It has frequently occurred to me, and a recent experience has brought a recurrence of the fact, that the longer I live, the older I become. that is, so far as my store of accumulated knowledge and experience is concerned, and that experience has branded more indelibly than ever before upon my mental tablet, the fact taht this life is a more and more complex riddle, as judged by the intricacies and varieties of human nature, and its relations to this earthly life of the average human being

Only recently I was ask 1, and through my inimical kindness of heart, agreed to perform a certain small act of public service, and during the performance of that service, I attempted to follow as nearly as I could, what I considered to be the methos or line of action I was sup-posed to follow in the performance of that service.

Hardly was I through the performance of that service, which I did to the best of my limited ability, than I was accosted by one, whom I had counted as one of my very good friends, as to what that friend had done to me to cause me to give that friend an insidious "dig"?

"That's the thing for you and Del. He really loves fine stock. And you and he-think of it-riding over the country-planning your gardens-having a baby or two." Edith was going very fast.

"It sounds heavenly," said Lucy. "Then make it Heaven. Oh, Lucy, Lucy, you lucky girl-you are going to marry the man you love. Live away from the world-share happiness and unhappiness-" She rose from the table restlessly, pushing back her chair, dropping her napkin on the floor. "Do you know how I envy you?"

She went to the window and stood looking out. "And here I sit, day after day, like a prisoner is a tower —and my page sings—that was the beginning of it-and it will be the end.

"No," Lucy was very serious, "you mustn't let it be the end. You -you must open the window, Miss Towne.

Edith came back to the table. "Open the window?" Her breath came fast. "Open the window. Oh, little Lucy, how wise you are . .

When Lucy had gone, Alice came in and dressed Edith's hair. She found her lady thoughtful. "Alice, what did they do with my wedding clothes?"

"We put them all in the second guest-suite," she said; "some of them we left packed in the trunks just as they were, and some of them are hung on racks."

"Where is the wedding dress?" "In a closet in a white linen bag."

"Well, finish my hair and we will go and look at it."

As they entered it, the second guest-suite was heavy with the scent of orange blooms. "How dreadful, Alice," Edith ejaculated. "Why didn't you throw the flowers away?'

"Miss Annabel wouldn't let me. She said you might not want things touched."

"Silly sentimentality." Edith was impatient.

The room was in all the gloom of drawn curtains. The dresses hung on racks, and, encased in white bags, gave a ghostly effect. "They are like rows of tombstones, Alice." "Yes, Miss Towne," said Alice. dutifully.

> She tried to protest, but he pleaded. "This is my day. Don't spoil it, Jane."

It was nearly three o'clock when they left the table, and they had a long drive before them. Darkness had descended when they reached the house. It was still snowing. Bob was upstairs, walking around the little room like a man in a dream. "I can't tell you," he confided to Jane after Frederick had left, "how queer I felt when I came in and found Miss Martin with the babies, and that stately old woman in the kitchen. And everything going like clockwork. Miss Martin explained, and - well, Towne just waves a wand, doesn't he, Janey, and makes things happen?'

"I don't know that I ought to let him do so much," Jane said.

"Oh, why not, Janey? Just take the good the gods provide. Before Frederick Towne reached his hotel he passed a shop whose windows were lighted against the early darkness. In one of the windows, flanked by slippers and stockings and a fan to match, was a French gown, all silver and faint blue, a shining wisp of a thing in lace and satin. Towne stopped the car, went in and bought the gown with its matching accessories. He carried the big box with him to his hotel. had swayed her when she had last worn it. It had seemed to mock She had seen her own tense her. countenance in the mirror, as she had controlled herself before Alice. Then, when the maid had left, she had thrown herself on the bed, and had writhed in an agony of humiliation

And now all her anger was gone. She didn't hate Del. She didn't hate Lucy. She even thought of Uncle Fred with charity. And the wedding gown was, after all, a robe for a princess who married a king. Not a robe for a princess who loved a page. A tender smile softened her face.

"Alice." she said, suddenly, "wasn't there a little heliotrope dinner frock among my trousseau things?

"Yes, Miss Towne, Informal." Alice hunted in the third row of tombstones until she found it.

"I want long sleeves put in it. Will you tell Hardinger, and have him send a hat to match?" "Yes, Miss Towne.

