

ARBUCKLE ARRIVES AT SAN FRANCISCO FOR SECOND TRIAL

ACCOMPANIED BY WIFE, MINTA DURFEE, AND HER MOTHER.

CAN'T BE ANY WORSE THIS TIME SAYS FATTY

Wife Has a $1,000 Beaded Bag, a Diamond and Sapphire Brooch, Christmas Gift.

By United Press. SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7.—Hoscoe (Fatty) Arbuttle, looking fit, fat and cheerful, arrived in San Francisco tonight in preparation for his second manslaughter trial in connection with the death of Virginia Rappe, following his now famous "disaffection" at a local hotel last Labor Day.

He was accompanied by Minta Durfee, his wife and her mother, Mrs. Maria Durfee, who is the sister of Arbuttle, as usual, refused to discuss the case. Asked how he was feeling, he replied: "Fine—it couldn't be any worse this time than it was last time."

Mrs. Arbuttle brought with her a beautiful beaded bag, costing $1,000, and a diamond and sapphire brooch, both Christmas gifts from Fatty.

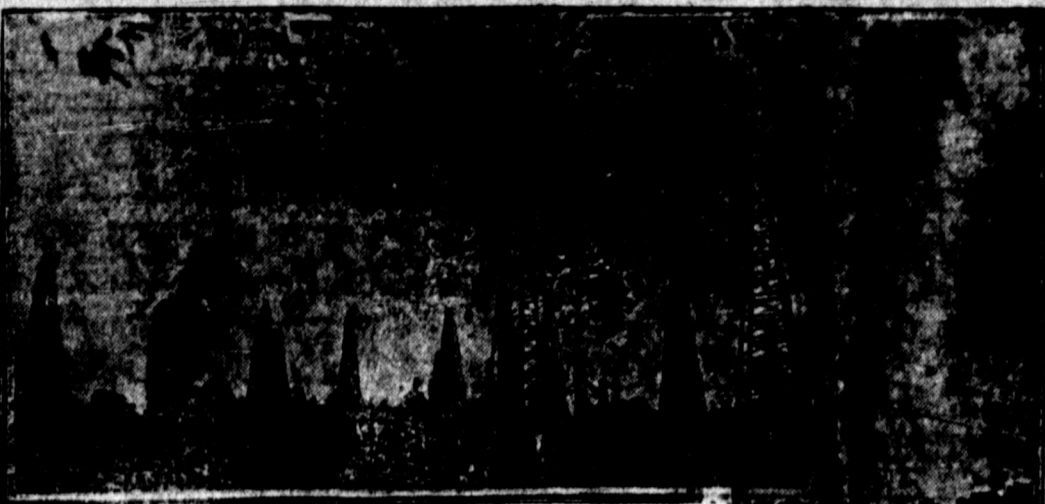

Following a conference between counsel, it was decided that Arbuttle's case would be called immediately at the conclusion of a case now on trial in Judge Harold Louderback's court. The case will probably be called Wednesday, according to present indications.

A change in tactics was adopted by the district attorney's office, when it was announced Saturday that it would try Arbuttle this time on the manslaughter indictment returned against him by the grand jury, and not on the police court manslaughter complaint sworn to by Mrs. Bambina Kande Belmont, "the avenger," who has since been convicted of the charge of bigamy. She was granted probation.

The move is understood to mean that there is no chance of "bam" appearing as a witness for the prosecution. The prosecution is understood to have made the move, which is purely a technical one, in order to avoid the criticism that the witness was too unreliable to be on the witness stand. This was heavily stressed by Gavin McNab, in his address to the jury at the last trial.

Following his arrival Arbuttle went to the Plaza hotel, where he will remain during the trial and later visited McNab, with whom he was convicted, for a conference during the late afternoon.

MARY GARDEN NOT THE LEAST AFRAID; ATTENDS AN OPERA

By United Press. CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—Mary Garden wasn't a bit scared tonight, by apparently by a mental appraisal of the Chicago Opera company said so herself. "If they want to get me, they know where I am," she said while watching a performance of Madame Butterfly at the Auditorium theatre.

FRANK WALSH HAS CHALLENGED ALLEN FOR JOINT DEBATE

TOPEKA, KAN., Jan. 7.—Governor Henry J. Allen today received a challenge from Frank P. Walsh, prominent attorney of Kansas City and New York, to debate the Kansas Industrial court before the Cooper Union in New York city. An industrial court bill was recently introduced in the New York legislature. Governor Allen is inquiring what date is desired before giving a definite reply.

Boy Scout News

Practically all troops in the city took a new lesson on life Friday night, according to reports from the various scout masters. Plenty of pep and enthusiasm was displayed and some of the best meetings ever held resulted.

The court of honor met at scout headquarters Friday afternoon and awarded badges to the following: Frank Curtiss, troop 4, second class badge; Dudley Skeene, troop 4, second class badge; Wade Bartlett, troop 1, first class badge and three merit badges; Joe Lakover, troop 1, Burkburnett, three merit badges; Joe Hatchitt, troop 4, one merit badge; Dillard Hughes, troop 7, two merit badges; Elmer Gorman, troop 7, two merit badges; George Bolden, troop 1, six merit badges; Lowell Nichols, troop 1, four merit badges.

Major W. L. Culbertson officiated at the meeting.

A special scout service will be held at the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday night at which time all scouts and officials in the city are urged to be present. Rev. Grosvenore will give a sermon telling of scout adventures in Old Mexico, and special music will be furnished by the scout band.

Plans are now being worked out for a big scout field day to be held late in February or early in March. Detailed arrangements will be made later.

A large attendance is expected at the annual banquet to be held Monday night in the Floral Heights Methodist church. An exceptionally fine program has been arranged and several new features planned for presentation.

Several new applications for membership were received by the troop officials Friday.

Two new assistant scoutmasters took up their work with troop 15 last week.

Troop 19 is planning for a big celebration at the Central Presbyterian church next Tuesday night. The troop committee, scout officials and all members of the troop will be present.

All old members and several new ones are expected to be on hand for the troop 12 blowout next Wednesday night. Scoutmaster E. R. Russell and his gang will convene at the First Methodist church, north.

The regular monthly meeting of the scout council will be held at scout headquarters Thursday afternoon at 4:30.

SEVEN HUNDRED LIQUOR CASES IN KANSAS CITY ARE TO BE THROWN OUT

KANSAS CITY, MO., Jan. 7.—Seven hundred liquor cases pending in federal court here will probably be dismissed as the result of an opinion by Judge A. S. Van Valkenburgh, authorities said today. Van Valkenburgh ruled that testimony of policemen who made prohibition raids without proper search warrants cannot be used as evidence.

OIL OZZING FROM AUGUSTA BUILDING IS NATURAL FLOW

AUGUSTA, GA., Jan. 7.—Oil which has been oozing from the excavation for a Y. M. C. A. building in the business district of Augusta has been pronounced a natural flow by experts employed by the association and they have recommended the sinking of six surface wells on the site. The accidental discovery of oil in the heart of the city caused a sea of flurry and work was suspended pending investigation.

REPUBLICAN ENROLLMENT DROPS ALMOST 200,000 BELOW THE 1920 TOTAL

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Republican enrollment at the last election in New York City dropped almost 200,000 below the 1920 total, while the democrats increased from 531,167 to 642,328 in that period, according to a report tonight by the board of elections. The republican enrollment was 645,630 in 1920 and 451,442 last year.

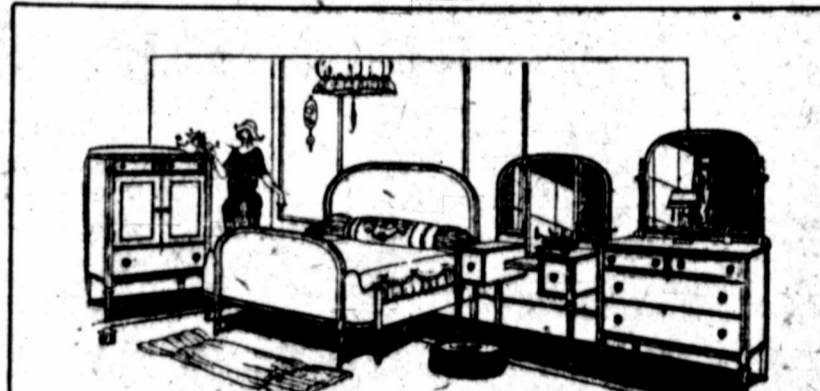

Women were proportionately greatest in the prohibition party under whose banner 1,353 of them enrolled with 1,158 males. Socialists had 12,725 females and 18,728 males; democrats 217,421 women and 446,415 men and republicans 172,762 women and 446,415 men and the republicans 172,762 women and 272,621 men.

More than 110,000 voters declined to declare party allegiances, about two-thirds of these being men.

INDUSTRIAL SURVEY FOR TEXAS REVEALS INTERESTING FACTS

By United Press.
AUSTIN, TEXAS, Jan. 7.—A state survey of industrial conditions in the state recently completed by the state bureau of labor statistics brought to light some rather interesting facts.

Questionnaires were answered by 1,158 firms located in practically every city in the state including Wichita Falls.

Among the industries which reported were 23 bakeries, 45 candy factories, 25 cleaning and pressing establishments, one coal mine, three coal oil manufacturing plants, 45 hotels and restaurants, 25 ice and dairy manufacturing plants, 118 laundries, 10 meat packing plants, 403 dry goods stores, 64 miscellaneous manufacturing concerns, six oil refineries, seven printing plants, five railway companies, 20 soft drink manufacturing plants, six telegraph stations, 18 telephone stations, 19 textile mills, seven tobacco manufacturing companies, four woodworking establishments.

Of the concerns reporting, 23 were not operating in December, 1920. Employed in these places last month were 691 males and 610 females.

Of the remaining 1,145 establishments, 45,400 males and 22,452 females were employed in December, 1920. Last month these same places employed 37,182 males and 20,647 females, a total decrease of 8,044. 539 concerns reported no change in wage scales during the year; 464 reported wage reductions averaging 15 per cent; 133 reported wage increases averaging 17 per cent, and 14 failed to report on wage changes.

SPECIAL SESSION OF LEGISLATURE IS IN PROSPECT

AUSTIN, TEXAS, Jan. 7.—That the governor will be forced to call a special session of the legislature to provide funds for maintenance of the prison system, was the opinion expressed by State Senator H. L. Darwin, of Paris, and Representative Lee Satterwhite, from the Panhandle, who were here today and conferred with the governor.

Both of them are opposed to an extra session but they declared that to maintain the prison system, it would be necessary, unless the prison commission can negotiate a loan to maintain the prison system, and that appears, they agreed, to be unlikely, especially during the present financial depression.

CHIROPRACTOR IN JAIL TO PUT IN 30 DAY SENTENCE

P. L. Meyers, a graduate chiropractor of this city, entered the doors of the county jail Saturday afternoon to begin serving a 30-day jail sentence.

He was found guilty of violation of the law which requires doctors to have a license to practice, by a jury in the county court at law last fall and was sentenced to 30 days in jail and a $100 fine.

Notice of appeal was given at that time, but a short time ago the appeal was withdrawn and Mr. Meyers Saturday presented himself to begin serving his sentence.

He was locked in an individual cell by the jailer. He stated that his stay at the jail would be an entirely new experience and that in all probability the 30 days would soon roll by.

CONFESSES HE SHOT ARMY FIELD CLERK TO GET INSURANCE

By United Press.
OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., Jan. 7.—Sergeant Byron Warren late today signed a written confession that he shot and killed C. A. Jolles, army field clerk at Fort Reno, so that Mrs. Jolles might collect her husband's $15,000 in government insurance, United States District Attorney Maurer announced.

Murder charges were filed against Warren and Mrs. Jolles immediately after the confession was signed.

NEW PRODUCE FIRM IN PROSPECT HERE WITHIN SHORT TIME

Another large wholesale produce house is in prospect for Wichita Falls, it became known Saturday through the announcement that Herbert M. Jones, of Topeka, Kansas, had acquired an interest in the Witherspoon Produce company of this city. The capital stock of the company will be increased, and its facilities enlarged, to put it in position to satisfactorily handle the increased produce business of this section.

Mr. Jones, who is a brother-in-law of Fred M. Gates of this city, has been manager of the Topeka house of the Reindour-Baker Grocery company; he formerly lived in Texas and welcomes an opportunity to return to this state.

He expects to arrive here about February 1, and will become associated with Joe Witherspoon in the enlarged company. Both he and Mr. Witherspoon were formerly connected with the Waples-Platter company of Fort Worth, and are no strangers to the trade in this section.

Choose Attorney Who Was Raised On Big Lake Site

Joe A. Wheat, Seymour attorney, whose appointment as Baylor county legal representative of the irrigation district was announced Saturday, spent his boyhood days on the very land which the main irrigation reservoir will submerge.

Mr. Wheat's father, a prominent farmer and stockman of Baylor county, owned a farm near the Wichita river, a short distance above the main damsite. When the lake is completed Mr. Wheat can see the scene of his childhood's happy hours inundated by the impounded waters.

The appointment of Mr. Wheat followed a decision of the directors that an attorney to represent them in Baylor county would be necessary. Mr. Wheat being recommended for the place by Judge J. T. Montgomery. Mr. Wheat was formerly county attorney of Baylor and has been engaged in private practice since his retirement from that office.

PROSPECTS BRIGHT FOR SETTLEMENT OF SHANTUNG QUESTION

ASSURED BY BALFOUR AND HUGHES OFFER STILL HOLDS GOOD.

NO DATE ASSIGNED TO RESUME CONVERSATIONS

Chinese Announce Interviews On Subject Have Been Settled

By Associated Press, Jan. 7.—Prospects for an ultimate settlement of the Shantung controversy appeared brighter in some quarters today after the Chinese delegation had been assured by Arthur J. Balfour and Secretary Hughes that their offer of "good offices" still held good and was continuous.

No date has, however, been set for a resumption of the negotiations which were broken off Friday with the Chinese and Japanese delegations standing firm on their respective positions regarding payment for the Tsingtao-Tientsin railway.

The Chinese delegates, after spending 40 minutes with Secretary Hughes at the state department this afternoon and a somewhat longer time with Mr. Balfour later, said their talks which were informal were satisfactory and reassuring.

They added that both Mr. Balfour and Mr. Hughes had upheld their contention that the "good offices" offer was continuous and that the Chinese and Japanese delegates first were brought together still held.

To this the Chinese seemingly had attached great importance as when the meeting between the two delegations was about to break up yesterday the Japanese balked at a suggestion that Secretary Hughes and Balfour be called to mediate, giving the reason that it might be embarrassing to those two unless the Chinese were willing to make further concessions.

Because of the delicacy of the situation, Dr. Wellington Koo, one of Chinese delegates, said he could not give any details of what occurred at today's meeting with the heads of the British and American delegations.

