COGITATIONS and APHORISMS of JODOK

I have just been reading an editorial by Editor Clyde Warwick, of the Canyon News, in which he stated that one Karl Crowley thinks he has heard the call of the great common people of Texas, to come and be their governor. The editorial then goes on to state that Karl then finds his hands and says, "Behold the Great Karl comes out of Washington to save Texas."

The editorial further calls attention to the fact that, while our other gubernatorial candidates are paying for their own stamps for mailing their campaign propaganda, the mails were flooded with campaign literature for Crowley, or "Growley" or "Howley" or whatever his name may be, over the frank of Senator McGellar, of Tennessee, and mailed from Dallas, thus using the free service of the Post Office Department to flood the state with speeches that were made in Washington.

Yes, I remember I received one of those franked speeches, made by some one in Washington for the apparent purpose of influencing the voters of Texas to vote for a man who has been a federal appointee, but I gave it the immediate attention of letting it slip from my fingers into a box of waste paper.

Well! If other people look at this matter as I do, Mr. "Growley" (?) will lose more votes than he will gain, and I believe most of the people around Friona will feel pretty much the same about it if they know the facts in the matter. It just takes lots of stamps to mail one letter to each of the politicians and newspapers in this state, and by taking free use of the mails for his individual campaign purposes, Mr. "Howley" (?) is saving quite a lot of money for himself, which the other candidates are having to pay out of their own pockets. It is right and fair?

I do not know this Mr. Cowler—or what's his name? (I am almighty poor at remembering names) personally, but I received a letter some time ago from someone with a similar name, in which he stated that he was coming back from Washington to become our governor, and, among other things, he said he was going to bring a "New Deal" to Texas.

Now gentle reader: I do not claim to be well posted on anything except the sound of a "call to dinner" and about all I know is what I hear on the street corner or read in some of the papers, and judging by what I hear on the street corners and read in the papers, and most of them are papers printed right here in the Panhandle, it occurs to me that this "New Deal" stuff is beginning to get pretty cold with a large number of our local people. And, furthermore, if making the general public pay his individual campaign expense bills is what Mr. Growler, or whatever his name is, calls economy, it sure is a different brand of economy from any that we have been used to thinking and talking about. And if that is what he calls his "New Deal", the less he says about it the better for him in this locality.

A large number of our people do not seem to have much love for Mr. E. O. Thompson, owing to the fact that many of them—all of them that I have talked with—hold him responsible—at least to a large degree—for the unfair and unjust freight rates that our farmers are having to pay. But, regardless of this sentiment, I believe he is less noxious to our people than a man who apparently sponges on the American public to economize on his own individual campaign expenses.

I was listening to a group of men talk not long ago, and the conversation, or discussion, or whatever it was, drifted onto the subject of grasshoppers, and the serious damage they are likely to do to the farms of Parmer county.

And as the conversation drifted on and on—various kinds of destructive worms and bugs came in for a share of the discussion, some of them, of course, receiving simply honorable mention; but it seemed to be the preponderance of opinion that there is a destructive bug for everything the farmer tries to grow, such as the chinch bug, the potato bug, the cabbage bug, the cucumber bug, etc. etc.

I do not usually join in such discussions, but on this occasion, I did mention the fact that I had never

FRIONA HAS BALL TEAM FIRST GAME SUNDAY

It had grown so late in the season that Friona people had about given up the idea that they would have a local base ball team this season, but new recruits were secured to take the place of the former players who did not wish to play again, and the team was reorganized last week with Jack Anderson again chosen as manager.

The boys played their first game of the season with the Hotel Boys, Sunday afternoon on the Hotel diamond, the game resulting in a score of 8 to 4 in favor of the Hotel team. They will play the same game again the coming Sunday on the local diamond at Whiteway Park, to which the "ball loving" public is cordially invited.

The pitchers for the local team last Sunday were Lloyd Thompson and Jim Barnette, both new men on the mound, and they each rendered excellent service.

RIFLE CLUB HAD FIRST SHOOT OF SEASON

The Parmer County Rifle Club held its first regular shoot of the season at its rifle range near Bovina Sunday afternoon, with fourteen contestants taking part in the shoot.

These fourteen contestants included the secretaries of the Amarillo and Clovis Rifle clubs, also three lady markswomen, the shoot resulting in L. F. Lillard, of Friona, secretary of the Parmer County Club, as high score winner, and the secretaries of Amarillo and Clovis clubs tying for second place.

They were shooting "big bore" guns at a range of 200 yards, using three positions—lying, sitting and kneeling—which formed a difficult and interesting contest.

One of the interesting and rather unusual features of the shoot was the fact that one lady member and two visiting ladies took part in the contest, the member being Mrs. Armstrong of Farwell, and Misses Irene Boggess and Lucile Curry, of Friona. During the present season the club will hold its regular shoot on the afternoon of the first Sunday of each month, at each of which visitors are most cordially welcome.

L. F. Lillard, of this place, secretary of the club, stated that the club has received government recognition, and has received $125.00 worth of ammunition from the government this season.

WILL ATTEND LUBOCK COLLEGE

Misses Lora Mae McFarland and Floy Goodwine, both of this community, and both teachers, departed this week for Lubbock, where they will enroll as students at the Texas Technological College at that city.

They have been teaching for the past few years and will be away for a period of six weeks or longer. Hadley Reeve, who has been superintendent of the public schools at Snyder, for the past two terms, arrived at home last week but not for full vacation period, as he is leaving this week for Lubbock, where he will attend the Technological College during a part of the vacation period.

GENE HOWE TO SPEAK HERE JULY 21, INTEREST COL. THOMPSON

Gene Howe of Amarillo (Old Tack to you) will speak in Friona in the interest of Ernest O. Thompson's candidacy for governor July 21st, according to a letter from Mr. Howe to Rev. C. R. Hardy, pastor of the local Methodist Church, last week.

The occasion will be the big county-wide political rally to be held here two days before the Democratic Primary and to be sponsored by the women of the local Methodist Church. Several speakers of note are expected for this event.

METHODIST PASTOR HELD REVIVAL

Rev. G. R. Hardy closed a ten-day revival meeting last Sunday at Bethel Methodist Church west of Dimmitt. Despite the rains and storms all last week, the crowds were large at every morning and evening service. It was said to be the best revival the church has had in years.

Rev. Hardy is receiving other calls for revivals but he is not planning any work away from home until he finishes his plans for the summer's work in his own church.

METHODIST CHURCH

After being absent from his pulpit for two Sundays, the pastor will preach next Sunday at the 11 a. m. and 8:30 p. m. services. The young people will have a League program at 7:45 p. m. for the first time in several weeks.

Quarterly Conference

Dr. J. O. Haymes of Amarillo will hold our Third Quarterly Conference Tuesday evening, the 14th, at 8:30 o'clock. In addition to this routine business of the conference, a special item of business will be discussed and acted upon which will be of unusual interest to the whole community.

Vacation Church School

The Methodist Vacation Church School will begin at the church Tuesday, June 14th, at 9 a. m. We have been looking forward and planning this school for a long time. It will be the first time for our church to have its school alone, but in years past we have furnished the leadership of the union school and the bulk of the pupils were from our church school.

Mrs. Howard Ford, who directed the union school last summer, will be our director and will be assisted by nine of our own women as teachers. The sessions will begin at 9 o'clock each morning and run to 11:30 five days each week for two weeks. The school is open to all children up through intermediates, whether or not they attend our church school.

Several of the workers will attend an all-day gathering for teachers of children in Amarillo, Monday, where Miss Mary Skinner, Director of Children's Work for our denomination, will discuss the work of the Vacation Church School.

Miss Edith Brookfield at Assembly Miss Edith Brookfield of our church is attending the Young People's Assembly at McMurry College at Abilene, this week. We hope to have her speak on the Assembly at League Sunday evening.

R. H. KINSLEY QUITE ILL

R. H. Kinsley, one of Friona's pioneer and most highly respected citizens, was taken suddenly ill during the early part of Sunday night.

A physician was called and relief remedies rendered, but he continued to suffer intense pain for several hours before much relief came. He is still unable to be out, but is reported as improving.

