WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—The

Special to The Times.

Simply yet impressively, Wichita Falls observed the fourth anniversary of the signing of the armistice Saturday morning.

The silent tribute of one minute at 11 a. m. was observed generally throughout the city, activities being halted by many places of business for the brief remainder by those who did not attend the service at the court house.

About 1,000 persons gathered on the court house lawn for the public service, which was under auspices of the Pat Carrigan Post of the American Legion. Patriotic selections by the band, the invocation by Ensign Burdick, the reading of "In Flanders Fields" by Mrs. E. L. Fulton, a brief address by J. B. Hatcher, and a short talk by C. C. Johnson, confederate veteran, made up the program that preceded the silent tribute.

Mrs. Fulton presented the reading of the poem with a brief talk on its significance and on the importance of keeping alive the memories that center around Armistice Day.

Major Hatcher spoke of the need of building influences to combat present-day tendencies, which he declared to be in wrong directions, socially, politically and economically.

"Public office is no longer a public trust but a means of building selfish power," he said, "partisanism is elevated above patriotism. Individual selfishness has followed upon the devotion that the war days saw. Forces that make for religious intolerance are exerting themselves. The bugle is sounding no less clearly than it was in 1918, but its notes are drowned out."

Major Hatcher urged that those who kept alive the memories of the times had for labor to combat the unhappy influences in American life today.

Elliot, confederate veteran, made a brief talk in which it appeared that he was not yet entirely reconstructed. The band played "Dixie" and cheers as he concluded his remarks.

At 11 a. m. the fire whistle sounded for the moment of silent tribute. All present faced to the west and stood quietly until the strains of the national anthem brought the service to a close.

SEYMOUR, TEXAS, Nov. 11.—Major J. A. Brinkley has proclaimed Saturday, November 11, a "day of remembrance" for the signing of the armistice and ending of the world war.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—The fight of tomorrow between Mayfield and Newberry for the seat in the United States senate may hinge upon the decision which Senator Truman H. Newberry makes in his consideration, as to whether he will resign, effective March 4, or the issue of another fight in congress.

ABILENE, TEXAS, Nov. 11.—New York, Dallas and Waco capitalists, according to information here from Cross Plains, have paid $1,500,000 for the holdings of McCamey-Sheerin and others in the Pioneer Oil field, consisting of the Armstrong, Moore and Brooks tracts comprising 150 acres with a daily production of 2,000 barrels.

ANGORA GOVERNMENT MAINTAINING SILENCE

Want Allies to Get Out and They Are Determined to Sit Tight.

By Associated Press. LONDON, Nov. 11.—The situation at Constantinople where the Turkish nationalists want the allies to get out and the allies are determined to sit tight is still very critical, all the morning papers agreed, but none of them furnish any definite news to justify their views.

Even the government itself is declared in some quarters to be largely in the dark, owing to the difficulty of communicating with the near east as a result of the cutting of the cable line near Chanak by the Turks. Even this fact is regarded as confidential.

Absolutely nothing can be learned regarding the present attitude of the Angora government and it is equally unknown whether the allied commissioners have carried out their threat to establish martial law in Constantinople.

The departure for Lausanne of the Turkish nationalist foreign minister, Ismet Insha, has attracted a great deal of attention here and in some quarters his unexpected start of the journey, without awaiting Angora's reply to the latest allied note, is regarded with suspicion.

The diplomatic expert of the Daily Telegraph presumes that Insha will not endeavor to emulate at Adrianople Rife's tactics at Constantinople, but it will be interesting to see whether he will endeavor to confer with the Bulgarian government on the way to Lausanne.

Delay in settling the troubles in the near east and indefinitely postponing the Lausanne discussions has caused serious anxiety here.

It is generally believed that the British government knows that the near eastern position today is as perilous as war.

SILENT TRIBUTE PAID ABSENT HEROES OF GREAT WORLD WAR; PRESIDENT VISITS ARLINGTON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—America's tribute to the unknown soldier was paid today with a simplicity strikingly at variance with the splendor of the honors that marked his homecoming a year ago.

Today there was no spoken word, no stirring of the solemn chords and expressions of high resolve a year ago that still must linger amid the marble arches of Arlington memorial amphitheater where the honored dead keep vigil.

A distant thudding of saluting cannon, the ring of shod horses on the hard roadway, a low command, a stilled flourish of trumpets, rifles leaped up to present, and the president had come to place a wreath upon the unknown soldier's tomb, and gone again almost before the few hundreds who awaited realized that the ceremony had begun.

