AMUSEMENTS in WICHITA FALLS

Statistics have shown that cities that have good clean amusements are always progressive, thriving cities. They are also centers for the surrounding populace, where they may gather at various times for such sport and amusement as is desired. Amusements of the right sort is one of the many attributes that help to advertise a city to the outside world.

The 1910 census of Wichita Falls was 8,200 and in 1920 it had increased to 40,079, and the last estimate given out a few days ago placed the population of our city at 51,500. Wichita Falls is steadily growing and in a few short years will be a large metropolitan city of twice the present population. The growth was abnormal during the boom and it has been a problem for every phase of life to make the strides in keeping with a city of the size of Wichita Falls.

However the public spirit of the citizenship of Wichita Falls is working, striving and fast accomplishing new features in the amusement line, features that will tend to make it the center of Northwest Texas and Southern Oklahoma in that line, as it has already become the center in other lines.

There are five movie theatres in Wichita Falls, and two other theatres that are open for high class road shows. The Community Players which was inaugurated here during the past year have already produced several fine home talent productions of unusual merit. The Musicians Club as well as individuals have been instrumental in securing attractions for Wichita Falls that seldom play cities under the population of cities like Fort Worth and Dallas.

There are many city parks, although not large, they provide play grounds for the children and grown-ups. Public tennis courts afford pleasure for the adults, while swings, chutes, rings, bars and other playground equipment features make it possible for the children to enjoy themselves during the hot summer months. Besides the city parks there are several privately owned parks that add to summer time sport.

Our paved roads in Wichita County (first in the state of Texas and second in the entire Southwest) provide miles of enjoyable motoring for those who wish to spend their time in the auto. Lake Wichita, a broad expanse of water six miles from Wichita Falls on paved roads, affords the pleasure of boating, swimming and fishing. Many attractions are open at the lake resort, including dancing. Besides the swimming pool at the lake there are two other private owned swimming pools, and one municipal pool.

Wichita Falls Golf and Country Club with holdings of many acres of ground, are just completing a new club house and can boast of one of the finest golf courses in Texas within a short time. The latest addition in the amusement line has been the establishment of a municipal golf course. This was made possible by the donation of $500 by the Kiwanis Club, and active work by members and other public spirited citizens in securing 100 annual green fees, upon which the City Council formally accepted the offer.

The first Texas-Oklahoma Fair held last year was a great success. This will be an annual feature and draws thousands of visitors to this city. Extensive improvements are being made for this event this coming Fall.

"The Spudders," Wichita Falls' team of the Texas League provide as good games as can be witnessed in the major league parks. Besides the big league team there is a city league, in which various teams hotly contest championship during the baseball season.

Wichita Falls is proud of her amusements and feels that they are equal and surpass cities of like population, and that they will increase in number and betterment as the city continues to grow.

JACK DAW IN CANDYLAND

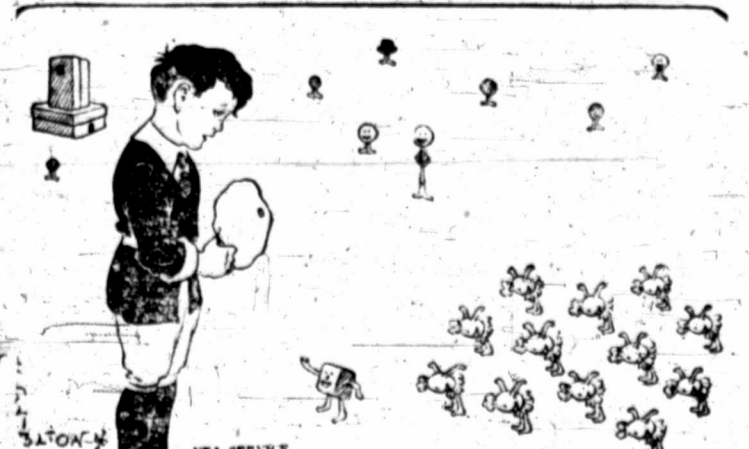

By ELTON

Caramel explained to Jack that the train of chocolate popperettes ran across to it, and Jack came from. Jack watched it disappear in the distance and then said, "Oh, now I understand. Those candies will run in a line, more or less, where folks can buy them."

"You're right!" shouted Caramel. "And, at that moment, a lot of pretty little candy girls came running up. 'Oh, Mister Caramel,' said one of them, 'we want to play drop the handkerchief. Will you let us make yours?' 'Well,' replied Caramel, 'it will if I can find it.'"

Caramel looked at ground but couldn't find his handkerchief. Then a happy thought struck him. "First of all, girls," he said, "I want to introduce you to Jack, Daw. Maybe he will let you take his handkerchief." In the little girls bowed, Jack was told that they were candy kisses. (Continued.)