Before meeting the Chinese Mr. Hughes let it be known that his talk with them would be "informal" and was in no way to be considered as exercising "good offices." It was said that Mr. Hughes thought the difference between the Chinese and Japanese was slight, and that it would be possible to reconcile the conflicting views. It was asserted that Mr. Hughes would do nothing toward a settlement of the Shantung dispute that was not approved by both the Chinese and Japanese.

In the Japanese camp, probably more optimism prevailed regarding an ultimate settlement of the controversy. This was based, it was said, on the Japanese belief that the Chinese eventually would recede from their position, and that a settlement of the disputed railway by means of a loan, and accept the proposal under which Japanese bankers would loan the Chinese the money for 15 years with a five-year option.

MRS. DELMONT IS ELIMINATED FROM THE ARBUCKLE CASE

By United Press, SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7.—Bambina Maudie Delmont was yesterday eliminated as a possible factor in Arbuckle's second trial, it became known today.

District Attorney Matthew Brady was said to have practically determined to try Arbuckle from the grand jury indictment charging him with manslaughter in taking the life of Virginia Rappe and not on the charge sworn to by Mrs. Delmont.

Such a move would have no effect excepting to remove Mrs. Delmont as the complaining witness.

Mrs. Delmont now is on probation following a plea of guilty in Madras to a charge of bigamy.

Arbuckle was to arrive in San Francisco tonight, preparatory to the calling of his case, which is expected the latter part of next week.

Judge Harold Louderback today attached little significance to a note he received reading: "Arbuckle or you will not live six months if he is freed."

The note is one of several curious parties in the case have received, it was said.

EAT LESS AND TAKE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Take a Glass of Salt Before Breakfast if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You.

The American man and woman must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because their diet is so rich and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out. They weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative system clogs and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps or lead your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with such headaches or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is very hot, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then get back to normal. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithium and sea salts, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, causes no injury, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing every day. Time—adv.

HOME NEAR TYLER SCENE OF TRAGEDY

Mother Kills Son, Burns Home and Slashes Throat With Razor.

TYLER, TEXAS, Jan. 7.—Tragedy stalked with a razor here last night. A mother is alleged to have murdered her boy, burned down their farm house home and barn, and slashed her own throat with a razor.

Mrs. G. A. Grant, the mother, was in the hospital here tonight, fighting for life.

Sheriff Tom Sikes brought Mrs. Grant to the hospital late today after he had been called to the scene of the tragedy 12 miles from here. Physicians who examined the woman believed she suffered a temporary mental derangement.

About 5 o'clock this morning Mrs. Grant staggered into the home of a neighbor, a deep gash in her throat. The sheriff was notified several hours later and hurried to the scene.

The house and barn were a smoking ruin. The sheriff, who was on duty at the time, found Mrs. Grant's body lying face down on the porch. She had a deep, jagged gash in her throat which had cut her carotid artery. The sheriff did not attempt to get a statement, he said.

It was learned that Mrs. Grant suffered from peevishness for some time and a week ago she and her husband separated. The sheriff declared that at that time some trouble occurred and threats were made. The sheriff declared that Mrs. Grant was in poor health and highly nervous. She was about 45 years old.

Grant left Tyler about 4 o'clock this morning for another county, the sheriff said.

It is believed to have occurred between midnight and 5 o'clock this morning.

SEYMOUR MEETING ENDORSES BILL OF SENATOR OWEN

SEYMOUR, TEXAS, Jan. 7.—A mass meeting of citizens of this city was held here Friday in the apartments of the chamber of commerce and the bill recently introduced in the national senate by Senator Owen to provide for a European federal reserve bank, the funding or extension of the allied debts, etc., was unanimously approved. The following telegram was sent to Senator Owen by a committee appointed by the chamber of commerce for that purpose.

"The chamber of commerce of Seymour, Texas, met in a large mass meeting here today and wish to congratulate you for your part in the establishment of a European federal reserve bank, granting extension on the allied debt. This is a great victory and a piece of legislation we give our unqualified endorsement and approval.

"J. E. Morris, I. O. Newton, G. McDaniel, committee, Seymour Chamber of Commerce."

Ninety-seven hundred member banks—very one an institution of high standing in the United States—contribute to the great strength of the federal reserve system, of which the City National Bank of Commerce is a member. —218-11c

SCHUBERT, SPROSS AND GHYS ARE TAKEN UP BY TIMES THIS WEEK IN THE MUSIC MEMORY CONTEST

Schubert, Spross and Ghys are taken up this week by the Times in the music memory contest held over the Wichita district under Miss Pyle's supervision.

The sketches of the composers and the music are absorbingly interesting and groups as well as children can find instruction of the most effective and attractive kind in them. If you haven't been reading the Times sketches, prepared especially for the paper by Miss Pyle and augmented as far as possible each week by cuts of the composers, you should begin at once.

Amaryllis Ghys. An old French rondeau, resulting from the singing of rounds. It is older than the time of Louis XIII. Its real name being "La Choquette."

From its origin you will know that its phrases "come back." Listen and you will see that there are only three different kinds of phrases, and a rule of the rondeau: the A or first phrase returns more often, with contrasting phrases between. You will find this form—

A. A. A. A. B. B. A. A. A. A. C. C. C. C. B. B. A. A. A. A.

Will-o-the-Wisp by Spross. Charles Gilbert Spross, born in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., 1874, is an excellent pianist and accompanist, appearing with Schumann-Helink, Gluck, Destinn, Gardel, Melba, Amate, Gerardi, etc. He is also a writer of some 75 songs, of which this one is a general favorite.

Just what does the name of this song mean? People used to say they were the fairies out with their lanterns—the fireflies. Some thought them had fairies, and that any one following would be led into the forest or down to the sea. By others they were thought to be good fairies bringing good luck.

What kind of voice should sing a song about these fairies? High or low? What tempo do you think it will have—fast or slow? Will the notes be long or staccato? Can you see the will-o-the-wisp as you listen to this number?

Who Is Sylvia—Schubert. Words from Shakespeare's "Two Gentlemen of Verona." Schubert while seated at a table in a restaurant, on opening a volume of Shakespeare, noticed the words "Who is Sylvia," and remarked to his companion, "These words would make a pretty song." Thereupon he took his menu card and upon one side wrote the song "Who Is Sylvia" and upon the other side wrote "Mark, Mark, the Lark" with which

ROBY MERCHANTS HAVE BUSY SEASON

Tax Collections Since December First: Have Been Above The Average.

ROBY, TEXAS, Jan. 7.—There has been practically no change in business management and location here over the first of the new year. The merchants have had a pretty busy season and are involving this week and getting ready for the new year's work.

Sheriff A. B. Lambert left Wednesday evening for Huntsville, where he goes to convey Mrs. Alice Cook to the penitentiary. Mrs. Cook was convicted of poisoning her husband and sentenced to serve five years in the penitentiary. The case was tried in this county on a charge of venue from Kent county.

The Ladies Missionary society of the Methodist church put on a Tom Thumb wedding at the school auditorium Tuesday night. It was well attended and a success in every way.

The Roby public school has reopened since the holidays with an increased enrollment. The enrollment is near one hundred more than the scholastic enrollment of the district, and the attendance is a very high per cent of the enrollment.

Tax collections for the month of December and the first week in January have been extra heavy. Within little more than 30 years the automobile industry has grown to be the third largest in the country.

FIERY, ITCHING SKIN IS QUICKLY SOOTHED WITH THIS SULPHUR

Mentho-Sulphur, a pleasant cream, will soothe and heal skin that is irritated or broken out with eczema; pimples, or is rough or dry. Nothing relieves fiery skin eruptions so quickly, says a noted skin specialist.

The moment this sulphur preparation is applied the itching stops and after two or three applications, the eczema is gone and the skin is delightfully clear and smooth. Sulphur is so precious a skin remedy because it destroys the parasites that cause the burning, itching or disfigurement. A Mentho-Sulphur always heals eczema right up.

A small jar of Mentho-Sulphur may be had at any good drug store.

Will 1922 Bring Romantic Clothes?

Will the Elizabethan Bouffant Costume as Worn This Season Discover a New Sir Walter Raleigh?

Francon Halliday in a Costume of 1881.

A RETURN to courtly modes and courtly manners is forecast in the new year almanac. Designers with their ears to the ground say that 1922 gowns and accessories will be daring—but nevertheless and strange to say, they will show a distinct throwback to the era of romantic dress.

There will be a touch of the Empire and of the Elizabethan in the costumes of the new year, but a more evident effect, according to these forecasts, will be derived from those flaring, billowing, richly detailed garments of the period 1820 to 1860.

In making this prediction, the guardians of our changeling fashions feel called upon to explain an apparent paradox. They know that what they have described as rebellion resembles reaction. They clear up the contradiction by saying that the rebirth of these ancient fashions will be considerably modified by the new freedom of women. In other words, the 1922 girl will take what is beautiful and alluring from the romantic dress and discard all that is restrictive or impractical.

Thus, America at least, may expect to see many variants of the bouffant skirt, but never with its hem trailing the ground. Lace scarfs, tiny fans, and garlanded coiffures will live again, but the pointed basque, emphasizing the extreme smallness of grandmother's waist and incidentally the "criminally" tight corset she was wearing, will stay in its grave.

Whether these romantic clothes may be considered an effect of a returning romance in women is extremely doubtful. The chances are that modern women are simply searching for new and beautiful ideas. But Miss Ethel Traphagen, designer and dress psychologist, declares emphatically that the net result of these fashions is bound to be a return to certain romantic gestures.

"Clothes influence women greatly," said Miss Traphagen. "The gingham dress imparts youth and frankness. It speaks of childhood and bread and butter days. Brocade makes us feel regal; velvet dignified and a little softened.

"She who dons taffeta becomes crisp and jaunty like the fabric.

"In Victoria's reign, woman was so repressed that everybody became bottled up. The styles immediately showed it. The squeezed-in waists, the ridiculous stuffed leg-of-mutton sleeves tell of the influence of this strict ruler. So clothes, you see, act on their wearers and react from their wearers as well. If the American girl of 1922 should accept the Victorian costume in toto, she would undoubtedly become Victorian in her reticences and pruderies. But she won't do that—not if I know her. But she will become romantic to the extent of eliminating some of the more patent vulgarities that have cursed modern dress."

Basketball Teams Ready For Opening Games In Legion Hall Wednesday

The basketball lid in Wichita falls will be pried off next Wednesday night in the American legion hall when the American legion quintet meets the Knights of Columbus five and the Elks stick up against the Gaiens Motor company quintet. All four teams are primed for their opening games and local sport followers are assured of an fast basketball as any city in the state.

Such a statement may sound rash, but it is a fact and a glance at the roster of the seven organizations which have already definitely decided to enter teams should convince the most pessimistic. There will not be one inexperienced man on the courts. The majority are either former college men who have won their letters in the cage sport or were members of the Gaiens Motor company in Texas and other states.

The games will be played on a regulation court and the official amateur rules will be lived up to in every respect. President Lamons, a man who knows the game from every angle and who has been mixed up in it all his life, will do the refereeing and no violation of the rules will escape him.

The hall will accommodate only about 200 people and in view of the admission fee it will be a case of first come first served. While seats will be charged, privileges will be admitted free. The first game will start promptly at 8 o'clock and to prevent unnecessary delays all teams which fail to appear on the floor at the time designated will be subject to a fine.

The organization which has not been decided upon yet, but will be made known Monday. The rosters of the other teams follow:

Legion and Methodist. The American Legion team will probably start off the season with the best conditioned crowd of athletes than any other club. They have practiced together more than any other outfit and have a galaxy of stars on their roster who will take the jump on the rest of the teams unless the unexpected happens. The Watford brothers, formerly with Baylor, T. M. Ferguson, an erstwhile Emporia star who has left right with the game since leaving school, Ed E. Roper, old Texas University center, Harry Vinar, Missouri University, McFall and Winery are among those who have been ranking second to the legion outfit in point of condition in the Methodist aggregation. Their roster has not been made public yet, but several of the players have been together for the past couple of years and team work is predominant with them.

K. of C. Like the other teams, the Knights of Columbus cagers are all experienced men. Ed Wilson, one of the greatest cagers the local high school ever had, is in charge of the team and he has developed a quintet that bids fair to hang around the top all season. Gerald Coffey, captain of last year's high school basketball team, is sure of a berth in the team. Other players are Don Fainchey who used to think the court at St. Mary's in Kansas and Muech of St. Mary's in San Antonio. Others who are members of the squad are Al Kucsocks, former St. Joseph's college student, John Coffey, Clayton University of Omaha; Gerald Long, Wichita High and a big named player who came out recently for the team and is said to be burning up the court.

Elks. Secretary Howard English of the Elks has seen to it that the Antlers have practiced faithfully and the local lodge will be represented by one of the most formidable quintets in the league. Burford Sharpe, former Fort Worth Y. M. C. A. star, has been chosen captain and among those who have been practicing under him are his brother, Harold, formerly of T. C. U. and Fort Worth Y. M. C. A.; Howard Gordon, who played two years with Marlin High; C. D. Hare of Bowie High; Leon Trice, who played a couple of years with Ardmore High and was at Columbia University a year; W. D. Kennedy, with Clearenden High four years and Texas Military; C. A. Patterson of Oak Cliff and Illinois university; Horner and Walden of Rice Institute and Joe Marlow.

Gaiens Motor Co. Milton Gaiens has been looking after the Gaiens Motor Company aggregation and has had the squad out several times. His quintet will be selected from several experienced cagers who have made good in court game. Besides Milton Gaiens, who used to be assistant physical director at the Fort Worth Y. M. C. A. and a member of that basketball team, the squad includes his brother "Sid," Dallas Y. M. C. A.; Doc Peterson, Missouri Outpost school; Nick Carter, Bowdoin; Roy Seyler, Chicago Y. M. C. A.; Art Bergeron, who has played considerable basketball in Maine and in the Canadian army, and Pete Fisher.

University Club. The University club, though late in deciding to enter a team, will have a team that will compare favorably with any of them. Ralph Harper, the outstanding player at South's high school team, will play with the University boys. Tate, who is at present coaching the High school in Arkansas, and a schoolmate of his, Burnett, both of whom played with Tarleton last year, will also play with this quintet. Penrod, Charlie Nolan of Texas, Booth, Norris Ewing of Vanderbilt and Sandifer of Texas University have signified their intentions of trying for permanent berths.

Texoma. Officers of the Texoma Oil and Refining Company were among the first to take advantage of the opportunity to afford recreation for their employees and will go the limit to place a winning team on the floor. The squad to date includes L. E. Roper, a schoolmate of college, B. Wyatt of Leland Stanford, W. V. Stetmel of St. Mary's college in San Antonio, Fred Husher of Oklahoma, Edmo, Fred of Washington University, B. Fotts of Clarinda High, Iowa, and Ed Bartell of University of Arkansas. Several new men are expected to be added to the squad this week.

