CHARGE FRENCH PROPOSE TO BREAK THAT COUNTRY

e That Germany Must Be Saved From Breaking Into Recess.

By MARK BULLIVAN. Political Correspondent of the New York Tribune and Wichita Daily Times. Copyright, 1933, by the New York Tribune.

PARIS, July 13.-Great Britain sees her divergence from France on the broad ground that, in the interest of civilization, Germany must be saved from breaking into pleces, and charges by implication that France's purpose is to break Germany into pieces There is much truth in that and it is a considera all others. Bu the present strain between Britain and France, a fi-nancial question in which much of ones sympathy tends toward

The question is intricate, but es-sential to an understanding by an outsider and a fair apportionment of merit to each side. In his much discussed question Marquis Curson said to Premier Poincare in effect "You say that reparations mus bonds, leaving the C bonds-if and to Britain and the other inter-allied debts." And he then tells M. Poincare that this is not satisfactory to ustion say that France's position is just, and that first priority in actual damage done to the devastated districts, leaving the remainder, if it should be possible to get any more rom Germany, to take care of in ter-allied debts.

Defining Reparation Again in this exchange of docu-ments, Marquis Curson, with ap-parent guilelessness, asks, "How do due from France to Britain are to stand on an equal footing with restoration of the devastated districts as part of the reparations, or To examine the matter from anference reparations were originally later without so much as a drop of Britain, there was added the cotton futures closed barely rain. payment of soldiers pensions. How much this meant to Britain is un-so that Britain's only way to qualify for getting any considerable share of reparation monay depended upon insertion of soldiers pensions.

Little Hernsweggied

The truth is that France thinks she is being a little hornsweggied in this matter of reparations.

Again Premier Poincare refuses to assent to the fixing of reparations by an international tribunal, and thereby seems to be in the wrong. But Poincare's fear is that repensions by an international tribunal, and thereby seems to be in the wrong. But Poincare's fear is that fixing of a sum so small that it would not cover France's actual damage, and the fear that even that small sum might be spread out thin by including the inter-ailied debts.

France wants to be sure that repby including the inter-ailied debts.

It is with the phases of the subject that public discussion deals, and herein the British are in so much strong-er position that the merit which the French have on the other finan-cial questions is targely lost sight of.

Would Clear Situation Incidentally, what is said here shows much the situation would be cleared up if America would waive it possible for Britain to waive the the debts due her, thereby making it possible for Britain to waive the debts due her, and it explains why it is that Europe so strongly wishes that America would take this step which from the point of view of the American public opinion is so impossible.

At this moment, the deadlock between Britain and France seems no in easer solution, and the probability of Britain's taking separate action appears to be increasing. Attempted literarention by outsiders like Dr. Benes, although it is undertaken in the finest spirit and with high ability, does not at this mement promises much encouragement, Never-theless, it should be borne in mind steadily that Britain's primary polley is to keep the spark of life in her association with France and moderate upturn and then spine wavering.

The only thing that Britain would not tolerate is a continuance of uncertainty and blockering and consequent delay; and danger to the world. Britain insists upon definiteness and progress. Britain must know on a definite day, and an early day, either that cooperation with France, but she is determined to act.

For sustained thrill it is doubtful if there is the equal in fiction of Edmund Snell's "THE YELLOW SEVEN." The scene is strange, tropical British North Borneo. The principal characters are "Chinese" Pennington, a white man whose wonderful ability to ape the Chinese in appearance, speech and even in thought, wen him his nickname; Chai-Hung, the powerful head of a far-flung, oath-bound, secret society of Chinese criminals before whom the entire island of Borneo trembled, and Monica Viney, the beautiful English widow whose wooing by Pennington furnishes the novel's love motive. The main story deals with Pennington's adventures in standing between Chai-Hung and his victims, and finally in overthrowing him. The Yellow Seven?-Chai-Hung's sign of death-the seven spot of the Chinese pack of playing cards, Snell has led a life of adventure in Borneo and elsewhere. He is a new writer but already he is the literary sensation of England. With "The Yellow Seven" he makes his debut in America. For summer reading "The Yellow Seven" hasn't an equal.

Twelve Episodes—

In "The Yellow Seven"

1—The Box Trick. 2—The Hut in the Clearing. 3—The Daughter of Chai-Hung. 4—The Bronze Jar. 5—Island "N." 6—China Tea! 7—The Passing of Zara-Khan. 8—A Game of Chance. 9—The Silver Hand. 10—The Barrier of Fire. 11—The Wisdom of Rabat-Pilai. 12—Run to Earth.