On the terrace facing down over the base-shrouded river and the city beyond, a thin line of comrade soldiers, sailors and marines was drawn up toward the entrance of the great white block of stone that marks the resting place of the unknown.

Grouped over the wide steps beyond that led up to the entrance to the amphitheater the few hundred who had come to share in the honors to the dead had found their place. Two score of boy scouts also had trudged over from the capital and were drawn up behind the way the president would pass.

The far rumble of a gun brought the soldiers to attention. The president was passing through Fort Myer over the road on his way to the cemetery. On the way he counted out the roll of 21 guns of the national salute. Then again there was stillness until the clarion of a bugle told that the cavalry escort and the little string of official cars was drawing near. The troopers turned to salute as the president's car rolled toward the terrace.

The bugles of the boy scouts called softly the flower children army regulations prescribed for the commander-in-chief. Then the car turned the corner out onto the terrace and stopped near the tomb.

President Harding and Secretary Weeks and Denby stepped from the car. The president, the soldiers and sailors and marines presented arms. Behind them were the president's military and naval aides and a host of other officials in the gold braid of full military dress. Major General Harbord and General Pershing's deputy also were present.

The president stepped forward, headdressed as was the soldier, the great wreath of red and white and blue blossoms brought from the White House. The two secretaries, the president's military and naval aides and a host of other officials followed. The president laid his hand on the soldier's head and raised his hand in military salute. Then he turned away.

No word had been spoken save the military command. Even the signs that brought the cars rolling back were given by a single word. There was not a sound from the hundreds gathered to witness the brief ceremony.

Mr. Harding and his cabinet members stood in low toned talk as they waited for the cars. Then with a final salute from the troops they departed. The president's military and naval aides and a host of other officials followed.

At the eight American cemeteries in France, Belgium and England, appropriate services were held throughout the day with American and diplomatic military and naval officials paying tribute.

ENGLAND PAYS TRIBUTE TO MEMORY OF FIGHTERS

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The pulse of the empire stopped its beat at 11 o'clock this morning as a tribute to the memory of the American fighting men who had fallen in the great war.

There were no elaborate ceremonies to mark the great silence. Even at the cathedral in which the heart of the empire, the proceedings were of the most simple character. The king, representing the nation, laid a wreath on the memorial of the silent sons of Britain. The ministry, the army, the navy and the dominions paid similar tribute, and then the people, coming in a great pilgrimage through Whitehall, placed their offerings about the memorial.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—On the plain granite block in Arlington cemetery that a year ago became a new shrine to American dead there blossomed today a wealth of flowers laid reverently to commemorate the first anniversary of the homecoming of America's unknown soldier from France. Again the nation sealed the covenant of American friendship with the unknown soldier of the world war.

And the utter simplicity of the ceremony was the more poignant because of the solemnity of the occasion. A year ago in the same beauty of setting served to add new glory to the nation's remembrance of the blood of the unknown soldier shed in France, the high purpose that is Americanism.

Again President Harding made the pilgrimage from Washington in behalf of all his countrymen. But this time the message he bore was spoken word but a simple wreath to rest on the great stone. The guns that roared the national salute in honor to the dead alone broke the stillness to voice a nation's pride.

For the army Secretary Weeks accompanied the president and for the navy Secretary Denby. That they should be accompanied by the two secretaries was a fitting tribute to the memory of the unknown soldier who had fallen in the great war.

CHAPTER II
Darragh, in blanket outfit, a pair of snowshoes on his back, a rifle in his mitted hand, came trudging up from the lake. He and Stormont watched Lannis riding away with two horses.

"He'll make it all right, but it's time he started," said the latter.
Lannis nodded. "Some storm. Where is Eve?"
"In her room."

"What is she going to do, Jack?"
"Marry me as soon as possible. She wants to get married in a few days but I can't leave here alone. I think I'll telephone to Ghost Lake for a sleigh."

"Let me talk to her," said Darragh in a low voice.
"Do you think you'd better—at such a time?"
"I think it's a good time. It will divert her mind, anyway. I want her to come to Harrod Place."

"She won't," said Stormont grimly. "She might as well take to her heels. Stormont heaved a look at him, nodded. Darragh stood his rifle against the bench on the kitchen porch. They entered the house slowly. And met Eve descending the stairs. The girl looked at Darragh, astonished, then her pale face flushed with anger.

"What are you doing in this house?" she demanded unsteadily. "Have you no decency, no shame, no respect?"
"Yes," he said, "I am ashamed of what my kinsman has done to you and yours. That is partly why I am here."