GALVESTON CLUB GREATLY STRENGTHENED FOR 1922

GALVESTON, Jan. 7.—President Leopold and Business Manager Bob Tarleton of the Galveston Sand Crabs are well satisfied with the 1922 outlook as the result of the deals they have made for the club. In Duke Duncan, Ray O'Brien and Joe Munson, Prexy Leopold believes he has one of the best outfields the Texas league has ever had. O'Brien hit .335 with Omaha last season; Duncan hit .325 with St. Paul, and Munson hit .291 with Dallas. Leopold also made a ten strike when he secured Scrapy Moore from Little Rock to play third base, a position that caused the club so much trouble last season, not taking anything away from Harvey Graham, who was a good fielding third baseman, but fell down in his hitting. Foster, Knight, Graham, Robertson, Miller, Glenn, Ferryman, James, Jerry, Hise, Pennington and probably a man from the New York Yankees, or maybe Jim Jolly back, means some pitching staff to pick from. Manager Griffith will have his hands full picking six out of that bunch.

WHEN FLO ZIEGFELD BUYS A BALL CLUB

Flo Ziegfeld says he is through with the theatre. Recently he tied a can on one of his wealthy chorus girls. The young lady refused to be fired. She so reported to the other members of the cast. Mr. Ziegfeld was instructed to put the lady back in the chorus, or there would be no "Follies" this evening. Since Flo, as they call him in the theatrical circles, has a lot of money tied up in the Follies, and desired to finish the season, he put the young lady back in the chorus. Since Mr. Ziegfeld owns the Follies, he wasn't pleased over the outcome. He said he was through forever with the stage at the close of the present season. He also made a public announcement that he was in the field for a major league franchise.

Mr. Ziegfeld, never having had any experience with ball players, has proven himself to be a real young man. When it comes to being temperamental, chorus girls have nothing on the athletes. When Flo Ziegfeld blows the "Follies" and buys a baseball club—All the bald headed men in the world will want to become umpires. Opera glasses will be much more popular than the ice cream cone or the good old hot dog. No longer will there be any need of having bleacher seats. All choice seats will be in the hands of the speculators. Box seats will be held for a big premium. Those will be the happy days. Go to it, Flo, say the baseball fans.

DRAFT PRICE FOR AA PLAYERS $7500

Minors Win Point And Moguls Believe New Sum Will Settle Issue.

By KENNETH CLARK, United Press Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—Agreement on drafting baseball players from the AA league, which was a stumbling block in the progress of organized baseball for years, was reached here tonight at a meeting of the advisory committee appointed to discuss the question. The committee voted to recommend that the drafting price for the AA league be placed at $7,500 during 1922, "and thereafter during the life of the agreement between major and minor leagues, unless prior to January 1, 1923, any of the major league clubs file notice asking for a readjustment."

MORRIS PURCHASES NEW SITE FOR DALLAS CLUB; WORK ON PARK TO START THIS WEEK

DALLAS, Jan. 7.—The purchase of B. C. Wheat, catcher, of the Lansing club of the Michigan-Ontario league, was announced today by Walter Morris, recognized by the Texas league as one of the owners of the local club.

Morris also announced the purchase of a site in South Dallas for a new baseball park, work on which will start within the next week and be completed before the spring training season. The new stands will have a seating capacity of more than 7,500. Morris said purchase of a new park site was necessitated by the refusal of owners of Marine field to permit the new franchise holders to use the old Marine playing grounds.

IGNORANCE OF RULES HANDICAPS PLAYERS

What is the greatest handicap to a player breaking into professional baseball? This question was asked of ten or more managers at the minor league meeting in Buffalo recently and the same reply was made by each one. "Lack of knowledge of baseball rules."

If a man goes into commercial life he must learn the A. B. C's of his chosen line before he is in a way to court success. If he takes up a profession he must study the best fundamentals of his profession before he can advance to the higher study. So it is in any walk of life except baseball—a profession that offers to young men an opportunity to make from $2,000 to $10,000 a year, and this after a year or more of apprenticeship in a minor league. Yet how many of the ambitious players of today can give a reasonable interpretation of the baseball rules? The general fundamentals of the game are understood, but the technicalities are as a usual thing so much Greek.

Wherever the players gather the first subject of conversation is some old rule or play. Seldom are two versions of a freak play alike. Even after they have argued the question out there is always much confusion. Instead of wasting the time as they do, a team or club could, in a series of lessons, become thoroughly familiar with every rule in the baseball book.

A big league manager was discussing the matter of rookies making good in the big show and their chances against the other rookies. Every year hundreds of rookies come up for trial. Take them as a whole and they stack 'up about equal as far as natural talent goes. They average about the same in hitting, fielding likewise, throwing also, and if pitchers, their natural curves and speed are probably equally as well averaged. Get down to the 'know' of it and then a manager can determine the value of a player. My advice to the young ball player is, study the rules from cover to cover and 'know' baseball," he said.

Spudder Rookies Getting In Line For 1922 Season; Nine Contracts Received

Nine signed contracts for 1922, one from a member of the 1921 club, have been received at the baseball office within the past few days and present indications are that Walter Salm will look over about 40 ball players at Athletic park between the first of March and the opening of the Texas league season, probably April 15.

George Knadler, spiballer de luxe, who joined the team late last season and hurried innumerable games in the "ball pen," dropped into the office yesterday from Walters, Okla., and affixed his signature. George is as husky as ever and says he can hardly wait until the season opens. He claims that he's going to get started early this spring and try to control that most ball of his so he will stick permanently. Knadler has one of the meanest breaking spitters in existence—mean for both the batter and the catcher, and if he can ever learn to put it where he wants it, he'll be sure of a berth.

R. L. McAbee, the Wichita high twirler, has sent in his signed contract. He worked out several weeks with the Salmites last year and Walter was favorably impressed with his showing. He needs a hurler who delivers from the port side and "Mac" will receive more than passing attention this spring.

Other rookie pitchers who have signed for a tryout are Carl Stroy of Daffus, Texas, I. L. George and Roy Chitwood of Fort Worth and E. W. Stensal of Royal City, Texas, who was here for a while last spring.

The contract of L. F. Sorey, the infielder recommended so highly by Detroit, has been received. Sorey is a rookie, in that he has never played in the organized ranks, but has had plenty of experience in fast semi-pro circles and Walter expects big things of him.

T. J. Holloway of Carnegie, Okla., the first baseman who played a couple of games in a Spudder uniform last season, has signed for another tryout. Holloway will be remembered by the fans on account of a pinch double of his which broke up a game last year. He swings a wicked bludgeon and was thought by Salm to be worth another "once-over" at least.

Another infielder named Harry Evans from Somerset, Colorado, has been signed. Little is known of his ability. Will Gray received a letter from Johnny Mjokan yesterday stating that he had a young brother who was ripe for organized ball now and that he wanted to give Wichita Falls first shot at him. The younger brother is a pitcher. A contract was not sent to him, however, until it is learned what kind of proposition he wants. He lives a considerable distance from here and no unnecessary money will be spent on carfare if it can be avoided.

President Harvey has returned from a southern trip and is now ready to devote his attention to signing salary affidavits for a couple of months.

COOPER JUNIOR HIGH STUDENTS TO ATTEND HERE

CLASSIFIED AS ELEMENTARY SCHOOL WITH ONLY SIX GRADES.

TRUCK TO BE BOUGHT TO CARRY CHILDREN

County School Board Authorizes Progressive Step at Next Saturday Afternoon.

Seventh and eighth grade pupils and high school students from the Cooper school district will be transferred to the school at Wichita Falls, beginning Monday morning, January 14.

This will be the result of a step authorized by the members of the county school board who held a meeting in the office of county superintendent of schools, Burt Bryant, Saturday afternoon.

The action of the board was unanimous. Those present were: W. W. Hook, E. A. Dale, J. F. Holder, W. W. Cook and S. B. Thomas.

The plan, authorized by the school board, has been under consideration for the past three weeks, ever since the proposed consolidation of four school districts, of which Cooper was one.

The Cooper school district is located some 12 miles from town and contains only a sufficient number of pupils to warrant one teacher. It was found by the trustees that it is an impossibility for one teacher to give the required attention to all eight grades and the plan of bringing the junior high students to this city was adopted.

The trustees set about immediately Saturday afternoon to purchase a truck. A high school boy, residing in that district, who attends school here, will drive the truck to and from the school.

The school board while in session also appointed G. W. Roderick, trustee of Pond Creek district.

The board also passed an order that the county school pay E. E. Davis and T. H. Shelby, who conducted the school survey in this county, the sum of $12.54, which represents the actual expense incurred in the survey.

A meeting of all school trustees in all the districts of Wichita county was planned by the board to be held during the month of April, probably at Iowa Park, at which time a general discussion will be had as to the duties of a school trustee. An effort will be made to secure several educators for the meeting.

ELECTRA PAVED ROAD NOW OPEN ENTIRE COURSE

The stretch of concrete pavement, extending from Wichita Falls to the Wilbarger county line, through Iowa Park and Electra is now free from all impediments and the entire course is open to traffic.

The last obstruction was removed last week. During the past six days 1,500 feet of concrete was laid for a Burk Burnett road by the two mixers of Potts and Prentice contractors.

This was a small run compared with the runs made last summer but the small showing was due to trouble with the water and short hours.

Pouring of concrete now stops at four o'clock in the evening in order to give the material a sufficient time to dry, should a cold spell bring a frost.

2 OUT OF EVERY 100 PROSPECTS ARE NOT MARRIED

Two out of every 100 prospective marriages are not completed, according to the records of the county clerk of Wichita county.

This average is struck by an examination of the marriage license record book, wherein all marriage certificates are recorded.

After the marriage licenses are issued and the ceremony completed, the certificate is returned to the county clerk for recording, and out of every one hundred pages can be found.

Just what the reason for this is cannot be determined. For the first time in the history of the county clerk's office of the past three years, a young man applied for a marriage license and asked for a rebate on a marriage license, stating that it was never used.

Occasionally a young man approaches a newspaper reporter with the request that his marriage license not be issued. Reasons are assigned in many cases as that they are not ready to be married, but in case the girl assents that the necessary document is on hand.

The school board while in session also appointed G. W. Roderick, trustee of Pond Creek district.

The board also passed an order that the county school pay E. E. Davis and T. H. Shelby, who conducted the school survey in this county, the sum of $12.54, which represents the actual expense incurred in the survey.

A meeting of all school trustees in all the districts of Wichita county was planned by the board to be held during the month of April, probably at Iowa Park, at which time a general discussion will be had as to the duties of a school trustee. An effort will be made to secure several educators for the meeting.

The trustees set about immediately Saturday afternoon to purchase a truck. A high school boy, residing in that district, who attends school here, will drive the truck to and from the school.

CONTENDS STOVE NEEDED IN MEXIA BUSINESS PLACE

Contending that the stove was his own, that it was needed badly in his place of business at Mexia and that it was illegally being withheld from him, J. F. Humphrey brought an injunction suit and secured a restraining order from Judge Guy Rogers of the county court at law against Shannon Layne, Nelsonberg brothers, proprietors of the quick lunch at Burk Burnett and W. E. Ferguson.

He alleged in his petition that Ferguson had brought suit against the Quick Lunch and that a writ of attachment had been issued for the cook stove, which he, the plaintiff had purchased before the writ of attachment was issued.

The stove was seized on the attachment, with Ferguson, who he, the plaintiff had purchased before the writ of attachment was issued.

W. T. HARRIS WILL NOT SEEK OFFICE FOR THIRD TERM

County Clerk W. T. Harris definitely announced Saturday that he would not be a candidate for county clerk at the democratic primaries next July.

Mr. Harris stated that when he first time he campaigned that he would not make the race for the third consecutive term.

He said Saturday that he had attempted to the best of his ability to serve the public courteously, efficiently and honestly and that in furtherance of this stand he could not conscientiously make the race for the third term.

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., Jan. 7.—Legality of the $15,000,000 bond issue voted to compensate war veterans was upheld in a decision handed down by the state supreme court here today.

The suit was instituted by taxpayers with a view to establishing beyond question the legality of the bond issue.

OLYMPIC PRESENTS NEW PARAMOUNT FEATURE PICTURE

Marion Davies Does Some Exceptional Work in "Enchantment."

Marion Davies in "Enchantment," a Cosmopolitan production released by Paramount, is advertised as the feature attraction of the week at the Olympic theater, although the second film "The Wonderful Thing," featuring Norma Talmadge and Harrison Ford, is also rated as one of the best releases of the year. "Enchantment" comes Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday and is a super-society film showing the star as a modern Cleopatra. Haughty, scornful and rebelliously careless with modern conventions she causes no end of trouble until finally some cave man tactics are adapted by her father to tame her. Appearing in support of Miss Davies in Forest Stanley, Edith Shayne and Tom Lewis. The picture was directed by Robert Vignola. Norma Talmadge and Harrison Ford in "The Wonderful Thing," a lively little comedy-drama, are said to be at their best. Both of these stars are more than passingly popular with local movie audiences and both have never failed to make a decided hit when their productions have been shown here before. This picture comes for the final three days of the week and will be supported by a strong bill of news reels and comedies.

Director, manager and leading man of the Theodore Lorch Stock company, which opens the local winter theatrical season at the Wichita Theater tomorrow night.

THEODORE LORCH COMPANY OPENS LONG ENGAGEMENT AT THE WICHITA THEATER

Director, manager and leading man of the Theodore Lorch Stock company, which opens the local winter theatrical season at the Wichita Theater tomorrow night. "Adam and Eva," a comedy-drama replete with all the essentials of a successful stage play, has been selected as the initial offering of the Theodore Lorch stock company which opens an extensive engagement at the Wichita theater tomorrow night. The plot of this play is built around the work of an efficiency expert, called in by the head of a wealthy family of pseudo aristocrats whose chief object in life is to spend the hard-earned dollars of the husband and father. The expert, a dynamic individual who classes idleness with the devil and Ananias, turns the dawdling household top-sy-turvy in a short time and puts the pink tea hounds to complete rout. He converts a butterfly "Eva" into a veritable fountain of energy and transforms the rest of the some daughters, neices and nephews, not to mention various and sundry "in-laws," from the drone to the queen-bee type. In accomplishing this plenty of action is introduced and ample portions of humor brought to the front. The various roles will be masterfully handled by members of the Lorch company, according to advance reports, which means that an interesting and entertaining production is in store for the entire week.

"The Birth of a Nation" Still Held As Cinema Model

After a lapse of three years and more, during which time it has been held as a comparative model for every big picture that has followed it, "The Birth of a Nation," scheduled for showing at the Olympic theater January 22, 24 and 25, still stands out as the greatest screen achievement of the American picture world. This picture, a cinema masterpiece and at the same time an historical work of limitless value, probably will stand as the greatest moving picture of the twentieth century. Other great pictures have been produced since its release, but none have ever quite approached the heights attained by D. W. Griffith in this famous drama of the Civil War. Dealing with a subject of such proportions as the war and the reconstruction period of the south naturally enabled the director to stage his production on an elaborate scale. Just how elaborately Griffith did enlarge on his subject can only be appreciated by viewing the finished picture. Nature was his background, 150 years of American history his subject, and 15,000 people his actors. Incidentally, the special music prepared for this picture will be given here by the Olympic organ and an augmented orchestra. The musical scores have ever been a delightful feature of the picture's presentation and local theater managers are planning that none of this charm shall be lost in the showing at Wichita Falls.