FRIDAY, MARCH 30, 1923.

BOY WIZARDS.

A wonderful boy astronomer lives in Athens, Greece. He is William Nelson Abbott, 16 years old. This lad was the first to make the discovery, some weeks ago, that the star Beta Ceti had "flamed up" to the extreme brilliancy known as "star of the first magnitude."

Astronomy has been his hobby since he was 11. And he is so far advanced in this great scientific field that he has been given honorary membership in the Societe Astronomique de France and the Association Francaise des Observations d'Etoiles Variables de Lyons.

Young Abbott is descended from an Englishman who went to the Near East as a Crusader, centuries ago, and settled in Greece. That ancestor certainly would have been dumfounded if he could have known that one of his descendants would be such a boy prodigy at astronomy. That's the great fascination of parenthood—the uncertainty as to our descendants, their mentality and careers.

Abbott made his discovery, about the star Beta Ceti, with his naked eye. Then, he says: "I went to the telescope to compare Beta with the star Aldebaran, which is taken as a unit, and found that Beta had increased in brilliance more than three magnitudes. I determined the star's position on a chart and telephoned to the Athens Observatory, where it was said that nothing had been observed. "I telegraphed next day to M. Flammarion, the astronomer in Paris."

Flammarion checked the lad up, found he was right. "You recall the Polish boy chess wizard. On his heels comes this lad in Greece, apparently destined to be one of the world's greatest astronomers, possibly the leader."

Margaret Maguire, Philadelphia educator, originator of schools for backward pupils, tells about a boy who came under her observation. He seemed to be the champion dumbbell, half asleep and disinterested in the subjects that the teachers brought to his attention.

"Then," says Miss Maguire, "some one happened to mention radio. And the boy stood up and began to lecture on radio in technical terms that amazed the teachers."

That boy had, born in him, the scientific intellect that is characteristic of the rising generation. "When a grown-up hears some of these knee-trousers lads talking about radio—well, it rather makes him feel that the older generation belongs to an obsolete period."

The world is entering a great scientific age. The rising generation reveals that, clear-cut, unmistakably.

AMERICAN WRITER IN EUROPE PRAISES LORD ROBERT CECIL

REPRESENTS SPIRIT THAT WILSON TRIED TO BREATHE INTO TREATY.

SAYS HOLDS HIS HEAD HIGH LIKE CRUSADER

Also Genuine Thing As Regards British Aristocracy, Says Mark Sullivan.

BY MARK SULLIVAN
Political Correspondent of the New York Tribune and Wichita Daily Times.

Copyright 1923 N. Y. Tribune, Inc. WASHINGTON, D. C., March 29.—The arrival of Lord Robert Cecil in America tomorrow, provides one of those rare occasions when it is possible to say something about a man practically without reservation or qualification, and those occasions are not frequent in the course of a newspaper's life.

Not all of the rather steady procession of persons who have come from Europe to America during the war and since have furnished a complete opportunity to speak without reservation. As to some who had the feeling that their public reputation was a little greater than a careful estimate of their fundamental character and capacity would reveal.

As to some others, you had the feeling that their real relation to America might be less strict than Lord Robert's during the war, and to some extent after the war, there was an amount of staged propaganda, with the obvious and legitimate purpose of promoting harmony among the allies, in the course of which valueless characters signed to men which they hardly live up to in the light of a colder examination.

But Robert Cecil is the real thing. The writer of this article has received a letter from an American friend who had occasion for frequent contact with Lord Robert during the war, and the Paris conference. This American writes:

"You, of course, know that Lord Robert Cecil represents the finest spirit that Wilson tried to breathe into the treaty. He has the finest sense of justice that one can possibly have. He is not a politician because he does not temporize nor deal in expediency. If one can criticize him at all—and it is a cautious thing to do—he is proud of it. I were he it that he holds his head high like a crusader preaching the gospel of truth and charity. I do not believe he ever had a mean thought or even a low idea. I have disagreed with him at times violently and he has as unmercifully baited me and I have seen him bat others who I thought were more worthy subjects for his efforts. You can expect great frankness from Lord Robert. No one who ever came in contact with Lord Robert Cecil ever felt that he expressed anything but what was the result of deep thought and almost I might say sense of religious responsibility."