The heliotrope frock had simple and lovely lines. It floated in sheer beauty from the maid's hands as she held it up. "There isn't a pret- sued tier one in the whole lot, Miss Edith."

Edith, having dispatched the box with a charming note to Lucy Logan, had a feeling of ecstatic freedom. All the hurt and humiliation of the bridal episode had departed. She didn't care what the world thought of her. Her desertion by Del had been material for a day's gossip-then other things had filled the papers, had been headlined and emphasized. And what difference did it all make?

CHAPTER XI

The day after Christmas. "Baldy, darling: The operation is over, and the doctor gives us hope. That is the best I can tell you. I haven't been allowed to see

It would be such a heavenly thing for the whole family. Of course that isn't the way to look at it, but I believe Judy wants it. She believes in love in a cottage, but she says that love in a palace might be equally satisfying, with fewer things to worry about.

way, Janey, that friend of yours, Towne, sent another bunch of roses. Pretty fine, I call it. She's no end pleased.

"It's nice of him."

"Gee, I wish I had his money." "Money isn't everything, Bobby."

"It means a lot at a time like this." His face wore a worried frown. Jane knew that Judy's hospital expenses were appalling, and bills were piling up.

"I work like a slave," Bob said, ruefully, "and we've never been in debt before."

'When Judy is well, things will seem brighter, Bob." She laid her hand on his arm.

He looked up at her and there was fear in his eyes. "Jace, she must get well. I can't face losing her." "We mustn't think of that. And now come on out in the kitchen and I'll make you some coffee." Jane was always practical. She knew that, warmed and fed, he would see things differently.

Yet in spite of her philosophy, Jane lay awake a long time that night. And later her dreams were of Judy-of Judy, and a gray and dreadful phantom which pur-

When he saw his mother in bed, Junior asked, "Do you like it, Mother-dear?"

"Like what, darling?"

"I don't always sleep." She looked at Jane. "Does little Julia miss me? I think about her in the night.' Jane knew what Judy's heart wanted. "She does miss you. I know it when she turns away from me. Perhaps I oughtn't to tell you. But I thought you'd rather know."

"I do want to know," said Judy, feverishly. "I don't want them to forget. Jane, you mustn't ever let them-forget.'

Jane felt as if she had been struck a stunning blow. She was, for a moment, in the midst of a dizzy universe, in which only one thing was clear. Judy wasn't sure a getting well!

Judy, with her proon eyes wistful, went on: "Junior, do you want Mother back in your own nice house?

'Will you make cookies?" "Yes, darling."

"Then I want you back. Aunt Janey made cookies, and she didn't know about the raisins."

"Mother knows how to give cookie-men raisin eyes. Mothers know a lot of things that aunties don't, darling.

"Well, I wish you'd come back." He stood by the side of the bed. "I'd like to sleep with you tonight. May I. Mother-dear?"

Oliver Wendell Holmes, the famous poet, was not tolerant of youth. The youngsters who showed signs of accomplishing things were, in his opinion, "conceited in the morning and sleepy in the afternoon."

Youth has confounded him, however, for it has more than held its own in discoveries that have brought progress to the world, observes a writer in London Answers Magazine.

Dr. Niels Bohr, of Copenhagen, was only 28 when he startled the scientific world by saying that the atom was a miniature solar system -but he was right! In 1922, at the age of 37, he received the Nobel prize for the greatest discovery in physics-the youngest man ever to receive that coveted award.

Henry Mosely, an Englishman, was only 26 when he analyzed the elements by the reflection of X-rays from their atoms. He was killed two years later at Gallipoli, one of the greatest losses of the war, for nothing could recompense the world for the loss of his brilliant brain.

Sir William Crookes was only three years older when he found a new metal, thallium, by a new method, the spectroscope. Still another Briton, Perkin, was 18 when he discovered the first aniline dye.

Young Men Set Records That Startled World

The celebrated Pasteur had just turned 20 when he began experimenting with tartaric acid. He solved his problem six years later, and the whole world knows and has benefited from the result.

Sir Isaac Newton had worked out the binomial theorem, the method of tangents, differential and integral calculus, and the law of gravitation before he was 24. In his own words: 'I was then in the prime of my age for invention."