PRISCILLA DEAN AND TOM MEIGHAN STARRING IN EMPRESS MOVIE PROGRAM

Two big pictures, the first a Paramount release and the second a Universal-Jewel special production starring Priscilla Dean and Herbert Harlow, have been scheduled for showing at the Empress theater this week. Thomas Meighan and Mildred Harris in "A Prince There Was," a screen version of the famous George M. Cohan stage success, come as the main attraction the first three days, while the latter three will be devoted to the showing of "Conflict," a vigorous tale of the north woods.

CURWOOD PICTURE "THE COURAGE OF MARGE O'DOON" FEATURES AT GEM

"The Courage of Marge O'Doon," a super-special drama of the north woods, written by James Oliver Curwood, produced by Vitagraph and starred by an all-star cast headed by Pauline Stark, will be the feature attraction of the week at the Gem theater. This picture comes for Tuesday only. The locale is in a land where courage and heroism are a part of the daily routine, and the action is thoroughly in keeping with the spirit of the land. Monday brings Earl Williams in "Captain Swift" to the Gem, and Wednesday finds a western special, "The Vigilantes," as the main attraction. Dustin Farnum in "The Devil Within," Pauline Frederick in "Life's Twist," and William Fairbanks in "Montana Bill" finish the week on Thursday, Friday and Saturday respectively. Superbly satisfactory spectacle service supplied by Fred Goss, optometrist, with Kruger Jewelry Co., Wichita Falls, Texas. (G) Picture Framed at Decorators. 231-1420

POULTRY SPECIAL OF DENVER STARTS TRIP JANUARY 16

The first "poultry special" exhibit ever run in Texas will be run over the entire Denver system of Texas, including the Wichita Valley, starting on January 16. This car is run in cooperation with all the counties along the line which are making local arrangements for holding a one-day poultry school. The itinerary of the poultry special is so arranged that the exhibit can be at each town on the day of the poultry school. Each county is arranging for a school and wonderful interest is being shown in every county. Local committees are arranging already for big crowds, some expecting one day crowds. In many places it will be the biggest agricultural event ever held in the county. Some local committees say "we have made it just as big as we want to." An announcement says:

"The A. & M. college extension service is the third link in the chain of cooperation. They will place a splendid poultry exhibit, of an educational nature, in the car, and will furnish two poultry specialists as speakers for the poultry schools. There will certainly be one poultry specialist at every point and two at most places."

"The exhibit which the college extension service prepares will consist of a few live chickens of common breeds, perhaps some baby chicks, incubators, brooders, models of houses, a model of a poultry farm, egg testers, trap nests, feed hoppers, etc."

"At each place a meeting will be held in the forenoon. In the afternoon the poultry special will be open from about 1:30 to 4:30. The poultry specialists will be there to show you through and answer questions."

"At every place premiums are being offered by local business men for the best dozen eggs brought in that day. The egg show is arousing a great deal of curiosity and interest. Premiums on the eggs will be awarded at the morning meeting, where the eggs will be exhibited. Don't miss this feature of our one-day poultry school."

Henrietta Couple Celebrate Golden Wedding Jan. 1

HENRIETTA, Jan. 7.—Mr. and Mrs. A. Searly, pioneer settlers of Henrietta, achieved the golden anniversary of their wedding on New Year's day, being the honor guests at a big dinner in celebration of the event given at the home of their children, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Kelley. The guests were led into the dining room by the bride and groom of fifty years ago, to the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march. When all had found their places Mrs. Percy Neville presented the guests of honor with a miniature gold put full of gold pieces, making a presentation with an appropriate bit of verse.

Mrs. Kelley honored the occasion by wearing her own wedding dress of twenty-six years ago, and was assisted in serving the dinner by Miss Doris Kelley. Prominent among the guests at the table were Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Rountree, who celebrated their own golden wedding anniversary only a few days before. The other guests included Messrs. and Mesdames N. Searly, W. S. Culwell, P. H. Neville, S. L. Conn of Wichita Falls, C. L. Searly and W. A. Rees, as well as Earl Anderson of Waxahachie, Margaret Watson of Wichita Falls and A. Searly.

WEIGHT INSPECTOR FOR CITY PROPOSED IN NEW ORDINANCE

Two new city ordinances calling for regulation of stores are now being prepared for submission to the city council. This was made public Saturday morning by Dr. A. H. Douglass, director of the city health department, who is drafting the new papers.

One of the ordinances calls for the appointment of an inspector of weights and measures and also provides for the levying of a fee to make the position, in part at least, self supporting. The other provides for certain regulatory measures for certain petroleum products and will affect only those merchants selling gasoline, oils and kindred products to the public.

The chief objective of the latter ordinance will be to maintain, by periodic inspection, a standard quality of gas and oil in the various stations of the city.

Every merchant uses either weights or measures in his dealings with the public, Dr. Douglass says, and hence all will come under supervision of the inspector of weights or measures. The assessment of a nominal fee will make the office self supporting to a large extent, the plan provides, and the health department head believes that since the public will reap the benefits of such inspections no objection to the expenditure of some funds will be made.

The prompt, intelligent and efficient service which the City National Bank of Commerce renders to business houses, as well as the convenience of its location, make a banking connection with the institution of exceptional value to busy men. The bank welcomes both small and large accounts. 140-142

SAGE AND SULPHUR DARKENS GRAY HAIR

Brush This Through Faded, Strained Locks and They Become Dark, Glossy, Youthful.

Almost everyone knows that Sage and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.—adv.

MOTOR CARAVAN OF SHRINERS TO VISIT THIS CITY NEXT MAY

This city will play host to a unique tourist party next May when the transcontinental Shrine motor caravan makes an over-night stop on its way to the imperial council in San Francisco. Present plans call for the arrival of the Texas caravan on the afternoon of Tuesday, May 23, and of its departure for the northwest early next day.

The motor caravan movement is said to be a nation-wide proposition, including Shriners in all parts of the country. Large tourist trips to the imperial council sessions are being planned by many temples, advance reports indicate, with Washington, D. C., named as the official starting point in the east. The main group from this point will be swelled by the recruiting of state and district caravans along the line.

The Texas caravan will start at Galveston and pass through Houston, Bryan, Waco, San Antonio, Temple, Fort Worth, Dallas, Wichita Falls, Vernon, Amarillo and Dalhart going then by way of Denver, Las Vegas, Grand Canyon, Los Angeles, Fresno, Yosemite, Oakland and San Francisco. Stops will be made at the Grand Canyon and the Yosemite Valley, where elaborate ceremonies and entertainments are being planned for the visitors.

Bernard S. McMahon, field director of the Colorado to Gulf Highway association, is in charge of arrangements for the Texas delegates and any information can be obtained from him. His headquarters are at Dalhart.

COUNTY COLLECTS $71,500 PROPERTY TAXES DURING WEEK

Tax collections by the county tax collector during the past week reached a new high figure for the tax paying year with a total of 1921 property tax of $71,537.98. The redemption collections during the same period amounted to $707.59.

A large number of people paid poll taxes during the past week and the total number reached 764 for the week, making a grand total of 2,294. Of this number 1,214 are women.

Another week remains for automobile owners to secure 1922 license tags as the officers have stated that this will be the last day of grace and all owners whose automobiles appear on the street without the new tag will be called upon to explain the situation before the judge.

ELIZABETH HALL ENTERS RACE FOR COUNTY CLERKSHIP

Miss Elizabeth Hall, chief deputy under County Clerk W. T. Harris since December 1, 1918, Saturday announced that she will be a candidate for county clerk of Wichita county, subject to the democratic primaries in July.

Miss Hall made this announcement when W. T. Harris, the incumbent in office, stated that he would not be a candidate for the third term.

Having had charge of the office for three years, Miss Hall feels that she is fully qualified for the position. She has resided in Wichita county and Wichita Falls for the past four years, coming here from Graham.

ATTENDANCE EXPECTED FOR C. OF C. BANQUET

RESERVATIONS NOW BEING MADE FOR ANNUAL MEETING JANUARY 12.

ANNOUNCEMENTS OF INTEREST PROBABLE

For Membership Campaign To Be Held at Meetings This Week.

Reservations are now being made for the annual membership meeting and banquet chamber of commerce, to be held in the First Baptist church next week from tomorrow. Reservations are on sale at the chamber of commerce rooms, the price being per plate. Reservations point to a big attendance to an exceedingly interesting occasion. Frank Kell has announced that he will have an interesting announcement at the Wauvika railroad, and it was Saturday that some other announcements of new projects of range will be made. E. Noble, president of the chamber of commerce, will preside at the banquet, and there will be speakers, Frank Kell and W.

D. Chize of this city and Adolph Boldt of St. Louis. R. E. Shepherd is in charge of the musical program. In connection with the annual meeting plans for the membership campaign to be held next week are also progressing steadily. During this week members will be named by the several luncheon clubs and civic organizations and these will meet at the Wichita club next Saturday noon to plan for several days of intensive effort. A finance committee is already at work on the list of proposed members. One oil company operating here has agreed to take 14 memberships at $25 each and it is expected that a large number of new members will be enrolled as a result of the campaign.

PLAN FIRST SERVICES IN NEW YALE AVENUE CHURCH THIS MORNING

The Times has received the following announcement: "Yale avenue Evangelical church will hold services in its new church building Sunday. Sunday school classes will be held in the old tabernacle at 9:45 in the morning, after which a procession will form, each class in charge of its teacher, and will march to the new church. The whole procession will be led by President Elder L. Newman and Pastor Albert C. Lauwuf. "The devotional hymn, 'We Are Marching On Toward Zion,' will be sung as the procession enters the church. Then each class will be seated in places previously assigned them. "Rev. L. Newman will conduct the morning worship and preaching service at 11 o'clock. This to be in the nature of a dedicatory sermon. Following this, Rev. Lauwuf will open the doors of the church and extend an invitation for anyone to join. All those present at that, the Sunday meeting, will be charter members. "Proceeding again at 8 o'clock in the afternoon and baptizing will be at the Christian church at 4:30. Anyone wishing to be baptized come to the Sunday morning services. There will be no meeting of the Junior Y. P. A. Sunday afternoon as the baptismal services will be at that hour. "The Senior Y. P. A. will meet at 8:30 in the evening with Mrs. Tom Smith presiding. The dedication of the church will be held at 7:30, conducted by Rev. L. Newman of Houston. The doors will again be opened for new members at this time."

ANNUAL MEETINGS OF LOCAL BANKS SET FOR TUESDAY

Annual meetings of stockholders and directors of Wichita Falls' four banks will be held Tuesday afternoon, at which time new boards of directors and officers will be chosen. Chief interest in the meetings centers around that of the City National Bank of Commerce, where the recently announced resignation of C. W. Heid as active vice-president makes it possible that some changes will result. The other three banks are expected to respect the present directors and officers with perhaps some few exceptions.

NIGHT SCHOOL TO OPEN SECOND TERM OF SESSION MONDAY

The second half of the year's work of the Wichita Falls public night school will start Monday night. A. K. Prosser, principal of the school, announced Saturday. The first semester's work closed recently with a student enrollment of 347. Instruction in English, Spanish, algebra, arithmetic, commercial law, bookkeeping, shorthand, typewriting, penmanship and Americanization for foreigners will be offered three times weekly, the tuition free. Special reviews will be given to aid those forced to drop out of school before the holidays in getting started again. Officials of the school are anxious that anyone who has previously attended the night sessions, but who left before the close of the semester, return and take up their work again. New pupils are also requested to report Monday night. Further details of the school may be obtained from Mr. Prosser by phoning him at the high school office.

At the Churches

First Methodist Church. Seventh and Lamar. The new officers of the Sunday school will take charge of the work in our school tomorrow. All those interested in the church are requested to be on hand at 9:45 a. m. At 11 a. m. the pastor will give a sermon of utmost importance both to the children and to the parents and teachers in the school. Subject, "Casas" or "God's." Bring those old letters that have been hidden in the old trunk and come into the church. Epworth League 6:45 p. m. Evening sermon, 7:30. Bring a friend tomorrow.—T. S. PITTEMBERG, Pastor.

First Christian Church. (Tenth and Travis street.)—The plan to eliminate all literature and study the Bible only in all departments of the First Christian Bible school went into effect last Sunday, January 1, 1923, with marked success. Great interest being manifested among the pupils as well as the teachers of the Bible school. Attendance almost reached the five hundred mark and nearly every one present had their own Bible. Great interest is being manifested in the mid-week teachers' study class. One hundred present last Wednesday night with several attending as substitute teachers. You are invited to come to the Bible school services every Sunday. Bring your own Bible and study nothing but the Bible. The Bible school services also merge into the morning worship hour. All children, mothers and fathers are requested to stay for the morning worship and hear the pastor, Rev. J. Leon Knevel, deliver those inspiring gospel sermons. You will never regret spending these hours in the house of the Lord. Come and bring your friends. All visitors to the city are cordially invited to attend. Special music will be rendered by the chorus choir.

Federal Heights Methodist Church. There will be two interesting services at this church, at both of which the pastor, Rev. J. H. Gross, D. D., will preach. At 11 a. m. there will be an anthem by the choir, "The Earth is the Lord's," by Wilson. Judge P. A. Martin will make a five minute talk to the congregation on a matter every member of the church should hear about. At 7:30 the service will be in the interest of the Boy Scouts. The pastor will deliver a special sermon-lecture on the subject, "Lost in Mexico." This address is based on experiences he had while encamped with a bunch of boys in Mexico a few years ago. The Scout band will play at this service. All Boy Scouts and their friends are invited. The Sunday school will meet at 9:30 with Judge Chaucer in charge. There will be classes for all. URADIA— And What It Will Do

DR. W. W. SWARTZ

Wichita Falls, Texas, Dec. 31, 1921.

MR. C. C. RANDLE, Wichita Falls, Texas.

Dear Sir:

About 10 weeks ago I was having trouble with my battery. I had the same rebuilt or repaired at the service station of the battery here, and was told that the same would last for at least six months. Well, it lasted about three weeks. I took it back and was told that it needed recharging. After letting them recharge it, it worked for about three days. I became disgusted, called upon other battery men, who told me the best thing I could do was to buy a new battery. I happened to see your ad in the Ranger (high school paper) and called upon you immediately, and was informed that my battery was alright if it was properly treated. Well, after you put some of that solution or whatever it was in my battery, it has been on the job ever since and seems to be getting stronger all the time. In conclusion, I will recommend to my friends to take their old batteries there to have the new elixir or pep or whatever you call it put in their batteries.

Respectfully yours,

DR. W. W. SWARTZ.