Aside from these aspects of Lord Robert, he is also the genuine thing in regard to British aristocracy. He is the finest of what an American has in his imagination when he thinks of a "British Lord" in the historic sense. Some of the British Lords who have come to America have been merely men successful in business or politics or both, who have been given the title in recent years as the reward of such success. If we had in America the British system of awarding titles, Mr. Lodge by this time would be the Duke of Massachusetts, General Pershing would be Viscount Missouri, Charles Schwab would be Baron Bethlehem, Mr. Gray would be Lord Steel, and Frank Munsey would be the Marquis of Middlebury. Lord Robert Cecil is called by that title because "he has an ancestry of aristocrats running back farther into the history of England than the finest traditions of existing titles. He is not all, by any means, of these hereditary lords, either, are very impressive figures. Some of them mean little more in the present life of Great Britain than the descendants of revolutionary generals mean in America. Some, indeed, of these hereditary British lords are rather feeble persons. But Lord Robert Cecil actually inherits and lives up to an extraordinary line of the finest traditions of service. He has many of the qualities Americans of a generation ago attributed to William E. Gladstone. He looks somewhat like Gladstone, although he is really more impressive with his big, rather ugly head, his big ears, big eyes deep set under crazy brows, and big, squinting nose. On an occasion when the present writer visited him, he sat with his neck on the back of his chair, and at a distance of extraordinary long legs, his feet on another chair higher than his head.

In his political ideas he is an extraordinary combination of old and modern. He is a member of parliament to speak of him as having "one foot in the middle ages" and "one in the office of the future." He is a member of the ancient rights of the established church of England, but he also fights for the fundamental rights of the labor party. It was at one time thought he would some day be the first labor premier of England. But this possibility is probably a little remote because of Lord Robert's dislike of the present British labor party's tendency toward socialism, and because he is absolutely incapable of any appeal to demagogues. He has ideals of individual Christian duty, and of national duty, such as we often imagine but rarely see. In his sincerity, and his fervor, which is something like that of the early Christians, is probably the finest and most potent argument for the league of nations that America is likely ever to see.

Arrangements as to the tennis matches for the league of nations that America is likely ever to see.

The tennis eliminations in the city interscholastic league meet on Saturday morning at 10 a. m. when 15 players lined up for the tennis singles and six teams for the doubles. Arrangements as to the courts and drawing for place consumed most of the morning.

Two matches had been played off by noon Saturday. Clifton Haynes defeated Mercer Parks 6-1, 6-2. In the first bracket, with Caskey forfeiting to Snow in the same group, Daniels won from Beck in the second bracket by a score of 6-3, 2-6, 8-6. The final match, played on the Wichita Tennis Club court, while Daniels was not featured by brilliant play, and Haynes had little difficulty in defeating his opponent.

The other contest was played on the Lone Star Refinery court, and was a rather close battle from beginning to end.

Those entering the singles, are: Cohen, Powers, Beck, Morgan, Hallman, Daniel, Station, Nance, Moore, Parks, Bond, Haynes, Caskey and Snow. The matches for Saturday afternoon are scheduled at the refinery court: Cohen vs. Morgan, Hallman vs. Station, and Powers vs. Daniel; at the Wichita Tennis Club, Daniels vs. Bond, Nance vs. Moore, Haynes vs. Snow. The winners of the two groups will play the finals, three sets out of five, sometime Saturday afternoon.

It is not known when the doubles matches will be played. However, the players have drawn for places, and the schedule for the preliminaries have been arranged. Parks and Hallman vs. Nance and Morgan, Daniels and Snow vs. Powers and Haynes, Caskey and Daniels vs. Moore and Bond.

Patents on 100 radio devices, invented by John Hays Hammond Jr., were sold to the Radio Corporation of the big telephone company.

One of them is said to be a device that eliminates static interference and the "bubbling in" of Morse code on wireless telegraph circuits. This latter will disappoint Satans.

When the new radio patents change hands, you wonder how long it will be until present radio devices will be obsolete. All will change. Once the wireless bug used coherers and de-coherers. How many radio fans now know what the words even mean?

ENDURANCE FLIGHT FAILS WHEN PLANE DEVELOPS TROUBLE

DAYTON, OHIO, March 31.—The attempted endurance flight of Lieutenant J. H. MacReady and Lieutenant C. Kelly ended in failure early today when the P-2, rebuilt Fokker monoplane, developed engine trouble and the two were forced to land at Wilbur Wright field.

There was no intention as to when the flight would be attempted again. The two are seeking to better their own endurance record of 29 hours, 16 minutes and 14 seconds in France yesterday by Louis Batiellier and Carrier, who flew 500 and 1,000 kilometers in 2 hours, 42 minutes 31.5 seconds, and 4 hours, 29 minutes and 2.5 seconds, respectively. Six will try for the 500 kilometer and the other six for the 1,000 kilometer mark.

