DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF FRIONA AND PARMER COUNTY

FRIONA, PARMER COUNTY, TEXAS, FRIDAY, AUGUST 23, 1940.

No. 5

COGITATIONS and APHORISMS of JODOK

I have been wondering if any one has noticed that the Friona Star placed me in the "Fifth Column" last week. Very likely no one has noticed it, but, nevertheless, it was done, and quite likely, purposely.

Well! I suppose that was all right to do so, since it was just about as much "Fifth Column" as was Col. Lindberg's speech, of which I had a right smart to say last week, and judging by what I have heard and read of the Colonel's speech, I cannot interpret it as being classed as "Fifth Column" stuff, and I still contend, that to lay such a charge at his door is unjust to Col. Lindberg.

When this European war small come to an end, it is most likely that one of these contending powers (Germany and Britain) will be a victor; for I doubt very seriously if any fight or quarrel has ever been ended with terms of peace that were perfectly satisfactory to both parties, or all concerned. However, should this be the case in this matter, it will be all the better for them and for all other powers on the earth; but, as I have just stated, it is most likely that such will not be the case, and that one power or the other will be the victor.

If that be so, then that victorious power will then dominate Europe, and with such conditions prevailing, it most assuredly will be better for the United States to arrange just and fair peaceful terms with the power that will then dominate Europe, so that our world commerce may progress uninterrupted, and that the state of civilization we have thus far attained may be preserved, rather than that we, in our turn, engage in a, perhaps long, costly, and above all, a war more or less doubtful in its outcome.

We of the United States, may not have the most tender and sympathetic regard for the victorious nation in this conquest; and we may resent with all our might its manner of fighting the war, and its terms of peace with the vanquished nation, but, regardless of this fact, it will be better for our country, and all the remainder of the world, if we can get along on peaceable terms with it.

In the event that Germany should win this war (which I still doubt very much) it will be a very serious handicap to the United States to be denied free and peaceful commercial relations with Europe, even a Hitler-dominated Europe; and the arranging of fair and just and equitable commercial relations with such a Europe, would not and should not mean a "partnership" with the Furor Hitler, nor the espousing of approval of his manner of government, nor his methods of warfare, nor his apparent utter disregard for treaties or his pledged word, but would simply mean the arranging of fair and honorable means of continuing our fruitful and needful commercial relations with a Europe dominated by him.

Now, as I understand Col. Lindberg's speech, he says that we should either make such arrangements with "Furor" Hitler, in the event he shall win the war, or, snake an early entrance into the war on the side of Britain, and against the "Furor" Hitler, shall dominate Europe.

It occurs to me this is simply presenting two proposals, one of which we should adopt, for our own well being and the well being of our present standard of civilization.

It occurs to me that I have heard it stated that about 90 percent of the people of our country are opposed to the United States getting into any more European wars. If this be true, then there is only ten percent of the people in favor of getting into such a war. Therefore, in the event we are led into the war that is now raging in Europe it will be a case of "The Tail Wagging the Dog" instead of the dog wagging the tail; so as I see it, there is no danger at present of our getting into it.

Thus, it occurs to me that the other alternative suggested by Col. Lindberg will be our only reasonable way to that "Fifth Column" we have been hearing about in America. I am sure that the people of our country will be glad to see a settlement of which (Continued on Page Four)

Jess Osborn Hurt In Car Wreck

Word was received here Tuesday morning to the effect that Jess M. Osborn, Muleshoe banker, and formerly cashier of the Friona State Bank, had been seriously hurt in a car wreck.

According to information received here, Mr. and Mrs. Osborn and daughters were driving in New Mexico, near Santa Rosa, when the car turned over, injuring Mr. Osborn's spine, and practically totally wrecking the car. Mrs. Osborn and the girls, so far as the Star has been able to learn, were uninjured.

Mrs. Osborn got conveyance to Clovis and secured and ambulance and Mr. Osborn was taken to a hospital at Lubbock. No further particulars are available at this writing.

HART-BENNETT WEDDING

On Saturday, July 27, at 7:45 p. m. a very quiet wedding ceremony was performed at Clovis, New Mexico, which united in the holy bonds of matrimony, Miss Othelia Hart, and Mr. Milburn Bennett, both of this community.

The nuptial rites were spoken by Rev. Barnard Guy, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Clovis, in the presence of only the mother and brother of the bride.

The bride on this occasion is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Hart of this community, living a mile and a half north of Friona. She has spent the greater part of her life here and is a graduate of the Friona High School, and is one of the community's most highly esteemed young ladies.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Bennett, of Granbury, and has been employed on the farm of the bride's father, where they will make their home for, perhaps, a year.

The Star joins the many other friends of these splendid young people in wishing for them many, many years of happy and prosperous wedded life.

Rev. Naylor Makes Statement

Having accepted a call to serve the Baptist church at Sudan, which makes it imperative that I move to Sudan, I wish to make the following statement:

I think I have never lived at any place where I have enjoyed the fine fellowship of the entire citizenship as I have with the people of Friona. You will be long in my heart, and I leave trusting that the Lord of us all will continue to bless you. Especially do I commend to the citizenship of the community, their fine pastors, for whom I thank God. They are all good men and true.

Your friend,
H. B. Naylor.

SPENDING VACATION IN CALIFORNIA

Mr. and Mrs. Charley Bainum and children departed Sunday morning on a trip to California, where they will spend Mr. Bainum's vacation visiting his mother.

While away they expect to visit some of the nation's natural wonders that may be seen on their route. They will be gone about two weeks.

BAPTIST G. A. GIRLS ON OUTING

On Tuesday morning a truck load of 19 girls of the Girls Auxiliary Department of the local Baptist church, departed for a few days outing and camping at Ceta Canyon.

The girls planned to return today (Friday).

TENT SHOW TO BE HERE ON SEPTEMBER 20

Mr. Brunk, manager for the Harley Saddler Comedians' tent show, was a business visitor here Tuesday forenoon.

Mr. Brunk was making arrangements for his show to appear here on the night of September 20th. Further details for the show will appear in the Star at a later date.

WON FREE TRIP TO LAS VEGAS

Junior Day, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Day, returned Tuesday from a trip to Las Vegas, New Mexico, a free trip given him by the Amarillo Times, as a reward for subscriptions sent in by him for the paper.

Chiefs rout Lazbuddy Nine. To Amarillo Sun.

DIAMOND SPARKLES By Ed White

The Friona Chiefs won over the Lazbuddy team, in a game played there Sunday afternoon, by a score of 6 to 4, for their tenth win of the season. They have lost only five games thus far.

The Hereford Whitefaces, with whom a game had been scheduled for that day, were unable to be here, so, at the last minute, Manager Anderson arranged for the game with the Lazbuddy Wolves.

This Sunday's game at Amarillo promises to be a good one, and, since the Chiefs won from them here with a shutout score of 3 to 0, and only one hit pitched by Price Brookfield. We hope to have a full batting average out next week. The hitting stars of the last game were: Lambert, P. Brookfield, Carson, Dove and Schlenker. Carson also got a fine three-base hit.

Local Pastor Away Holding Revival

Rev. Joe Wilson, pastor of the local Baptist church, departed Monday for Enoch, where he will be engaged in conducting a series of revival services.

There will, however, be held the regular preaching services at the local church this Sunday, but the name of the guest preacher had not been learned at the time of this writing.

Mrs. Wilson departed Tuesday as chaperon for a group of the young ladies of the church, who will spend until Friday camping at Ceta Canyon.

FRIONA WEATHER

During the past seven days the nights have been decidedly cool, especially the latter parts of them, and we have received a few sprinkles of rain.

On Tuesday night about 8:00 o'clock, a light shower began falling which continued until about eleven o'clock, resulting in a scant quarter of an inch of moisture. Not enough by about a gallon per square foot, but it will help some for the growing feed crops.

CARD OF THANKS

We take this method of expressing our sincere thanks and appreciation to all of our good friends and neighbors for their many expressions of kindness both by word and deed, during the illness and death of our beloved little daughter, Treva May. May God's richest blessings rest with each of you.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Ferguson and Children.
Mr. and Mrs. Otis Massey and Family.
Mr. Walter Ferguson and Family.

Funeral Rites Of Treva May Ferguson Sun.

The funeral rites of little Treva May Ferguson, 13-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Ferguson, were held Sunday afternoon under the direction of Rix Funeral Home, of Lubbock.

Treva May was born June 22, 1939, and departed this life, August 17, 1940, at 5:15 p. m., at the age of 1 year, 1 month and 25 days. She passed away at the Deaf Smith County Hospital at Hereford, following an illness of nine days.

Funeral services were held at the First Baptist Church at Friona, Sunday afternoon, conducted by Rev. R. F. Jones of the Hub community, with burial in the Friona cemetery.

Palbearers were: Lonnie Smith, Leonard Haws, and Sam and Jack Williams. Flower Girls were: Dorothy Faye Smith, Mrs. Earl Greeclan, Mrs. Merle Barnhouse, Mrs. Carl Fairchild, Mrs. Leonard Haws and Mrs. DeLoss Knight.

She leaves of her immediate family to mourn her loss her parents, Virgil and Elizabeth Ferguson; one sister, Bessie Ruth; and one brother, Kenneth Ray; her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Otis Massey, of this community, and Mr. Walter Ferguson, of Plainview; also 22 aunts and uncles, and nine cousins, besides a host of friends and other relatives.