KNOWLEDGE FOR CAR OWNERS

Interesting and Important Facts That Every Motorist Should Know.

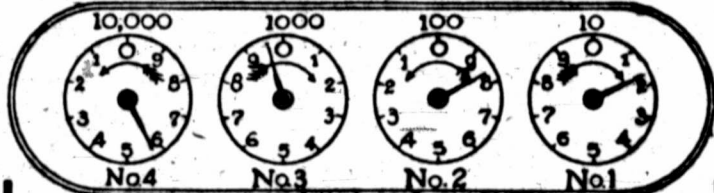

When obtainable, rainwater is the best for use in the cooling system. In excess of heavy grease in the mainline often causes a humming noise. Over-lubrication is frequently due to carrying the oil level too high. Ordinarily habit metal will melt at between 300 and 400 degrees. The temperature varies as to the condition. The cylinder and rings have a slightly oval leakage will result if the rings should turn in their seat. Wiping the hood before the engine will destroy the luster, the drying, due to the heat, causes the gloss to disappear. A most common trouble with plugs is caused by cracked insulators, which allow current leakage, causing a poor spark or none at all the gap. Grease cups will give better service if the grease cups are turned down the time the car is taken out. When the bolts will show excess wear. A good way to keep the valve stems is to place an ordinary lock washer over them. The washers should be somewhat larger than stem, will act as sort of a scraper, driving the carbon as soon as it is. On account of the large amount of heat used in starting the engine, it is essential that all the terminals be kept clean, bright and tight. Owners who drive their cars all winter should have all necessary repairs and adjustments made during the fall of the year so that their cars are in the best possible shape to stand the rigors of winter-driving. When the engine has broken loose begins to turn over at the normal working speed, the ammeter will fluctuate somewhat, depending on the position of the crankshaft, and will meter a current flow of from 30 to 40 amperes on smaller engines, and somewhat higher on engines of larger capacity. A good way to seat the seat after driving valves is to lift the valve let it drop. If it strikes the seat bounces back, the seat is good. If the seat is poor the valve will stop.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING
Keep check on mileage of tires. Age minimum for automobile drivers in Illinois is 18 years. Test the wheels for side play three or four times a year. Every time is train time at railroad crossings. Denver mountain park system was viewed by 600,000 tourists this year. Brougham is the physician's popular car. Turn grease cups down every time you take out the car. Keep the spring bolts constantly oiled. In putting on new tires, see that nut at base of valve stem is tight. There are more than 400,000 automobiles in Canada increased six-fold since 1914. A thick, soft painter's brush is better than waste for removing dust from the motor. Automobile owners throughout the country are organizing a "courtesy club." Between $40,000 and $50,000 worth of tires are stolen from automobiles daily in New York. Pennsylvania spends more than $50,000 a mile for the construction of its concrete roads. New York's automobile show will have 34 exhibitors showing nearly 400 different models. New York's automobile show will have 233 automobile accessory booths. Castile soap and water is best solution for cleaning leather upholstery. Loose valve stem or a leaky valve may be cause of tire going flat over night. Do not wash the hood before the motor cools, if you wish to preserve its luster. More than 27,000 motor trucks have been distributed by the U. S. bureau of public roads among the states for road building purposes. Total highway mileage of Pennsylvania is 7,544 miles, of which 3,300 constitutes the state highway system. Eight new makes of cars, including two foreign ones, will be exhibited at the New York automobile show.

URADIA— And What It Will Do

DR. W. W. SWARTZ Wichita Falls, Texas, Dec. 31, 1921.

MR. C. C. RANDLE, Wichita Falls, Texas. Dear Sir: About 10 weeks ago I was having trouble with my battery. I had the same rebuilt or repaired at the service station of the battery here, and was told that the same would last for at least six months. Well, it lasted about three weeks. I took it back and was told that it needed recharging. After letting them recharge it, it worked for about three days. I became disgusted, called upon other battery men, who told me the best thing I could do was to buy a new battery. I happened to see your ad in the Ranger (high school paper) and called upon you immediately, and was informed that my battery was alright if it was properly treated. Well, after you put some of that solution or whatever it was in my battery, it has been on the job ever since and seems to be getting stronger all the time. In conclusion, I will recommend to my friends to take their old batteries there to have the new elixir or pep or whatever you call it put in their batteries.

The solution above referred to is URADIA, sold only by Randle Auto Supply in Wichita Falls. Dr. Swartz in his letter to me has told the whole story in plain language, as he is not familiar with battery terms and language.

Respectfully yours, DR. W. W. SWARTZ

KNOWLEDGE FOR CAR OWNERS

Interesting and Important Facts That Every Motorist Should Know.

When obtainable, rainwater is the best for use in the cooling system.

An excess of heavy grease in the transmission often causes a humming noise.

Over-lubrication is frequently due to carrying the oil level too high.

Ordinary rabbit metal will melt at between 300 and 350 degrees. The temperature varying as to the composition.

If the cylinder and rings have worn slightly oval, leakage will result if the rings should turn in their grooves.

Washing the hood before the engine cools will destroy the lustre, the rapid drying, due to the heat, causing the gloss to disappear.

The most common troubles with spark plugs is caused by cracked insulators, which allow current leakage, causing a poor spark or none at all at the gap.

Spring bolts will give better service if the grease cups are turned down every time the car is taken out. When neglected the bolts will show excessive wear.

A good way to keep the valve stems clean is to place an ordinary lock washer over them. The washer, which should be somewhat larger than the stem, will act as sort of a scraper, removing the carbon as soon as it forms.

On account of the large amount of current used in starting the engine, it is essential that all the terminals should be kept clean, bright and tight.

Owners who drive their cars all winter should have all necessary repairs and adjustments made during the fall of the year so that their cars will be in the best possible shape to withstand the rigors of winter-driving.

When the engine has broken loose and begins to turn over at the normal cranking speed, the ammeter will fluctuate somewhat, depending on the position of the crankshaft, and will register a current flow of from 30 to 50 amperes on smaller engines, and somewhat higher on engines of larger capacity.

A good way to test the seat after grinding valves is to lift the valve and let it drop. If it strikes the seat and bounces back, the seat is good. If the seat is poor the valve will stop with a dull thud, as the uneven seat throws the valve slightly to one side as it strikes.

Too rich a mixture is not the one and only cause of four-stroking with a two-stroke motor. You will just as often find the trouble due to an excess of oil. The best plan is to make a point of draining the crank-case at regular intervals.

There is nothing that rains clothes more quickly than oil sprayed from the cylinder joints. This trouble may be remedied by removing the cylinder and crank case where they meet, smearing over them a thin layer of fish glue, and finally replacing the cylinder, tightening each "hold-down" not a turn or two at a time, in order.

Brushing and the use of caustic soap and water are all that is needed in the case of leather upholstery. Doing this once a year acts as an excellent preservative and prevents cracking. Apply with a cloth, rubbing well between the pleats, after which wipe the surface carefully to prevent damage to garments.

The next time you start on a trip cut two or three pieces of wood from one by four strips two inches longer than the distance between the underside of the front wheel and the ground. Cut a slight notch in one end and store these away under the seat when you start off in a hurry some morning and forget the jack, you may have a mighty good substitute right under you.

The valves should open and close at certain periods of the cycle of operation, and any deviation from these periods lowers the efficiency of the motor. Such opening and closing would be entirely controlled by the valve tappets if no expansion occurred in the length of the valve stem under the effects of heat. Expansion, however, does not occur and a certain amount of clearance must be allowed between the tappets.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Keep check on mileage of tires. Age minimum for automobile drivers in Illinois is 18 years. Test the wheels for side play three or four times a year. Every time is train time at railroad crossings. Denver mountain park system was viewed by 600,000 tourists this year. Brougham is the physician's popular base club. Turn grease cups down every time you take out the car. Keep the spring bolts constantly oiled. In putting on new tires, see that nut at base of valve stem is tight. There are more than 400,000 automobiles in Canada. Automobiles in Canada increased six-fold since 1914. A thick, soft painter's brush is better than waste for removing dust from the motor. Automobile owners throughout the country are organizing a "courtesy club." Between $40,000 and $50,000 worth of tires are stolen from automobiles daily in New York. Pennsylvania spends more than $50,000 a mile for the construction of its concrete roads. New York's automobile show will have 34 exhibitors showing nearly 400 different models. New York's automobile show will have 232 automobile accessory booths. Castile soap and water is best solution for cleaning leather upholstery. Loose valve stem or a leaky valve may be cause of tire going flat over night. Do not wash the hood before the motor cools, if you wish to preserve its lustre. More than 27,000 motor trucks have been distributed by the U. S. bureau of public roads among the states for road building purposes. Total highway mileage of Pennsylvania is 91,556 miles, of which 3300 constitutes the state highway system. Eight new makes of cars, including two foreign ones, will be exhibited at the New York automobile show.

$100,000 REWARD! By Henry C. Rowland

STRIPPED.

Matthew Holmes' speed boat is wrecked while he is on his way to intercept the James Taylor, in a new fire extinguisher. Landing at the old Putney place, he is greeted by three furious men and a surly, mysterious stranger. He turns the extinguisher upon all four, and is rescued by a man piloted by one Bill Emerson. Bill reveals that Sylvia, Holmes' girl, has been kidnapped and disappeared while en route. Much to his surprise, Matt is greeted warmly by Uncle Jerry, who has been from a supposed destined to marry Matt, his gaudy nurse. Matt had been in disfavor with both, but now Uncle Jerry regards him as a rescuer, as beautiful Nancy, who's been with him since the place. Nancy asserts Sylvia either has been drowned or has slipped with Sam Sprague, the shipbuilder. Matt declares she has been kidnapped. Her ransom, having in mind the foreigners at the Putney place. Nancy thinks him over in the same place, where they find a reward of $100,000 has been offered for Sylvia's return. Accompanied by the fire extinguisher and Nancy, Matt goes to the Putney place and sees a launch slide out. "Sylvia is being taken away," he thinks, but the launch takes no passengers. Soon it returns, and three men carry a casket of wooden cases in two limousines. "Whisky run-leave" cry Matt out. Nancy, disconcerted, takes a home. Then Nancy accuses the bootleggers may be holding Sylvia captive, and the two sail a suspected "bootleggers' ship" to a nearby island, then turn back, much to Nancy's disgust.

FIFTH INSTALLMENT.

The Raid.

"UPON my word," said Nancy, "with such a mind as yours you ought really to be a great writer some day when you are able to get it under some control."

"I believe," said Matt, "that this little evening joy ride was your suggestion, wasn't it?"

Nancy admitted the accusation.

"Well, then," said Matt, "please don't criticize me for trying to justify it. We'll follow on after these Johnnies until we can be sure whether they are making for the island or not."

"And then what?" Nancy asked.

"If they are," said Matt, "and from the course they are steering it seems a pretty good bet, the obvious conclusion is that they must have a cache of contraband out there. Their strand may be with one or two objects. Either to get some more stuff or else to leave some."

"And what's that got to do with Sylvia?" Nancy demanded.

"Just this, dear disciple in detecting," Matt explained patiently. "We have reason to suppose that they have nabbed Sylvia. If we were to run up close enough aboard to identify them positively the chances are greatly in favor of our being fired into. But if they have a cache out there I might take measures to have the island watched and collar them on their next visit to it."

Nancy considered this suggestion for a moment, then observed:

"With your passion for playing long shots it is no wonder that you should be bankrupt and forced to peddle fire extinguishers."

In this manner they forged ahead for as long a time that Matt began to think he had been the victim of another impulse in leaping at a conclusion. Then, suddenly, in a lifting of the fog he discovered an irregularity of the horizon ahead. Straining his eyes, he was able to see a low, black, broken mass, and the faint east wind brought to his nostrils the strong odor of kelp and rockweed such as one gets close to the shore.

"There's the island," said he. "Look, she's slowing down."

"Then let's go home and eat and sleep," said Nancy. "One has to do it some time."

"That becomes curiously important after a lapse of some hours without either," Matt admitted. "Some of us discovered it in France," and he glanced at the compass and laid a course for home on the principle known to sailors as the "circle of the world," to say by Green, by Good Luck, and by God.

It cannot be said that, in the words of Hiawatha, "pleasant was the journey homeward." Nancy, after her first flush of hope in Matt's imagination as to the objective point of the sea bootlegger's campaign, was somewhat hushed from the house and placed aboard her and was probably at that moment the terrified and helpless victim of present day pirates. Matt, according to her distributer, had been sleeping at the switch, fallen at the post, and after carrying his campaign successfully enough so far as it had gone, and muddling through a series of happy accidents with the fortuitous aid of his extinguisher, had been found locking in during of which she chooses to ignore his solicitude for her safety in not laying aboard the freebooters.

"It would not have made the slightest particle of difference," said Matt wistfully. "Just because one girl has been out of luck and got kidnapped is no warrant for another's getting nabbed or filled with lead or something. Gas attacks are all right affairs, but history does not record a single instance of their successful use at sea. Besides, we'd have missed out what I'm pretty well convinced of, that they've got a depot out there on the island."

But Nancy chose to be unreasonable. She was tired to the point of exhaustion, had scarcely tasted her dinner and the allied treaties made in the car on the way to the Gateeses were scrapped in the manner of most such treaties when something goes wrong. She preferred to see in Matt a sort of whimsical bungler, and one possessed of that variety of ideas which might lead him to act during at one moment and excessive caution at the next, according to the mood upon him.

Meanwhile Matt was trying to find his way through the fog, and here also what seemed to Nancy an undue-caution, was necessary for the entrance to the light was awn with rocks and ledges and the tide well on the ebb. To make matters worse, the damp sea fog brought with it a bone searching chill, and Murphy, expecting rain, had thoughtfully removed everything which might serve as a wrap from the launch. Matt tried to make Nancy take his coat, swearing that he was impatient to low temperature and enjoyed it. But if he had been a smallpox suspect Nancy could not have showed more responsiveness to accepting this offer.

Thus shrouded in a gloom which seemed gradually to penetrate their physical as well as spiritual beings, they draw in on the shore. "Well, anyhow," said Matt, as they walked up to the house, Nancy keeping her fingers. "I think that you're a darned good sport. It's been a pretty trying session, all things considered, but it's going to work out all right, you'll see."

"You did not answer until they reached the house and entered it, when Matt, turning to a frown the long French window, resolved a shock of surprise. For Nancy, instead of going on upstairs with no further word, turned suddenly.

"Perhaps you're right," said she, apparently in answer to his remark made half way across the lawn. "You're a good deal of a fool about most things, I should say, but there's an old proverb about a fool for luck. Good night."

"Uncle Jerry left her in a rage and shipped as supercargo on one of his father's big square riggers in the China trade. When he came back she was married to Hiram Gates."

Her strong, small hand flashed out to his as it rested on the knob of the window, and the grip of it was so violent and unexpected that Matt could feel his knuckles grind and creak. Then she went swiftly across the room, through which the light of a gray dawn was stealing, and Matt wondered if she had wanted to hurt him or what?