D. K. Roberts, of the Oklahoma-Lane community, and one of the candidates for the office of County Judge, was a business visitor here Tuesday. Mr. Roberts is making an active and extensive campaign for the office to which he aspires, and is visiting the farmer voters of this part of the county this week.

IMPROVED HOTEL PREMISES

Clyde Seaman, owner of the Friona Hotel, has had a force of men employed for several days past, filling the old cess pool at the rear of the building, and installing an up-to-date septic tank to take care of the drainage of the building. The work has been completed.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Belew were Hereford visitors, Wednesday.

Misses Gladys Settle and Edith Oakley were Hereford visitors, on Tuesday afternoon.

ADULT HOMEMAKERS CLASS ORGANIZED

Helpful Hints to Homemakers From Adult Class

An Adult Class was organized on Monday, May 23rd. This class meets from 3:00 o'clock to 4:00 o'clock every afternoon at the high school building. The ladies have chosen as their subject "Clothing Construction."

We have had ten very interesting meetings and during this time the ladies have been working on "wash dresses."

Much interest has been shown in selection of material as to quality, design and color, and also some construction problems, such as bound button holes, plackets and set-in sleeves.

Roll call was answered by "Helpful Hints to Homemakers," by the ladies. Some interesting suggestions were: Salt water is excellent as a throat gargle; it is also an effective spray for catarrhal infections. Salt is wonderful tooth powder and aids greatly in making the gums firm. Salt used generously in the water will both cool and rest tired feet.

By Mrs. Rector. When the eye of a sewing needle is too small to be seen easily, one should try placing the needle over white paper or cloth. It is surprising to find how easy it is to thread the needle then.

By Mrs. Hamlin. The best way to remove tar from a dress is to put camphor on it before you wash it.

By Mrs. Baker. We are going to ask Miss Armstrong, the district supervisor of homemaking, to judge our dresses. The last meeting will be a social.

I wish to take this opportunity to thank the ladies who cooperated and helped make possible this project.

THE Y. W. A. REPORT

The Y. W. A. of the Friona Baptist Church, was organized last Tuesday. The officers elected were as follows: President, Virginia Turner; Vice President, Mattie Pay Coldiron; Secretary, Treasurer, Glenda Carter; Reporter, Edith Frost.

The girls have decided to give a different program each Tuesday as follows: 1st Tuesday—"Royal Service"; 2nd Tuesday—"Bible Study"; 3rd Tuesday—"Serving"; 4th Tuesday—"Missionary Study"; 5th Tuesday—"Social."

We hope to increase our membership for the service of our Lord. Mrs. H. T. Magness, Leader.

HAS ORDERED HOPPER POISON

County Agent Jason O. Gordon, of Farwell, was in Friona Monday and paid the Star office a short social visit which was much appreciated by the editor.

Mr. Gordon stated that he has ordered a car load of grasshopper poison, which he expects to arrive at Friona at any time, and when it arrives, any farmers who wish to scatter it on their fields may be supplied with such amounts as they may need, by seeing him about it. Mr. Gordon stated that the hepper menace may not reach Parmer county, but that it is good judgment to play safe in the event they should come, and for future years.

HONORED WITH FAREWELL SHOWER

A group of ladies of the community, neighbors and friends of Mrs. John Chronister, gathered at her home in the north part of town unannounced on Wednesday afternoon and surprised her with a miscellaneous farewell shower.

Miss Melzia Chronister, who lives with her mother and who has been employed with the Friona Wheat Growers Inc. for the past year, has been given a position with the Texas Wheat Growers Association at Amarillo, and she and her mother will move to Amarillo the latter part of this week, and the shower and the party was given by ladies as a mark of esteem for the honoree.

Refreshments were served by the ladies and games were engaged in, all of which added enjoyment to the occasion, which was heartily enjoyed by both the honoree and the guests.

Miss Reba Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Michell, departed for Canyon, Monday, where she has a position as assistant in the college library during the summer. She taught during the past term in the Hale Center schools.

A Minute With CHARLEY DEE

WARS AND KIDNAPERS

During the past seven years there have been seven major kidnappings in the United States. The peace-loving, law-abiding citizens of our country and of the world are righteously indignant at such merciless acts being done by conscienceless persons. Our government is putting forth every effort to find the beastly fellows and bring them to justice.

The person (I started to say "man" but he has lost his right to be called a man) who takes an innocent child and demands a ransom from frantic parents and then refuses to live up to his promise after the ransom has been paid represents the lowest type of total depravity. We try in vain to imagine what state of mind and heart a person is in who could perpetrate such a shameful crime on innocent children and guiltless loving parents. If any class of men have passed redemption, it is the murderous kidnapers.

I say this because it is fresh on my mind and my indignation is running high. No doubt you feel the same way. Within the last few months two children have been taken from parents and killed; we know one of them has been brutally mutilated. Every age has its heartless outlaws and every age has had law-abiding men who have tried to prevent lawlessness. We should be very much on the alert now to try to stem this tide of crime, especially these hideous, inhuman kidnappings. Our homes, our schools, and our churches have the responsibility and the privilege of creating strong public opinion against such.

Yes, a depraved individual is a sorry sight. But a depraved nation is a worse sight. What is to come to a nation which goes into another country and drops deathly bombs on the homes of innocent civilians, killing women and children by the thousands? The awfulness of this kind of a thing perhaps has not dawned upon you as forcefully as it has upon me. As long as these things happen across the Pacific from us and happen to people who are so different from us, we do not think just what it means, perhaps. But when we begin to try to put ourselves in their place, then we begin to realize that such conduct is outrageous and ungodly to the nth degree. It so happens that one of the best friends I have in the world is a Chinese young fellow, Kwok Bok-On. It is easier for me to realize what is being done to the innocent Chinese civilians because of my acquaintance with Mr. Kwok and other Chinese. I know they have feelings very similar to ours. They have the same love for their people and would feel the same grief at having their homes wrecked or their friends and relatives killed. I have thought more about this during the past several days because Canton, China, is being bombed by the Japanese. Canton is the home of Mr. Kwok's people. I do not know but that some of them have been struck by a merciless bomb mercilessly directed upon the residential section of the city.

We thought for a while that the world was growing a conscience and that we were going to learn to be a big peaceful universe. But there has been a recession of idealism. Never before have the minds of men been so perplexed as to what can be done to stop wars and protect innocent people and nations. The other day I heard a young fellow say that there was no use in saying anything against war and the present acts of nations in their aggressiveness, that there was bound to be another world war, anyway, and that the war would teach nations that it is foolish to try to settle things by fighting. He evidently had never studied his history or he would know that we thought we were fighting the last great war to end wars and to put an end to autocracy. We accomplished neither end. Autocracy is still in the world, in an uglier form than ever. Wars still rock the world. We learn but we soon forget. Another war would bring no better results than have the wars of the past.

I am strongly and sincerely against the atrocities being perpetrated by Japan and the Fascist nations, but I am also against our getting involved in the clash of merciless steel.

Miss Lola Goodwine, who is employed at Pampa, came home on Thursday of last week and remained until Sunday evening, visiting her mother, sister and brother, Mrs. Minnie Goodwine, and Miss Floy and Clyde Goodwine.

The mother of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Belew fell from a see-saw one day last week and fractured his collar bone. He is reported as improving.

And while she was toying nervously with her quill, her husband and young Pedro were sitting astride their horses in Don Pedro's beloved orchard.

The trees were full of Indians, gathering the luscious fruit that hung in rich clusters, bright in the autumn sunshine; early pears and apples, late peaches and pomegranates. Little naked boys, pajaderos, ran through the orchard with rattles and miniature bows and arrows, frightening away the clouds of birds that had assembled to steal the ripe fruit.

As fast as the fruit was picked, it was loaded into panniers on mules, and carried to the shore, where boats were piled high and oared to the Astrolabe and the Boussole, a princely offering from the Spanish Governor to the expedition of the Count de La Perouse.

The Governor and his son watched the scene with pleasure. The movement and life, the color, and the clamor of many voices was pleasant to them. They looked at each other and smiled, completely at harmony together.

An Indian passed them carrying a basket strapped to his back, and supported from his brow with thongs. It was filled to the rim with purple grapes. The Governor stopped him, and made a note on a list he carried in his hand.

"Twenty baskets of grapes," he said. "Hum," to the Indian, "that will be enough grapes. No more today. Vayase." The Indian plodded on.

