

CHARGES MAJORITY FAILS TO CARRY OUT CAMPAIGN PLEDGES

REPRESENTATIVE CONNALLY DISCUSSES WORK OF PRESENT CONGRESS.

RESULT CONFIRMS ALL CLAIMS OF DEMOCRATS

Discusses Prospects For Legislative Enactments During Present Session.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—In the opinion of Representative Tom Connally of Marlin, Texas, who recently returned from that state to resume his duties in congress, the republicans have failed lamentably to carry out their campaign pledges and, so far as the tariff is concerned, he gravely questions whether there is any present intention to do so.

As the most active democrat on the committee on foreign affairs in the house, Congressman Connally also has viewed with amusement the efforts to reconcile republican pledges on "peace" with performances. The result, he contends, fully confirms all that the democrats said when the house and senate passed the Knox resolution in such feverish haste.

Speaking of the prospects for legislative enactments by this congress, the Texas said:

"You ask me what important legislation the present session of congress will enact. It is probable that the only legislation of a major character will be the passage of some form of revenue bill. The house has already passed a revenue revision measure, which wholly fails to meet the expectations of the country with respect to the relief which was promised during the presidential campaign. This measure is now in the senate, and while it may possibly be radically changed from the form in which it passed the house, the indications, from what is happening in the senate, are that the bill will prove a distinct disappointment to those who are expecting real reform in the internal revenue laws.

"When the present session convened in April the high protectionists in congress and the administration let it be known that they expected to pass as quickly as possible a tariff measure which would raise to a high figure the rates on imports. Such a bill was presented by Mr. Fordney's committee and whipped through the house under a special rule and practically without amendment. While the democrats were unable to defeat the measure, they were able during the debate to advise the country of the unjust and disastrous features of the bill. As a result of the exposures by the democrats of its provisions, protests have been pouring into Washington from all parts of the country against the speedy enactment of any tariff measure carrying the rates and provisions of the Fordney bill. The first concrete result was found in the decision of the republican leaders in the senate to postpone consideration of the tariff until after action on the revenue bill. They began to feel the pressure of public opinion and reluctantly yielded to a measure, expecting, however, to pass the bill at the present session of congress. Opposition to the Fordney bill, however, grew so rapidly and became so insistent that it has now been given out in administration circles that, on account of the disturbed condition of world trade, it is not deemed advisable to attempt to pass a high tariff bill at the present session of congress. The reasons given are that it is feared a high tariff would still further decrease America's declining foreign trade and prevent foreign nations paying their debts to America with goods, and that banks and business men question the wisdom of returning to the protective principle on the scale proposed in the Fordney measure. These are among the very reasons so cogently and forcefully urged by the democrats during the consideration of the bill in the house. It is now understood that the president opposes the passage of any permanent tariff bill until after the adjournment of the present session of congress. This probably means that the Fordney bill will sleep until the spring of 1922.

"American foreign trade has been at a low figure since 1921, and a high tariff would still aggravate that condition. In addition, of course, a high tariff will always tax the consumer for the benefit of the manufacturers and tariff favorites. Let us hope that the Fordney bill may never be presented again in its present form.

"The weakness and vacillation of the present administration in dealing with the tariff, with Germany, has been recently strikingly illustrated. Senator Harding in his speech accepting the republican nomination said: 'I promise formal and effective peace as quickly as a republican congress can pass its declaration for a republican executive to sign.' In pursuance of this campaign pledge the Knox peace resolution was forced through congress in June of the present year. The democrats pointed out the conduct of the administration itself, and effectively made by means of a resolution of congress, but that the only formal and effective manner of making peace was by treaty. It was pointed out that the president had ample power either to submit to the senate the treaty of Versailles, with such reservations as he might approve, or that he could negotiate a wholly new treaty.

The whole project of the resolution of peace by congress was denounced as a mere scheme to seem to redeem a foolish campaign pledge. The democratic position has been amply vindicated by the conduct of the administration itself. Though the Knox peace resolution passed both bodies and was signed by the president, no proclamation was ever issued by the president. Instead, however, new treaties of peace have been negotiated with Germany and Austria and are now pending in the senate, but they are now separate peace treaties. If "formal and effective peace" could have been brought about by a resolution of congress, why the necessity for separate treaties. The resolution by congress did not bring either "formal" or "effective" peace.