When he went down to breakfast at the usual hour he found May and Nancy already at the table, the latter evidently none the worse for her stormy night. Matt looked inquiringly from one to the other, when to his surprise and pleasure May, as he seated himself, leaned toward him and dropped her hand on the back of his chair.

"Nancy has told me all about it, Matt," said she. "I'm sorry for what I've thought and felt about you."

"Thanks, May," said Matt. "same here. I'm afraid we had each other wrong. But don't you think Nancy ought to have stayed in bed?"

"Nonsense," said Nancy. "Caring around at night in motorcycles and launches and things is a lot less wearing than dancing in a stuffy room or cramming for exams. I'm fit as a prize fighter."

"You are quite wonderful, Matt," said May. "What are you going to do next?"

"Throw a dragnet around the old Putney place and see what we can haul. Have you told Uncle Jerry?"

"Not yet," said May. "This thing has hit him pretty hard and he mustn't be excited by false hopes. Few people know it, Matt, but he and Sylvia's mother were old sweethearts. They quarreled about some silly jealousy of Jerry's. He was hotheaded and rushed to conclusions, and I imagine she was no less temperamental but not so quick to cool off. He left her in a rage and shipped as supercargo on one of his father's big square riggers in the China trade, and when he came back she was married to Hiram Gates."

"This was new history to Matt. "Really," said he. "Well, that might account for his interest in Sylvia, but it doesn't seem quite up to the house, Nancy keeping her fingers. "O, Mr. Gates played fair enough," said May. "They were boyhood friends and acknowledged rivals. Your uncle took it standing up, and blamed himself like the big natured man he is. But that was the reason why he never married until I came along. A faint color spread over her charming face. "He seemed to find something in me which he thought resembled Sylvia's mother. Now I'd like to have you ask me what I found in him besides his wealth."

answered. "You found the big nature you mentioned and a lot of heart under his rough husk and the spirit of youth even when he was knocked down by his illness."

"Thanks, Matt, that's rather well put," said May. "I suppose I am mature minded, and let me tell you there are a good many women of my age who find a lot more to love and admire in older men than they do in the younger ones of their own generation."

"And I'm another of them," said Nancy. "I may not be mature minded, but I've got sense enough to prefer a strong man of fifty and odd to the average conceited, self-sufficient, patronizing prig of my own class."

"I believe you're right," said Matt. "The more I see of present day young girls the more I feel about it that way myself. Perhaps I am rather mature minded like May, because I have often felt that if I should ever be in a position to marry I should prefer an older woman—let us say a childless widow, about five years my senior."

"With a fortune of her own," said Nancy. "I should not let that prove an obstacle," said Matt. "When poverty comes in at the door love is apt to filter through every crack in the house. A reasonable margin of luxury is requisite to insure domestic happiness."

Nancy looked at her sister. "Matt is after the hundred thousand dollar reward," said she, "and reinstatement in the esteem of his Uncle Jerry."

"Well," said May, "I should say he was well on the road, and I'm sure I don't begrudge it him. Perhaps you don't know, Matt, that I have Sylvia to thank for my own happiness. Your uncle is her grandfather and could refuse her nothing, so when she insisted that the slovenly male nurse who was supposed to take care of him be sent away and I undertake his case he gave in, though with none too good a grace. I must admit, low as he was, I felt like a lion tamer for the first two days. Now eat your breakfast and then go over to the Gateeses and get things moving."

Matt applied himself with vigor to the eggs and country sausage. Nancy, who had already satisfied her physical demands, watched him with a belligerent expression on her plump face.

"Since we're having this heart to heart family showdown," said she, "I think Matt might as well know that we are not of the virtue species."

"I've known it for some time," Matt answered. "I took the trouble to learn that May was of a good New England family impoverished by a case of Potts disease in a railroad that had always been regarded as the industrial backbone of this region. When it went to pot May went to work. I've also been informed that she was a Florence Nightingale during the war, and it is easy to see that her little sister is a dove of peace or angel or other winged fowl."

"I suppose," said May, "that you two will fight until the last ditch."

"And then what?" said Matt.

May smiled. "Unconditional surrender on the part of one of you," said she, "and no doubt a heavy indemnity imposed."

"Uncle Jerry has already offered to pay that," said Matt. "In the event of somebody finding Sylvia before I do I may try a job of kidnaping myself."

Nancy pushed out her chin and her eyes sparkled with combativeness. "I wish you joy of it," said she.

"Well," said Matt, "if I am forced to become an outlaw through nonpayment of the income tax I might as well become a double dued one and steal a companion for my exile. But this is no time for idle chit-chat." He booted his remaining sausage. "Let's go and hold out some hope to Mr. Gates and hold up the run running diplomats in the old Putney place. It seems a pity to interfere with such indispensable industry, but we can't afford to miss any bets."

He sprang up from the table. Nancy also rose. "I'll go, too."

"That phrase," said Matt, "has become a sort of echo in my ears. To avoid unnecessary repetition let it be understood that henceforth you go wherever I go."

"And possibly after," said Matt. "If the search continues any length of time it may become a vicious habit impossible to break, or if sworn off for a brief instant renewed with the gusto of a new year's pledge."

"I see myself," breathed Nancy with the suspicion of a horror too awful for words, or possibly something else.

They went out with that gesture of armed neutrality which was becoming habitual, walked down to the garage, got into the car, and rolled out upon the road, Matt driving this time.

"I suppose," said Nancy, "that you would be cheeky and flippant, no matter what happened."

"It's a great help to carrying on," said Matt, "and it busted up the war. Our marines were flippant and cheeky at Soissons."

"Anyhow," said Nancy irrelevantly, "I'm glad that you and May had that talk. I couldn't have stood you much longer if I weren't sure that you believed in her."

"I believe in you both," said Matt. "After all, power and personality and force in a man is what most appeals to a woman. Always has and always will—"

"How you hate yourself," interrupted Nancy.

"I was thinking of May and Uncle Jerry. Haven't got around to you. In the old days pneumatic power was represented by a two handed sword. Nowadays it's in the pen —the ability to write with both hands."

Nancy's lip curled. "Write what?" she asked.

"Checks, or maybe large hotel orders for extinguishers, or best sellers—anything productive of kale. Dollars may well be called iron men. The man who has under his immediate orders the greatest number of these retainers is high boy today. Haven't it ever struck you that way yourself?"

"No," said Nancy shortly. "A man's got to have something besides money."

"True, but he's got to have the money first. Every girl with sense must acknowledge that."

"Are you getting round to me?" asked Nancy.

"I said every girl with sense. If you had any sense you'd have kept out of this business. You stood a fairly good chance of getting croaked last night or shipwrecked or something. Besides you were unchaperoned."

"The extinguisher was within my reach," said Nancy.

In such pleasant converse they arrived at the Gateeses, and as they entered slowly Matt turned to his fellow sleuth. His air of levity was abruptly laid aside and there was a hint of sternness in his voice which caused Nancy's blue eyes to open wide.

"I want you to stick to your agreement of last night and not try to interfere with my running of this show. Remember that it's my show and that I mean to run it in my own way. Don't interrupt or volunteer any information of your own. Do you understand?"

"There's no need of being rude about it," said Nancy, startled for the moment out of her pugnacity.

Matt ignored her protest. "I do not intend to say anything about our expedition in the launch until we see what a raid on the old Putney place turns up," said he. "So please don't force my hand."

"You seem to forget that was my idea," said Nancy.

"Never mind if it was. The whole case is under my management. There may be a few more thrills in store for us if you obey orders, and if you don't then there'll be more. I'll go too' stuff. Just think that that your blonde beauty." And before the astonished girl could answer Matt had stopped the car, stepped out, and started for the house, neglecting the polite formality of saying good-bye to all, so that she came trotting at his heels.

They found Mr. Gates in a deplorable state. No news or any clue at all to his daughter's disappearance had been received, so that the distressed father had sunk back into the lethargy of despair. He greeted Matt and Nancy with a distracted word or two and seemed to have some difficulty in grasping the significance of Matt's request for a private interview with him and any detective or other police officials who might be there. Three such were present, for the promised reward had been published, though without arousing any great hope of its being earned. As they passed, Matt glanced over his shoulder at Nancy.

"I'll say it first," said he. "You come, too." Which frivolous remark was met by a stony frown.

All seated and with the door closed, Matt proceeded in his graphic way to describe first the accident to his speed launch, with his unfriendly reception and his suspicions aroused thereby. He was a good speaker in his short, staccato way, and perceived immediately the interest excited by his detective or other police officials who might be there. tenants even to the finding of an article of clothing or any other personal effect.

The boat house was empty, just as Matt had expected. The dining room alone was in some slight disorder, for there were dishes and articles of food upon the table and two empty bottles which bore the labels of Santa Cruz rum, also a bottle of that departed beverage scarcely to be had even in France—the absence of Fernand Freres.

From the utter absence of personal belongings there was only one conclusion to be drawn. Donovan expressed this with a disappointment which was yet tinged with hope.

"These birds have got a score and beat it while the hostess was good," said he. "That's not surprising," because whether they got Miss Gates or not, and it's a hundred to one shot they have, they knew that the whole neighborhood must be gone over with a fine tooth comb and that they couldn't stand investigation. We'll find out what the agent has to say about 'em. My opinion is that they never figured to stop on here long anyhow, because sooner or later somebody or other was bound to get leery of 'em."

He turned to the local constable. "How long they been here, Todd?" he asked.

"They come here about the end of May."

"Well," said Donovan, "they could run thousands and thousands of dollars' worth of stuff in six weeks' time. It was a good fence, their respect for a quiet, respectable place like this right on the shore. But well get 'em yet."

Matt did not feel at all so sure about this statement.

"What have you got to go on?" said he.

"Well, there's the car and a good many people musta seen 'em from time to time." He turned to Todd. "I suppose you could identify 'em yourself, couldn't you?"

The constable looked a bit embarrassed. "Now, to tell the truth, Mr. Donovan, I couldn't," said he. "The young fellow with a little mustache, that Mr. Holmes had his run in with, used to come to town now and then to do some marketing, but the rest of 'em kept under cover."

"If that fellow was to shove off his mustache and put on a chauffeur's suit, he'd look exactly like about ten thousand other foreign chauffeurs," said Matt. "I doubt if I could spot him myself unless I got a close up of him, and it was too dark for me to see what any of the others looked like last night."

"Well, there's the dogs," said Donovan.

"That big spotted Dane and police dogs."

Matt glanced quickly at Nancy and saw that she was shimmering again. This time his frown seemed scarcely adequate, so he walked behind her and gave her a passing dig with his elbow which may have turned her desire to give information into a flame of rage.

"They might do away with the Lane," said he, "and there are even more police dogs in the country than foreign chauffeurs. An I as for the cars, when there are about a thousand a week being stolen in most big cities that clew doesn't look hopeful."

"We mustn't any of us let Mr. Gates think for a moment that we're not sure of finding his daughter," said he. "My own opinion is that they are holding her until there is no longer any immediate danger of giving information which might lead to their capture."

Donovan looked at him with wrinkled brows. "It's a pretty good bet that they took her off on that boat," said he.

"Precisely my idea," said Matt; "they may set her ashore anywhere along the coast. I don't believe she's met with foul play. It would take a mighty hardened gang to stand for anything like that in the case of a young girl who happens to be a beauty and a good deal of money. Do you think there's any chance of their making a ransom job of it, Mr. Donovan?"

"I don't believe so, Mr. Holmes; that's too risky and the proceeds too heavy. But what they met or do and could put off without much danger is to let some member of the gang appear to fall on her by accident and bring her in and claim the reward. And in that case there wouldn't be much help for it but to pony up if he could give a square account of himself."

"Well, then," said Matt, "that's what we must tell Mr. Gates." He turned to Nancy. "You go down and tell him now," said he.

Nancy slipped out. Donovan looked after her thoughtfully. "That young lady is some good sport," said he. "Who is she, anyhow?"

"My uncle, Mr. Taylor's sister-in-law," said Matt.

Donovan looked a little puzzled. "I see," said he; "that makes her your—your—what?"

"Search me," said Matt. "I may be able to tell you better some time later."

"Well, I don't think there's much more for us to do here. These birds have flown for good. I'll run into town and talk to the agent who let the property. I'll say he's got to whistle for the rest of the season's rent. They probably flinched at him with some dope about being foreign diplomats."

There being nothing more to do at the Gateeses and as Matt saw a great deal more to do somewhere else, he and Nancy got into their car and set out for the town.

They had driven about a mile when Nancy asked: "Well, what now, Sherlock? You seem to have bungled better than you know."

"Bungled is scarcely the word," Matt growled. "I've torn it wide apart, split the sack, lost out the cork, anything you'd kind enough to call it. Now, if I'd been alone last night in that launch things might have panned out differently."

"That's right," said Nancy, "blame it on the girl. But permit me to point out that if it hadn't been for the girl you'd never have been out there in the launch at all."

"Right again, sweetie," growled Matt.

"What's that?"

"I said, 'Right again, Nancy.'"

"You said 'Right again—something else.'"

"Well, it means the same thing." He raised his elbow quizzically. "Hold on. Don't break my ear drum, I may need it tomorrow or the next day."

"I haven't the slightest intention of breaking your ear drum. The only thing that I'd like to break is absolutely unbendable, and that's your intolerable smugness. From the way you talked to those men one would have thought that you were the one white piece of finding Sylvia, and that I sales ran."

"Well, I gave you due credit, didn't I?" said Matt.

"You gave me due credit for coming in on a slow freight which you had failed to catch at all," said Nancy. "The truth of the matter is, you were so puffed up at finding that your wild guess had gone some deep enough—"

"Deeply enough," Matt corrected, "and you a recent event part graduate."

UNCLE SAM OFF ON TRIP WITH GIGANTIC SAMPLE CASE

Goods From American Factories Are Going to the Four Corners of the Earth Accompanied By Throng of Trade Experts in the Search for Business in Faraway Marts

Copyright, 1922, by Public Ledger Company

By A. A. Preciado

THE world's biggest sample case will soon be checked out from American shores tucked under the arm of Uncle Sam for parts unknown and known. Within this case will be packed an assortment of specimens of American manufactures, the size of which and the life of which have never been known or seen in the history of American foreign trade. It is to be collected from a representative group of American industries, the heads of which are desirous of opening up trade relations with peoples of different climes and languages. The contribution to this sample case will be a heterogeneous lot. In it will be everything from fountain pens to airplanes. The eyes of eager buyers in foreign countries will feast upon samples of adding machines, typewriters, printing presses, automobiles, multigraph machines, perfumery, furniture, fur coats, shoes, hats and what not.