The Star joins the other many friends of the family in extending sincere sympathy to the bereaved parents in their time of deep sorrow.

McLellans Home From Hot Springs

Mr. and Mrs. Leo McLellan and children returned Wednesday from Hot Springs, New Mexico, where they have been visiting Leo's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. McLellan, while Leo has been taking a course of the hot springs baths.

But that was not all Leo did while at the Springs, as was evidenced by the five or six fine large catfish, which he had in the trunk of his car when he returned.

As a rule the stories told by those who have been away fishing are listened to with a certain amount of credulity, and taken, as the saying goes, "With a pinch of salt." But there is certainly no excuse for any such in Leo's case, for he brought with him the absolute proof of his ability as a fisherman, in those fine samples above mentioned.

One of these beauties, Leo left at the home of "Ye Editor" and which was disposed of at the family supper table Wednesday evening. It was about a ten-pounder of the blue cat variety, and was truly good eating, and to Leo and his good wife we extend our most sincere thanks for the gift.

REV. NAYLOR IN SUCCESSFUL REVIVALS

During the past two weeks, Rev. H. B. Naylor of this city, and pastor of the Baptist churches at Summerfield and Lazbuddy, has completed two very satisfactory and successful revival meetings.

One of these was at Lazbuddy, one of his pastorates, and was a fine meeting in which sixteen conversions were effected, and thirteen received the sacrament of baptism.

The other, which was held at Colorado City, which is one of Brother Naylor's former pastorates, was also a most enthusiastic meeting, in which nine decisions for Christ were made.

Home From Llano

O. F. Lange departed on Thursday last week for Llano, the home of his father, B. Lange, who, Mrs. Lange and their two daughters, Carolyn and Doris Ann, have been visiting during the past few weeks.

They all returned home Monday night, having spent a most enjoyable vacation, regardless of the fact that it was quite warm there.

Rev. Naylor Accepted Call To Sudan

In this issue of the Star will be found the announcement by Rev. H. B. Naylor, of the fact that he has accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Baptist Church at Sudan.

In compliance with this call, he moved his family and his household goods to Sudan, Wednesday, and will take up the duties of his new pastorate there Sunday, where he has a congregation of about 450 people, and his work will all be at one place, rather than at two places, as it has been during his residence here at Friona, while serving the Summerfield and Lazbuddy churches.

During his nearly three years of residence at Friona, Rev. Naylor has won his way to the hearts of all our people who have been so fortunate as to meet him, regardless of church affiliation or any other conditions.

He has won this universal friendship here by his ever pleasing personality and his ever readiness to perform any kindness in any way in his power, for all whom he found in need of such kindness.

Brother Naylor has proven himself to be, not only a good, conscientious and effective preacher of the gospel of Jesus Christ, but at the same time and all the time, a loyal and progressive citizen, a faithful and helpful neighbor and a friend indeed to all, and his leaving Friona will be so deeply regretted by all who have ever known him.

Home Ec. Girls On Outing Trip

The girls of the Home Economics Class of the Friona High School, departed Wednesday morning for a vacation and visual education trip through parts of New Mexico.

Among other points of interest which they planned to visit was the Montezumas, where they will likely spend the greater part of their outing trip.

They were chaperoned by Superintendent and Mrs. Edelman and Miss Stanford, the teacher of the Home Economics Department of the school.

Bovina News

Mr. and Mrs. Carlisle Russell and daughter, Joyce Roe, returned home Tuesday evening from Sweetwater.

Mrs. Bob Johnson and children, Mary Will, Bobby, Nancy and Dan, spent a few days this week in Lubbock visiting.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Engiant and Francis Deatherage, all of Tulia, visited in Bovina, Thursday.

Miss Roberta Gaines of Amarillo, was in Bovina, Friday.

Thomas Gilbert returned from Sweetwater, late Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert White, of Friona, and children, visited in Bovina, Friday.

Mrs. Chas. Rury and children, LaMarial, Jan Nella, Donald and Jimmie, of Friona, visited with friends and relatives here, Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Martin Grambling and small daughter returned home Tuesday, after a short stay in Sweetwater.

George McLean visited in Clovis, New Mexico, Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Williams and children, Willie Ellen, Martha and Charles Denny, returned home Friday afternoon from a vacation in the mountains.

Mrs. Ezra Enelant and daughters, Barbara and Mary Alice, visited in Texico, Tuesday, with Mrs. Clinton Holmes and daughter, Eva June.

Ask Me Another

A General Quiz

The Questions

1. How long was a round of boxing when John L. Sullivan ruled the ring?
2. How long was Abraham Lincoln President before the Civil war broke out?
3. What is the largest stadium in America?
4. What universities compete for the Little Brown Jug on the gridiron each year?
5. What is a Pyrrhic victory?
6. Does each star in the American flag represent a particular state?
7. Do kangaroos ever roost in trees?
8. Do the Japanese ever say "no"?

The Answers

1. Until one of the fighters scored a knockdown over his opponent.
2. Six weeks.
3. Soldier field, located in Chicago, Illinois, takes this honor. Its seating capacity will handle a crowd of 125,000 persons.
4. The University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, and the University of Minnesota at Minneapolis.
5. One gained at too great a cost.
6. No, the stars represent the states collectively, not individually.
7. Australia boasts of kangaroos that roost in trees. They are clumsy climbers, but have remarkable jumping powers and a tenacious grip. A family of tree kangaroos will frequently use one tree for their permanent abode.
8. No. And they never say "yes" as these two words do not exist in their language. If you asked a Japanese if he wanted something, he would reply, "I do," or "I do not."

d toward him as he started to- ward her.

"Hello." He removed his hat, miling diffidently.

"Hello." Her voice sounded thin nd unnatural. She felt her mouth tretch in a mechanical smile.

He bent to kiss her. She lifted her ice. A redcap, carrying luggage, umped into them so that his lips, lancingly, touched her cheek.

"We must find a taxi." She did ot look at him. "I didn't bring a ar."

His hand cupped her elbow but she d the way. A porter followed with is luggage. "Did you have a good ip?" she asked after an interval f silence.

"Not bad. We were on time." "I'm sorry I was delayed. I left e apartment in time but traffic as heavy."

"That's all right. I haven't wait- d long." They stood waiting for the porter o call a taxi.

"How are you?" he asked. She glanced up at him, then quick- away.

"Splendid, thank you. Isn't it nice o have snow?"

"If it keeps on like this the trains on't be coming in on time."

"No, probably not. Have you had reakfast?"

"No. It doesn't matter, though. m not hungry."

A taxi slid in beside them. The orter opened the door. John put er in, supervised the stowing of his luggage, sat beside her. The cab moved out into traffic. She glanced up at him. He was looking at her. The hurt bewilderment in his eyes, the difficult smile that moved across his lips, restored warmth and a feeling of tenderness.

"Hello!" she said softly.

"Hello!" His arms went around her. Their lips met and held. Presently she drew away.

"Is this scandalous behavior for New York?" His voice sounded happy, relieved.

"Who cares?" She winked to clear her vision. "Oh why are we always such idiots?"

"I didn't know you. You looked—I was terrified."

"So was I. Darling, that hat—"

"Don't you like it either?" He turned to open the window. "We'll throw it out."

"Idiot!" She pressed close to him, but her face against the rough cloth of his coat. "It's all right, isn't it?"

"The hat? You change your mind so—"

"Us, I mean—Your being here—We're going to have fun."

"Of course we are. Breakfast first, though. I wasn't hungry when you asked me, but I'm starving now."

"Are you?" She laughed. "So am I. Let's send your luggage out to Mother's apartment and stay down town all day. We'll have breakfast at Child's and walk in the snow and drop quarters in all the Santa Claus kettles and sing carols on street corners and—"

"You darling! I'm so happy, so glad to be here."

"Are you? Darling! John!"

John got up as Gay's mother rose from the love-seat on which they sat.

"So I suppose I'll have to forgive you," she said, smiling up at him with Gay's smile and Gay's trick of crinkling her eyes. "I was prepared to dislike you intensely."

"Now, Kitty," her husband said with indulgent fondness, "you've never disliked anybody. It's your all-inclusive love for your fellow-men which keeps getting you into trouble."

"That's unkind of you, Robert." She linked her arm through her husband's. "What will John think of me?"

"I think you are very kind," he said, realizing that the reply was inadequate, seeing and resenting the amusement in her deep blue eyes, so like Gay's.

"Kindness is an endearing trait in a mother-in-law," Robert Cameron said cheerfully. He consulted his watch. "My dear, we must be on our way."

"We're going to the theater with the Davenports," she said in the way she had of seeming to share an intimate confidence. "They've just become grandparents and need cheering."

The Japanese house-boy came into the room. She spoke to him about calling for the car. John watched her pleasant manner with the servant. She was prettier than Gay, he thought, but less beautiful, smaller, softer, more rounded. Her hair which had been dark was, prematurely, turning white. Cut short and curled, it looked like a wig for fancy dress rather than a symbol of age. Her skin, in the diffused light which filled the long high-ceilinged room, had a honey-colored tint and her small pretty mouth was painted the exact shade of the coral azalea against her shoulder. She didn't look like anybody's mother. It was difficult to realize, in spite of certain points of resemblance, that she bore so close a relationship to Gay.

She turned to him as the house-boy slid noiselessly out of the room.

She felt paralyzed, frozen inside.

She felt paralyzed, frozen inside.