Van't Hoff was a student of 23 when he published an 11-page pamphlet entitled, "The Structure of the Atom in Space." It provoked roars of laughter from older scientists who said he was crazy. Van't Hoff smiled, and before long investigations proved him correct. The laughter ceased and was replaced by somewhat sheepish grins partially hidden by gray beards.

Albert Einstein conceived his famous theory of relativity at the age of 18, and published it when he was 26.

At any rate in announcing intention to return to Antarctica to seek to learn some of the primal secrets hidden in the interior of the continent at the bottom of the world, Lincoln Ellsworth shares ambition with Admiral Byrd, as with British, Norwegian, French and Argentinan flyer-explorers. Difference is that, whereas Mr. Ellsworth's motives are purely scientific, in other cases international politics in their relation to geographical claims are the incentives.

Love of adventures manifested when yet in his 'teens sent Ellsworth forth to explore unknown regions in different parts of the ld. Scion of wealthy parents, born in Chicago in 1880, he could have ordered his career, had he wished, along many lines less strenuous and of fewer hazards than the one he chose and in which he has become so distinguished. He came east to a crack seat of secondary learning, the Hill school, Pottstown, Pa., and upon graduation entered Columbia where he won scholastic honors in the department of civil engineering. But, becoming restive under the sedentary routine of student life, he did not wait to be graduated.

Faring forth into the wild, he became an axman on the first Grand Trunk Pacific railway survey of the transcontinental route across Canada. For five years he saw the virgin land of the Northwest, lived among Indians, shared the hardships of pioneers. In 1907 he became resident engineer of the Grand Trunk at Prince Rupert, B. C.

But his work, filled though it was with hardship and adventure, was not enough. Restlessness was in his soul and the unknown beckoned. So 1909 found him in the Peace river district in northern Canada, prospecting for gold. Then the World war came and, seeking action, he went to France where he became an aviator long before the United

Changes in Living Conditions.

WASHINGTON, D. C .- Silver was thrown into the spotlight of international interest when the price of freshly mined United States silver was recently upped to 71.11 cents an ounce.

"The cost of silver still affects money markets and standards of life around the globe," says the National Geographic society.

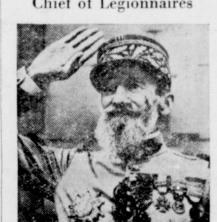

'In the silver-conscious East the fluctuation of this metal is an index to prosperity. Drastic shifts in its value bring sharp changes in living conditions, as happened in 1919 when the price of silver soared to $1.37 an ounce, and again, in 1932, when it dropped to 241/2 cents an ounce.

'In mining regions of the Western hemisphere, especially in Mexicothe earth's Number One producer of the soft, pale substance-silver is closely linked with the people's welfare and the national economy.

'For thousands of years silver has played a vital role in man's life. It was the first of metals widely used for money. Five hundred years before Christ, taxes from silver mines were added up in the financial books of the Greeks. From silver coins, called Joachimsthaler, struck off in the Sixteenth century mint near Joachimsthal in central Europe, came the root word 'thaler'-from which was derived the symbol of cash, the dollar.

"Silver, with gold, lured the Conquistadores to the New world, and helped settle the American West. After the California gold rush came the bonanza silver finds of such states as Nevada, Utah and Colorado, where men became rich and towns grew 'wild.' Yet many individual miners who reaped fantastic fortunes from the silver flood died in poverty. Henry Comstock, who gave his name to one of the greatest "In all, since the day of Columbus, it has been estimated that the world has mined more than 16,000, 000,000 ounces of silver, worth something over $15,000,000,000. North America is the chief source of this metal. In 1938, Mexico produced about 85,000,000 fine ounces of silver, to the United States' 611/2 mil-These figures represent a lions. gain in production for Mexico over the preceding year, a loss for Uncle Sam.

"With the general demonetization of silver, have come many new modern uses for the metal in the industries and the arts. Silver today is a familiar commodity of everyday life around the globe, serving in objects from a California golf trophy to an East Indian bride's dowry. It is found on tea carts and inside a man's chest, patching up a war wound; in the headdress of an Ethiopian chief and in a tar decorations of a Peruvian church; in tiny parts for telephone equipment and in the countless miles of film on which Hollywood stars parade for moviegoers from Morocco to Montana. One big camera company estimates that it melts down more than 250 tons of silver each year for use in film.