"Yes," continued the Governor, following the basket of grapes with his eyes, "that will have to be enough. We must have enough left for the vintage. But I have already sent them barrels of wine, so I do not think I am selfish. Do you?"

"Pues, no!" cried the boy. "And too, we would not have any grapes for the fiesta, the vendimia. And we must have, mustn't we? And won't it be soon?"

"Yes, I think it will be soon. Yes, we must have a great fiesta this year . . . just for ourselves. It has been nice to have the Franceses here, but it will be nice to have a party just for ourselves. I think there is a little bull that is ready to meet a torero, and there is another that will make a barbecue. And we will have some horse-races, and some cock-fights, and some of the Indian boys will wrestle, and there will be music and dancing. Al de mi, what a vendimia it will be!"

"And Mother will sit on a throne with grapes and leaves on her head for a crown, and be queen of the fiesta!"

"Yes, yes, and again yes! Look, who comes?"

It was an Indian messenger from the camp of La Perouse, asking that they hurry down to the beach to see something.

As they reached the beach, they could see a cloud of smoke, and a strange activity going on. On coming closer they discovered La Gobernadora with Angustias, and almost all of the people of the presidio, who had evidently been summoned hastily by a messenger from La Perouse.

The Frenchman came hurrying to Pedro Fages.

"I had a thought at the last minute," he said hurriedly. "You have been so wonderful to me, all of your people have, that I wanted to give an occasion special for you. We are to have a balloon ascension!"

"Balloon ascension!" exclaimed the Governor. "I have heard of balloons but never seen one."

"Regard, then," said La Perouse dramatically, "there is a balloon which was given us to take on our voyage around the world. Why, I do not know, unless it was to impress people around the globe that Frenchmen now make balloons! What good they can ever be, I can not see, but they say some day they will be made strong enough to carry men."

"There will never be one strong enough to carry me!" laughed Fages. He and young Pedro dismounted and hurried on foot after La Perouse to where the great muslin bag was slowly filling with smoke, its rounding sides showing strange designs and pictures.

"We have had it up once before on this trip," explained La Perouse. "That was in Lima. I hope it will ascend now!" he said anxiously.

And at last it did. Slowly it staggered into the air.

Everyone regarded it with amazement. Some of the Indians muttered, and several old women prostrated themselves on the ground. Accompanied with a chorus of incredulous ejaculations it rose the full length of the cord that tethered it, then, as a fresh late afternoon breeze puffed in from the sea and threatened, it was brought down again.

"Por Dios!" exclaimed the Governor of California, greatly pleased and amazed. "Mil gracias to you, Senor el Conde, for such a miracle! A balloon raised from the shore of California! It will never happen again, and will be something to remember all our lives."

"And it will be something for me to remember all my life, that I have visited your California. More, I can not say. And now . . ."

"And now," replied the Governor with a slight formality which he assumed to cover his real feelings, "and now, my friend, I suppose the time has come for us to say, as you French put it, adieu!"

"Your Spanish word, adios, is the same, Monsieur le Gouverneur. Both speed the parting guest in the care of God."

"Yes, we must say those words. For we must not hinder your departure with our curiosity, and there are things I must attend to at the presidio. But be sure, Senor el Conde, that at whatever hour you sail we shall be here on shore, watching you as far as we can see. And wherever you shall sail, you will be in our hearts. Thank you for visiting us."

The two men gripped hands. La Perouse was frankly moved.

"Thank you for everything. The friendliness, the courtesy, the hospitality and your gifts of fruit and wine. We will appreciate those, surely. And even for the goat and the chickens, and . . . Mon Dieu!

"Certainly, Your Excellency," she said at last.

I can not say more. My feelings . . . pardonnez moi . . ."

He turned to Eulalia, who was standing quietly beside her husband, her eyes on Dagelet.

"And, to you ma Reine de Californie, my respects for your fortitude and loyalty in being such a wonderful woman in the midst of such a remote country."

Eulalia's lips moved, but her remarks were inaudible as the Count kissed her hand. There were other farewells, then the Governor, followed by his soldiers and Indian bearers, his wife on one hand and his son at the other, moved away from the camp on the beach.

As they rode the Governor and his wife were each very silent, busy with their own thoughts. Young Pedro prattled beside them.

The Count had given him a silver medal which had been struck off by the French Government to commemorate the great expedition of La Perouse around the world. On one side was an effigy of Louis XVI, and on the other two olive branches tied with a ribbon, and a scroll which read:

"Les fregates du roi de France, la Boussole et l'Astrolabe, commandees par Mm. de la Perouse le de Langle, parties du prt de Brest, en Juin 1785."

The child rapturously polished the bright coin on his jacket, and asked his mother to translate it for him. She did, lifelessly.

The Governor sighed and spoke. "At dawn, on the tide, they sail for all the seven seas. And I," he chuckled suddenly, "I will escort you home, my Lady, then ride over to the Mission Carmelo to talk with Fray Lasuen about this new Mission Santa Barbara. For that is the next great thing to happen to our California."

"Ah! So you will not be home this evening?"

"No, my love. I shall sup with the good fathers, but will return early. You will pardon me?"

For a long moment she looked at him intently, then gazed straight ahead.

"Certainly, your Excellency," she said at last. When at the great gate to the presidio young Pedro elected to go with his father, she seemed in a strange mood.

"Go with your father, my son," she said, "but kiss me adios." The boy looked startled, but pecked his mother hurriedly on the cheek.

Eulalia watched them until their figures and that of the servant who followed were lost around a curving hill.

Then she spurred her horse and rode rapidly across the parade-ground to the palacio.

Late that evening, the Count de La Perouse, working with some of his scientists in their rude laboratory on the beach, was amazed when an attendant told him that a woman, with a baby in her arms, wished to see him.

And when the companion of La Gobernadora strode in, unabashed, he was still more surprised. With no preamble she told her story.

"And here he is," she said finally. "My baby, my Chichi. You will take him, will you not, where he will be well, and live?"

"But of course, Madame!" exclaimed the Frenchman, his eyes bright with amusement. "I will see that he has the best of care, and I will lose him in the most beautiful jungle I can find, I assure you."

He was astounded to see the woman's harsh face begin working with emotion. "Here," she squeaked, "here is a little bundle of clothes I made him. He has needed them here where it has been cold, and perhaps he will need them again before he reaches his jungle. See," she explained, holding out a tiny pair of trousers, and poking her finger through a hole, "see his dear little tail goes through here."

La Perouse had taken the monkey in his arms, but Angustias reached for him, strained him passionately to her breast. The little animal put out a tiny paw and stroked her face with queer little noises. She held him away from her, and stared into the worried human eyes, then thrust him back at the startled Frenchman.

"Take him quickly," she gasped. "Be good to him . . . he is my all . . . my baby."

Before La Perouse could say another word she stumbled out of the tent into the dark.

"Nom du nom de Dieu singe!" roared La Perouse. "Here, Dagelet, you seem moony and unoccupied. I give you this animal to keep in your charge, and to watch and ward, and put his dear little tail through the hole in his pantaloons until we land on a tropical isle! Mon Dieu, quelle femme!"

Dagelet picked up the monkey dolefully.

"And you think I have nothing to do!" he muttered. He walked away from the tent, carrying the monkey and his bundle of clothes to a spot where a boat was moored, and an oarsman sat as though waiting for someone.

"Take this," barked Dagelet. "I will return."

Angustias, blinded with her tears, staggered through the sand until she reached firmer ground, then she made her way toward the presidio, sobbing and talking to herself.

"Chichi, my baby," she grieved, holding her empty arms to her breast, "my baby, my baby."

When she was quite near the presidio gate she noticed a figure moving hurriedly in the direction of the beach. It seemed to be the figure of a woman. Angustias slipped behind a tree and watched. The woman came closer and Angustias could see a large bundle balanced on her head. Every few feet she turned around and looked back toward the presidio.