"We must get acquainted tomorrow," she said, laying a small jeweled hand on his arm. "But no—I you and Gay will be leaving for Yonedin fairly early. Christmas dinner, there, is always at two." She glanced up at her husband, smiling through narrowed eyes.

"If we're to see any of the first act at all—" her husband said a trifle hastily.

"Yes, darling." She turned again to John. "Perhaps we'll see you later. If not, good-night. Suki will take care of you. You are very welcome here. We want you to feel at home."

He would like to feel at home. But how could he, how could anybody feel at home in this room? It was as artificial as the silvered wreaths which hung in the windows, as the Christmas tree, silvered too, reflecting its fantastic dazle of blue lights and twisted glass icicles in a wall formed by mirrors, cut into sections by strips of chromium.

"Well, what do you make of it?" He turned guiltily, conscious of some possible rudeness, then relaxed. Gay was walking toward him, so lovely in the dress of deep blue velvet she'd worn at dinner that his breath caught in his throat.

She came up to where he stood and slipped her hand through his arm. "What were you thinking?" she asked, smiling up at him with amusement in her eyes. "You looked startled when I spoke to you."

"I was afraid someone had caught me being critical of the decorations." He turned again to the panel above the fire. "What is it?" he asked. "Flowers? Fruit?"

"It's a color note." Her smile deepened.

"Then it doesn't mean anything?" "Not to me. Don't puzzle your head over it, my sweet. If you do, you'll go quietly mad." She led him to the davenport which stood facing the fire. "He sank down beside her into soft leather upholstery. "Mother had all this done to occupy her mind when she found she hadn't a wedding to arrange. Besides Cedric needed the money."

"Cedric?"

"The earnest young man who had the brainstorm. It has made him. He has more commissions than he can handle. He regards Kitty as a cross between Lady Bountiful and a fairy with a wand, which is very flattering, of course. How did you get on with her?"

"She's lovely to look at," he said guardedly, "and very kind."

Gay looked up at him.

"But—? I want you to tell me what you think of everything. No reservations. They lead to misunderstandings." Her face was grave. "Be frank with me, John."

"I'll try to be frank. It sounds ridiculous, I know, but I think I'd feel more comfortable if she hadn't received me so courteously."

"Why?" Gay asked in surprise.

"Well, after bracing myself to face the opposition I expected, it's a little disconcerting to have your mother, figuratively, at least receive me with open arms."

She laughed in genuine amusement. "Did you want to fight dragons, darling?"

"I suppose I did." He laughed with her.

"Well, cheer up. There's Aunt Flora in the office."

"Who is Aunt Flora? Is she a dragon?"

"She's my father's sister, a widow. She's lived with him since Mother's defection. No, she isn't a dragon. She's pathetic, really. She persists in observing the conventions of a polite world of society which is past and gone. And she expects other people to observe them. She won't receive you with open arms. Not that she blames you for the recent catastrophe, though. She tells me that I am my mother's daughter."

"You aren't like your mother, except in certain superficial points of physical resemblance."

She looked at him, considering, looked away.

"Have I offended you?" he asked, realizing that he had spoken with more warmth than the comment required. "I didn't mean—Your mother is charming."

"I wasn't offended." She took his hand in hers. "I was wondering how I could explain Mother to you. No, I'm not like her. I wish I were. Mother is really very logical. When places or people bore her she sees no reason why she should pretend that they mean anything to her. She was bored with Dad and so she divorced him and married Major Summerfield."

"You mean—Mr. Cameron is her third husband? I heard her speak of a Major Summerfield at dinner, but I had no idea—"

"She's on friendly terms with both Dad and the Major," Gay said but her smile wavered a little. "She doesn't dislike them because they bored her. She was very sorry to have had to hurt them but she saw no reason in continuing a relationship which was no longer agreeable. You look horrified, John."

She dropped his hand. "I don't suppose you can understand."

"I was thinking how—confusing it must have been for you," he said slowly.

"It was, until I was old enough to understand Mother's point of view. Now, it's all very simple. Mother has never cared deeply for anyone. It isn't in her nature to cling to things, though she's loyal in her way, and generous and kind. That's why she looks as she does. She has no regrets for anything that has happened."

Louisiana Surveyors Tackle Tough Problem

General land office surveyors of Louisiana have undertaken a task forced upon them by "a natural phenomenon" more than a century and a half ago.

Long before the Red River valley became populated with planters, the sluggish river was blocked by trees falling into the water and gradually stacked up in rafts.

The waters of the river backed into bayous and into natural land formations, forming lakes. The problem of the authorities today is—who owns the lakes?

Detailed accounts of the beginning of the log jam are lacking in general land office records, but one report estimates that the raft in the Red river grew at the rate of one mile a year during the 35-year period between 1793 and 1828.

Other reports of an exploration in 1806 tell of one obstruction in the river "forming an almost impenetrable mass, which extends from the bottom to two or three feet above the surface of the water, a thickness of 30 to 40 feet, and stretching up the river for nearly 300 miles."

Removal of the obstruction began in 1828.

PASS!

Some officers were discussing an Irishman, a private in their regiment, whom, it was alleged, no one could frighten.

One decided he would try to "put the wind up" Patrick.

Arraying himself in all the fearful and awesome habiliments of His Satanic Majesty, he stealthily approached Pat when the latter was on sentry-go.

In response to the challenge: "Who goes there?" he answered in sepulchral tones: "The Devil."

"Pass, Devil," replied the sentry. "You know where to go!"

The buxom wife had returned from her shopping expedition in a towering temper, and was pouring out her troubles to her patient husband.

"That young assistant was intolerably rude to me," she declared.

Just Like Nations

One day the landlord of a block of flats called on one of his tenants, a young artist.

"The rent of your rooms is six months behind," he commenced, "but times being what they are, I don't want to be hard on you. I'll tell you what I propose to do. I'll meet you half-way—forget half the debt. How about that?"

The tenant smiled gratefully. "That's fine!" he said. "And I'll forget the other half."

The New Home

The town council recently moved a respectable family—father, mother, two daughters and a son—out of a derelict cottage into a neat little council house; two rooms and scullery downstairs, three bedrooms up.

A few weeks after the move, an official looked in to see that everything was all right. "Well, Mrs. X., all settled now? How do you like the new quarters?"

"O, very comfortable indeed. We like them fine. When are the upstairs people moving in?"

Spoiled Her Record

Things had gone from bad to worse and Mrs. Jones could stand it no longer. So she gave the servant notice.

"And don't forget," she wound up her tirade, "when you came here you had the audacity to say that you'd worked only in the best-class houses."

As she paused for breath, the maid replied coolly:

"Well, ma'am, I won't ever be able to say that again."

Longest Baseball Game

The longest games in innings, and in playing time elapsed, were both played at Boston between the National league's Boston Bees and the Brooklyn Dodgers. The longest game by innings, a 1-1 tie lasting 26 innings until called on account of darkness, was played on May 1, 1920, but lasted only three hours and 50 minutes. The new record for the longest game in playing time was set in Boston July 5, 1940, when the Dodgers defeated the Bees 6-2 in the twentieth inning, after five hours and 19 minutes.

Boston and Brooklyn had held the previous record for long games in point of time. It was a 22-inning affair on June 27, 1939, lasting five hours and 15 minutes. It too was played in Boston.—Pathfinder.

BRITISH WILL TRADE ISLAND

Some of the most important conversations ever to take place with Great Britain in 150 years have been transpiring behind the scenes recently.

As this column has pointed out on several occasions, the support most desperately needed by Great Britain as of this moment is destroyers.

To this end, conversations between representatives of the two governments have taken this course:

If the United States will supply Britain with destroyers and small motor-torpedo boats, then the British will transfer to the United States any island possessions it desires any place in the Western hemisphere, and will also permit the United States the use of land, air and naval bases on any territory which it controls.

In addition to this, the British have told American plenipotentiaries that the United States can write its own ticket. In other words, if this country wants other concessions from Britain in return for naval support, it can have them.

These terms, transmitted to members of the Roosevelt cabinet and to high Roosevelt advisers, have been received most favorably. This includes the Republican members of the cabinet, Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Knox. In fact, the opinion inside the administration has been unanimous.

However, the President himself has been loathe to move.

POLLS UNRELIABLE THIS YEAR

Psychological Corporation, one of the leading public poll organizations of the United States, is warning clients privately about the reliability of public opinion polls under present unsettled conditions.

Psychological Corporation is headed by Dr. Henry C. Link, who is the originator of the "P. Q." or Personality Quotient, and other psychological tests. He is also connected with a number of national business concerns, including U. S. Rubber, Lord & Taylor, and Gimbel's department store. Psychological Corporation set up the original Fortune poll and has conducted numerous polls in its own name.

Despite its long experience, however, P. C. will not conduct polls of general public opinion this year. Reason for this is that the war and public reaction to it have set up such rapid cross currents of opinion as to make established polling methods unreliable.

P. C. will continue to make any poll for which its services are employed, handling each job according to the individual requirements. But on polls where the war enters as a factor, or in regard to political opinion, P. C. will undertake them only on condition that definite predictions will not be made because of incalculable rapid shifts of opinion.

On polls not involving these factors, which it will conduct as it has similar ones in the past, P. C. makes no reservations. But it definitely is hedging on political polls and is frankly telling clients so.