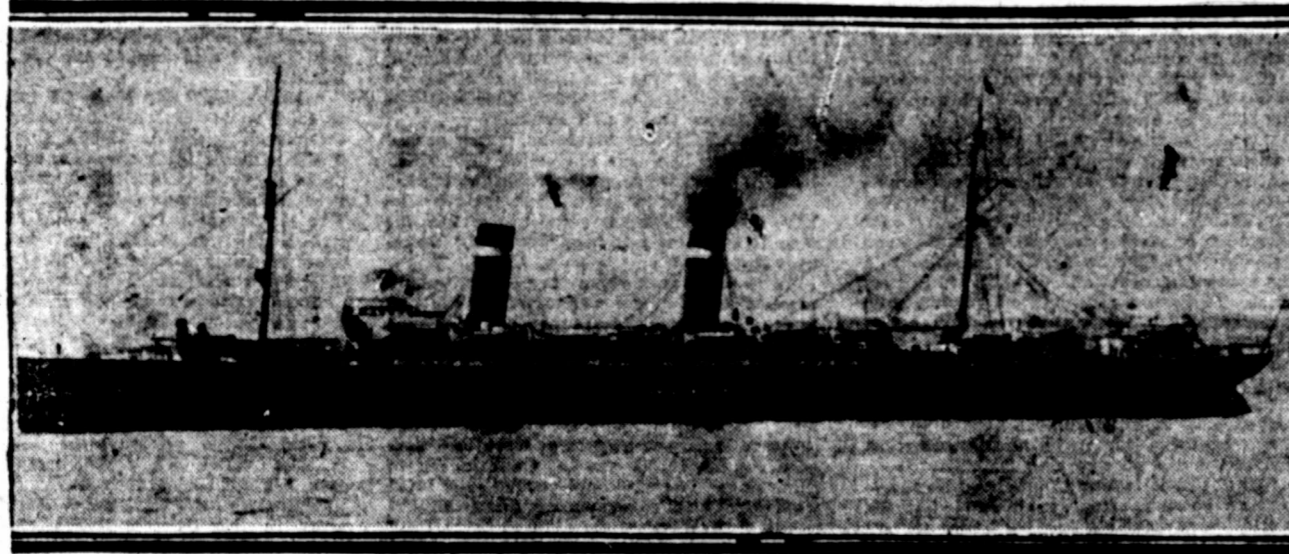

There is another peculiarity about this huge sample case that will attract the attention of thousands of people across the seas. This lies in the fact that it is not shaped like the ordinary sample case that the drummer throws onto the counter of the country storekeeper and opens wide to satisfy the curiosity of his customer. Instead, this sample case represents a marked departure from the usual luggage that one is accustomed to see in the waiting rooms of the railroad stations. It is built like a ship. It is a ship—a huge ship which is known in merchant marine circles as the steamship St. Louis.

The St. Louis is one of the most famous steamships in the American merchant marine. Her history dates back to the day on which she was launched—November 12, 1904. She was built in an American shipyard and is the first 100 per cent all-steel American vessel ever constructed. More than 25,000 people were present at the launching at the Cramp yards in Philadelphia when Mrs. Grover Cleveland broke a bottle of champagne—this was in the days before prohibition—over the bow of the St. Louis. President Cleveland and members of his Cabinet were present. The ship's first voyage was in June, 1905, when she sailed for Southampton under the command of Captain William G. Handie. Her achievements since then may be found in the pages of American history.

When the St. Louis sails out of New York harbor in January as a colossal sample case she will have written another chapter in her long-to-be-remembered career on the high seas. The huge vessel is now being reconitioned and put into shape by its present owners for a world-trade cruise that is destined to take in the principal ports of the world. Here at these main centers of commerce the St. Louis will lie for stated intervals to permit foreign buyers to come on board to see the things that American skill and industry have wrought for foreign markets. The products of about

The itinerary of the gigantic sample case which American manufacturers are sending to the four corners of the earth

The steamship St. Louis, which will start the latter part of the month carrying American-made products to fifty-four of the chief ports of the world.

800 American manufacturers will be placed on exhibit within the walls of this giant Leviathan of the high seas. The ports to be touched are about fifty-four in number. The trade crusaders on board the St. Louis should not become bored by a monotonous voyage, for there will be no monotony. As each port is reached the color and atmosphere will change. Different languages will be spoken at each new place to be visited and new traditions and customs will be revealed to the travelers.

THIS is the first time in the history of foreign trade that a floating exposition of such magnitude and comprising such an ambitious itinerary has ever been fitted out to circumnavigate the globe. The idea is not new, however. Great Britain has tried it before, but Great Britain visited only a few ports, then right-about-faced and returned home. Similarly the Germans conducted voyages to ports within a convenient cruising radius of Hamburg, and after a few short visits to nearby neighbors turned around and went home. It has been left to American enterprise, therefore, to fit up a ship that will sail completely around the world on a mission of trade.

The remarkable feature about the voyage of the St. Louis is the arrangements that are being made for the convenience and comfort of American business men who have reserved places in the vessel. In the first place—remembering the "black eye" that American business in general has received through the manipulations of unscrupulous traders—a rule has been put into writing providing that only those merchants who can pass the acid test as to financial standing and responsibility will be permitted to engage passage on the St. Louis. At the head of a committee that will pass upon the fitness of these exhibitors is John Barrett, former director of the Pan-American Union, and himself an authority on foreign trade and its manifold phases.

There is another exacting requirement that bears a close relation to the first opportunity to find their sea legs or to become accustomed to the bounding waves. After that it will be one interesting day after another.

The library of the St. Louis will be complete. It will not be composed of fiction. Instead there will be ponderous volumes containing trade data of the countries to be visited, textbooks on foreign trade, law books, text books on commercial regulations, books on finance that will try to explain the wherefore of exchange—a subject which very few people in this world can understand—and a great variety of trade magazines that deal exclusively in foreign trade literature. As the voyagers are approaching Havana, for instance, the librarian will be beseeched for books relating to Cuba. Immediately everybody will be reading about the trade possibilities of that country. What does Cuba want to buy? How do you approach a Cuban merchant? After you get him to sign on the dotted line how can you arrange to give him credit for the goods you have sold to him? What kind of money does the Cuban use? Is the Cuban honest? What do you do after selling him a nice order of goods? Do you buy him a drink or a cigar, or do you invite him and the whole family to dinner at the Hotel Inglaterra, or do you take him to the races?

These and a hundred other questions foreign trade experts, located at strategic points on the St. Louis and aided by the ship's library, will be asked to answer as the good ship comes within hailing distance of the gray walls of historic Morro Castle.

When the ship casts anchor in Havana harbor the real business of the cruise will begin. Exporters will have an opportunity to practice what they have learned on the leg of their journey from New York. It will now be their business to invite responsible business men of Havana and surrounding country to come on board the vessel and see the exhibits. If Mr. John Smith is unable to converse with Senor Tabasco, of Calle Central, Havana, in the language of the Cuban, all Mr. Smith has to do is to press the button and presto! an interpreter is on the job to do the go-between act. If Mr. Smith and Senor Tabasco agree to do business and certain papers are required to be written up, Mr. Smith will press the button for the little dark-eyed girl stenographer who has learned her profession on a typewriter that carries Spanish characters on its keyboard. If Mr. Smith wants to know something about the credit standing of Senor Tabasco before risking instructions to the home office to ship goods to the Cuban merchant, Mr. Smith consults the ship's expert credit man, who will be as handy on that voyage as the ship carpenter or the wireless operator. And so on down the line ad infinitum. This operation will be repeated by 200 other representatives at about the same time and in every country that the St. Louis touches. An imaginative reader can easily contemplate the magnitude of the undertaking.

If the reader suspects for one minute that it is impossible to show American peddlers to advantage on board a vessel for the purpose of display in foreign countries, he need only be reminded of the fact that the entire main deck and portions of the promenade deck is reserved for machinery. The exhibition space amounts to approximately 20,000 square feet—equivalent to the available space of Madison Square Garden, New York, for exhibition purposes. A sample case with a capacity of 30,000 square feet is something that cannot be seen every day.

THE length of the cruise will be about eleven months—perhaps a year. During that long period the St. Louis will sail into different climates and experience different conditions of living that will make heavy the responsibilities of those in charge of the enterprise. To protect the health of the members a staff of physicians and surgeons will be taken on board.

Since the announcement was made a few days ago that the St. Louis was to sail on this historic voyage the committee in charge of the enterprise has been swamped with applications from men and women in all walks of life for a chance to work their passage around the world. Doctors, nurses, college professors, writers and students have eagerly sought positions on board the vessel, but mostly in vain.

"This is not a pleasure trip," one of the men in charge of the arrangements told the writer recently. "We are after 100 per cent foreign trade merchants who might profit by personally visiting the foreign fields with a view of expanding their business. We cannot carry dead wood on this voyage."

"This same official told of a pathetic case that came to his attention just the other day. A doctor with a wide practice in a large city had written for a position on the medical staff of the St. Louis.

"Why do you want to give up your extensive practice and take an eleven months' tour of the world?" he was asked.

"Well, I thought perhaps I could pick up some easy money on board the vessel," he responded.

"I don't see how you can make much money on the vessel," he was told.

Then he confessed.

As was said at the beginning of this article the St. Louis has a memorable history. Hardly had she been put into service when she was called upon to go to the rescue of a vessel in distress. This was in 1918 when the Dutch steamer Vendusia sprang a leak 640 miles from Southampton. The vessel rushed to this sister in distress and effected the rescue of passengers and crew.

During the Spanish-American War the St. Louis was requisitioned by the navy and turned into an auxiliary cruiser and did remarkable work cutting cables in the West Indies. Again during the World War the St. Louis was the first American steamer to carry guns on her deck as a protection against German submarines. This was shortly after Germany's declaration that open warfare was to be carried on against any ships within certain restricted areas. The startling fact about this voyage is that the St. Louis had unknowingly cruised around for three hours the night before she arrived on the other side in a field of German mines.

On July 29, 1917, the St. Louis engaged in battle with a German submarine while making passage from New York to Liverpool. The battle lasted twenty-five minutes. The U-boat fired sixty shots and the St. Louis forty-two. No damage was done. The vessel is also credited with having rammed a submarine, but conclusive evidence as to this feat is lacking. In 1918 the vessel was employed in bringing the boys home from overseas. While in this service a baby was born. "For the first time the log book of a United States war vessel recorded this luckiest thing that can happen aboard ship," a writer said.

NOT long ago the St. Louis was badly damaged by fire at Hoboken and her historic career almost came to an end. She was about to be sold for junk when her present owners purchased her and are now preparing to send her around the world as a fitting climax to an illustrious career.

The voyage around the world will cost more than two million dollars. The combined population of the ports to be visited is over one million. The imports of the countries to be touched is over nineteen billion dollars yearly. The enterprise has the support of the most important foreign trade organizations in the country. "Some sample case," they say.

Let the Jewels in Your Headdress Match Your Costume

*Bands and Wreaths
Which Must Be in Harmony with the
Picture, Are Now
Adopted

By Mme. Frances
The Famous Creator of Fashions

THE headdress this season forms an all-important item to the smartly-dressed woman. This vogue found its initiation at the social functions which opened the present season, and has seen confirmation in each smart event which has followed.

The opening night of the Opera was resplendent with headdresses of jeweled bands, flower wreaths or metal leaves. The smartly-gowned women at the Horse Show wore head bands of every shape and material. Then, too, the bandeaux at the brilliant social events attendant upon the disarmament conference at Washington, added their note of approval to the whim of the day. Wives of the international dignitaries showed no tendency to cling to the coiffure which might have been considered the accepted mode in the land whence they came. They all donned headdresses and proclaimed the vogue which was universal.

An attractive woman in the Chinese group wore an exquisitely hand-wrought bandeau, sparkingly jeweled. It was of unusual design, combining bright and dull gold with dark-toned jewels, worn low on the forehead. Though the design was thoroughly modern, it was reminiscent of the ancient headdress of the Chinese court ladies.

Of different inspiration were the headdresses from London. Many of these were simple metal wreaths worn low on the forehead, with the hair drawn softly up and coiled at the top of the head. Tearing "Prince of Wales" ostrich tips were posed in the back where the wreath-ends joined.

A smart French headdress showed bright blue ostrich plumes spread out to one side at the back of the head like a gorgeous ostrich fan. These plumes were mounted on a slender framework bound in silver cloth, shaped like a crown at the front of the head.

Thus are seen varied phases of the prevailing mode for headdresses, and it is interesting to see what interpretation the American woman has chosen for her own.

In this day when simplicity of effect is the desired achievement, elaborate headdresses of an earlier date have given place to simpler ones. Single or triple bands of pearls and diamonds hold sway instead of the awe-inspiring tiaras and diamond aigrettes of former times. Still there is sufficient variety for the wearer to show individual taste in her choice of head wear.

The head which is properly dressed for formal occasions must carry some variety of ornamentation, but the choice among the smart, simple effects offered is infinite. The ultra-smart woman may choose a jeweled fillet or a leaf bandeau, while a simple flower wreath is also at her command. If she wishes a flowerwreath of more elaborate style, there are bandeaux of gorgeously colored velvet leaves, such as cerise, with tiny brilliants which form dewdrops.

The opera box scene above shows the typical variety of headdress types. Though the mediums vary and the bandeaux show widely different inspiration, I have retained the keynote of simplicity throughout. To design the correct headdress for any one of my clientele, it is my aim not only to create one becoming to her type and following out the inspiration of the gown with which it is to be worn, but it must also reflect something of the wearer's personality.

This is true of the figure at the left. The tightly wrapped green charmeuse band finds its only relief from plainness in the pear-shaped pearl earrings worn with it. The pearl necklace forms a matching note, and is most effective with the all-green charmeuse gown of simple line. The wrapped sleeves simulate a scarf across the shoulders, the low-cut neck extending beneath this scarf line. Jade bracelets confine the scarf ends at the wrists. The bracelets allow a bit of play here, so that the wrapped sleeves may adjust themselves gracefully and will not bind the arms when the wearer moves. A huge fan of soft, billowy ostrich plumes gives a striking finish to the costume.

The woman who uses her jewels to best advantage realizes that they should be worn as matter of color. That is, they should impart the needed color to the costume, either in contrast or matching note, else they should be discarded until the wearer chooses from her wardrobe a gown which they correctly supplement.

The velvet-gowned wearer seated next has chosen a costume ideal in point of accenting the contrast note. She uses pearls to wear with her frock of black velvet. The pearl bandeau branches into triple strands across her forehead. Where these strands join above either ear is dropped a pear-shaped pearl. Pearls are repeated in the long necklace.

Her smart shoulder pins are diamond bars with a pearl at either end. Shoulder pins bring out a new note, introduced with the evening decolletage showing points at the shoulder. The woman who favors gowns of this type will find the shoulder pin a convenient ornament.

The bracelets are diamond links held together by rubies. It is noted that one or two extravagantly jeweled bracelets are being worn, in preference to the many bracelets of lesser width which have so long been favored.