"Indizuela!" gasped Angustias. "What is she doing? Ah, the vixen, she is running away with some French sailor, I'll be bound. Well, we can't have that. I've always had my suspicions of that one. Que la doncella honrada la vierna quebrada y en casa (The virtuous maid and the broken leg must stay at home)," she muttered. She took a few steps toward the girl, then stopped. If the hussy was intent on joining some French lover, she would use violence rather than let Angustias stop her, she reflected. She needed a man to help her. As she hesitated, her eye still on the flying girl who was zigzagging through the sand, she heard the sound of horses. She ran toward them as they came in view. Then she saw it was the Governor.

She stopped. She must not let him see her. She had disobeyed him. He would reprimand her, she, Angustias, whom he had always called "a good soldier." She started to step behind her tree again, but was too late. The Governor had seen her. So she took matters in her own hands and ran toward him.

"Your Excellency!" she gasped, "look, see that woman running toward the beach! With the bundle on her head! It is Indizuela! She is running away to join some French lover on the ships."

Pedro Fages looked after the figure that Angustias pointed out. She did indeed seem to be fleeing, her erratic course took her now from one tree to another, and she was avoiding the open spaces.

"Very well, Angustias, you return with Pedro to the mansion. I will attend to this. Go with them," he ordered the servant.

He spurred his horse lightly and cantered toward the girl. As he drew near he saw she had staggered and dropped the great bundle from her head. She was leaning over it, sobbing with exertion when he caught up with her.

As he jumped from his horse, she turned away from him, and tried to cover her face with the rebozo that swathed her head.

Fages spoke very gently. "Mi chiquita," he said, "my poor little one. Why are you running away from us all, and from your home, and those who are concerned in your welfare? Did you not say you loved the Governor, and were grateful for all he had done for you? And now you run away, Indizuela!"

The girl suddenly became dynamic. She straightened and faced the Governor boldly, tearing the rebozo from her head.

"So!" she screamed. "It is Indizuela you love, is it! Indizuela whom you follow after in the starlight! Indizuela, is it! Indizuela!"

Pedro Fages put his hand to his beard, then brushed his eyes as though he doubted his sight.

"Eulalia!" he said. "Eulalia! You were running away."

She stooped over her bundle and tugged at it. "Of course I am running away. And you can not stop me. Indizuela is not leaving you," she panted, "so you will be happy." She lifted the bundle and staggered a few steps.

Don Pedro watched her as though he were viewing an incident in a dream, with drugged senses that could not react.

"I am leaving everything behind that you love," she said through her teeth, "the children, Indizuela and your California. For ever!"

Then he strode to her side and wrested her burden from her.

"Come," he said sternly, "no nonsense."

She struggled with him.

"No!" wildly. "No! Let me go! You can not hold me here any longer! Let me . . ."

But he slung the bundle over his shoulder, and taking her around the shoulders that writhed and tried to slip from his grasp, he put one hand firmly over her mouth, and tried to move her toward the horse.

She dug her heels in the sand, he could feel her maledictions and imprecations sputtering against his hand.

WHEN Irene Dunne was in New York recently she had what might have been an embarrassing experience. She lunched alone in a smart restaurant, and when it came time to pay the check she discovered, to her horror, that she hadn't enough money.

She appealed to the manager, asking him if he would cash a check for the amount. He assured her that he would. So she wrote the check—and he promptly framed it. Just one more case where a well known face was worth a fortune!

Kay Francis is looking forward to September, when her current motion picture contract expires. She is going off for a long vacation in Europe. And nobody can blame her for wanting to be rid of the movies for a while, at least. Bad pictures have affected her box-office value, but when she fought for roles that she knew would be good, she didn't get them. Now that theatrical producers go to Hollywood when they want to cast new plays, it may be that she will return to the stage when that vacation is over.

KAY FRANCIS

Here's an odd note on the old stage-screen battle. "Stage Door" was a very successful play. The movies bought it and made it over—threw away the story and started from scratch. Now some of the summer stock companies would like to do the stage version, but one of the authors, Edna Ferber, won't release it to them—because she feels that the film version was so much better than the original!

Next time you see a cobweb on the screen think of the man who is Hollywood's expert cobweb-maker, Jess Wolf. His most recent assignment was constructing more than two miles of cobwebs for a castle in Warner Brothers' "Kidnaped." He has a gadget that squirts a rubber compound in a tiny thread. Then he weaves the threads into a cobweb pattern, and sprays them with gray paint.

Kay Kyser with his College of Musical Knowledge has a grand program with a really new idea. Kyser's from the Middle West, where a great deal of the talent seems to come from these days. Remember him on Wednesday nights.

W. C. Fields, who's out of movies for the time being, may return to the radio program which he deserted months ago. He left then because of a disagreement over scripts. The same reason was given for his movie contract's being terminated. Meanwhile Charlie McCarthy has become so popular on that radio program that one can't help wondering if there is a place for Fields.

It's becoming more and more evident that radio programs coming from cities and stations outside New York are better than a lot of those broadcast from the big city. One reason is that fast-talking agents can sell talent that isn't really very good. Questioned not long ago about the success of a certain singer her agent broke down and confessed all—told about how she had been built up, pushed ahead; how he landed this contract and then that one for her. Now she's one of radio celebrities, drawing a huge salary for her work on a well-known program. And a lot of girls who sing on local broadcasts made in smaller stations are ever so much better.

ODDS AND ENDS—Phil Baker has another daughter; that makes two daughters and two sons . . . Claudette Colbert spent just an hour in New York after arriving from Europe and before leaving for Hollywood . . . Irene Rich's radio sponsor has agreed to let her play Desdemona Durbin's mother in "That Certain Age" on the screen . . . Luise Rainer didn't want to play a leading role in "The Great Waltz" until the company showed her Francis Ford's tests in the part—which was a little hard on Francis.

What's in a Name?

IT WAS the ideal, the romantic setting; a garden, the man, the girl, the harvest moon of August—what more could one want?

"You know, it's queer, but my favorite name has always been Sally, and you are my favorite girl. It sort of goes together."

"Really?" Then shyly: "Yes, it does fit. My favorite name has always been Jack. It does seem as though, when two people find they like each other's name best, that they fall in love, and—"

"Get engaged. It is strange. I never proposed under the same circumstances before."

Sally looked annoyed. "No, I never accepted anyone in such case, either. But, of course, this one is very, very different, Jack."

"Very different, Sally, dear, and we have only a week left," sighed Jack, and made the most of his opportunity.

The week passed in a flash, as weeks do when one wants them to linger.

"Isn't it darling?" said Sally to Myra one day as a sort of introduction to the more important fact. "Jack Woods told me his favorite name was Sally."

"Hum." Myra gave a little skeptical sneer. "That sounds like him. Last year he told Marion that he thought her name was the prettiest in the world, and two years ago he told me Myra was his favorite name. If you think that is darling—"

Sally smiled bravely. "Aren't people funny?"

While this conversation was taking place, Jack was trying to decide whether or not to tell Bob White the glad news.

"Funny thing," he remarked. "Sally told me she thought that Jack was the nicest name that—"

"What!" yelled Bob. "She sprang that on you, too? Say, not so long ago she told me Robert was her ideal name. And she's told Bill Graham and Larry March the same thing, too. It's about time she got a new line to spring; this one's old."

That night Jack and Sally met again in the garden.

"I suppose we'd better say our fond farewells, now, since I leave early in the morning, before respectable young ladies like you are up."

"Yes," said Sally quietly. "We've certainly had an awfully good time playing 'round, haven't we? It's been jolly good fun having you here. Only I wish you hadn't had so many 'favorite' names."

"What are you talking about? You were rather generous with them yourself."

"Good-by, Jack," in a small voice. "But—good-by, Sally." And they parted.

Six months later as Sally, who had been doing a lot of thinking about Jack lately, rushed around a windy corner, she bumped into a young man hurrying in the opposite direction. It was Jack.

"Sally! How are you? Gee, but it's good to see you again."

"Why, Jack, what are you doing here? I thought you were miles away."

"I was, but, you see, I came to see the girl whose name I like best."

"Really? Who is she this time?" Jack had the grace to blush. "You, of course. What's your favorite name now?"

"Honestly, it's Stewart, and the only Stewart I know of is Uncle Stewart, a grouchy old crab."

They both laughed. "Mine," said Jack, "is Jane, but the only Jane I ever met was a funny old washwoman. Sally, I really love you, you know. Do you care?"

"Of course," was the happy reply.