GERMAN PARTNERS

Despite the intervention of Arthur V. Davis, chairman of the Aluminum Corporation of America, the justice department is going ahead with its grand jury proceedings against that company and the giant German chemical cartel, I. G. Farbenindustrie, for alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust law in the production of magnesium.

Magnesium is an alloy even lighter than aluminum and is used in the manufacture of airplanes. It was in such demand by Germany for Hitler's airplane program, that Germany paid cash for American magnesium, even when she was desperately hard up for exchange.

Mr. Davis came into the Justice department and offered all sorts of co-operation to the government. But the department's anti-trust experts figure that it is too late. They have taken the position that when an American company co-operates with Germany to restrict production of an important metal, it hampers national defense by discouraging American industry in peacetime.

The magnesium industry, they figure, should have been developed sufficiently during peacetime so that it could be expanded very rapidly now in an emergency.

It is also their contention that the restriction of magnesium production in normal peacetime discourages airplane manufacturers from experimenting with this very important alloy and learning to make full use of it.

So the grand jury investigation, now in progress in New York, will continue.

SOS Led Graf Spee Into Trap

British Admiralty Reveals Real Facts of Battle With German Ship.

LONDON.—The German pocket battleship Graf Spee was located by an SOS flashed by the British steamer Doric Star, which enabled Sir Henry Harwood, commander of the cruiser squadron, to make contact with the raider off the Plata, it has been revealed.

The Doric Star, a new 10,086-ton refrigerator ship, was lost off the South African coast early in December. The Walvis bay radio station picked up the terse message "gunned" from the ship and after that nothing definitely was known of its fate until after the Graf Spee battle.

The facts of the battle, brought out in a new admiralty account just published, show that at the time the British cruiser squadron was below full strength. The 10,000-ton Cumberland, the most powerfully armed unit of the squadron, was not with the Achilles, Ajax and Exeter. The big cruiser, running at full speed, did not reach the River Plata until 34 hours later.

Tell of Captain's Errors.

The admiralty report points out that Capt. Hans Langsdorff of the Graf Spee made the initial mistake of "splitting" his fire when attacked by the Exeter on one side and the Ajax and the Achilles on the other. The 8-inch guns of the Exeter seemed to worry the Graf Spee from the moment the battle opened, but it was not until five minutes later that the pocket battleship concentrated its main battery of 11-inch guns on this cruiser.

The Graf Spee opened fire at 6:18 a. m., the Exeter at 6:20 and the other two at 6:21 and 6:23.

Two of the Exeter's 8-inch guns had been put out of action and other damage done that temporarily put the ship out of control.

Continuous action ceased at 7:40, having for the last hour virtually resolved itself into a chase of the Graf Spee, which again and again attempted to get away under cover of smoke screens. The Exeter's second pair of 8-inch guns were knocked out and a fierce fire had developed between decks. Notwithstanding this, the cruiser re-entered the action. It had a seven-degree list and was down by the bow but still steaming full power ahead and firing with the two remaining guns.

'Seaman Boy' Hero.

In the Achilles, the main gunnery control position was momentarily put out of action by shell splinters which killed four crew men and stunned the gunnery officer but a "seaman boy behaved with great coolness and despite the carnage around him continued passing information to the guns."

After a further graphic description of the progress of the battle, the Ajax and the Achilles, it is explained, continued to shadow the Graf Spee closely and drove it into Montevideo Roads just after midnight.

Great tribute is paid in the report to the engine room and boiler personnel of the British warships. "In the boiler rooms" it is stated, "gun blast caused the flames to leap about a foot out of the front of the furnaces, yet the stokers, many of them youngsters, never paused in their work or moved back from the boilers."

Democratic Nominees Plan Campaign Strategy

Unlike Republican presidential and vice presidential nominees Wendell L. Wilkie and Sen. Charles L. McNary who had never met before their selection as the party's 1940 standard bearers, Franklin D. Roosevelt and Henry A. Wallace, the Democratic candidates, have been closely associated in the past seven and a half years. President Roosevelt and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace are shown above conferring on strategy for the coming campaign in which the President will seek a third term.

BULLY IS PERSISTENT
Persist, persist, and still persist
And then persist some more;
And when it seems no use at all
Persist just as before.

THAT seems to be the motto that Bully the English Sparrow believes in and tried to live up to. It is a good motto. Yes, indeed, it is a very good motto, when it is rightly used. You know that to persist means to keep always trying and trying over and over again. So it is always perfectly splendid to persist in things that are right. But always be sure that you are right, before you persist, because if you don't you may fare no better than did Bully.

The next day he visited the Old Orchard to see if Bully had left.

When Farmer Brown's boy pulled Bully's nest out of the hole in the apple tree in the Old Orchard and tore it to pieces and carried away the six eggs that were in it he thought that Bully and his wife would surely leave the Old Orchard. That is why he did what seemed like such a dreadful thing. He wanted them to leave the Old Orchard, because he knew that if they didn't the other birds would, and that would be truly dreadful. He knew that other little feathered people simply couldn't live with such noisy, quarrelsome neighbors as Bully and his wife, and wouldn't live there. He knew that unless something was done, the Bullies would have the Old Orchard to themselves the next spring, and then how the worms and the insects would thrive on the trees! But he couldn't quite make up his mind to kill or really hurt Bully and Mrs. Bully, so he thought that if he took their eggs and destroyed their nest there couldn't be any baby sparrows to grow up and make more trouble, and then perhaps Bully and his wife would go away from the Old Orchard.

But Farmer Brown's boy didn't know Bully. No, indeed! He didn't know how persistent Bully can be. The next day he visited the Old Orchard to see if Bully had left. What do you think he found? Why, he found that Bully and his wife had a new nest half built in the very same hole that the old one had been in!

He tore this to pieces only to find another on the next day. And so it was on the following day and the day after that Farmer Brown's boy just had to admire the spunk and persistence, of Bully and Mrs. Bully. "You certainly deserve to be left alone," said he, "but I can't do it. You are a nuisance, and so you have got to go if I have to come here and break up your nest every day all summer."

A day or two after that Farmer Brown's boy found no nest when he put his hand in the hollow of the tree. "At last they've given up," thought he. "I hope they have left the Old Orchard for good." He was almost out of the Old Orchard on the other side when his sharp eyes caught sight of a little bird just disappearing in a hole in the very last tree. He walked up and pounded on the tree. "Out popped—whom do you think? Why, Mrs. Bully to be sure! She and Bully were building a nest there. It took Farmer Brown's boy three days to make Bully and his wife understand that they couldn't build there or anywhere else in the Old Orchard. Finally they gave up and flew away. And where do you think they went? Why, straight to Farmer Brown's barn, and there way up under the leaves, where only the longest ladder could reach them, they built a nest, and raised their young. Farmer Brown's boy said that such boldness and impudence deserved a reward and so as long as they were out of the Old Orchard and not bothering other birds he would leave them alone.

And in the Old Orchard there was great rejoicing, for now no one wanted to move away, and everyone there looked on Farmer Brown's boy as their friend.

U. S. NAVY MAY ADOPT DIRIGIBLES AS AIRCRAFT CARRIERS

WASHINGTON.—The navy department has indicated a complete re-examination of lighter-than-air craft as a military weapon, including the possible use of dirigibles as "flying aircraft carriers."

Commander Charles E. Rosen-dahl, who is probably the nation's best-known lighter-than-air craft expert and a survivor of one of the world's worst dirigible disasters, has been assigned to the office of the secretary of the navy to investigate all phases of the question.

Despite the series of disasters that have overtaken airships of this type in the United States and other countries some experts believe the dirigible has not been given a full opportunity to prove its value.

At a hearing of the senate naval affairs committee, former Secretary Charles Edison said he felt not enough work and research had been done on lighter-than-air craft "to prove anything."

In response to questions from committee-men, Edison said he "most emphatically" believed this country could develop dirigibles as aircraft carriers.

He admitted that the big "sky liners" were vulnerable to attack, but he expressed the belief they were not more so than surface aircraft carriers. The flying carrier,

Guns Are Salvaged From Warship Lost 245 Years

HOMESTEAD, FLA.—Deep-sea divers have salvaged 45 cannons and other valuable relics from H. M. S. Winchester, a British man of war that went down off the Florida coast 245 years ago.

The Winchester sailed from Jamaica in 1695 for England and never was heard of until December, 1938, when Charles Brookfield of Elliott's Key and Hugh Matheson of Miami located the sunken warship off Key Largo, near here.

Rust, coral and shells chipped from the first cannon salvaged from the vessel revealed the marks of the manufacturer which led to the identification of the warship as the Winchester.

Among other interesting articles salvaged in the last year were a silver bowl in almost perfect condition, bits of hemp rope that were still strong after 245 years of soaking in salt water and a number of hand grenades of primitive design. Encased in a lump of coral on the side of one of the first cannons salvaged from the warship were fragments of a Bible. Printing on the bits of paper was clearly legible.

JODOK

 we do not approve. Many of our own products and commodities of which we have a surplus, we will need to sell to European countries, whose form of government or whose rulers we may not like, but it will be a case of necessity and we will need to deal with them through the channels of commerce, whether we like them or not, and in such an event it will be better for us if we have an amicable trade agreement with them, than not to have. Is that "Fifth Column"?

In reading papers and magazines and listening to lectures and other speeches, I frequently read or hear such expressions as, "Towns do not grow, they must be built," and other similar expressions, and it occurs to me that there is a great deal of truth in such statements. And, if such be true, I know of no one who will do the building, other than the people who live within the limits of that particular town. If they are not interested enough to put forth their combined efforts to achieve such results, then, surely no one else will do so. And this statement applies to Friona in particular.