The administration itself has treated the peace resolution, whose adoption it urged, as merely a scrap of paper, an insipid, futile and ineffective thing. The democratic contention that truly formal and effective peace could only properly be brought about by the instrumentality of a treaty of peace has been amply and indisputably justified by the acts and conduct and practical admissions of the republican administration. The new separate peace treaties are now pending in the senate and all probability will be ratified by that body.

"Of course it is probable that some of the routine matters of minor importance will be disposed of during the remainder of the session, but it is not believed that any legislation, which in the public mind is considered important, will be enacted, unless it be some form of revenue bill.

BLOOD, TEARS AND CASH IN EVIDENCE IN CITY TRIBUNAL

Everything from tears to blood flowed at the Monday morning session of the city police court.

Fighters galore were on hand to expound to the court the causes of their tears, spattered features, and traffic violators, victims of the new ordinances effective last Saturday, orated and argued in defense of themselves. Four men who had engaged in a rough and tumble fight in the Hearne hotel early Monday appeared with bandaged heads, black eyes and bloody shirts, and another six-footer burst into tears when Judge Ogilvie fined him $5 for driving his car without a tail light.

"It's the first fine I ever paid," he sobbed, "but if you fellows need it, maybe I can do without my meals a day or two and pay it."

The hotel row, which involved two ranch hands and two local men, came up for trial first and resulted in all four of the combatants drawing $25 fines. Extract of corn and an argument over a mule were the main factors in disturbing the tranquility of what otherwise would have been a peaceable little midnight party.

The two ranchmen evidently got the worst of the deal as a physician had to be called to patch up their heads. A fight between two Mexicans followed the opening brawl and after testimony had been presented through interpreter Jimmy Gonzalez, the judge fined one man $5 and released the other.

A third fight, staged Saturday evening between two young men and which was also caused by excessive use of liquid cheer, enriched the city coffers to the extent of $30.

Over $75 in cash bonds was collected Saturday and Sunday from traffic violators, but only a few of these were forfeited Monday. Defendants in traffic cases are allowed two days in which to appear and stand trial, and most of these, after putting up a cash bond, never return to court. Until the two days have expired the bonds cannot be forfeited by the court.

Of the few who did appear Monday, two offered alibis and were dismissed. Two others, one of whom was the virgin law breaker that had never before been punished, were found in and were fined $5 each.

In the absence of City Attorney Mann, Zeb Nixon, local attorney, acted as prosecutor for the city.

Both Branches of Negro Methodists Building Homes

Jubilee singers of the colored M. E. church sang two old-time spiritual songs at the First M. E. Church South Sunday night at $15 per song. They just had to have $250 to meet a payment on their new church building, and they got almost that much in the collection that was taken while they sang. Monday committee of the African M. E. church were out raising money to complete their church building. This is a different sort of Methodist altogether from the colored M. E. church. Both congregations are working for new houses of worship.

WILSON SUGGESTED DISARMAMENT PLAN

Former President's Proposal Revealed
By Publication of Page
Letters.

By N. E. A. Service
NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The Wilson administration, as early as 1913, was pushing plans for a disarmament conference like the one called by President Harding for November.

This fact is revealed in letters of Walter H. Page, late ambassador to Great Britain, printed in the October issue of World's Work.

The letters point to the efforts of former President Wilson, Col. E. M. House and Page to get Great Britain and Germany together in a conference with the United States and find a means to use their enormous military expenditures and resources for peaceful and humane purposes.

In a letter to Colonel House on Aug. 28, 1913, Page wrote: "Here are great armies and armies and great withdrawals of men from industry—an enormous waste. Here are all the privileges and taxes that this state of things involves—every one a hindrance to human progress. There is no future in Europe's vision—no longer look ahead. They give all their thought to the immediate danger. The great powers are mere threats to one another, content to check one the other."

Way Out Needed
In a memorandum, written about the same time, Page added: "A way must be found out of this stagnant watching. Else a way will have to be fought out of it, and a great European war would set the old world, perhaps the whole world, back a long way. It seems impossible to talk the great powers out of their fear of one another or to 'Hague' them out of it. They'll never be persuaded to disarm. The only way left seems to be to find some common and useful work for these great armies to do."

"Nobody can lead in such a new era but the United States."
"May there not come such a chance in Mexico—to clean out bandits, yellow fever, malaria, hookworm—all to make the country healthy and to give life and investment, and for orderly self-government at last?"
"May not the existing military power of Europe conceivably be diverted, gradually, to this use?"