Many people going by wondered why those two young folks didn't do their lovemaking in the house rather than on a windy corner. Perhaps if they had read the marriage intentions the next morning they would have understood.

Colors of Planets

The smaller planets, Mercury, Venus and Mars, are believed to have a solid surface composed of rocks very similar to those of the earth. Mercury is stated by some observers to have no perceptible supply of water, but the two other planets have water and ice on parts of their surface. The larger planets, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune, are not solid but appear as balls of cloud, which may have solid or liquid nuclei. The ruddy color of Mars to the observer is due to the red surface of much of that planet, but there are also dark markings which show a seasonal variation in color. The planet Pluto also has an apparent redness, suggesting a thin atmosphere and a surface of low reflecting power. Venus has a silvery brilliance, while Mercury is more inclined to redness; Saturn is yellowish, Uranus pale green and Jupiter shows a variety of colors, with reddish ones conspicuous.

Future Japanese Soldiers Early Learn to Hope "to Die for Beloved Emperor"

You cannot assess the Japanese army numerically.

Japanese officers have often protested to me with a smile that the Japanese soldier is not a whit superior mentally, morally or physically to the soldier of the West. Yet they insist that he is, in fact, "a better soldier," because, unlike other soldiers, he courts death as his greatest honor, writes Willard Price in the London Spectator.

The training of men who will go to their doom with the unswerving directness of robots is a weird and unworldly process.

It begins 2,000 years before the soldier is born. Bushido has taught the Japanese race to think well of itself, and the Japanese individual to regard himself as nothing but the dirt to be ground under the chariot wheels of the progress of his race. The One must give himself for the All.

What better racial tradition could there be for the making of die-easy soldiers?

Active military training begins at the age of six. Boys in the first year of primary school are taught to march, drill, do the goose-step, sing war songs and marshal platoons of wooden soldiers.

"Morals" is a required subject in every primary and middle school. From six to seventeen the future soldier is drilled, not in morals as we would understand the subject, but in "Morals" with an imperial M—loyalty to the immediate family, the larger family which is called the nation, and the emperor who is the father of all.

This goes on until many students when asked "What is your dearest wish?" will sincerely enough set down this answer: "To die for my beloved emperor."

The Early Jazz Bands

By 1915 there were bands in New Orleans playing what was first known as jazz. Late that year Joseph Gorham discovered and took to Chicago one of these which achieved fame there as Brown's Band from Dixieland. Bert Kelly, another manager, in the same year bestowed the name jazz bands on his numerous orchestras. In 1916 Brown's Band invaded New York. In 1917 the Dixieland Jazz Band from New Orleans made a phonograph record of the "Livery Stable Blues" and Jim Europe, a Negro entertainer, as ab A. E. F. bandmaster, introduced it to Europe.

SUMMER SAVAGES

A Senator's daughter, Marjorie Nye of Cooperstown, N. D., was a "pillow puncher." So was Marjorie Thacker (right) of Minneapolis. They lived in the girls' dormitory, "Sleepy Hollow," and maintained cabins at one of Yellowstone's six camping centers. The government fee for visitors is $3 per car. Additional costs, regulated by the government, depend on accommodations.

TO UNCLE SAM, its proprietor, Yellowstone National Park is so many acres of woodland. But to last year's 499,242 visitors the park is also remembered for its 1,500 "savages," mostly college students who spend their vacations serving park guests. Many come from prominent families. Savages are notorious for their colorful vocabulary. To them visitors arriving in busses (driven by "gear-jammers") are "dudes," while campers are "sage-brushers." Dishwashers become "pearl-divers." Laundresses are "bubble queens" and a howling baby is a "lap organ." Most versatile of Yellowstone's savages is the "packrat" who does everything from wheeling grips in a "mollie" (baggage cart) to lighting cabin fires with "dope."

Agnes Midgley of Salt Lake City worked as "heaver" (waitress) last summer. She was one of 1,500 savages chosen from among thousands of applications. Workers arrive by June 15 each year, promptly forgetting that last week they were football captains or campus queens. Overnight they awaken winter-weary hotels, cabins and cafeterias. But the park has been open for several weeks.

Yellowstone offers romance for savages in "rotten logging" as illustrated by a university of Montana collegian and Miss Carol Dean of North Dakota university. Savages also enjoy fishing, mountain climbing and group activities.

College science instructors, like Neil Miner (left) show tourists the park and are called "90-day wonders." At right is William Kearns, assistant park naturalist. A small staff of rangers and naturalists is maintained all year.

A typical smiling "pack rat" who lives in the "rat's nest" (men's dormitory) was Dale Farringer of North Dakota university. But the most authentic type of savage is illustrated by Archie Martin, Yellowstone's head wrangler in charge of saddle trips for dudes. Some "dude" riders ask him for saddles without the horn (Western type) because they "don't expect much traffic."

AROUND THE HOUSE

Protecting Hat Band.—A strip of cellophane, folded and placed under the inside hat band, will prevent perspiration and oil from staining the outside ribbon or band.

Sparing the Tablecloth.—Use white waxed paper under the child's tray on table. The paper saves the tablecloth and is barely noticeable.

To Stiffen Meringue.—A generous pinch of soda added to the egg whites before they are beaten will make meringue stand up better.

When Tying Bundles.—Twine used in tying bundles should always be dampened. It will tie much tighter and will not slip when knots are made.

Improving Meat Flavor.—The flavor of boiled ham, salt beef or tongue which is to be served cold is much improved if meat is left in the water in which it was boiled until it is cold.

For Light Muffins.—When making muffins in iron pans, grease the pans and heat them in the oven before putting the batter in. Your muffins will then be much lighter.

Dog Man's Friend, but—

No one likes to quarrel with the statement that the dog is man's best friend. In fact, we all like to believe it without question. But neighborhood dogs that insist on staining prized ornamental evergreens and shrubbery certainly do put a heavy strain on friendship.

Home owners have faced this problem sadly, angrily and ineffectually—until recently a very simple solution came to light.

All that you do is spray the lower branches of your evergreens and shrubs with a little nicotine sulphate mixed in water. It's harmless to plants—harmless to the dogs—and brings a tremendous relief to frayed tempers. You see, the desired result comes because dogs do not like the nicotine sulphate odor and give a wide berth to any spot where that odor is found.

Men can never understand a three-quarter wife—a wife who is lovable for three weeks of the month—but a hell-out the fourth. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure. Make a note NOW to get a bottle of Pinkham's today WITHOUT FAIL from your druggist—more than a million women have written in letters reporting benefit. Why not try LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND?

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

JODOK
heard of the "doodle" bug doing any harm to anything or anybody, and they seemed to agree with me on that point.

But one of the men did not seem quite satisfied with the discussion or conversation about the various bugs, and he churped in with the expression that, in his opinion, a lot of the "small-fry" state and federal politicians, as well as some of the "higher-ups" may be attacked by "tumble bugs" sooner or later. I would mention his name, but I am afraid it would embarrass him, and I do not intentionally do anything to embarrass any of my friends.

And here is something else that I heard some parties talking about. It appears that there is a man who goes to the Star office every Friday for a copy of the Star, and as I understood the conversation, when the man went for a copy of the paper last Friday morning, Uncle John handed him one, and a bystander made some remark about there being some good reading matter in it; and the man said, one does not need to read it to know what is in it—just smell of it.

Now it occurs to me that anyone who has ever worked about a "bull pen" would know exactly what the man meant by this remark, and one fellow said he thought "Uncle John" could not be blamed if, when the man comes for a paper next Friday, he should tell him just to take a good smell of it and go on and leave the paper there.

But I do not believe "Uncle John" will tell him any such-a-thing; but he had better watch Roy and Sherd and George, if he does not want something like that to happen.

A warning to the nations whose governments have been conceived largely in selfish ambition and brought forth by human force, was issued at Boston on June 6th at the annual meeting of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, the Mother Church, by the Christian Science Board of Directors, who declared the lessons of history show such governing bodies to be of few years and full of trouble.

I cannot conceive that such a definition will apply to the United States form of government, and therefore such a warning cannot apply to our government, unless my powers of conception are faulty. But I hear on the street corners and read in the papers that a great change in our heretofore form of government is now quite apparent and imminent, and may become our heritage in no distant future. May such a change never come and all such surmises prove to be falacies, is my hope.