One of the means, it occurs to me, is that of making the city an attractive place and thus, a desirable place for people to make their homes. This depends, not only on the matter of making the residential portions attractive as to buildings and surrounding premises, but, just as much so in regard to the treatment these people shall receive at the hands of those engaged in the various lines of business as vendors of the food, clothing and the many other articles these people are constantly in need of, in the way of courteous treatment and prices therefor, that will at least stand for favorable comparison with the treatment and prices offered them in neighboring towns and cities.

Another factor to be considered, in both the residential and business sections of the city, is the removal of "eye-sores" in the form of needless accumulations of refuse or worthless property that are unsightly and repellant, even to the verge of utter extinction.

Co-operation and imitation are also pretty good policies when rightly applied. For instance—when a neighbor starts in to improve his buildings or his premises, it is far better for the town, if we co-operate with him and lend him every encouragement in our power, rather than criticism and fault-finding. And right there is also where imitation comes in to mighty good advantage for the benefit of the city, for any thing that is good for the town and its people is worthy of imitation.

It will take imagination
 And a full cooperation,
 Helped along with imitation—

WHAT HOPS DO FOR BEER AND ALE

Hops are for flavor. They give to good beer and ale their lively, appetizing flavor, their pleasant, aromatic tang.

Brewers select and blend their hops with extreme care. In fact, every step in making beer and ale is conducted with masterly skill—to give you better-tasting, more wholesome beverages.

Now the brewing industry wants to do one thing more. It wants to protect your right to drink good beer and ale—by keeping the places where beer and ale are sold wholesome, too.

We want undesirable, anti-social establishments "cleaned-up" or "closed-up." A plan of action has already been put into effect in a number of states. This plan is being extended. We'd like you to know about it. Send for interesting free booklet.

American Defenses Pin Hopes on Detroit; Auto Plants Are 'Key' to Mechanized Needs

By ROY OLMSTEAD
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
DETROIT, MICH.—A man sat in the great office of a big corporation in New York the other day opening letters. Suddenly he was galvanized into action. The letter he just had opened warned of a plot to bomb the office in which he was sitting.

His first act was to call the company's own police and have the building searched. Even while this was going on, the long distance phones were working and the firm's extensive plants in Detroit were being warned and much more elaborate precautions were being taken there, although the letter said nothing about the Detroit factory.

Key to U. S. Defense.

Why all this interest in Detroit? Mainly because that city and its outlying municipal brothers-in-industry—Flint, Pontiac and Lansing—are fast becoming the key to America's defense program, the Ruhr of the United States.

The eyes of the army and navy, as well as the National Defense commission, are on Detroit. Here are going many of the millions of dollars that make up the billions Uncle Sam is spending to modernize and equip services.

An expert of the National defense council, looking up from a mass of figures in his Washington office recently announced that Detroit and its neighboring automotive towns would be able by this time next year, to fulfill all orders for army trucks, tanks, caissons, plate parts and motors for airplanes and small boats, for both sides of the European war at the war's present rate of consumption. And while this was going on the factories would be able to turn their usual quota of civilian automobiles as well.

Certainly Detroit is preparing to do just that, and the preparations take into consideration the use of only the present available manpower. Virtually no additional employees, beyond those now on the payrolls, need to be added, although the number of work days and hours may be increased to the present legal maximum.

Set for Special Calls.

Much of this, of course, calls for material adjustment in the precision machinery now in operation. One Detroit body factory which never thought of airplanes six months ago, already has signed an experimental contract with an eastern airplane maker to produce wings. At least two other plants are getting ready for any call not only to airplane engines but parts as well.

One entire plant of a General Motors corporation subsidiary now is engaged in airplane engine making, although it is encountering difficulties in getting into large-scale production. If the international situation continues to be critical, time will be the essence of the problem, and the automobile industry has the habit of telescoping hours into minutes.

But it will require several months of intense preparation, even under the pressure of war, for the automobile companies to swing into the mass production of aircraft.

A good deal of preliminary work has been done. The spotwelding of aluminum alloys, up to now a ticklish and largely unsatisfactory method of building airplanes, is being studied. Two makes of European aircraft engines have been torn down by automobile factory engineers to determine how fast they could be produced, and the results are encouraging.

A locomotive puffs out of a blast furnace with a string of ladle cars filled with slag. This scene is being enacted in all the automotive plants in the Detroit area now, with the additional push being given the national defense program. Right, is a view from above of the new army-type bomber.

Plans at Ford Plant.

Ford, for one, knows the precision requirements of aircraft engine construction differ materially from the ordinary volume-produced automobile motor, but precision is routine in the automobile industry. Even in the average car motor measurements for less than one-thousandth of an inch are a standard requirement.

Just 22 years ago Ford was assembling 105 "Liberty" motors a day for World War I planes. Ford is going to make some British-designed Rolls-Royce engines regardless of whether he gets an order from the United States government. He may even make a complete airplane powered with one of the motors.

Plans, in fact, have been drawn at the Ford plant for the additional buildings and floor space that would be required for airplane and plane engine output.

A single item of the preliminary work illustrates how Ford proposes to speed up engine production in the event of an emergency. He plans to cast the crankshaft instead of forging it. The shaft of the Rolls-Royce in its finished state weighs 103 pounds. In the rough stage, as produced abroad, it weighs 261 pounds. Cast in the Ford foundry, it weighs 135 pounds.

Thus in the Ford shops only 32 pounds of metal is machined off as against 158 pounds in the British factories.

Meanwhile tooling is being surveyed in all plants for 1942 models and sales departments are getting their 1941 production into high gear. As in all other years there are innovations that will quicken the eye of the prospective purchaser and open his pocketbook.

Hudson was two weeks ahead of others in the usual starting date for assembling new models. Their feature this year will be "symphonic styling," a harmonizing of interior colors with those of the exterior.

The basic colors are gray, green and tan, which will harmonize with the exterior color. For example, if the purchaser selects tan, not only the exterior but also the upholstery, headlining, trim, carpets and instrument panel will be in harmonizing shades of tan.

There will be two color choices in the low-price class and three in the medium.

Meanwhile, Hudson also is making plans for armament orders. In the last war they made tanks, Liberty motors for planes, shells, transmissions for tanks and four-wheel drive trucks. Officials, however, are not revealing what the present plans contemplate.

Preparations for production of a new all-metal "flivver plane" designed eventually to sell for $1,000 also is occupying attention. The idea has the backing of Fred J. Fisher, eldest of the family of Fisher brothers and a founder of Fisher corporation.

Fisher confirmed that he is associated in the venture with William B. Stout, a pioneer aeronautical and automotive engineer. A spokesman for Fisher said the plane still was in the experimental stage and plans for mass production would not be made until the trial model is tested and licensed, probably after the first of next year.

The plane was said to be designed for simplified flying with its engine mounted in the rear driving a pusher propeller. It was said to be a two-seater with a range of 500 miles, a cruising speed of 110 miles per hour and a landing speed of 35 miles an hour, and a wingspread of 35 feet.

U. S. Secret Service Wars on Counterfeit

What do you know about dollar bills? About fives, tens or twenties?

Perhaps you are aware that the picture of George Washington appears on all one-dollar bills. But do you know that the first President's likeness appears only on one-dollar bills? Can you say without looking whose portrait is printed on twenty-dollar bills, or tens, or fives?

If you know these things you have made a beginning, even if it is a small one, toward protecting yourself against counterfeit money, according to officials of the United States secret service.

Educating America on how to detect spurious money is one of the jobs that occupies the attention of the secret service. It has been steadily on this job for nearly 80 years.

"Know Your Money" is the slogan of this educational campaign. It is being carried to people everywhere by movies, the radio, lectures, newspapers.

A short-subject motion picture, "Know Your Money," has been shown to more than 25,000,000 persons in the last six months. Thousands of money handlers—tellers, clerks, cashiers—have been taught by secret service agents how to detect counterfeit bills and coins.

For the first six months of 1940 the secret service took out of circulation $44,425—every dollar a loss to someone—compared to $122,254 for the first six months of 1939. This drop of nearly 64 per cent represents the effect of the "Know Your Money" campaign, Secret Service Chief Frank Wilson asserts, adding:

"When we have taught the American people to be completely counterfeit conscious, counterfeiters will quit making counterfeit money because of the impossibility of passing it."

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

MARSHALL E. DIMOCK, now slated, according to report, for appointment to the National Labor Relations board, got along famously with both factions of labor until last winter when he, together with Oscar Chapman, assistant secretary of the interior and Norman Littell, assistant attorney general, started to organize that convention of liberals to be held in Salt Lake City. The project perished as the consequence, so at least it is said, of a statement by John L. Lewis that the convocation had for one of its primary objects the formulation of plans to assist in the launching of a third-term boom. Since then suspicion has been entertained that the symbol, two crossed fingers, has not accurately suggested the relationship between the two men.

While still a professor at the University of Chicago, Dimock was appointed consultant to the national resources commission. Then Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins retained him to survey the procedure of the immigration and naturalization service and afterward named him as her second assistant secretary with full authority over that agency. It was a post that had been vacant for two years as a result of the appointment of Arthur J. Altmeyer as a member of the social security board.