Wilson Enthused
President Wilson was enthusiastic, wrote House. Page's idea of the treatment of backward nations had strongly impressed both Wilson and House. It developed into a plan for an Anglo-American-German compact to deal not only with "disarmament, but other matters of equal importance to themselves and the world at large."

But Page's faith in Germany. He had no faith in an alliance that included Germany as an equal partner. He did believe in the co-operation of the English speaking countries.

On Feb. 24, 1914, he wrote House and referred him to the campaign of 1870 to reduce armaments, "when old Bismarck dumped the whole lot and applied by marching against France."

"You know I sometimes fear some sort of repetition of that experience," he added.

House in Germany
This series of letters and England's informal approval of Page's plan moved President Wilson to send House to Germany to confer with the ex-kaiser. When House arrived in Berlin, in late May, 1914, Germany's military leaders were openly opposed to his even seeing their ruler.

When House did get an interview with the Kaiser, he did not mention the subject, was not disarmament. It was first that the Kaiser and then the "utility" of Bryan's arbitration treaty which all great nations except Germany had already ratified.

The Kaiser's parting words were: "Every nation in Europe has its bayonets pointing at Germany. But we are ready."
The assassination of the Archduke Ferdinand soon after put an end to Wilson's disarmament plans.

Zuhke, wife of a wealthy New York importer, who had been missing since Thursday, was found Saturday night in a barn on the Zuhke estate near Madison, it became known today. Mrs. Zuhke died a few minutes after being found.

When found by her husband and a party of neighbors, Mrs. Zuhke had already become unconscious. A private physician was called and later the Madison authorities announced today. The coroner declared it to be a case of suicide.

Six months ago her only son, Paul, committed suicide in the chemical laboratory of a Morristown public school by inhaling deadly fumes. Mrs. Zuhke is said to have brooded since.

Pain In Muscles And Joints Caused By Rheumatism

To Get Genuine Relief You
Must Clear Your Blood
Of Waste Products

If we could keep our human bodies clean of the poisons which accumulate in them daily, we would give them the full benefit of proper diet, we should live far beyond the average span of human life.

But alas! We realize only too often that we have an excess of waste products in our system. This poisonous waste matter not only causes a lowered vitality and many forms of skin disorders, but it also causes rheumatism—a disease that has no equal for pain. Genuine relief from the agonies of rheumatism can be had only by correcting the basic trouble—waste products.

Thousands and thousands of men and women during the past 50 years have cleared their blood of waste products with S. S. S. It is the ideal remedy for rheumatism, because it removes the poisonous waste matter which is causing the trouble. There are no bad after effects and the result is wonderful. Begin taking S. S. S. today and write for 56-page illustrated booklet, "Pain About the Blood"—free.

Personal medical advice, without charge may also be had by sending a complete description of your case. Address: Chief Medical Director, Swift Specific Co., 723 S. S. S. Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga. All drug stores sell S. S. S.

Little Journeys to the Homes of Friends of CARDUI

MRS. JAMES CONATSER
(From a Snapshot Photograph)

THE CONATSER HOME
Nestled in a picturesque spot amid the Cumberland Mountains.

Mr. & Mrs. James Conatser

Did you ever go on a journey, expecting some interesting happening at the end of your trip, and find that the most interesting part of your journey was an unexpected adventure in the middle of it?

Well, that was what happened to me, on a trip I was making to visit the home of a friend in Fentress County, Tennessee, on a remote rural road. After traveling several miles from the railroad station, over a rocky road, night finally overtook me near Jamestown. Looking around, I spied a comfortable-looking farm house and, upon investigating, found it was the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Conatser, owners of one of the largest farms in that part of Tennessee.

At their hospitable invitation, I spent the night with them, and the acquaintance thus begun ripened into a closer relationship, leading me recently, while in Jamestown, to again visit these kind friends during the daytime, on which occasion they took me on a trip of inspection around the farm, pointing out things and places of interest and conversing freely about eventual items in their life and history.

The Conatser home nestles in a picturesque spot, amid the hills of Fentress County, a cool and pleasant resting place after the hot and dusty trip from Jamestown. A few steps from the house, the crystal waters from a cool spring trickle over a rock, furnishing a refreshing drink for wayfarers like myself.

Under the rock, forming a natural refrigerator, was kept the family milk, butter and cream. Some of the latter was requisitioned by our hosts and we went to the house, where we enjoyed a good dish of home-grown berries and real country cream.