But, there is another thing about this race for governor, and that is, that I have read of a man, who claims to have a name very similar to that of Ernest O. Thompson, and although he has filed his application as a candidate for governor, he has heretofore, been a practically unknown person in the State of Texas, and I therefore, cannot conceive of any motive he may have in becoming a candidate for this high office, except as a kind of stumbling block for those citizens who intend to vote for Col. O. E. Thompson, for I have had enough experience with elections to know that there will be hosts of voters that will be so confused and will vote for this man when they intend to, and think they are, voting for Col. Thompson. And if such is the motive, I can candidly say that I have no use whatever for such subterfuge or chicanery, nor any man who resorts to such practices, even in politics; and that is chiefly why I shall never vote for Ernest O. Thompson, nor Mr. Cowler, for I place the practices of each, as I understand them and believe them to be, in the same category.

Lawrence Lillard was in town Monday afternoon and was telling me about the Parmer County Rifle Club beginning its regular shoots for this season, over at its rifle range at Bovina. I have always liked to shoot, but never had the opportunity to do much of it, especially in the manner and for the purpose of improving my marksmanship, and it occurs to me that such practice would be great sport.

Now, I do not know either of the candidates referred to above, and I have formed the opinions herein expressed simply from what I have heard on the streets or read in the papers and from the franked literature.

My Philosophy

Jest all get up and go for him!

HEAVY RAIN AND HAIL

Reports have reached the Star office to the effect that one of the heaviest rainfalls for many months fell over the south part of Deaf Smith and the north part of Parmer counties Tuesday night.

Three inches of rain fall is reported to have fallen within a very short time and the Terra Blanca Draw was reported flooded to the extent that the water was flowing nearly five feet deep over the bridge crossing the draw north of Friona.

A heavy fall of hail is also reported to have accompanied the rain in some parts of the territory covered by the storm, and many of the crops in the Rhea community are reported to have been entirely destroyed by the hail. C. W. Dixon, of the Rhea community, is among those who are reported to have lost their entire crop by the hail.

INSTALLING AIR CONDITIONING EQUIPMENT

J. R. Roden, proprietor of the City Drug Store, has been quite busy a part of this week, with a crew of helpers, installing an air conditioning equipment in his drug store.

Mr. Roden has had one of the best heating devices in his store during the past winter, to be found anywhere, and with the completion of the installation of this air conditioning device for the summer months, he will have one of the most comfortable business rooms, as well as one of the most up-to-date drug stores in the Panhandle. He is deserving of compliment for his progressive enterprise.

Mrs. Ralph Miller and son, R. V., and daughter, Joyce, returned this week from a visit with relatives at Norman, Oklahoma.

Miss Othelia Hart departed Sunday for Floydada, where she will visit relatives for a while.

Mrs. Amburn, of Floydada, arrived here Sunday for a short visit with her daughter, Mrs. Leon Hart.

IT MAY BE NEWS

A representative of the Star came upon W. J. Thompson and some other man, Wednesday afternoon, busily engaged at repairing a large caterpillar tractor, and W. J. accosted us with the remark that if we were looking for news, we had it right there.

Upon our inquiry as to what the news might be, he replied—"You have caught me at work."

Short Course at College Station. Mrs. Crim is being sent by the council and Mrs. Wiley by the club.

The club quilt is to be given away Friday night, June 10 at the school house.

There were eight members present and two visitors, Mesdames Luther Hollis and Marvin Mason.

FRIONA WEATHER

The weather at Friona for the past two or three weeks has been such that it should in part satisfy the whims of the most critical, it ranging from dry and windy to moist and quiet, and from almost excessively warm to a degree low enough to be almost uncomfortable.

Several showers have fallen over and around the immediate vicinity of Friona to the extent that in most places sufficient moisture has fallen, to afford a very satisfactory condition for crop planting, while in some localities heavy rains have fallen and in others only light showers or none at all.

We have had at least three light winters during the past week and a half, lasting from a few hours to a day in length, which have been separated by as many short summers or springtime seasons. But altogether there has been little of which to complain except in those localities where not enough rain has fallen to insure good farming conditions. At this writing—Wednesday afternoon—it has become very much like real summertime.

The Buchanan Improvement Company sold two new tractors this week. One each to Ervin Johnson and Gordon Massee.

Paul Spring, who has been attending college at Lubbock during the past winter and spring, has returned home for the summer vacation.

The GREAT LAND AND MONEY SAVERS

PLOWING AND SEEDING IN ONE OPERATION

Equipped with a Monitor seeding attachment shown above. Your Moline Wheatland plow does the plowing, seeding and harrowing in one trip over the field. . . . A big saving where grain prices are low. This once-over outfit prepares a good seed bed, does an excellent job of drilling or broadcasting, and all in a shorter time and at less expense. Stop in and get all the facts.

Cut your plowing costs in half with the original M-M big disc Wheatland plow—because of its wide cut and light draft in comparison with any moldboard plow. The Moline does a better job of plowing, from 3 to 9 inches deep. It scours well and is remarkably free from clogging with its big 26-inch discs, spaced 10 inches apart. The plowing job compares favorably with a moldboard plowed field that has been nicely harrowed.

Prepares an ideal seed bed for small grain—BECAUSE it mixes trash and stubble with the soil in such a way that there are no air pockets, and there is good capillary action between subsoil and seed bed.

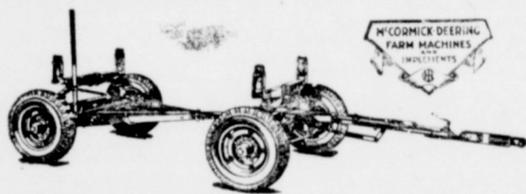

The Moline Wheatland disc plow is strong, sturdy and rigid, built entirely of strong steel bar angles and castings. Farmers say it "can't wear out or give." Other important points also make it the outstanding plow of its kind on the market today.

Come in and get free literature and complete facts. Let us show you how it cuts your plowing bill. The Moline Wheatland is also ideal for summer fallowing . . . gets the weeds and moves all the ground.

MISSIONARY FROM AFRICA VISITS FRIONA

Missionary Reece, from South Africa, his son, Boyd Reece, and his niece, Helen Pearl Scott, gave a very interesting lecture last Friday night, June 3rd, at the Sixth Street Church of Christ, giving a brief outline of their work at Sinda Mission, where they have been for the past nine years.

The church owns several hundred acres there and has schools on a part of the tract, and also uses a portion of it for farming. They have three Bible lessons each day in school and are also teaching the natives how to farm. We have several natives in the field preaching the gospel now.

The Reece's and Helen Pearl are here for two years—Helen Pearl and Boyd studying foreign languages in Abilene, Texas, Christian College, preparing to return to Africa in 1939 to complete the translation of the Bible into the African language, which they began last year and have four books of the New Testament completed now.

HE WAS NO GENTLEMAN

An Irish fireman, at a big blaze in Dublin, managed to climb into a burning bedroom at the top of the building and bring out a woman from the flames. When he was half way down the ladder, says Answers Magazine, he lost his hold and fell heavily to the ground with the woman on top of him.

A doctor rushed up, but found that no damage had been done. "You're a brave man, Pat," said the doctor, shaking him by the hand.

The Irishman rubbed his injuries. "Begorra, Oi may be that, but Oi'm no gentleman, or Oi'd have let the lady go first!"

Henpecked gave a superior smile. "I tell you you didn't," he replied. "It was my wife's coat!"

Why Not?

"Ye've made a mistake. I'm no' Dr. McGregor."
"No? Well then you must have a double."
"Thank you, I will that!" was the reply.

A crocheted rag rug like the one shown here uses odds and ends. Wool rags make a nicer rug than cotton, or rug yarn may be substituted if desired. Either a wood or large steel crochet hook is used. The rug shown here measures 36 by 21 inches. The 5-inch squares are made separately in single crochet stitch and then joined with crochet slip-stitch. If rags are used, tear or cut the strips not more than 1¼ inches wide, and work with the raw edges turned in as shown here at A. Measure each square carefully so they will all be exactly the same size. Full instructions for slip covers for side chairs like the one shown are in the book offered below.