Here Dimock served with efficiency until last July when he was transferred to the department of justice following removal of the immigration and naturalization service from the labor department. If he goes to the NLRB he will succeed J. Warren Madden, the chairman whose five-year term of office expires the latter part of this month. And, if he does receive the appointment, it is not certain he will be named chairman, although the possibility exists.

In various outgivings designed to acquaint both labor and business with his theory that there was no quick route to social stabilization Dimock has often spoken with tolerance and cogency, but with firmness as well. As for instance: "Business must accept a new order in a period of administrative growth and experimentation." He was speaking, among other things, of the Wagner act and the fair labor standards act. Growing pains he regards as an inevitable result of so much new legislation in recent years. "They will diminish," he has said, "as administrators gain more experience."

NEW YORK.—Current interest in Dr. Gerhardt Alois Westrick, noted German supreme court lawyer, relates to the secrecy covering his movements rather than his presence in the United States, which, indeed, was generally known in business and government circles.

His arrival in this country from Germany via Russia to California, thence to New York, last February was duly noted, as was that of his wife and two sons, aged eight and six, a fortnight ago.

His visit, he said at the time, involved a special mission dealing with post-war economic adjustments. The fact that, as a lawyer, he has represented the interests of many American firms in Germany supplied plausibility to the reason advanced for his presence here. But an element of mystery developed as a result of his whereabouts after arriving in New York. He lived in various hotels, and finally established headquarters at the Waldorf-Astoria. Here with a secretary, the handsome Baroness Irmgard von Wagenheim, taking messages and receiving telephone calls, the doctor himself was rarely in evidence. Inquiries as to where he might be found elicited vague response.

Eventually he was discovered as tenant of an attractive residence in Westchester where at this writing he has not been available to callers.

A man of fine physique, 51 years old, gray hair and penetrating green eyes, he is a law partner in Berlin of Dr. Heinrich Albert who was active in this country as a German propagandist before the United States entered the World war in 1917. Accredited in the state department's diplomatic list as a commercial counselor to the German embassy, it is asserted that at least part, if not all, of his mission here relates to the interests of Joachim von Ribbentrop, foreign minister of the Reich, with whom he has been closely associated for many years.

And the Director Meant ABSOLUTE QUIET!

The director was preparing to shoot a scene on stage 6. "Quiet!" he ordered.

A technician stepped on a loose floor-board, and the resultant squeak brought the director whirling round with a yell: "Quiet!"

A makeup man dropped a lipstick, and the almost inaudible thud brought a scream from the director: "Quiet! QUIET! I!"

A hush fell over the set as the camera started to grind and the director signalled to start the action.

Two submachine guns burst into a deafening chatter, pouring a stream of lead into a kitchen filled with crockery.

The scene was over.

GENERAL HUGH S. JOHNSON Says:

A VISIT WITH WILLKIE
COLORADO SPRINGS.—It puts a columnist on a spot to be invited by a presidential candidate to give his (the columnist's) views on public questions to be taken or rejected as the candidate sees fit. It is a spot because a newspaper man's job is to take—not give—opinions, and to use what he can glean to inform the public. In this reversal of roles, I can't be talking about Mr. Willkie's views, as disclosed in two long sessions here, because he has to be absolutely fair to the press, and that means no favorites or exclusive interviews. I can't for another reason, which is that he is my friend and talks in as complete confidence as a man would indulge in with his own brother.

The net result from a newspaper man's viewpoint of a 3,200-mile airplane hop to interview Mr. Willkie is just like taking a dish of spinach to a luxurious banquet or being invited to dig freely in a diamond mine with a pair of eyebrow tweezers.

It's a spot, but his Colorado Springs setting on the toenails of the Rockies at Pike's Peak, is one of the most pleasant and beautiful spots on God's footstool, so I think I can survive the mental anguish.

It is telling no tales to say, from observation here and elsewhere, that Mr. Willkie is surely continuing the process of selling himself on sight. Little Mary Pickford, who had lunch with us, went away in raptures. She has marvelously preserved her stature in public respect and adoration—and otherwise. She is going to be a help.

If enough potential crusaders like Mary can meet Mr. Willkie in such circumstances, his lack of an old-fashioned political organization won't count for so much.

There is no question of his appeal and political "It" in personal contacts, whether it is with single individuals or in crowds. He has all that it takes. What remains to be seen, is what he can do on the radio and the content of his speeches. The Republican platform was so indefinite that Mr. Willkie will have to chart the party course almost single-handed. It is some chore!

The Republicans were leading at this stage of the 1936 campaign, but from the very day of Mr. Landon's undistinguished opener at West Middlesex they started on a toboggan slide that left them two states. Mr. Landon's theme was: "The New Deal is perfect, but I can deal it better. That left no issue, save one of personalities. As between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Landon, that was just no contest.

There will be a contest in that field this time. Some people say that in his engaging exterior, Mr. Willkie is just another Roosevelt. Nothing could be further from the truth. The only point of similarity is that they are both pleasant gentlemen. Mr. Roosevelt's charm is that of a cultured actor. Mr. Willkie's is far more roughshod and homely. I believe that most people will regard it as more genuine.

But he is going to need more than that. He will have to make issues far more clear than they are today and convince people that his is the right side.

One handicap of Mr. Landon was that Col. Frank Knox and Ogden Mills were speaking with him—but not the same language. Mr. Willkie may have a similar problem. Mr. Hoover is going to make at least two speeches. He is a thoughtful, experienced and respected American, but Mr. Hoover's speeches represent Mr. Hoover's doctrine and nothing else whatever. They will be attempts not to sell Willkie, but to sell the present edition of Hooverism—which may be something as different as Knox and Mills from Alfred Landon.

That would be one great handicap and there are many others. However, Mr. Willkie's life habit has been overcoming seemingly impossible handicaps, like getting a Democrat nominated on a Republican ticket. None of these new ones compares with that. Let's wait and see.

TRAINING PILOTS

Unconformable stories about the Germans sending partly trained boys to attack in flights, relying on only one or two ships equipped with modern instruments and piloted by really trained leaders may be true. They also may explain the astonishing British claims of bringing down three or four German ships for every one they lose.

That is too expensive a policy, and we certainly do not want to risk cities, ships, convoys—not to mention young lives and costly planes—on that kind of training.

The Civil Aeronautics administration is exerting great efforts to get some interest and primary training into young men by subsidizing older pilots to train them—at so much a head—for eight hours with dual control. Then the kid goes up solo.

After that he has 22 hours—altogether 30. He isn't supposed to be a pilot, but to have had his primary training—$325 worth.

Will the army and navy entrust its expensive military ships to these boys? Almost certainly no.

HOLLYWOOD is all agog over a contest that's to take place on August 25th at the RKO studios. The participants are Jack Oakie and George Bancroft, and the event is—of all things!—a table-setting contest!

It all started when a Los Angeles department store persuaded ten prominent men about town to set tables as each thought they should be set. Oakie and Bancroft saw the exhibit, and the argument was on, each being perfectly sure that he could out-do the other if ever—heaven forbid—he had to set a table. First thing they knew, they'd arranged the contest; the only rules are that they'll use modern American glassware and keep expenditures down to $40. The loser will set a table and serve dinner for 16 of the winner's friends.

Vivian Leigh and Laurence Olivier are to be co-starred in a story based on the romance of Lord Nelson and Lady Hamilton, an Alexander Korda picture. Remembering what a superb picture he made of "Henry the Eighth," it seems certain that his version of the famous love story of the famous admiral will be one of the year's best pictures.

Phyllis Kennedy ought to succeed if anybody should—first she broke her back, and later she accepted advice that wasn't very good and lost a grand opportunity—and now she's started toward the top again.

In 1933 she was dancing with a troupe in Denver, and fell and fractured her spine. Doctors said she'd never walk again. Two years later she was dancing once more. She was engaged for chorus work in the Astaire-Rogers musicals, and her gift for comedy got her the role of the maid in "Stage Door." Warner Brothers offered her a contract, but she hesitated, let people tell her what to do, and the chance slipped away.

She's working now in "Honey-moon for Three," and Lloyd Bacon, who's directing, is helping by building up her role. Watch her—she's bound to get ahead this time!

Douglas Fairbanks Jr. may have been something of a playboy some years ago, but now he's nothing if not a solid citizen. Married happily, and the proud father of a three-year-old daughter, he's not only the star of Columbia's "Before I Die," but its co-producer as well. That means being on the set early and late, whether he's appearing before the cameras or not.

The girls of Hollywood are wearing red, white and blue these days. Penny Singleton appeared at a benefit in a cotton evening gown having a white skirt and a bodice that was red and blue; Anita Louise, told to wear a novelty necklace in "I'm for Rent," chose a silver chain from which were suspended miniature flags of the 23 American countries; Evelyn Keyes has a red, white and blue straw hat, and Frances Robinson's leather handbag has a flag on either side.

Uncle Ezra's Rosedale Silver Cornet Band rehearses longer than the actors on that popular radio program, just to achieve those peculiar off-key effects that drive music lovers mad. The reason the band has to rehearse so long to sound so discordant is that each man is an accomplished musician. "We work harder than Toscanini," declared Director Bruce Kamman. "Just to perfect a musical mistake!"

Paramount's going to do right handsomely by Joel McCrea—he's been assigned to the lead in "Bottom Bay," a story by James Norman Hall, one of the authors of "Mutiny on the Bounty."