MacReady and Kelly were forced down after they had covered 527 miles and flown seven hours and 25 minutes. They landed at 12:05 a. m. They had taken off at 4:12 yesterday afternoon.

The P-2 had just been outfit with a new 400 horsepower Liberty motor and it was the same sort of engine trouble which compelled them to land last fall on an attempted transcontinental flight.

Patents on 100 radio devices, invented by John Hays Hammond Jr., were sold to the Radio Corporation of the big telephone company.

One of them is said to be a device that eliminates static interference and the "bubbling in" of Morse code on wireless telegraph circuits. This latter will disappoint Satans.

When the new radio patents change hands, you wonder how long it will be until present radio devices will be obsolete. All will change. Once the wireless bug used coherers and de-coherers. How many radio fans now know what the words even mean?

CAMERAGRAMS

PALM BEACH ROMANCE. When John M. L. Rutherford, wealthy New York clubman, went to Palm Beach for the season he didn't have the slightest intention of getting married. But there he met Peggy Underwood, shown above, an actress. Now Peggy's wearing a big emerald on her "engagement finger."

SIGN OF SPRING. When society belles begin to announce they'll be June brides, you know spring is here. This is Alice St. Clair Milburn, daughter of Mrs. Charles G. Milburn of Washington and one of the capital's acknowledged belles. It's announced she'll be wed in June to Major X. H. Price, engineer corps.

NEW MINISTER. Richard M. Tobin, shown above, is the new United States minister to the Netherlands. Tobin is a native of San Francisco, son of a pioneer and is one of the leading lawyers and bankers of the Pacific Coast. He has served as assistant to the naval attaché of our Paris embassy.

IF YOU CHEATED on your income tax return, don't look at the pictures above. These people are your nemesis—or whatever the plural of nemesis is. Left, is a group in the United States Treasury Department in Washington engaged in auditing personal income tax returns. Right, is B. S. Kimbrell, head of the personal audit division of the income tax unit, at work in his Washington office with his two girl assistants. If you can fool this bunch, you're good.

SLAVES FOR SALE. You can buy an illibed male slave at from $6 to $24 at the slave market in Abecher, Abyssinia, shown in the picture above, according to information reaching the League of Nations. And you can solve the servant problem by buying female slaves—all agree—16 a head. For child labor there's almost no demand. Abyssinia, you know, is a country in Africa which claims to be the "Sheba" ruled over by the famous queen mentioned in the Bible.

BEING SARCASTIC. This Chicago society woman instead of laying her cards on the table, as the proverb advises us to do, had them sewed on her dress. What's the idea? Why, she took part in a play satirizing women's artifices and her part was to personify "bridge—the card game, not the kind across rivers."

NOW, ALL TOGETHER, BOYS, PULL! Here's the famous Cambridge crew in practice at Marlow, England. Let's introduce them—left to right: W. F. Smith, F. W. Law, K. N. Craig, S. H. Heap, B. G. Ivory, T. D. A. Collett, R. E. Morrison, T. B. B. Saunders and C. A. Grant. Pretty husky fellows, eh, wot?

WHEN YOUR COAL BILE COMES think of this picture. It shows a coal mine near Watnwright, Alaska, owned by the Eskimos. They paddle up in their skin canoes, remove what coal they need with shovels Uncle Sam kindly provides and paddle back to their comfortable igloos. And no collector ever calls!

TOUGH LUCK, OLD CHAP! This spill took place at the first hurdle of the race for the Athenæum challenge cup at the Cambridge University steeplechase, Tottenham, England. The rider of this particular horse was a freshman, which may account for the horse's desire to be rid of his master.

FATE'S QUEER PRANK. Madame V. P. Hanesfelt, shown here, once was a Washington society leader by virtue of being the daughter of the naval attaché of the Russian legation. Today, ruined by the revolution, she has come again to Washington and is making a living by giving lessons in cooking.

DON'T BE AFRAID! This isn't one of our alleged Asian forebears come back to earth to punish us for not upholding the traditions of our ancestors. It's just a French soldier wearing one of the new-model gas masks. Masks of this kind, said to be better than the World War type, are being furnished to French army in the Ruhr. They may be introduced here when the 1924 presidential campaign opens.

JAPANESE MEN OF SCIENCE. Not much more than half a century ago Japan was not farther advanced in medicine and other sciences than our ancestors 100 years ago. But today modern science reigns in Nippon. Here's a group of Japan's leading scientists now touring America to learn.

IT'S HARDER NOT TO SAVE

The difficulty of saving money is never quite as great as the difficulty of being without ready funds when urgent need arises.

When more men and women realize that saving money is far less trouble than failing to save, banks won't have to advertise for savings depositors.
