when burning resinous woods because the heat is intense at first and then quickly cool.

The denser hardwoods take longer to ignite and while burning release their heat more slowly than pine. Long experience has taught us to start fires with pine and maintain them with hickory, oak, or similar hardwood species.

THE CASE OF
THE ARCTIC HERO

BY DONALD J. SOBOL

"Don't tell me," said Dr. Haledjian. "Let me guess. You made a play for a young lady but got your lines fouled and your face slapped."

Cyril Makin, the luckless Lothario, nodded glumly. "This time I was absolutely sure I had my story down pat. Yet something went wrong. I can't figure what."

"You've heard of Gertrude Morgan?" he asked. "Her grandfather sailed with Admiral Byrd and a cousin climbed Mt. Everest with the Eggler party. If you haven't combed icicles from your whiskers you don't rate with her."

"I took her to dinner Christmas Eve, and it seemed a good time to trundle out my Arctic Circle yarn," continued the youth. "I opened by commenting that I had once spent Christmas Eve in less comfortable surroundings."

"Then I told her about the morning Lt. Craven and I were mushing back to the Navy's Arctic Observation Weather Station. Suddenly Craven fell and fractured his leg. Ten minutes later the stretch of ice we were crossing broke loose. We began to drift out to sea."

"I realized Craven and I and the dogs would freeze to death unless I started a fire. Alas, we had used up all our matches. I got out a small magnifying glass from our instrument kit, and tearing off sheets from our reports, laid them on a steel instrument box. By focusing the sun's rays through the glass onto the paper, I started a hearty blaze."

"Ten minutes later the stretch of ice we were crossing broke loose."

"Fortunately, a cutter picked us up after 24 hours. The captain said I was a bit of a hero."

"But not Miss Morgan," said Haledjian. "And no wonder!"

BUT BABIES CAN'T READ

President Eisenhower recently signed into law the Federal Hazardous Substances Labeling Act. This ended a 25 year struggle by the American Medical Association and other health groups to have poisonous substances so labeled. This law declares that any hazardous product not so labeled is liable to seizure and its manufacturer can be fined $3000 and jailed for a year.

Such a law was badly needed as each year in the U. S. there are 200,000 accidental poisonings resulting in 5000 deaths. According to the Public Health Service most accidental poisonings are children and 43% of all deaths among children aged 2 and 3 are from poisoning. The USPHS attributes this terrific death toll to some 300,000 household products not labeled with adequate warnings.

The AMA and other health groups are to be commended for their persistence.

It strikes us, however, that their task is not finished. As products containing poison take such a heavy toll of 2 and 3 year old tots, at which tender age they've not yet learned to read should there be another law — one that would make it unlawful for the mamas and papas of the nation to yeave bottles and packages labeled "poison" where the youngsters can reach them. with penalties for the careless parents?

With both producers and parents facing penalties, accidental poisoning of our children would be minimized.

Just about the swan song in Little League Baseball.

Tuesday night, the National Guard Little Leaguers met Ft. Hood Little Leaguers at Copperas Cove, and dropped the contest 10-1.

Sims Radio-TV winners of their bracket played the Temple Daily Telegram team in Temple Thursday night and they play the winner of the Belton-empfle Carpenters Thursday night for consolation or winner, spot, whichever they won or lost Thursday night.

The State meet is at Killeen Aug. 8, 9, 10, and the National is at Oklahoma City.

Only games left in the League are postponed, rained out, etc., and mean practically nothing.