"In the United States and Canada alone, according to 1938 figures, some 27,000,000 ounces of silver were used in art and industry."

Studying fatigue, he shut himself for long periods in a tight chamber, the air charged with carbon dioxide. Tracing effects of acid on the body, he ate daily three ounces of bicarbonate of soda, following it with a chaser of hydrochloric acid, diluted with water. Twice gassed in the World war, he seemed to enjoy himself a lot. writing down his sensations with Gusto and later qualifying as an expert on mustard and other gases.

With all that, he hasn't a scratch on him and doesn't suffer even from indigestion. Husky and vigorous, he doubles as guinea pig and a writer, the latter pursuit greatly enhancing his fame, notably with his book Daedalus, which was quite a sensation in this country in 1924. He experiments on his mind just as he does on his body. He is moved mainly by the idea that we know precious little about life and death and the human body and mind, and that in the short time allotted to us we ought to try anything once, which he consistently does. Farm situation not measurably improved and little hope on the horizon before another year . . . Conditions might arise to make Wallace President . . . Appropriations exceed those of last year by more than a billion . . . Even Farley cannot find out if the President wants a third term.

WASHINGTON .- It was the farm revolt against the New Deal that was responsible for a good many of the Republican victories in the 1938 election, and, to a lesser extent, for the failure of the New Deal purges against recalcitrant Democratic senators.

This was notably true in Ohio, where perhaps the turnover as between the 1936 and the 1938 votes was the most spectacular in the country. But there was scarcely a state in which this dissatisfaction of the farmers with the way things were going did not play a part in the reaction.

What makes this so important right now is that the farm situation has not measurably improved, and that there is nothing of importance on the horizon which indicates that it may be substantially improved before next year. The food and clothing stamps for surplus commodities will help a little bit. The idea seems to be good, and it is working fairly well in experimental areas. This means that it will be liberally extended, and may prove very important. But few keen students of the farm problem in Washington think that it is going to be enough to change the tide.

What can change the tide, of course, is a very different farm picture next year. Nobody can tell about that now, but nature may take a hand, either in restricting crops here, or, even better from the standpoint of farm incomes, by restricting them abroad.

Conditions Might Arise to

Make Wallace President

If the farmers of this country next season should have bumper crops, while the farmers of the Argentine and other competing areas suffer drouth and pestilence, so that the farmers of the United States not only have a lot to sell, the White House, and the other much more difficult. Refusal to increase the debt limit did not make any group of voters mad. It did not deprive any group who wanted a piece of federal pork or even the gravy to go with it. It was just a gesture. Voting to adopt it did not step a single appropriation. It simply served notice that, after the federal debt has been increased about four more billions, we are going to stop increasing it.

Appropriations Exceed Last Year's by Over Billion

This year's appropriations, however, were roughly $1,100,000,000 more than last year's, which were 11 billion 400 millions. But the important thing now is to note the trend. The economy revolt, if it can be called that from such an extravagant congress, came right at the end of the session. Just after the house refused even to take up the spend-lend bill-by voting down the rule under which it was to have been considered-the house appropriations committee waded into the final deficiency appropriation bill, cutting the amounts authorized more savagely than any appropriation bill has been cut by this body since 1933.

This would seem to spell plenty of economy next year.

If business gets better-as the stock market seemed to predict the day after the house killed the spendlend bill-it would seem unlikely that the President can work the country up against the men who voted to kill the bill.

Which would mean economy, plentifully sprinkled with pork.

Not Even Jim Farley Could Find Out President's Plans

Shortly after the Hatch bill belaw, enthusiastic Garner came boosters actually made bets, giving three to one, that Roosevelt would not be renominated. Pressed as to the explanation of their confidence, they insisted that they were not sure the President had decided not to seek a third term or he would not have signed the bill.

This is far from conclusive logic, as there is strong opinion that for the President to have vetoed the Hatch bill, and then run, would have given the Republicans a very useful club with which to belabor him during the campaign.