"Bottom Bay" is one of those highly dramatic tales, laid in the period just after the American Revolution.

Jean Hersholt's dream of years, a Hollywood home for aged and incapacitated film workers, is now a reality. As president of the Motion Picture Relief fund, he and members of the organization's executive committee will soon begin looking for a site for the home. They have more than a half million dollars, earned by the stars who donated their services to the CBS Screen Guild program so that the money could go into the fund.

Simple Simon
 By JANE OSBORN
 (McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

FOOLISH to get down to your last gallon of gasoline. Kate Lawson knew it, but when you are down to your last quarter there is nothing else to do. Fortunately Kate managed to start her flivver, and once started she felt that she could get to town where—she had her month's allowance in her purse—she could get her tank full again. The important thing was not to stop on the way.

And Kate wouldn't have stopped if she hadn't been distracted by the sight of a dignified looking young man sitting on the edge of the highway with a fishing pole, the end of which dangled in a battered tin pail. The young man wore a foolscap and on his breast a placard bearing the words "SIMPLE SIMON."

Kate was so amazed that she slowed down—slowed down and stopped. Then she looked at the young man. A lunatic he must be, still he looked very intelligent, even dignified. She tried to start again but without success. Then she got out of her car.

"What are you doing?" she asked with much gentleness of the apparently harmless idiot.

"Fishing for a whale," he said without a smile.

"But really—" she repeated, "what are you sitting there for?"

"Fishing for a whale," said the young man placidly.

Kate, thoroughly frightened, jumped into her car.

"I'm harmless," he assured her. "I can help you perhaps. Fool procedure for a man of my age. But no one is looking. Is your battery dead?"

Much relieved Kate explained her difficulty, explained too that she hadn't intended to stop but had slowed up to look at him. They were a mile from a gas station and the young man, laying aside his foolscap and placard, started out on foot to get some gas, leaving Kate guarding his pail and tackle. He was brought back by a rattling garage car, bearing the gasoline can. He had paid for the gasoline and the car service, of course, and when Kate protested he assured her that he had that privilege since it was his fault that she had stopped on the highway.

He looked at his watch. Some of the hazers would be along presently to get him and carry him back to college, but he'd take a chance and go with Kate if she'd take him. He'd probably get a double dose of it the next day, for not having waited, but what of that?

So Kate went a little out of her way to take him back—finding room in the car for the pail and rod. She wanted to know more about the young man, who seemed somewhat too old, too well poised, for the average freshman. But the young man volunteered no information. He did, however, ask Kate about herself, found out her name and where she lived, and asked permission to call and thank her in a day or so. Then he said he would tell her all about himself—that is, all there was to tell.

Kate's brother was a sophomore in the same nearby college and that evening she asked him all about the hazing.

He told her with some relish of some of the absurd tasks set the freshmen. "But there's one fellow named Simon—Simon Baldwin—he had to fish for whales in a pail—because his name was Simon," her brother explained. "That did seem rubbing it in a bit. I mean considering that he's an older man and a man of importance."

"Just who is this Simon Baldwin?" asked Jane. "I'd like to meet him."

"Swell chance," explained the brother. "He's much too influential to bother with college dances. Why he's one of the big Baldwins—no end of money—some pluck, I'll say, to come to college for a fellow like that."

Kate insisted on knowing all about it so her brother explained. At the age when other boys were going to college, Simon Baldwin was studying abroad—no regular university course—just studying languages and seeing the world. Then he came home and went into business—the big Baldwin works. He had done big things there for a man of twenty-six.

"If you have any influence with your class, get them to stop the hazing," said Kate. Her brother objected that to do that would lead his classmates to suspect he was toadying to the Baldwin millions.

"Tell them that he is a very good friend of your sister's," said Kate. "Mr. Simon Baldwin is coming to call in a day or so."

And somehow Kate's brother did get his classmates to stop hazing Simon Baldwin—and a few evenings later Simon called on Kate. Before the mid-term exam and Simon were engaged.

"We'll just be married," said Simon, "and I'll give up here at college. I wanted to do it but I want to do this a whole lot more."

"Why can't you do both, Simon?" said Kate. "We could take a tiny house near college—and I could do the work—and maybe I could study a little too so as not to be too ignorant."

And that's the way they worked it out.

Eliminating Blemishing Birthmarks

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
 (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

BIRTHMARKS occur more frequently in girls than in boys, about three to one, so that it was not surprising perhaps that one of the Dionne quintuplets should have a birthmark or haemangioma, as it is called. By means of radium, Dr. Howard Kelly of Baltimore successfully removed this blemish. A haemangioma is a growth of tissue containing small blood vessels.

The first thought many mothers have when they discover a birthmark—strawberry mark, port wine stain, blood tumor—is that radium must be used. It will be gratifying to mothers to know that unless the mark is large or is very thick and raised above the skin, a simple method of removing these marks or stains is available.

Dr. Norman M. Wrong, Toronto, in the Canadian Medical Association, reports a series of 156 patients with angioma treated by carbon dioxide snow at the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

"The technique of the treatment of skin diseases by carbon dioxide snow is both simple and inexpensive. A chamois bag is placed over the nozzle of a tank of carbon dioxide and when the gas escapes the temperature is lowered to such an extent that some of it is converted into snow. This is then made into a suitably sized pencil in a wooden mold and the pencil is applied to the tumor with firm pressure."

While this is simple enough, Dr. Wrong states that experience is required in determining the length of time to keep snow applied to the tumor, amount of pressure to use and the type of tumor which is best treated by this freezing with carbon dioxide snow.

Early Treatment Advisable.

The usual types are (a) the port wine stain with no increase in tissue, (b) the strawberry mark with large vessels immediately beneath the skin and (c) the enlarged lump or growth of blood vessels and tissue raised above the skin. Experience with these marks and growths makes it advisable that, instead of waiting for them to disappear treatment should be given as early as possible if the child is well. It is in the thin small marks that the carbon dioxide snow is most effective.

Sunstroke and Heat Exhaustion

SUNSTROKE and heat exhaustion are two different ailments and require somewhat different treatment.

In sunstroke you may feel tired and dizzy before the regular symptoms occur. These are headache, feeling of oppression, sometimes a tightness in the chest, great thirst, restlessness, frequent desire to pass urine, hot skin, a "sicky" feeling, flushed face and high temperature, finally unconsciousness.

Treatment in sunstroke is to lay the patient in a cool, shady place, off the ground if possible or on the ground on newspapers or clothing if no bench or table is available. Cold cloths are then applied to back of neck, face and chest, clothing removed, body sprinkled with water. The head should be kept high and patient fanned with a towel or piece of clothing. When patient is able to swallow, some cool water containing a pinch of salt should be given.

In heat exhaustion due to working in a hot, ill ventilated room, there is at first usually faintness, headache, dizziness and a staggering gait. The face is pale instead of flushed and skin is cold and damp, and low temperature (not high) is present. Unconsciousness may or may not occur.

In the treatment of heat exhaustion, patient is laid in a cool spot, cold applications made to the head and heat (by hot water bags or other methods) applied to the body. If patient is conscious he is given as much water as he can drink containing a quarter teaspoonful of salt to each glass of water. If he is unconscious, the salt solution is used as an enema.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—What would cause the veins in my hands and arms to be especially prominent? I am only 22 years old.

A.—Your veins may be very near the surface or you have not much fat under the skin. Exercise of any kind would be helpful, giving the heart more driving power.

Q.—What causes gas pains?

A.—Gas pains may be due to a sluggish liver and gall bladder, or to foods that cause gas such as cabbage, onions, lettuce and others.

Grass stains can easily be removed from linens, cottons or white stockings by rubbing the stains with molasses before washing.

Make cuts in marshmallows, insert bits of butter and jelly. Arrange on crackers and broil or bake until the marshmallows are puffy and brown.

When laundering curtains of voile, scrim or any material which has to be ironed, if they are folded so the selvage ends are together and ironed, they will hang perfectly even and straight.

Mustard and baking powder settle in cans and should be stirred lightly before using.

Clean paint brushes used for enameling with turpentine. When used to shellac, clean with denatured alcohol.

All vegetables should be put on to cook in boiling water. This holds the major portion of the mineral matter and starch within.

Firing One-Ton Shell

The aiming of a 16-inch coast-defense gun, which can effectively shoot a 2,100-pound projectile a distance of 26 miles, is based on many factors, such as the target's distance, direction and speed, curvature and rotation of the earth and the direction and velocity of the wind.

When blowing at 20 miles an hour, a cross wind alone can carry this shell as much as 303 yards off its course during the 101 seconds that it is in the air.—Collier's.

WORLEY SPOKE HERE MONDAY NIGHT

Laughingly citing a rumor that he had the financial backing of large oil companies and special interests, Gene Worley of Shamrock, candidate for Congress, told a street audience here Monday night, "If this had been my name, would have been much more familiar to you people of this section than it is today."

"But I never had the money to print whole newspapers telling what a great guy I am. I never had the money to have my name and picture printed on billboards as large as the side of a barn. No one offered to rent air-conditioned booths where I could sit and broadcast my message to you by radio. I had to chase over this big district, like a chicken with its head off from sun-up to dark, meeting as many of you as possible and asking you to help spread the news of my candidacy."

"And I want to emphasize that I have no politically entrenched relatives in Amarillo to pass the word down the line that I am the candidate certain interests wished elected. All I could do in the first primary was hit it out on my own, as I had the disadvantage of having an outstanding, popular young man from my home town in the same race, preventing my neighbors from aiding either of us. And I want to say I appreciate what the people of Wheeler county are doing for me in this run-off campaign now."