On a well-kept farm like this, living expenses do not seem to be high, for, as Mrs. Conatser explained, there is an abundance of fresh butter, milk, cheese, honey, chickens, berries of all kinds, vegetables and fruit, to be had as wanted.

Mr. Conatser is a descendant of the American Conatsers, who fought in the War of Independence. In 1780, one of these Conatsers fought against the British troops in the battle of King's Mountain, North Carolina, carrying through the fight a powder horn which became an heirloom of the family and was finally presented to the late President McKinley, who wrote a letter of thanks, saying he regarded it as one of his most prized souvenirs.

This part of Tennessee formed, at one time, as is well known, one of the favorite hunting grounds of several of the aboriginal tribes, chiefly the Cherokees, one of the Five Nations of Iroquoian stock, made famous by Fenimore Cooper. All of these tribes were agricultural, and were noted for their large communal houses, palisaded towns, and ability to organize. The Cherokees were the only Indians who invented an alphabet of their own, of 84 characters, which is still in use, and in which they now have their own printed newspapers and books. The tribe, today, is settled, with others, in what is known as the Indian Reservation, in Oklahoma.

Knowing something, as I do, of the history of the American aborigines, it was extremely interesting to me to find on the Conatser farm an immense cave, hollowed out of solid rock, which had evidently been used as a tomb by a body of this tribe of Indians.

For many years the rock had been unnoticed, except as a landmark, surrounded by cultivated fields on the Conatser farm, but one day it occurred to Mr. Conatser to make some practical use of the cave, and he proceeded to open it up and investigate. Finding the floor covered deep with ashes, he began to clean the ashes away. Discovering that the ashes were valuable as fertilizer, he utilized hundreds of loads for fertilizing his farm land.

While digging and loosening the ashes, several skeletons and relics were found, which, upon examination, proved to be those of prehistoric Indians. One well-preserved skeleton was that of a man, who had been laid to rest with a piece of flint under his head. Another skeleton, much smaller, was thought to be that of a girl. With this was discovered a terrapin shell bowl, in which was a spoon carved from a mussel shell.

Many flint weapons, such as arrow and spear heads, were found in the ashes and in crevices of the rocks, also pestle-shaped rocks for pounding grain into meal, and sharp, blade-shaped flints, for dressing hides. Several of these relics were kindly given me by the Conatsers, to carry away as a souvenir of my visit.

MODERN USE OF AN INDIAN CAVE

This prehistoric cave, illustrated in next column, discovered on the Conatser farm, in Fentress County, Tennessee, has today been turned into practical use for the present generation as a shelter or barn for cattle, of which it easily holds 100 head. Pure spring water falls from a rock into a basin, in a shady grove below, providing for the thirsty cows. By a freak of rock formation, a natural hay pit is provided, into which a load of hay, driven onto the rock, may be easily dumped from above, requiring little labor for what is usually a considerable job, feeding a large herd of cattle.

Talking freely to me, a sympathetic woman listener, of some of the ailments from which she had suffered, Mrs. Conatser told me of her experience with Cardui, the Woman's Tonic, at a critical period of her life, and gave me permission to publish the true statement of her experience, which is printed with this article. H. L. O.

"I was nervous and run down . . . very weak and worn out."

"I heard so much of Cardui and that it was a good tonic for weak women until I decided to try it, and I can say it is the best tonic I have found. I am much pleased with results obtained."

"My daughter also used Cardui as a tonic. She was in a very run down condition. She is now much better."

STATE AND DEFENSE WITNESSES ABSENT IN HIGHTOWER CASE

TWO FOR STATE AND ONE FOR THE DEFENSE DO NOT APPEAR.

CLAIM DEFENSE WITNESS A MYTHICAL PERSONAGE

Hightower is Charged With Murder Of Catholic Priest on Pacific Coast.

REDWOOD CITY, CALIF., Oct. 2.—Important witnesses for state and defense were missing today as the...

The missing state witness was Marie Bianchi. She, with the priest's housekeeper, Marie Wendel, is known to have seen Father Heslin after an unidentified man took him by night from the parish residence to administer spiritual consolation to a dying man.

The missing defense witness is "Dolly Mason," from whom Hightower said he obtained the information that enabled him to find the priest's shallow grave in the sands of Salada Beach.

The district attorney asserts "Dolly Mason" is a mythical personage. William A. Hightower, itinerant baker and casual laborer, charged with the murder of the Rev. Patrick E. Heslin, a Catholic priest of Colma, Cal., protested his innocence from the first and maintained that he would be willing to have a full jury of priests sit in judgment on him.