Not even Jim Farley was able to find out whether the President will make the race or

then by some very James A. astute politicians Farley that every time the President lost a purge fight he thereby made his own renomination more likely. The theory at that time was that each defeat made it less likely that the President would be able to force the delegation from that state to the next Democratic convention to vote for some other New Dealer. Hence it made it less the President could be nominated. tion's capital knows only one And finally, that this situation would force the President to run again in order to ensure that the New Deal policies would be carried on. The theory included, of course, the conviction held at that time that a Democratic convention would not dare refuse renomination if the President's friends were fighting for it. By the same token, the Hatch bill has undoubtedly curtailed the power the President will be able to exercise over the national convention. It will be possible to beat the devil round the stump, in many instances, but every time this is done a weak link is inserted in the chain.

Modern Pioneers Head for Antarctic, Hoping to Start New American Colony

Byrd Expedition Leaves In Mid-October for Two-Year Stay.

By CLYDE PEARSON

O N SOME future day the sed by Western Newspaper Union.) air voyager bound from New York to Australia may spend the night at America's settlement in the antarctic, proceeding across the South pole next day to complete his trip. During his overnight visit he will chat with American colonists who spend six to seven months a year at the southern tip of the world, bringing precious ores out of the snow-covered mountains shipping them back and home by plane and boat.

If this idea seems far-fetched to 129,999,999 Americans, it doesn't to the other one -Rear Admiral Richard Evelvn Byrd. Come October and he'll head out of Boston on his third trip to the South pole, the first such expedition to be financed by the government since the intrepid Captain Wilkes was given a vague commission by congress in 1838 to "explore new lands.

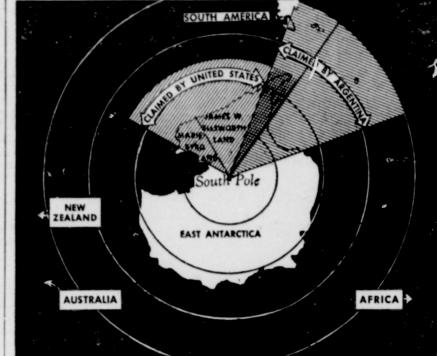

It will be the first attempt by any nation to establish a polar land claim on the basis of permanent settlement. And it may run into a pack of trouble

Conflict With Argentina.

Commander Byrd hopes to claim for the United States all of Marie Byrd Land and the adjoining James Ellsworth Land, which together include some 500,000 miles. He also hopes to explore (and possibly claim) part of the Weddell sea quadrant, and it is here that he will run against Argentina's claims. As shown on the map, that nation maintains her right to a sector extending toward the pole from the Faulkland islands. The territory is also claimed by Great Britain.

Inasmuch as Argentina's friendship is highly valued, the state department will make every effort to respect her wishes, at the same time maintaining her new policy of refusing to recognize any polar claim that has not been permanently settled.

Briefly, the new Byrd expedition

ANTARCTICA-Shaded areas show the section claimed by Argentina and that which Admiral Byrd's party will explore during the next two years, possibly staking out land claims for the United States. As shown on the map, U. S. and Argentine interests clash in part of this section. Right: Admiral Byrd.

ships, two of them owned by the government and the third-the veteran "Bear of Oakland"-leased on a "dollar a year" basis, the party will establish three bases. One will be at Little America, Byrd's old camp in Marie Byrd Land. Another will be at Palmer Land, which is the shifting ice packs may delay the hook extending out of Antarctica toward South America, just west of the Weddell sea. The third will be midway between the two in what is unexplored territory.

Cau Stay Two Years.

In early spring, when the long antarctic night has passed, the three parties will set out in sleds and dogpartments, the coast guard and sevteams to explore the frozen lands of the interior. Unknown territory will be mapped and data will be sought concerning important mineral resources. It has been established definitely that these wastelands conter, second in command of Admiral tain coal, and probably other min-Byrd's last antarctic expedition and erals of more immediate value to the United States.

Designed for Night and Day Smartness!

GIRLS planning to go away to college will be particularly delighted with these gay and youthful patterns-day and night, night and day-these are the ones you want! But everybody with an eye for style and a flair for sewing will like them! The pajamas (1794) are just as easy to tailor as they are comfortable to wear and charming to look at, with the quaint square neckline and gular pockets. Flat crepe, silk print, broadcloth and flannel are nice materials for them.

Slimming Basque Bodice.

A dress that will send your morale and your spirits soaring, whether you wear it to an office, classroom, or just on shopping trips, is 1797. And why? not, so everything is speculative, but there is one very curious element in the situation, resembling slightly the political effect of the President's defeat last year in the "purge" primaries.