"You came here as a spy," she said with cold contempt. "You lied about your name; you lied about your purpose; you came here to betray me. If he'd known it he would have killed you!"

"Yes, he would have. But—do you know why I came here, Eve?"
"I've told you!"
"And you are wrong. I didn't come here to betray Mike Clinch—I came to save him."

"Do you suppose I believe a man who has lied to me?" she cried.
"I don't ask you to believe me. I shall let somebody else prove what I say. I don't blame you for your attitude. God knows I don't blame Mike Clinch. He stood up like a man to Henry Harrod. All I ask you to do is undo some of the rotten things that my uncle did to you and yours. And that is partly why I came here."

"The girl said reasonably: "Neither did I want anything from Harrod Place or from you! Do you suppose you can come here after dad is dead and pretend to make amends for what your uncle did to us?"

"Eve," said Darragh gravely. "I've made some amends already. You don't know it, but I have. . . . You may not believe it, but I liked your father. He was a real man. Had anybody done to me what Henry Harrod did to your father I'd have behaved as your father behaved; I'd never have budged from this spot; I'd have hunted you down, and I'd have borne an implacable hatred against Henry Harrod and Harrod Place, and every soul in it!"

"The girl, silenced, looked at him without belief.
"I am not surprised that you distrust what I say. But the man who is going to marry me is your officer in my command. I have no closer friend than Jack Stormont. Ask him whether I am to be believed."

"Astounded, the girl turned a flushed, incredulous face to Stormont.
"He said: 'You may trust Darragh as you trust me. I don't know what he has to say to you, dear. . . . But whatever he says will be the truth.'"
Darragh said gravely: "Through a misunderstanding your father came into possession of stolen property. Eve. He did not know it had been stolen. I did. But Mike Clinch would have believed me if I had told him that the case of jewels in his possession had been stolen from a woman. . . . Quintana stole them. By accident they came into your father's possession. I learned of this. I had promised this woman to recover her jewels."

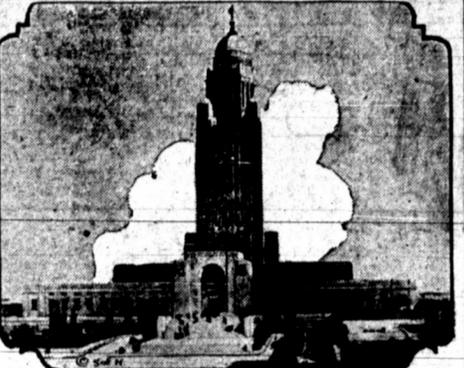

"I came here for that purpose, Eve. And for two reasons: first, because I learned that Quintana also was coming to rob your father of these gems; second, because, when I knew your father, and knew you, I concluded that it would be an outrage to call on the police. It would mean prison for Clinch, misery and ruin for you, Eve. So I tried to steal the jewels. . . . You look at Stormont, who seemed astounded.
"To whom do these jewels belong, Jim?" demanded the trooper.
"To the young Grand Duchess of Eastonia. . . . Do you remember that I betrothed her over there?"
"Yes."

"Do you remember that the Reds were accused of burning her chateau and looting it?"
"Yes, I remember."
"Well, it was Quintana and his gang of international criminals who did that," said Darragh. "I had promised this woman to recover her jewels, emblazoned with the coat of arms of the Grand Duchess of Eastonia, came into your father's possession. That is the story, Eve."

"There was a silence. The girl looked at Stormont, flushed painfully, looked at Darragh.
"Then, without a word, she turned, ascended the stairs, and returned immediately carrying the leather case."
"Thank you, Mr. Darragh," she said simply; and laid the case in his hand.
"That," said Darragh, "I want you to do a little more, Eve. The owner of these gems is my guest at Harrod Place. I want you to give them to her yourself."

"I—I can't go to Harrod Place," stammered the girl.
"Please don't visit the sins of Henry Harrod on me, Eve."
"I don't. But—but that place. . . ."
"After a silence: 'If Eve feels that way,' began Stormont awkwardly, 'I couldn't become associated with you in business, Jim.'"
"I'd rather sell Harrod Place than lose you," retorted Darragh almost sharply. "I want to go into business with you, Jack—if Eve will permit me."

NEW CAPITOL OF NEBRASKA

By NEA Service.
LINCOLN, NEB., Nov. 11.—Ground was broken in April for a new capitol for the state of Nebraska.