The following morning Miss Marie Wendel, the priest's housekeeper, notified the police of the failure to find the body. She was identified Hightower as the man who had called for him.

The day after the priest's disappearance the Right Rev. Edward J. Hanna, archbishop of the Catholic archdiocese of San Francisco, received a typewritten letter demanding a ransom of $5,000. The letter stated that if the money was not paid, the priest would be killed.

Rewards totaling $5,000 were offered for the safe return of Father Heslin or the recovery of his body. In the early evening of August 10, Hightower called at the home of Archbishop Hanna.

Guided by Hightower, police started late that night for Salada Beach, a short distance southwest of Colma, where Hightower said he believed the body was buried. He declared that a woman companion whom he knew as Dolly Mason had furnished him with the information.

On arriving at the spot, the party quickly uncovered the body. The priest's skull had been crushed and he had been shot twice. The San Francisco police, suspicious of Hightower's tale, kept him in custody today.

GRAND JURY IS CHARGED TO INVESTIGATE THE KLAN. SHERMAN, TEXAS, Oct. 2.—A charge to investigate the tarring and feathering here September 28 of Fred A. Ziegler, former hotel man, as well as the activities of an organization in the county which "presumes to take into its own hands the administration of justice," was delivered today to an extraordinary grand jury by Judge Elias Hare.

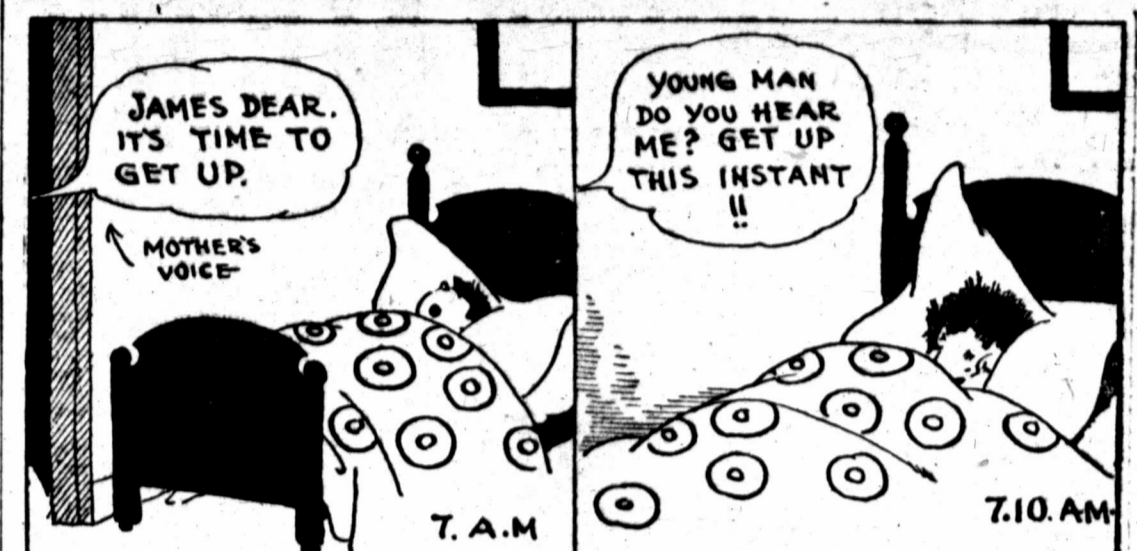

3 CHARGES FILED AS RESULT OF A FIGHT IN HOTEL. Three charges were filed in the justice of peace court Monday as the result of the fight that was staged in a local hotel Sunday night in which two men were so badly beaten up that medical attention was necessary.

A charge of keeping a building to sell whiskey was filed against D. P. Taylor. He waived examining trial and his bond was set at $750 by Justice of the Peace R. V. Gwinn.

A charge of selling whiskey was filed against Sewell Fields in connection with the same affair and the other charge was also against Fields in which he is alleged to have assaulted a person with a prohibited weapon. The four participants in the fight Sunday night all drew fines of $25 in the police court Monday morning.

By Paul W. Larkin. Yes, he, we're still on the Yanks, popular opinion to the contrary.

Of course the Hugmon are going to rely on slugging to win the series. That's about all they can rely on, but it brought them through a hard campaign and the swatmen seldom fell down in the pinches.

The series will probably be one of the freest hitting ever witnessed and we can't for the life of us see how there can be much airtight hurling on either side.