It was contended are ab good prices for their crops, the Republican candidates can scream their heads off without getting anywhere. The farm revolt will simply disappear. It might even make Henry A. Wallace President!

Henry A.

Wallace

But the present situation is desperate, from the Wallace standpoint. The estimated corn crop is 2,500,-000,000 bushels, which is not only bad because it is enormous, but because this is the third year in succession that the corn growers of this country have produced more than they can sell, or at least, as B. M. Baruch likes to state the same problem, "more than they can sell at a profit."

Wallace's ever-normal granary is taxed to the roof with a 400,000,000bushel carry-over. In fact no one knows what to do with the corn. Wallace has sent out a call for $5,-500,000 worth of steel corn bins in which the commodity credit corporation can store 50,000,000 bushels along railroads and near elevators.

So it is small wonder that the food and drug administration was kicked around when it tried to prevent, by law, continued use of dextros without stating on the label that it was contained in processed foods. The beet and cane sugar group in this country is pretty strong, politically, but not strong enough to battle the problem in that mammoth corn crop. If anybody wants to use corn sugar in food why that is fine-it will use up a little corn.

Legislators Love Pork but Want to Do Own Carving

"Spend and spend, tax and tax" is out the window unless Franklin D. Reesevelt can get another mandate next year, thus proving the "elect and elect" part of the trilogy attributed to but denied by Harry L. Hopkins. This does not mean that congress has turned parsimonious, despite the spectacular rejection of the rule to take up the spend-lend bill, and the shelving of the housing measure. The legislators still love their pork, but they want to do the carving themselves, and they want to select the favored plates to receive the best slices.

Actually this congress was pretty liberal with the people's money. It appropriated about $12,500,000 000 this year, which is hardly cheeseparing or a step toward balancing the budget. But-it refused to increase the present $45,000,000,000 debt limit, and then refused to get around it by the spend-lend device. The two things took different sorts of courage, one easy, politically, if one leaves out the angle of defying

Might Work Out This Way in The National Convention

Imagine, for example, Postmaster A, who normally, being a political power in his community, would be a delegate to the national convention. The Hatch law prevents this, so A has his political man Friday selected as delegate instead. Immediately two possible weaknesses occur to the line of federal control which would not exist if A himself were a delegate. First, of course, Friday may intend to do what A orders when he goes to the convention. But when he gets in a delegation caucus-say, for instance, on the question of whether that state delegation will stick by Roosevelt for another ballot-Friday may decide to run out on A, and on Roosevelt. Of course there is nothing A can do about it in time to change the convention results.

Or it may be that A wants to retain the appearance of loyalty to Roosevelt, but privately thinks the party's chances in his state would be better with some other nominee. Then he may tell Friday, very confidentially, that he wants the delegation to leave Roosevelt at the first opportunity, and Friday may obey Then A can protest to the him. White House that he was betrayed by that "ingrate" Friday. But while Roosevelt's chances of controlling the convention are thus weakened, this is no guarantee that he will not be renominated. If there is a surge of sentiment for him, just before the convention, which might be manifested in preferential presidential primaries, it is entirely conceivable that the convention would name him.

When Congress Leaves Town

Summer Reaches Washington

WASHINGTON.-Summer's almost over for most of America, but for Washington it's just started. Moon, sun and likely that any New Dealer except climate to the contrary, the naunfixed period of summertime each year.

It starts the instant speakers of both houses of congress bang their adjournment gavels and send the thundering herd of legislators back to their home stamping grounds.

But by the same token summercome when it may-brings a new influx to Washington. It is then that tourist business reaches its peak, drawing thousands of summer-vacation, Christmas-bills-finally-paid-off visitors.

But modern Washington summers have lost the out-to-lunch touch that once made the city a haven for those who sought escape from the madding crowd. Since 1982 a huge crop of new administrative offices has grown up, keeping much of the city's population busy without letup. Once, in the dear dead days, all governmental offices automatically adopted a shorter work day immediately after congress adjourned. Even today, despite the growth of new bureaus, longer lunch hours and briefer days are the rule.

Investigators Stay On.

Still another harsh note breaks the Potomac's stillness this summer. As in all summers preceding election years, the current betweensession spell finds investigating committees hard at work. One reason is that their members can draw big headlines without competition during the news-less dog days of late summer.