DIZZY DRAMAS

By Joe Bowers

Now Playing—"PLANS"

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

CZECHOSLOVAKIA and all that may hang on its destiny is just an added starter in the up-and-coming cosmos of A. W. Robertson, chairman of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing company.

It is the always assured and hopeful Mr. Robertson who announces his company will spend $12,000,000 on additions and betterments this year, and, from where Mr. Robertson sits, that's just a couple of white chips compared to spendings to come.

Mr. Robertson is the H. G. Wells of industry. His "shape of things to come," which he has been outlining for the last year or two, includes the following specifications:

Migratory humans, shifting north and south like the birds. "Just whether the children will be born in the North or the South," he said, "is not quite clear to me, but I expect we will follow the policy of the birds and have the children in the North."

Windowless houses, pasteurized air, and artificial sunlight. One-man planes, with folding wings, kept in the hall rack, with the umbrellas.

Pocket radios for two-way talk with anybody, anywhere.

Noiseless cities with double-deck streets.

Flat houses, with a push-button crane which will park the auto on the roof.

He was a farm and village boy at Panama, New York, chore boy and rustler in his youth and hence not through grammar school until he was seventeen. Then he studied law in a country office, entered practice, got corporations for clients and then began owning and operating them.

At forty-six he was president of the Philadelphia company and now heads a $200,000,000 company. He pays liberal wage bonuses and urges friendly, co-operative relationship between capital and labor.

IT WAS only a year ago that Robert R. Young, thirty-nine-year-old Texan, quite unknown to Wall Street, rode herd on the straying Van Sweringen system and corralled it. It was all bewilderingly complicated, but, finally sifted down, it appeared that Mr. Young had picked up a $3,000,000,000 rail "empire" with an original investment of $225,000.

He is a quiet, inconspicuous, unassuming man, and now the feature writers are just getting around to calling him a "Titan."

He won a rock-and-sock proxy battle for the control of the Chesapeake and Ohio railway. Within the last few years, he has infiltrated gently into high finance, which is just now becoming acutely conscious of his presence.

His family was in and around Canadian, Texas, before the battle of the Alamo. They started the First National Bank of Canadian, which is now in the hands of the fourth generation.

At Culver Military academy, Robert R. Young was graduated at the head of his class, its youngest graduate, and later he attended the University of Virginia.

With the Du Ponts in 1916, he got his preliminary work-out in finance and joined General Motors in 1922.

In 1932, he founded his own Wall Street firm, with Frank F. Kolbe, his later associate in the Van Sweringen putsch.

Mrs. Young is the former Anita Ten Eyck O'Keefe, of Williamsburg, Va., sister of Georgia O'Keefe, the painter. In 1935, they leased Beechwood, the Astor estate, in Newport.

Mr. Young, a Democrat, like his father, paid $15,000 for a consignment of those famous Democratic convention books, which congressmen, badgering him at a senate hearing, insisted wasn't nearly so much of a bargain as the Van Sweringen deal. "You are a bigger sucker than I thought you were," said Senator Wheeler.

Languages of Nations

Switzerland is not the only nation having more than one official language. Palestine has three recognized tongues, English, Hebrew and Arabic. Actually more than one language is spoken in every country in Europe but one. Portugal is the only nation having a single language. In Asia, India has 220 distinct vernacular languages. But even with four languages Switzerland is not finished, says the Washington Post. There is still one more obscure dialect called Ladin, spoken by a small group of people.

Speaking of Sports

Softball Led Henrich to Big Leagues

By GEORGE A. BARCLAY

YOUNG Tom Henrich used to knock softballs over the playground fence and be quite a hero to the neighborhood kids.

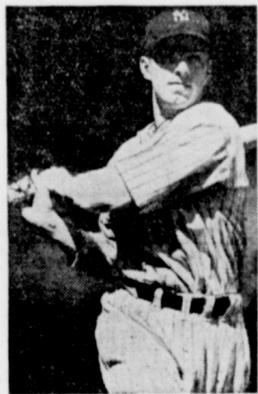

Now young Tom Henrich knocks hard baseballs over the fence in American league parks and the wise boys predict that future diamond historians will rank him in the same outfield flight as Tris Speaker, Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth and his teammate, Joe Di Maggio. For Henrich is making the fans around the circuit sit up and take notice because of his brilliant work as right fielder of the New York Yankees and as one of the team's sluggers.

It was back in Massillon, Ohio, that Tom began playing softball. It wasn't long before he found this game rather tame and turned to sandlot baseball. He looked so good that his father got interested and gave him encouragement. Townsfolk began talking about Tom's uncanny fielding ability and his knack of hitting baseballs where the fielders weren't.

Soon the Cleveland Indians heard about him and one of their scouts wired the home office that he was one of the finds of the bushes. The Indians signed him and then included in a bit of "cover up play" that came to the attention of Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis. The commissioner declared young Henrich a free agent.

Yanks Step In

That all happened in the spring of 1937. As soon as other big league clubs got wind of the fact that Tom was footloose, a deluge of scouts descended on Tom's home, talked with him and then with his father and tried to induce him to sign.

TOM HENRICH

The emissaries of Col. Jake Ruppert of the New York Yankees talked most convincingly. Tom was signed with them and given a bonus of $20,000.

At the time Joe McCarthy happened to be overloaded with outfielders, so he sent Tom across the river to Newark where the Yankees maintain their main talent farm. At Newark Tom lived up to his advance notices. He got away to a good start, was flashy in the field and soon was slamming the ball all over the International league.

Then the Yanks began to encounter some tough going. The outfield powerhouse was crippled by injuries. Roy Johnson, whom McCarthy had secured from Boston, couldn't get going. Desperate for talent, McCarthy sold Johnson to the Boston Bees and recalled young Tom Henrich from Newark. Injuries then played further into Tommy's hands. George Selkirk had to take time out, on account of a bad leg. That put the job of right field squarely up to the rookie Henrich.

Tommy fulfilled the story-book tradition by making good in a big way. He proved by hard hitting that he had a right to be included in the Yanks' Murderers' Row. He didn't confine himself to singles or doubles, but began punching the ball into the bleachers. His fielding was sensational and his throw-ins from the outfield on close plays were every bit as good as his phenomenal young colleague, Joe Di Maggio.

Now at twenty-one, Tommy Henrich seems to be on the way to a great major league career. He has gone at such a pace that there seems little likelihood that Selkirk will win back his job from him.

If the Yanks win the American league pennant this year, Tom Henrich will be one of the reasons. So will a former International leaguer by the name of Joe Gordon who is a second baseman by trade and who succeeded the durable Tony Lazzeri, now a member of the Chicago Cubs. Henrich and Gordon give new coverage to second base and right field.

And coming up through the school that developed Gordon and that Henrich attended for a while last year is another young fellow who, the scouts say, will be ready for the big show next year. His name is Charley Keller and he's an outfielder. Coming out of the University of Maryland last year, he led the International league in hitting and is continuing the pace with Newark again this year.

Tennis Dilemma

PROFESSIONAL tennis appears to be at the crossroads. Its future will depend largely on which direction it turns. Small galleries at the national professional tennis championship tournaments this year pre-empt a diminishing of public interest in the pro game unless several remedies are applied.

Followers of the game point out that the top-notch pro talent does not compete in the national professional tournaments as does the top pro talent in golf. They cite the example of Fred Perry and Ellsworth Vines probably the greatest players in the world today. Both failed to enter the national professional championship and did not compete in any of the various other tournaments held in the South last winter and this spring.

The appearance of either of these stars in the championship events would insure their success and heighten public interest in the tournaments. It is explained that Vines and Perry can make more money playing exhibition matches than they can in tournaments. In tournament play, for example, if Vines won both singles and doubles titles he would make from $500 to $1,000 a week of continuous play. In exhibition play at present his net receipts would far exceed that in a day or two.

Still, for the sake of the pro game's future, those on the inside assert that it would be good business for both Vines and Perry to enter the professional tournaments. They might sacrifice some income for a week or two, but in the long run they would probably make more as a result of increased interest in the game among fans everywhere.

It has also been suggested that closer co-operation be established between the pro players and the professional association itself.

Here and There—

THE handicap of being a deal mute doesn't bother John Gray, seventeen-year-old nephew of the late John McGraw, who lives in Mystic, Conn. Baseball is in John's blood the same as it was in the blood of his famous uncle. Young John is a natural ball player, a good hitter and possessed of an agile baseball mind. He is the star of the Mystic Oral school.