The Giants have a big edge on the Yanks at third base in Frank Frisch. The Fordham flash was one of the stars of the year.

Ward has played better ball and has hit better than Rawlings all year and the Yanks have an edge at second.

In the receiving department, Schang will rank with either Snyder or Smith, but should Schang be forged out of the game, the Giants would have a big edge.

There can be no doubt as to which team has the better outfield. Ruth is so far ahead of Irish Meusel and the same is true regarding Bob Meusel's superiority over Young.

Thus, in our opinion, the Yankees are stronger in two of the outfield positions, at second base and first base, while the Giants have the edge at third, center, in the box and behind the bat with the shortstop honors even.

What's the Matter With Us, Anyway

By WM. C. REDFIELD
Former Secretary of Commerce

To answer the question, "What is the matter with us?" I must first of all object cursorily to the form of the question itself. It is not "us"—it is everybody all over the world. One of the things to do if we are to think clearly is to get the "usness" out of the question.

Changed into the form—What is the matter with the world? It becomes simpler, for almost everybody knows what is the matter with the world.

Not so very long ago the world took something like a million men in the prime of life away from productive labor and set them to a horrible job of destruction and of consumption. Incidentally it killed about ten million of them and maimed as many more.

So we, that is, the world, lost the proceeds of the labor of forty million active young men for four years, and had our property, that is, the world's property, diminished during that time by what these forty million destroyed and by the further amount which they consumed over and above what they would have consumed in peace.

Thus stated, any one can see there must be a reaction. This is it. We are now in the "cold gray dawn of the morning after" and there is nothing altogether strange in the fact that the dawn is both cold and gray.

The "Headache"

Stated differently, the matter with the world, that is, with us as a part of the world, is that we went on a military lebauch and this is the headache of the next day.

Pretty much all of us are in debt to pretty much everybody else. Only a few of us have realized the fact that the one way out is a very old-fashioned route, a somewhat theory path. It is the path called "Work and Save." Produce as much as possible; spend as little as possible. That the remedy, and whatever else may be done by congress or by kings, this working and saving, this producing and this absence of spending, is the one thing that will restore the balance.

In some respects the balance is fairly well restored, but every retailer who insists upon a fancy price because he thinks he can get it, is holding back the day of restored balance, and every workman who thinks he can earn a war wage in peace times is also doing his part to hold back the time when the balance is restored. Until that time comes there can be no large prosperity.

Meanwhile it is just as well not to be scared by figures. It sounds both sad and serious to say that six million men, or thereabouts, are unemployed, but this statement is subject to serious deductions. In the first place, in a country as large as this, authorities say there are always a million unemployed. These are the fluffers and those who, for many reasons, some good and some not so good, are temporarily out of work.

Unfair Comparison

In the next place the comparison is with a time of flush, even excessive employment, instead of with a normal prosperous time, and a good many of those who were at this flush period employed have gone back to the other duties they followed before. In the third place, the figures of unemployment mean that the persons included in those figures are not employed at their usual tasks, but it is a false assumption to assume that they are all idle. No one knows what they are doing, but it is certain that some are working at tasks outside of their usual vocations.

One such cultivates a vacant lot to support his family by selling vegetables; another works on a highway; others follow any task that turns up because they are ready to turn their hand to any honest effort rather than be idle.