This summer's committees will be headed by Texas' Rep. Martin Dies, who reopens his investigation of subversive activities. The new house committee to investigate the national labor relations board will provide a bit more entertainment.

Such affairs will not interest the tourists, however. Preparing for a boom season, the board of trade has made plans once more to cash in on # $60,000,000 annual business.

Washington tourist business comes from all over the world. It is estimated that only 5 per cent of foreign visitors to the United States fail to see the city. Hence the professional guides who speak French, German, Italian and Spanish. The tourists' favorite meccas are the Smithsonian institution and Nation- hallowed ground.

al museum, the capitol building (whose chambers still echo the past winter's angry debates) and the White House.

These Draw 'Em, Too! Following close in popularity come Mount Vernon, the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, the bureau of printing and engraving, the Washington cathedral, Supreme court, library of congress, federal bureau of investigation, Pan-American union and the Lincoln memorial.

Most popular method of inspecting the city is via the sightseeing bus. Thus tourists visit the White House and other historical spots at the rate of 6,000 a day, listening to guides reel off an unintelligible spiel and crack stock jokes, many of which deservedly draw no laughs.

Though August is the peak month, tourists will continue to pour in through September and October. By November'l the species becomes almost extinct, remaining thus for the returning expedition.

Many scientists are now considering the possibility of a permanent settlement. Whether or not such colonization is made depends upon the expedition's findings regarding the antarctic's value as a future source of minerals, as a fishery source and as an observation post for meteorological predictions. Congress will then decide from year to year whether the colony should be maintained.

Proposes Observatory.

Admiral Byrd is convinced the settlement would be practical. Early in June he pointed out that antarctic weather stations should be constantly occupied with staffs, changed from season to season.

"The south polar region is a weather breeder for the whole world south of the equator and indirectly affects us in the north," he said. "Data collected there, studied together with that from other parts of the world, will be of much practical importance. It should enable our scientists to make long-range weather forecasts with an accuracy greater than anything we know now."

At antarctic coal mines, and in the vicinity of gold, silver and other deposits expected to be found there, he expects permanent settlements will spring up within the next 50 years

Predicts Aviation Bases.

Admiral Byrd thinks antarctic aviation possibilities are enormous. Just as Russia and several other nations have considered a Europe-North America airline via the North pole, Mr. Byrd thinks the time is not far distant when planes will cross the South pole regularly flying between South or even North America and Australia.

And so for the next two years we'll hear lots about the antarctic as the expedition's ships come and go, and as the magic of wireless brings your newspapers constant reports of this unique land-staking junket into the ice-crusted wilderness.

There's only one catch to it. An eagle-eyed reporter recently discovered that congress appropriated funds to send an expedition to the antarctic, without saying' anything specifically about getting it back. Speaking privately, several members of the party thought this would be a good idea in case war envelops the civilized world during the next two years.

But Admiral Byrd says no one next six months until May again need worry-the expedition is combeckons the patriotic American to ing back if it has to walk over the lice like Eliza.

A DA LUSH had a great gift with plants. Where scant geraniums bloomed for her neighbors, Ada contrived an artist's paradise. Accordingly, when the South Moulton Horticultural society held its show Ada was persuaded to show some of her pets. She did not like it very much, for Ada belonged to a past generation and hated publicity. Her father, sometime rector of St. Thomas', had declared that "no gentlewoman should get her name in the papers." Ada secretly considered herself very much of a gentlewoman, and she saw little difference in a scandal and a flower show.

But she allowed herself to be persuaded. Six fine pots of varied blossoms were entered. Ada herself invested in a new dress-lavender.

The day dawned in beauty. The great tents looked like giant mushrooms as Ada timidly approached the exhibitors' entrance. She would have liked to tremble a little, only she was not the trembling kind. Therefore, she smiled, showing such pretty, sound, white teeth that a man standing by a superb orchid exhibit lifted his hat and asked her the nature of her own competitors. "Just geraniums," she said shyly.

"I think they must be in this tent somewhere.

"Yes, I guess they are," smiled e stranger. "I don't believe even buth Moulton would place geraniums among the vegetables.'

Ada allowed herself a slight laugh. She laughed charmingly, like a young girl of about the Jane Austen period.