The building will be unique among structures of its kind. The main building will be broad and low, covering a site 477 feet square, and but 51 feet high, from ground to parapet. At the center, however, a lofty tower will rise to a height of 140 feet, surmounted by a colossal figure called "The Sower," which in clear weather will be visible for 40 miles around.

The legislative halls will be on the main floor. The tower, 30 feet square, will be devoted to offices of state. In a trophy room at the top will be stored the captured battle flags and other relics reminiscent of Nebraska's participation in the Civil and Spanish wars, the Philippine campaign and the recent world conflict.

The main building will be of buff-colored stone and the tower of steel construction. Five million dollars has been appropriated to erect the building, which is to be finished before the end of 1925.

Bertram G. Goodhue, of New York, the architect, was chosen after a series of competitions under the auspices of the American Institute of Architects.

ALVIN OWSELY DEDICATES NEBRASKA'S NEW CAPITOL
LINCOLN, NEB., Nov. 11.—When free men go out to battle it is the winning of peace they fight for, as

"there is no such thing as the winning of a war," Alvin Owsey, the new national commander of the American Legion, said here today in an address dedicating Nebraska's new capitol.

"Death and ruin are the stakes in the game of war," he said. "Ruin and death are the only price men pay for peace whenever that spirit of destruction breaks its bonds. The ending of war is a great thing, but the beginning of peace is a greater thing; for with the coming of a just peace the march of mankind is taken up again, mankind going forward step by step to better things."

Not as the day of the making of an end, but as the day of the beginning of a great endeavor, let us observe this anniversary.

"On this day of days I am here with you, joyful in heart to pledge the mind and soul of the American Legion to all good efforts of constructive citizenship. We have sanctified our comradeship through honor to our dead, and through the last full measure of devotion to our disabled; and that devotion to our disabled shall maintain us until the last man broken in the service of his country in the world war be fully restored and set again upon the pathway of achievement and hope."

The American Legion is carrying out a constructive program that goes toward the building of a better citizenship. With eager zeal, we are seeking to carry equal opportunity of education to every nook and corner of the land, to the homes where children of poverty dwell, to be available there as well as where wealth and luxury abound."

Thursday night, President J. T. Harrell calls his board of stewards together for the first meeting of the new church year. Business that involves the activities for the entire year will be under consideration. It is expected that every man will be in his place.

Saturday night, the Wichita Falls district Epworth League conference will hold its annual banquet at First church. Business sessions on the following day.

Baker's Cocoa
is the ideal drink
for growing children
Not only does its delicious flavor and aroma appeal to the palate but it supplies the body with a considerable amount of pure, wholesome and nutritious food.

Children, owing to their almost constant activity, frequently require a large amount of nourishment as adults, and good cocoa is a valuable aid in the fully arranged diet. But its quality must be good and no cocoa can quite so well meet the requirements of diet, physician, nurse or housekeeper as "BAKER'S."

AGENT AT FORGAN REPORTS A HEAVY SHOWER SATURDAY

The agent at Forgan on the Wichita Falls and Northwestern reported a heavy rain Saturday morning. The storm arose during the night and shortly after sunrise it began raining. Throughout the district Saturday morning south winds were reported but this was the only point that reported rainfall.

Agents on the north end of the lines stated that it was turning cooler and they forecast that a north wind would charge before the day was over.

The past four Sundays have brought in a norther and conditions seem favorable throughout the district touched by railroads for another cool wind to show up this Sunday.

FIRST M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH HAS MANY ACTIVITIES ON SCHEDULE FOR NEXT WEEK

The program of the First Methodist Episcopal church, south, on Tenth at Lamar for next week, beginning Sunday, is full of much activity. Last Sunday 925 assembled for the Sunday school. The leaders are hoping that this number be brought to 1,000 this Sunday, says the announcement, which adds:

The new pastor, delighted to see great audiences last Sunday with his thrilling message, and will be in his place at both hours next Sunday. He announces "Christian Citizenship" as his theme for the morning hour, and "The Blessedness of Forgiveness" at night. It is expected that the house will be filled again at each hour.

The women's missionary society meets at 3 o'clock on Monday afternoon in memorial service honoring the late Miss Belle H. Bennett, the national leader of the women's work of the church.

Tuesday night, the annual "father and son banquet" will be held. At 7:30 P. M. church night begins with a luncheon of the church workers at 6:30. At 7 they break into groups where some half dozen study courses of various lines of church activity are taken up. At 7:45 they reassemble for a half hour of inspirational service led by the pastor.