A metallic band is chosen by the wearer of the Russian sable wrap, and very effective it is with her simple gown of white satin. The bandeau shows a dull silver background chased in gold, and its shape is most becoming with the simple coiffure. Her hair is parted in the middle, brought down low on the neck, and rolled up to cover the bandeau in the back.

The black silk neck cori, with a pearl at either end, is distinctive. This charming ornament forms a fitting example of the adaptability of jewels. It may be twisted about the arm as a bracelet, or tied about the neck with a bow at the side and the pearl ends hanging. Many smart women show distinction in their use of ornaments of this kind.

A handsome pin may hold the draped portion of a rich evening gown, or it may be worn in the back of the hair as a barrette. The shoulder pins with this white satin gown are emerald circles, enclosing circles of diamonds.

Dainty pink roses and green leaves fittingly wreath the bobbed coiffure of the younger girl. Her flesh tulle frock shows a beruffled skirt, topped by a quaint fichu of the tulle. A blue ribbon girdle completes the dress, and she carries the smartest of little lace fans.

Fans continue. They range from filmy lace affairs of black or white, to more daring feather combinations. White glycerine ostrich makes a very smart fan, much like white lace in effect. Coq feathers and flat ostrich are also good.

Real tortoise shell lorgnettes are patterned after the old-fashioned kind, mounted on a long stick. These are very smart for the opera and may be had at the best jewelers.

Monkey fur seems to have come to stay with us. While I cannot say that I admire a creation evolved exclusively from this pelt, yet it is an unusually interesting fur for decorative purposes. Although the black fur is still used, one realizes that it is equally appealing in white. One reason, doubtless, for its popularity, is that it is a most flattering fur.

While it is used on suits, wraps or daytime frocks, it also invades the realms of millinery and proves an unusual but most attractive trimming. It is also chosen to adorn some of the smartest new underthings that are made of colorful silks and satins.

In the kingdom of accessories there are always many delectable novelties to lure the money from the pocketbook of rich and poor. Necklaces of amethyst, jade and amber are well liked, both in the large and small beads. Worthy of remark are the bracelets which are worn above the elbow. Some of the most striking are made of jet and shell. The bracelet that encircles the wrist is often a combination of links and colored beads. Sometimes there is the added attraction of a bead drop.

Decidedly smart are the rhinestone earrings, which are enriched with sapphires or other colored stones. Trinket boxes are exceedingly appealing. Many of these show exquisite enamel tops and the hinges and edges are of silver gilt.

Feather handbags are distinguished by their beautifully carved or painted frames of bakelite. A novel feature in many of these bags is the ribbon handle, which is braided. Many different shapes are shown, so that the choice of a dainty bag for evening is easily made.

O. Henry's Dearest Romance Goes to Smash

His Own Daughter's Marriage, for Which the Master of the Love Story So Wanted a Happy Ending, Turns Into Another Tragedy of the Divorce Courts.

"For, when one loves one's art, no service seems too hard."—O. Henry.

"Love Triumphant" and "Love Dethroned" Are the Titles Suggested for These Companion Cartoons by Cesare.

O. HENRY'S dearest romance—the one above all others for which he wanted a happy ending—has gone to smash. His daughter, Margaret Porter Cesare, herself an able writer, is suing her husband, Oscar E. Cesare, celebrated cartoonist, for divorce.

In this discordant climax to the love idyll of O. Henry's daughter is something tragically ironic. It is as though real life, with mischievous perverseness, had decided to make the Porter-Cesare marriage a spiteful object lesson to all tellers of tales.

William Sydney Porter (O. Henry), was the master of the love story to the life, the eternal believer in the victory of young hearts over old handicaps, the optimist of marriage, Cupid's first lieutenant.

Of all the castles in Spain he builded for others in his books, none meant quite so much to him as this living romance which first flowered under his own eyes and with his gentle encouragement.

In the attachment of his beloved little Margaret for his friend, Oscar Cesare, he saw, perhaps, the beginning of one of those tender dramas he pictured so skilfully with his pen.

He adored his daughter. She was born to him in those early Texas days, when he was only Bill Porter, clerking in the General Land Office, venturing disastrously in newspaper work with the Rolling Stone, occasionally landing a sketch or a story in the magazines for $5 and $10.

During the shadowy years when O. Henry, convicted—unjustly—of embezzlement, served three years and three months in the Ohio State Penitentiary, it was the bright memory of the little girl back home that sustained him.

He used to write to her—droll, whimsical letters which Margaret was to treasure ever afterward. Here is one:

"Hello, Margaret:
"Don't you remember me? I'm a Brownie, and my name is Alldibronthiphosphorikophokos. If you see a star shoot and say my name seventeen times before it goes out, you will find a diamond ring in the track of the first blue cow's foot you see go down the road in a snowstorm while the red roses are blooming on the tomato vines. Try it some time. I know all about Anna and Arthur Dudley, but they don't see me. I was riding on a squirrel the other day and saw you and Arthur Dudley give some fruit to some trainmen. Anna wouldn't come out. Well good-by, I've got to take a ride on a grasshopper. I'll just sign my first letter—A."

Lines from a Prison Cell

"I want you to have as good times as you can, and get well and strong and big, but don't get as big as Munny because I'm afraid you'd lick me when I come home," he told her in another letter.
"I am learning to play the mandolin, and we must get you a guitar, and we will learn a lot of duets together when I come home, which will certainly be not later than next summer, and maybe earlier."
"Be careful when you are on the streets not to feed shucks to strange dogs, or pat snakes on the head or shake hands with cats you haven't been introduced to, or stroke the noses of electric car horses."
"If it snows while you are there you must try some fried snowballs, too. They are mighty good with Jack Frost gravy. Why don't you send me some fried snow in a letter?"
"You don't want to go to work and forget your old Pop just because you don't see much of him just now, for he'll come in mighty handy some day to read Uncle Remus to you again and make kites that a cyclone wouldn't raise off the ground."

And so he did. . . . He came home, as he said he would, and he read Uncle Remus to her and played his mandolin to her guitar, and advised her regarding the mysteries of fried snow and blue cows and snakes that shouldn't be patted. The prison shadow drifted away in the sunshine of his daughter's smile.

Margaret went to boarding-school and her father to New York. When at length she joined him there, she found him famous. The same genius that conjured blue cows for her delight was creating Jeff Peters, Jimmy Valentine, shop-girls, cabbies and Texas Rangers to entrance the world.

But she found, too, that her father was about the most retiring literary celebrity America has ever known. His readers were legion, his friends he could number on his fingers. One of these was Oscar Cesare, a young artist but recently come to America from Sweden.

While O. Henry Looked On

Cesare was destined to become almost as famous in art as O. Henry in writing. His cartoons in New York newspapers were to fire the nation. Critics were to call him "America's ablest cartoonist," his work "distinguished by unusual vigor and consummate assurance." European newspapers were to reproduce more of his cartoons than any other artist's in America. But, when he met Margaret Porter, he was still a struggler drawing sketches and caricatures for this newspaper and that.

O. Henry and his daughter, and Oscar Cesare, became a happy trio. O. Henry quietly watched them as he watched Broadway and Bohemia, shop-girls and millionaires and all the seething panorama of New York. As he saw the budding of romance, did he, perhaps, write that charming love-story, "A Service of Love?"

When he described his hero, Jack Larrabee, "pulsing with a genius for pictorial art," coming

Oscar Cesare as He Sees Himself

The Late William Sydney Porter (O. Henry), Whose Death Occurred While the Now Blighted Love Affair of His Only Daughter Was Budding Most Promisingly.

Mrs. Margaret Porter Cesare, the Daughter O. Henry Adored and the Bright Memory That Sustained Him Those Shadowy Years in Prison.

to New York at twenty "with a sewing necktie and a capital tied up somewhat closer," did he have in mind young Oscar Cesare, fresh from Sweden and burning with his art?

And, when he pictured Delia Caruthers, who "did things in six octaves so promisingly" that her southern relatives chipped in enough to send her to conquer New York, was he inspired by the thought of his own daughter and her ambition to write?
"Joe and Delia," wrote O. Henry, "met in an atelier where a number of art and music students had gathered to discuss chiaroscuro, Wagner, music, Rembrandt's works, pictures, Waldteufel, wall-paper, Chopin and Oolong. Joe and Delia became enamoured one of the other, or each of the other, as you please, and in a short time they were married—for, when one loves one's art, no service seems too hard."

Perhaps O. Henry, approving of Joe and Delia, also felt the same way about Margaret and Oscar Cesare.

"They were happy," he wrote of his fiction creations, "for they had their art, and they had each other. And my advice to the rich young man would be—sell all thou hast, and give it to the poor—janitor for the privilege of living in a flat with your art and your Delia."

A few years later, after O. Henry's death, his daughter and Oscar Cesare were to follow that advice. Like Joe Larrabee and Delia Caruthers, they went to live in a flat with their love and their art. But O. Henry imaged a happy ending for Joe and Delia; life was preparing a different climax for O. Henry's daughter. Christmas came to Joe and Delia. And Delia, glorying in her love for Joe, sacrificed her hair that she might buy him the beautiful watch-chain he so desired. And Joe, loving Delia's happiness more than anything on earth, pawned his watch that he might purchase the lovely pair of combs for Delia's crowning beauty. So, facing each other over the presents that were no earthly use to either, they both laughed and Joe began:

"When one loves one's art no service seems—"

But Delia stopped him with her hand on his lips. "No," she said—"just 'When one loves.'"

A pretty ending to a typical O. Henry love-story. The sort he would have written for Margaret and Oscar Cesare. But life wrote another, in which, though the details have not all been given, the climax has. Here it is, told by the telegraph:

"Reno, Nev.—A suit for divorce, charging failure to provide, has been filed here by Margaret Porter Cesare against Oscar Edward Cesare. They were married in New York in July, 1916.

The failure to provide charge is denied by the defendant in his answer, but the suit will not be contested."

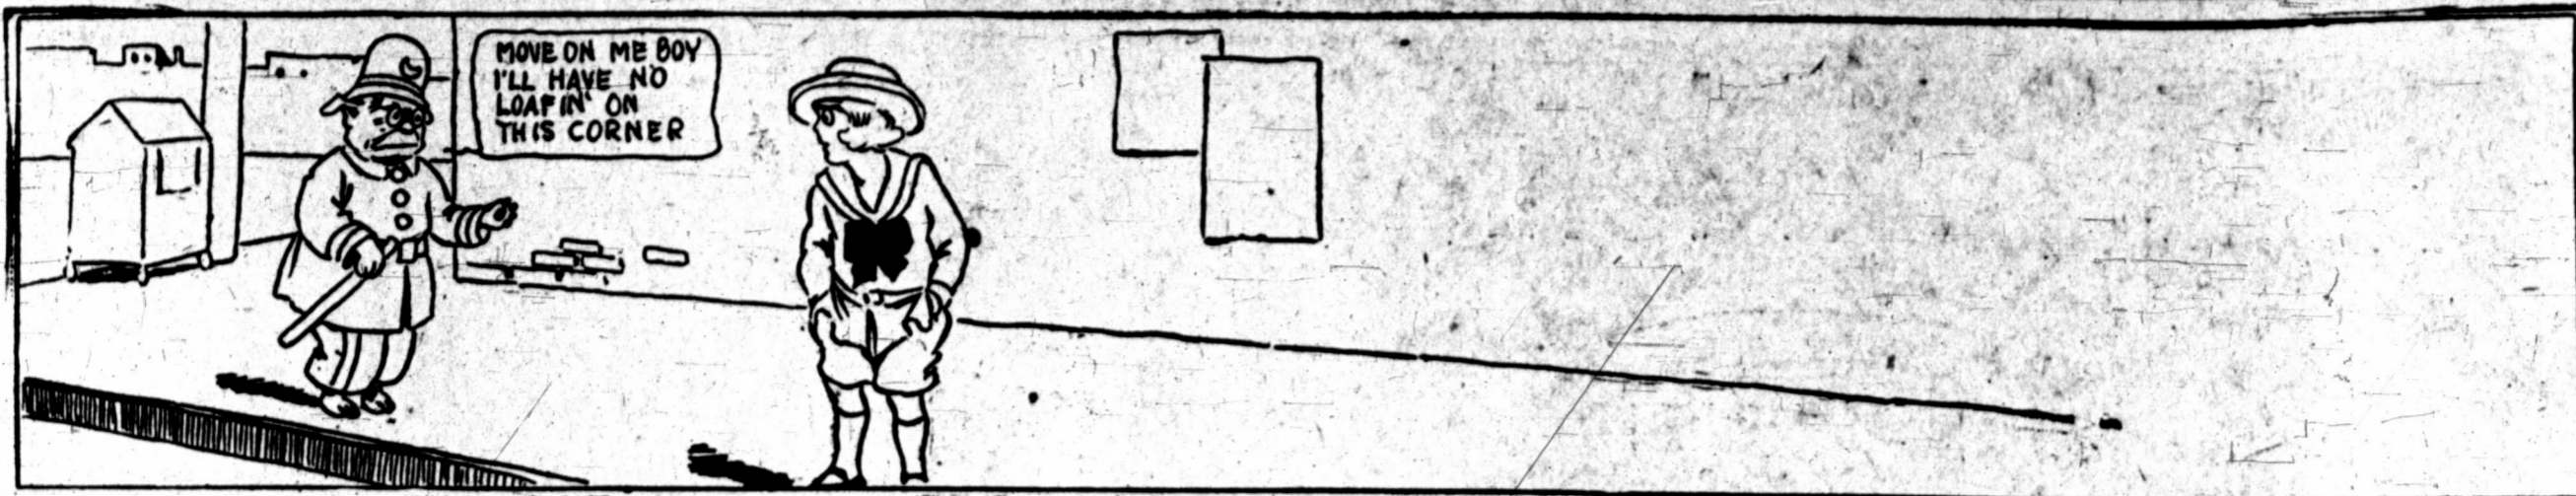

The reader, scanning his O. Henry for an explanation, may find it in another story, "Cabbages and Kings." For there O. Henry, in one paragraph, forgot for a moment that he was Cupid's first lieutenant.

"Trouble," he wrote, "often begins, instead of ending, with a romance."

Animals That Eat Stones

STONES are commonly found in the stomach of the crab-eating seal of the Antarctic Seas; and it is believed that they, with a certain amount of grit, are scooped up with the crustacea from the bottom of the sea. The emperor penguin, on the other hand, shows an instinctive craving for stones for gizzard-grinding purposes; for these stones must be assiduously sought, since these birds never rest upon dry land, but only upon ice. The fate of stones swallowed by birds is not easy to determine.

Another unexpected name in this list of stone-swallowers is that of the Lesser Borqual. This is a "baleen" whale, feeding upon minute crustacea, and fish. From the peculiar method of feeding which is, so to speak, forced upon this animal, it is unlikely that any portion of its food is scooped up from the sea-floor; hence the pebbles found in its stomach must be deliberately swallowed, and it is supposed, for the purposes of digestion, or, rather, of trituration. They are hardly likely to be derived from the fish which are engulfed, for these are mostly herring.