The Cubs last season whipped every team in the year's series except the Pirates, who took them, 13 games to 9. . . . And it looks as if the Pirates are going to be the jinx again this year, though it appears the Boston Bees and New York Giants may soften up the Pirates so much that the Cubs can catch on to how it's done. . . . Lou Gehrig has taken all the charms, rings, and other trinkets gathered in his baseball wanderings and had them made into a bracelet for Mrs. Gehrig.

Baseball Oldster

WHEN a man reaches the ripe old age of thirty-five in baseball, he has arrived at the patriarchal stage and is permitted the privilege of becoming oracular. Such a man is Charley Gehringer, brilliant second baseman of the Detroit Tigers, who seems to have caught his second wind as he romps through his thirteenth season in the big leagues.

One of Charley's contentions is that the pitching today is better than when he came into the American league in 1925.

"There were some star pitchers when I came up and they were real stars," he recalls, "but the ordinary pitchers were not as good as the ordinary pitchers of today."

Charley doesn't have any trouble naming the best pitcher he ever faced.

"Lefty Grove," he says without hesitation. And Grove, he says, was much faster in his prime of speedballing than is Cleveland's Bob Feller today.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Warns Against Food Fads and Fallacies

Nationally Known Food Authority Explains How They May Endanger Health

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th St., New York City.

AS SCIENCE and civilization have progressed, painstaking investigators have sought to replace ignorance with knowledge, to substitute truth for superstition. But in spite of their efforts, our eating habits are still influenced by a multitude of food fads and fancies, which should have no place in this enlightened age.

Some of these are harmless; others may endanger health. And the homemaker must learn to distinguish between fact and fancy.

Fish Is Not a Brain Food

One of the most persistent fallacies is the notion that certain kinds of food are especially beneficial for certain parts of the body. Many people believe that fish is a brain food and celery a nerve tonic. Lettuce is thought to be a soporific. None of these things is true.

The idea regarding fish probably arose because fish contains phosphorus and the brain also contains phosphorus. How simple it would be if one could increase brain power merely by eating fish. Unfortunately, there is nothing to it! The brain, like other parts of the body, requires a balanced diet. No case has ever been reported of a man soothing the irritated nerves of his wife by feeding her celery. And as for lettuce, it is a fine source of minerals, vitamins and gentle roughage, but it does not contain any narcotic drug that induces sleep.

Other Fallacies Disproved

Science has exploded many common notions about vegetables which may change your ideas of what is best to buy and eat. Many homemakers prefer lettuce that is light green in color and they believe that string beans which snap are superior in quality. But it has been demonstrated that deep green lettuce is much richer in vitamins and that a snap in string beans merely indicates that the beans have been kept in a cold, moist place.

False Notions About Fruit

A score of superstitions cling to the eating of fruits. There is a false notion that acid-tasting fruits cause or aggravate rheumatism, because they produce "acidity." The truth is that most fruits, regardless of their acid taste, leave an alkaline ash following digestion.

One often hears that fruit should not be taken at the same time as milk because the fruit acids will cause the milk to curdle. But the fact is that milk is always curdled in the stomach by the hydrochloric acid.

Do You Want to Learn How to Plan a Laxative Diet?

Get This Free Bulletin Offered by C. Houston Goudiss

READERS of this newspaper are invited to write to C. Houston Goudiss, 6 East 39th Street, New York City, for a free copy of his bulletin, "Helpful Hints on Planning a Laxative Diet."

The bulletin gives concrete suggestions for combating faulty elimination through correct eating and proper habits of hygiene. It gives a list of laxative foods and contains a full week's sample menus. A postcard is sufficient to carry your request.

Another false idea is the widespread notion that milk must be sipped slowly or it will be difficult to digest. This has been refuted by a widely known investigator who made many tests. One day he fed a man a pint of milk in 10 seconds. The next day the same man was fed the same amount of milk in 10 minutes. On both occasions the contents of the stomach were examined a half hour later.

It was discovered that the milk which was drunk in 10 seconds had formed smaller curds than the milk which was sipped in 10 minutes. And in both cases, the curds were of practically the same consistency.

Water With Meals?

It is widely held that water should not be taken with meals, the argument being that it dilutes the gastric juice and thus interferes with digestion. This sounds logical and many people have been fooled. But the truth of the matter is that water stimulates the flow of the digestive juices and careful research has established that normally, water taken with meals in reasonable quantities aids digestion.

Danger of Half Truths

The most insidious food fallacies are those which contain some portion of truth—for example, the belief that cooked fruit is more wholesome than raw fruit. It is true that cooking increases the digestibility of some fruits and also has a sterilizing effect. On the other hand, most fruits are easily digested in the raw state, are more palatable and richer in vitamins.

A widespread belief which has a small portion, but only a small portion of truth, is that whole wheat bread is vastly superior to white bread. Whole wheat bread contains more minerals, vitamins and roughage than white bread. But the minerals and vitamins lacking in white bread can easily be supplied by other common foods, and there is no justification for going to the extreme of omitting white bread entirely from the diet.

Are You Overweight? You can REDUCE Safely - Surely - Comfortably

Readers of this newspaper are invited to write to C. Houston Goudiss, at 6 East 39th Street, New York City, for his scientific Reducing Bulletin, which shows how to reduce by the safe and sane method of counting calories.

The bulletin is complete with a chart showing the caloric value of all the commonly used foods and contains sample menus that you can use as a guide to comfortable and beautiful weight reduction.

Far more harmful than the fallacies regarding individual foods are the fad diets constantly put forth by those who seek to exploit the homemaker's desire for dietetic knowledge.

Foods Not Incompatible

A fad diet which has gained a large number of adherents in recent years is based on the notion that certain foods—namely starches and proteins—are incompatible and should not be consumed at the same meal because they cannot be digested at the same time. It is interesting to note that this fad has been condemned by the medical profession and that a physician of the highest standing has proved clinically that starches and proteins do not interfere with one another in the stomach.

The fallacy of this theory is further appreciated when one realizes that there are few pure proteins or pure carbohydrates, most foods containing varying proportions of protein, carbohydrate and fat. Such foods as dried peas and beans and whole grain cereals contain a substantial percentage of both starch and protein.

Dangers of Fasting

Fasting is urged by some faddists as a means of "detoxifying" the body. Advocates of this practice claim that it is nature's method of housecleaning. As a matter of fact, fasting for any length of time may be dangerous to health, because it may result in the accumulation of incomplete oxidation products of fat, and the development of acidosis.

Homemakers must put aside superstitions, half-truths and food fallacies if they are to nourish their families properly.

Put your faith only in established food facts. Remember that upon your knowledge and breadth of vision depend, to a great degree, not only the health but the happiness of your family.

HEALTH NOTES
 AUSTIN—"The State Health Department's three-month old campaign against filthy rest rooms over the state has been marked by splendid cooperation from the retail business establishments involved, the public at large, and the press. Our department is so firmly convinced that filthy rest rooms are a major public health hazard that the department's sanitary inspectors are checking rest rooms as carefully as they do other violations of sanitary regulations," states Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer.
 "We have served notice on all retail establishments in Texas that they must clean up their rest rooms and continue to keep them clean under penalty of violating the State Food and Drug Law, Article 696, which carries a fine of not less than ten or more than one hundred dollars.
 "Our sanitary inspectors have been notified to assess this fine whenever they find rest rooms maintained without adequate sanitation. The public and business establishments have been adequately warned. Any subsequent violations will be dealt with through legal channels.
 "We want the public to cooperate with us in this state campaign. Such filthy conditions heretofore have been prevalent over the state will never be tolerated again. When the public finds a rest room that is unsanitary, whether it be in a cafe, tavern, filling station, retail establishment or bus station, they will be doing their community a favor if they transmit this information directly to the State Health Department, Austin, so that necessary steps can be taken.
 "Disease breeds in unsanitary rest rooms and is spread from one person to another, indiscriminately, under such conditions. Facilities should be available for washing the hands; toilets must be sanitary and kept that way. The rest room that does not meet these minimum requirements is a reflection on the establishment it serves and should be so interpreted.