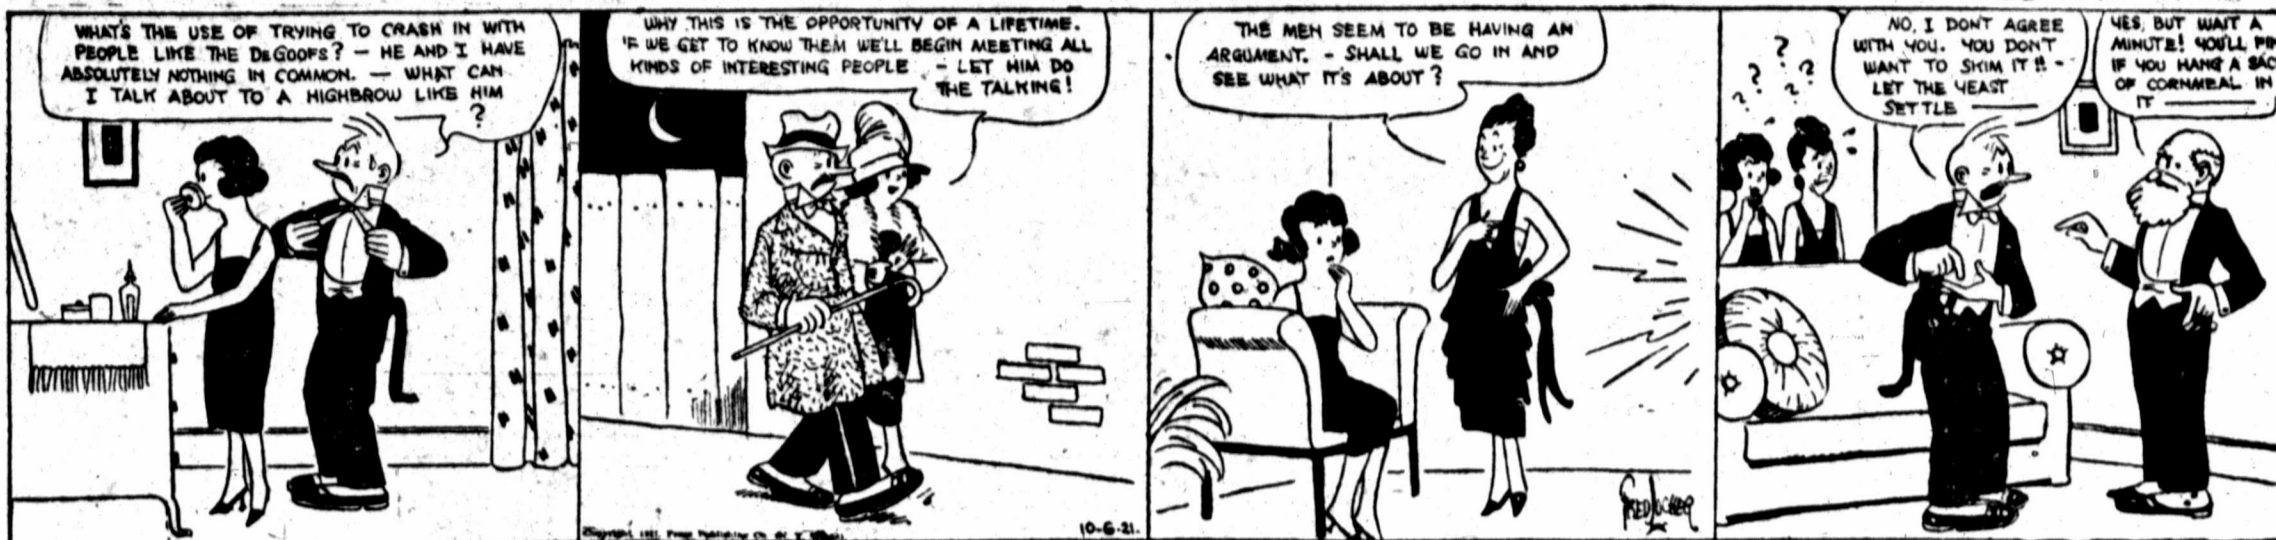

There is, therefore, a large deduction to be made when we talk about the unemployment figures. Nevertheless, it is visibly true that an unusual number are out of work and will be so until the various factors in the community which are out of balance with one another are restored to a due measure of balance.

This restoration of balance is a slow process, but it appears in items printed every day. Here a reduction of price; there an acceptance of a reduced wage; here a price which, having reached the bottom, is steady or begins slightly to rise; there are railways operating at a diminished maintenance cost. These and thousands of other items like them are the signs by which one can read that the process of balancing is going on. When it is complete we shall take a long breath and start in on what promises to be an unusual period of prosperity.

ELEPHANTS, CLOWNS, 'N EVERYTHING IN PARADE MONDAY HERALDING 2 BIG CIRCUS PERFORMANCES HERE

Lions, tigers, elephants, bands, clowns and beautiful horses were abroad in force in the streets of Wichita today. They were part of the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus parade. In addition to being the largest circus in the world to retain a parade as part of its daily program, the Hagenbeck-Wallace show can boast of presenting a pageant that actually "glitters." Just as advance notices have promised, then, too, the horses really pranced. They looked more like their pictures on the big posters than any other horses ever seen here.

Leading the entire march was a small clown on a tiny bicycle. Behind him came the heralds, then more horsemen, the latter carrying the American colors. Following them was the first band, then several wagons and floats carrying animal cages. Every cage in the line was open, affording the thousands along the streets an excellent view of the wild animals.