Worley, 31-year-old legislator who has represented the 122nd district comprising Gray, Wheeler, Collingsworth and Donley counties for the past six years, recalled he did not have an opponent when he announced for a third term in 1938.

"I want to ask you, if my record hadn't been good on agriculture, social security, schools and moral issues during my first four years in the Texas legislature, don't you know somebody in these four large coun-

DESKINS WELLS

Plunging into the final week of his congressional campaign, Deskins Wells of Collingsworth county continued to pile up a string of unprecedented in the political history of the Panhandle, bearing out the earnest belief of Deck Wells and his friends that the people of the Panhandle—the independent voters—want a man of accomplishment, with an agricultural background as their representative in Congress.

Wells led his opponent 6,000 votes in the primary, carrying 22 out of 28 counties. He was especially strong in the agricultural sections.

"This thing stands out everywhere I go, on the high plains or under the caprock. The people want a man to work for them who understands their needs. They want a man young enough to give his youth in service for the Panhandle, but old enough to show mature judgment and clear thinking," Deck Wells said.

Wells, son of an old pioneer family, was born and raised on a farm near Wellington.

Deskins Wells, his wife, and hundreds of his friends, from his home county and from every county of the district, have during the last four weeks conducted a whirlwind campaign which has reached every community of the Panhandle. Abandoning political strategy, this campaign has become one great crusade of friends. Some of them have known Deck Wells all his life. Some of them are as new as his present campaign.

But everyone is knowing that Deck Wells is a man to be onto, is working from dawn to midnight for Des would have opposed me for a third term?

"If you wish to know further what kind of a man I am, I respectfully refer you to any one of the 10 candidates for this congressional office who were eliminated in the July congressional primary. I believe every one of them will vote for me."

MAX BOYER

"The people of the Panhandle know my platform," Wells continued. "They know I am for the farm program, for old age pensions, for national defense, for oil conservation, for the recognition of the rights of labor and for the strict enforcement of immigration laws. But more than that, they know that Deck Wells will be a representative of every person in the 38th Congressional District, serving no clique or special groups," he said.

Deskins Wells proved his sincere interest in serving the real welfare of the people when he demonstrated that he would make a personal sacrifice in making his word good. Early in the race it appeared that Marvin Jones might be willing to serve the people of the Panhandle for another term, and Deskins Wells was one of the three candidates who said they would withdraw from the race if Marvin Jones ran. Now, by the will of the people, Deskins Wells is the only man remaining in the race who was willing to make this personal sacrifice for the good of the district.

Deskins Wells is able to serve the Panhandle. He has had 15 years practical, down-to-earth business experience with people in every walk of life. In recognition of this, his home town twice chose him its mayor. During these two terms, Deskins Wells reduced the bonded indebtedness of Wellington from $220,000 to $163,000.

Success in his chosen profession as an editor was recognized when he was chosen president of the Panhandle Press Association, and later of the Texas Press Association.

Governor W. Lee O'Daniel last year appointed him as one of the five men to serve on the Texas Coronado Quarto Centennial Commission. He is still serving on this commission.

Since his entry into the Congressional race, Deskins Wells has received the unqualified endorsement of practically every group in Collingsworth County. First group to endorse him was the Collingsworth County Agricultural Association, which he helped to form, and of which he serves as secretary-treasurer. Three chapters of Future Farmers of America are actively supporting Wells.

The Ministerial Association of Wellington put their approval on Deck Wells.

P. O. Masten, president of the Master Farmers of the United States and Canada, and president of the Master Farmers of Texas, and Guy Beasley Master Farmer of Texas, have said: "Deck Wells is the man for the farmers to send to Congress. He's practical, and he can get things done."

"I did what Governor O'Daniel said should be done in every town, city, and county in the state as a whole," Deskins Wells told enthusiastic audiences in Dimmitt, Tulla, Silvertown, Turkey, Estelline, and Memphis, Saturday.

"While serving as mayor of Wellington from 1933 to 1937, I reduced the bonded indebtedness of the city from $220,000 to $163,000, without sacrificing any of the essential governmental services. This is what Governor O'Daniel says should be done in every city and every county in this state."

"I offer the people of the Panhandle," Wells declared, "15 years experience in working with and for people in all walks of life—15 years experience on the working end of critical problems."

"As secretary-treasurer of the Collingsworth County Agricultural Association, as a cooperater in the farm program, and as editor of a country weekly in an agricultural country, I have been on the working end of farm problems, and the over 81 per cent total vote I received in my home county is ample testimony to the fairness and the efficiency with which I have done this work."

"As mayor of Wellington I have been on the working end of the real problem I know the W. P. A. and the P. W. A. program in detail just as I know the farm program. During my term as mayor, we took care of our part of the employment situation by building $50,000 worth of paved streets in Wellington, during the same time the bonded indebtedness was being reduced. I donated my salary as mayor to the destitute, the sick and the unemployed, and today you will find these people hoping and wishing that the people of the Panhandle will send Deskins Wells to Washington as their representative and your representative."

Max Boyer, the leading candidate for State Senator, who received 42% of the total votes cast in the first Primary, enters the final days of the run-off campaign with the assurance that he will have the opportunity to serve the average citizens for four years, when the final count is made August 24.

In accounting to the public for the service he has rendered the average citizen during the past four years, Max Boyer stated, "I believe the statement made by Governor O'Daniel in the daily newspapers following his election July 28, is the best recommendation I can give the people at this time."

Governor O'Daniel said, "The record of the 46th Legislature reflects the fact that you had 94 House members who did everything they could to aid in solving the Social Security problem. I urge that you take the record and from the record decide which candidate will most likely make the most efficient public servant."

"A second recommendation to the voters who are not familiar with my type of service can be found in the votes of the ten counties I have served during the past four years. This record shows that 81% of the average citizens have been well satisfied with the work I have done, because they returned me to office with the majority vote. An additional proof of my service can be found in the fact that each of the ten counties I have represented gave me an outstanding majority vote over both opponents in the first primary election. I believe my legislative record in behalf of the farmers, truckers, independent merchants, industrial workers, and ranchers justifies the approval I have received during this race. It is a well established fact that I have cooperated with both Governors in trying to solve the social security problem of this state. The general public has agreed with Governor O'Daniel in recognizing the fact that this vital social security problem could not be solved until the state officials who cooperated were re-elected and those who blocked this legislation were replaced by efficient officers who would cooperate with Governor O'Daniel. This fact was recognized by many of the legislators during the last term of the 45th legislature. These legislators voted to adjourn the state legislature in order to save tax-payers more than five thousand dollars ($5,000.00) per day when it became well established that there was no hopes of solving this social security problem so long as the minority group was determined to block this worthwhile legislation. It is interesting to note that the action of these legislators not only showed they were cooperating with the governor, but were cooperating with the tax-payers and that this was the proper action, since no legislation was passed to solve this problem during the 41 days that the legislature remained in session after May 10. It is also interesting to note that Governor O'Daniel recognized this hopeless situation and refused to call a special session of the legislature to spend needlessly the taxpayers money."

"I believe a third recommendation to the average voters has been earned by your leading candidate for State Senator, because he has received the persecution of the Amarillo Political Machine, that has dominated the Panhandle for the last 12 years. It is amusing to note the extent to which this efficient political machine will go in order to cloud the vital issues in this run-off race. In their desperation, they have selected such things as a telephone number, and the fact that I have been compelled to reside temporarily in a hotel in Amarillo as issues in this campaign. Surely the average citizen realizes that a candidate for State Senator cannot pitch a tent on the municipal lawn, when it becomes necessary for him to remain overnight in the largest city in the Panhandle. It is an insult to the intelligence of the average citizen to classify a man as a permanent resident of the largest city in the Panhandle. I have repeatedly stated from the platform that my address would be Perryton, Texas, and that if I move from Perryton, Texas, to the largest city in the Panhandle, I would turn in my resignation to the Governor of the State."

"I have conducted a clean campaign and have never cast one reflection on the name of my Amarillo opponent. I believe that the high-type of citizenship of this Panhandle country appreciates this type of political campaign, and will not be fooled by the mud-slinging that lowers those who sling the mud."

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Carter and family returned from their vacation trip the latter part of last week.

Rev. and Mrs. C. Carl Dollar, who spent a part of last week vacationing in the mountains of New Mexico, returned home last Friday evening, well pleased with their outing.

WHY MAX BOYER Should Be Elected STATE SENATOR

BECAUSE--Max Boyer has served for the past four years as a member of the Texas House of Representatives and has gained much experience which qualifies him to the promotion to the State Senate.

BECAUSE--Max Boyer received 79% of all votes in the ten counties which he served.

BECAUSE--Max Boyer has co-operated with two governors of this state and has voted at all times for measures to pay old age pensions, aid for the blind, the dependent children and for teacher's retirement.

BECAUSE--Max Boyer received a letter from the Governor commending him and thanking him for his co-operation and help in assisting the old people and others included the Social Security program, which letter was written on May 30, 1939.

BECAUSE--Max Boyer, when he saw that no program would be passed by the Legislature, after the Senate had killed all measures passed by the House, and he had voted for S J R 12, he then voted to adjourn the Legislature which was costing the taxpayers of this State over $5,000.00 per day.