"My name is Jack Durham," said the stranger. "I belong here by birth, but I have been away, in the tropics, for some years, and-"

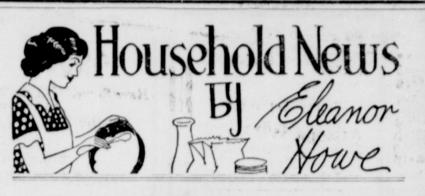

"I am afraid South Moulton will seem very quiet to you," ventured Ada. As a native of South Moulton surely it would be correct for the late rector's daughter to extend some kind of welcome. Besides, his eyes were her favorite shade of brown.

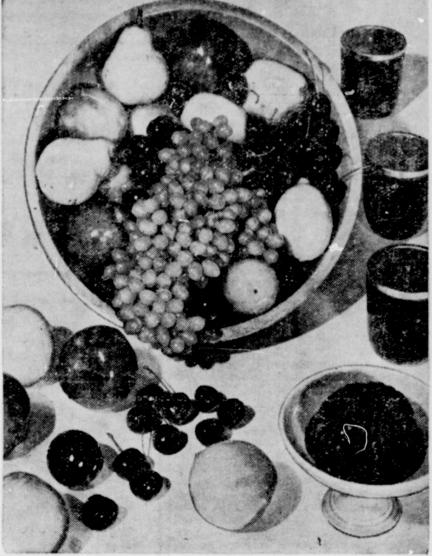

"Been getting orchids. D'ye like them?" rather eagerly.

"I think they're perfectly lovely. Only I am not familiar with them. "They grow on one. At first they seemed uncanny to me. Now I look on them as you do on geraniums, I believe. Friends." He smiled again, more with the brown eyes than the lips. Ada was glad to note his hair was as white as her own. How foolish to be glad. Ada blushed.

"You may recall my dear father, the Reverend Dr. Lush?"

"He was my father's closest

Sugar and Spice

I've long believed that one reason the art of canning and preserving has been neglected is that many of us have forgotten just how good some of the home canned foods can be. We've forgotten the teasing tang of pickling spices, the mellow aroma of rich fruit butters that used to make the air fragrant at canning time. Maybe we need only to be reminded of all this to restore a lost art to favor

Cold Shower May Do Harm To Individual

THE FRIONA STAR, FRIONA, TEXAS

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON T IS hard to understand how the idea started that a cold tub or shower bath the first thing in the morning was good for the health, hardened TODAY'S up the body and HEALTH warded off dis-COLUMN ease.

As a matter of fact, the morning cold bath does much harm to a great many, not because there is anything wrong with a cold shower and a brisk rub first thing in the morning for a strong, hardy individual, but because the average individual is not strong and hardy. The reason so many feel that despite the discomfort and shock the morning cold tub or shower bath is helpful is that after the bath and rub there is a "bracing" reaction for a short time. However, one or two hours afterwards there is a feeling of tiredness depression and which they do not know is due to the cold bath. Why is the morning cold shower a mistake for so many?

When we awake the body is really at Dr. Barton its lowest point of resistance due for the most part to the need of food or fuel. The temperature is low, the blood pressure low, the heart beat slow and not as strong as at any other time. To make the body, in this low condition, undergo the 'shock" of a cold bath is like licking a person when he is down.

One in Four Have Resistance. However, there is the individual (about one in four) who, because of inborn or acquired resistance, can take this cold bath, have a brisk ful to remove all of the white part rub, feel a good reaction without any "let down" during the day. In order to learn exactly what happens when exercise is taken, Dr. Naeraa made sediment counts on 35 specimens of urine from 12 men who took part in a six-

Dr. Naeraa states that his studies on the sediment of the urine of these men who had indulged in this severe exercise for six days showed no signs of any failure or breaking down of the kidneys, as there was no increase in the blood corpuscles or hyaline casts.

The belief that exercise, by creating wastes, would swamp the kidneys with work as they removed these wastes from the blood is unfounded, according to Dr. Naeraa's findings.

It is of course true that when the heart begins to fail there is considerable congestion of the kidneys. It is likewise true that severe exercise will put too much work on a failing heart. Thus exercise in one with a failing heart, because of congestion and damage already present in the kidneys, might readily cause further damage.

However, the average individual need not fcar that exercise is going to damage his kidneys because of extra wastes manufactured by the