There was a clown, "rube" band, negro minstrel band, the big band that plays this afternoon and tonight under the big tent, mounted band and still another, the last evidently thrown in for good measure. In addition, in a musical way, was a large air plane and the calliope. The air plane is something new to this section of the country. It is much like a calliope, except that its tones are not raucous.

Clowns were everywhere; some of the makeups were ridiculous, even when one is expecting something of the sort. Their humor was of a clean sort and kept the crowds laughing.

Horses formed one of the most promising features of the parade. The much heralded "Noble Six Hundred," the Hagenbeck-Wallace collection of trained equines, were applauded at several points along the line of march. Every one of these animals is a beauty and even stepped along as if realizing itself the center of admiration.

The weather man appeared to be in a league with the circus, for the bright sunshine, falling on the red, blue and gold wagons, the gay trappings, comparisons and costumes, created a dazzling effect.

In one large float, composed chiefly of plate glass, sat a young woman who calmly fanned herself, regardless of the fact that an immense box constructor was assured a row of feet from her. In another cage was another woman who sat within a few feet of a compartment containing a number of pumas and leopards.

Although not all occupants of the menagerie are taken out for street exhibition, enough were seen today to convey an idea of what the zoo contains. In the line of march were elephants, lions, tigers, kangaroos, pumas, cougars, lynx, souldads, hyenas, monkeys, jaguars, camels, dromedary deer, albino and Russian deer; black, cinnamon, grizzly, Russian and polar bears; the clown hippopotamus, leopard, jaguar, lion, tiger, too many, in fact, to permit of an accurate record being made in the time allowed. Every animal appeared to be in perfect condition.

The size of the lions awakened much wonder. Some of them were the largest ever seen here. For the fierceness of expression, the tiger had them beaten, for a lion, in repose, has a rather placid countenance. Of all the animals seen, Alice, the clown hippopotamus, seemed to be the most contented. She yawned at the crowds occasionally, and her yawn is about four feet in breadth.

Judging from comments heard on all sides, the parade satisfied the crowd. At any rate it was, apparently, accepted as a true sample of the performance itself, for the sale of tickets at Tipton's drug store, where the circus has an office for convenience of patrons, increased greatly right after the parade had been given.

The afternoon show was scheduled to begin at 2 o'clock. Tonight's performance will begin at 8 o'clock, with doors opening an hour before that time, in order that all may visit the menagerie before becoming seated under the "big top." The menagerie lies between the main entrance and the tent in which the performance is given, and is free to all holders of circus tickets.

THOUSANDS WATCH LITTLE CIRCUS CITY SPRING UP SUNDAY

A little city sprang up at the ball park at the foot of Seventh street Sunday morning while thousands of people looked on with amazement.

The Wallace-Hagenbeck show arrived in the city from Fort Worth at 7:30 o'clock. The second section of the show arrived 20 minutes later, while the third section, composed mainly of sleepers, arrived later in the morning.

The two sections were backed up to the Seventh street crossing and it seemed as though the cars had no sooner been placed when the unloading act began.

A large number of people had gathered at the Elm street location, in the belief that this would be the place where the circus would perform, but instead the grounds around the ball park had been rented and the small corps of engineers immediately departed for that point. Within a half hour little iron stakes marked off the entire city.

By 8 o'clock, the setting was an apparent jumbled-up place of disorder, with innumerable stakes, canvas, wagons and animals scattered here and there. Two hours afterward order sprang up out of the confusion.

System presented made it possible. Before the cook house on wheels arrived at the park, a hot fire was burning, furnishing steam for the complete steaming outfit. The cook shack and the dining room tents were the first to be erected. In another part of the grounds the stables were being erected, while 150 men were working in erecting the menagerie tent.

Three large tractors that hitched onto two and three parades and animal wagons assisted the horse teams in carrying the wagons from the unloading point to the park, where two of the eleven animals with the circus "lined the wagons in correct positions inside the menagerie tent."

It was a treat to watch the growth of the circus city. Every man worked with unmistakable exactness definitely understanding the part that was mapped out for him to play. The large main tent was not erected Sunday, but Monday morning early it was set up ready for the afternoon's performance.

Many people have the idea that circus people are not afforded good eating. Sunday morning's breakfast consisted of oranges, T-bone steaks, boiled potatoes, hot cakes and coffee.

Sunday was tent-patching day and several men repaired the small holes and breaks in the tents, while the other routine work was being performed.

The stake-driving machine had nothing on a team of five negroes, who were also engaged in stake driving.
